BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

Sale of BNFL Assets

The Minister for Employment Relations and Postal Affairs (Mr. Pat McFadden): Further to the previous Secretary of State's announcement on 16 July 2007, Official Report, column 1WS, regarding the planned sale by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd (BNFL) of its one third stake in Atomic Weapons Establishment Management Ltd (AWEML), I can confirm that agreement was reached on 17 December 2008 to sell the one third stake to a UK subsidiary of the Jacobs Engineering Group, subject to clearance under EU merger control requirements. The terms of the deal remain commercially sensitive.

Jacobs is already working as a key strategic partner to AWEML and their acquisition of BNFL's one-third stake followed a competitive process conducted by BNFL in close consultation with the BERR and the Ministry of Defence (MOD). HMG is satisfied that the sale of BNFL's one third stake to Jacobs achieves the dual objective of maximising shareholder return from the stake while ensuring that a strong AWEML consortium is in place under Government owned contractor operated arrangements to manage the enduring performance of AWEML's subsidiary, AWE plc, which is responsible for the day-to-day operation of AWE itself and for meeting the requirements of the customer, the MOD. The MOD is satisfied that Jacobs meets the relevant security requirements.

Strategic requirements and the UK deterrent programme are set by the UK Government. UK nuclear forces will remain fully operationally independent; decision-making and the use of the system remains entirely sovereign to the UK. All AWE sites and assets remain in Government ownership, as they have done since AWE was first contractorised in 1993. The MOD continues to hold a special share in AWE plc, which would allow the MOD to assume control of AWE plc, should that become necessary.

TREASURY

Saving Gateway Accounts Bill

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Ian Pearson): Today, in advance of the Second Reading of the Saving Gateway Accounts Bill, I am publishing draft regulations in relation to eligibility for Saving Gateway accounts. Copies have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses and will be available in the Vote Office and on the HM Treasury website.

HEALTH

Cord Blood Banking

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Dawn Primarolo): As part of a review of the collection and use of umbilical cord blood, the Department commissioned a study of current practice in the United Kingdom compared with that found in Canada, China, France, Japan, Spain and the United States. The study produced a report entitled "Cord Blood Banking in the UK—an international comparison of policy and practice".

The Department is pleased that the study found practice in the UK to be comparable to that elsewhere. Furthermore, we agree there is a need for detailed consideration of the collection and use of cord blood and a joined-up approach to service provision. Along with our partners in other Government bodies and the third sector, we have already started to consider what further needs to be done. This will ensure the UK remains at the forefront of this work and able to meet its international obligations in matching stem cell donations to patients in need of a transplant.

A copy of the report has been placed in the Library and copies are available to hon. Members from the Vote Office.

Written Answer (Correction)

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Phil Hope): I regret that the written answer given to the hon. Member for Birmingham, (Selly Oak) on 16 December, Official Report, column 662W, was incorrect. The correct information is as follows:

The Department is a member of the inter-ministerial group on reducing reoffending which meets regularly to monitor the Government's ongoing commitment to equivalence of healthcare for those detained in prison.

We are now committed to progressing a cross-departmental consultation "Improving Health, Supporting Justice". This examines ways that services can be better delivered to people in contact with the police, courts, prison and probation services by mainstreaming their access to health and social care.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Support for Jobseekers

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (James Purnell): The Government are today announcing further measures to strengthen the support we offer to people who have been unemployed for six months. This builds on a number of measures already taken to respond to the consequences of the global economic downturn for employment in this country.

We have already quadrupled the funds available to Jobcentre Plus' rapid response service so that we can provide more comprehensive support to people facing redundancy, for example by providing information on alternative jobs and arranging on-site job fairs.

We have a guaranteed offer available to everyone who claims jobseeker's allowance that they will get advice on finding a new job; help to write a new CV and to fill in job applications; retraining and skills advice; help for those eligible with their rent and with their mortgage from 13 weeks; and access to the thousands of new vacancies received by Jobcentre Plus every working day. After three months of a person's claim they will have a further discussion with a Jobcentre Plus personal adviser where their original jobseeker's agreement is reviewed, and jobsearch is extended to a wider range of vacancies.

The Department for Work and Pensions was also allocated an extra £1.3 billion in last year's pre-Budget report so that Jobcentre Plus and contracted providers could maintain a high level of service for those who find themselves out of work.

These and other measures have helped to ensure that people continue to leave jobseeker's allowance quickly—the great majority within six months of claiming.

The new measures announced today will provide additional help for people who are still unemployed after six months. First, we are enhancing the support offered by Jobcentre Plus advisers. This will mean more time spent between an adviser and an unemployed person reviewing their job search activities and seeing how they can apply more effectively for the vacancies available. Evidence shows that if people continue to be supported and motivated to look for work they will find a job more quickly. From April this year, everyone reaching six months unemployed will benefit from this increased support.

Secondly, we will be making available an expanded range of work and training options that an adviser would be able to offer customers. These will be jobs supported by recruitment subsidies, support to start a business, work-related training and voluntary work opportunities.

Eligible customers would attract a subsidy typically worth £2,500—comprising a £1,000 recruitment or self-employment subsidy and Train to Gain funding worth on average £1,500. The recruitment subsidy of £1,000 will be offered to employers who are committed to working with us to recruit jobless people through Local Employment Partnerships. In England, as well as the recruitment subsidy the employer will also be able to access Train to Gain funding of up to £1,500 to provide training. It will be a targeted subsidy—employers will not be able to claim it by right and we will not make any payments if the employer has dismissed or made redundant any existing employees in order to recruit someone under this option.

We will encourage self-employment by arranging short focused courses and joining up with Business Link in England, working with Business Gateway in Scotland and the Assembly Government's Flexible Support for Business programme in Wales. We will also work with private and voluntary sector providers to give people knowledge and confidence to set up a business. For those who show a real interest in taking this option we will then offer financial support during the first few months while they get their business going.

In order to qualify the individual must have an agreed and signed-off business plan. The subsidy will ease the transition from benefit, help with start-up costs and ensure a level of income in the first few months of trading. We will also explore helping individuals to access loans and wider financial support. Our involvement should not end once the individual signs off benefit, and we will encourage individuals to stay in touch with their personal adviser, with the appropriate business service and also make the most of the Train to Gain and equivalent offers in Scotland and Wales.

For others the best route back into a job will be acquiring economically valuable skills and qualifications through work-focused training. Additional training places will be made available which are flexible enough to enable job search to continue while a person is undertaking the training and to continue where that person finds a job in the middle of the course. Equipping unemployed people with additional skills will enable the UK to capitalise on the job opportunities of the future. This additional support at the six month stage complements the £100 million in additional skills funding previously announced for those affected by redundancy. The devolved administrations in Scotland and Wales also have skills training budgets for the unemployed. We will work with them to co-ordinate provision and maximise access to programmes for Jobcentre Plus customers at the six months stage or earlier for the individual.

Voluntary work can also prove helpful in providing skills and experience which help people take up paid employment. With the help of third sector partners, we will strengthen our existing signposting to suitable opportunities by providing access to volunteering placements. These would be short placements designed to help people learn relevant skills for an area of work they are interested in rather than lengthy spells of full-time activity which could take someone away from the labour market. During a period of volunteering a person would remain on JSA and be subject to conditions attached to the benefit.

These measures build on the policies already in place to ensure that we will not write off a generation by doing nothing while people are worried about losing their job, or finding a new one. We will do everything we can to help people into jobs. The longer a person is out of work the harder we will work to support them.

Employment Agency Standards Inspectorate Annual Report 2007-08

The Minister for Employment Relations and Postal Affairs (Mr. Pat McFadden): The Department for Business has recently published the Employment Agency Standards (EAS) Inspectorate Annual Report for 2007-08. The report is available on the BERR website at: http://www.berr.gov.uk/files/file49464.pdf. I have today placed copies of this report in the Libraries of both Houses.

The report sets out the main activities of the EAS during the year, including information about agencies prosecuted for breaches of employment agency legislation and prohibitions of individuals unsuitable to be involved in the running of an employment agency. In 2007-08 two agencies were prosecuted successfully and a total of five individuals were prohibited from running agencies.

In addition, the EAS recovered over £26,000 of workers' wages that had been illegally withheld. In the period since the end of March 2008, the EAS has recovered a further £21,900 for agency workers. The EAS investigated a total of 1,494 agencies during the course of 2007-08.

We have doubled the number of EAS inspectors during 2008. This will enable the EAS to carry out a greater proportion of proactive inspections. Over recent months, we have also started to transform the operations of EAS, through running monthly large-scale, targeted investigations and giving more publicity to the warnings that we issue to non-compliant businesses. And we have launched a significant campaign to raise the profile of EAS, starting with a "Know your Rights" booklet for agency workers (available from the www.direct.gov.uk website).

In addition, changes made in the Employment Act 2008 will—from April this year—enable the most serious criminal offences under the Employment Agencies Act 1973 to be tried in the Crown Court (where the maximum penalty will be an unlimited fine). They will also give EAS inspectors improved investigative powers, including the power to seek financial information about an agency suspected of committing offences from the agency's bank.

The EAS will use its additional resources and powers to ensure that agency workers are fairly treated and to ensure that the law is obeyed.

TREASURY

Anti-avoidance Measure

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms): The Government have become aware of an artificial and aggressive avoidance scheme that seeks to abuse tax reliefs available for employment-related liabilities incurred by employees and former employees.

This scheme relies on the creation of losses through a series of arrangements connecting the individual and a company that provides services to trusts, some of which may be offshore, which are established for the purposes of the scheme.

A loss is created through an intentional act of maladministration by the individual acting as a trustee in the course of a contrived employment. The maladministration triggers a compensation payment payable by that individual. This compensation creates a loss that the individual can set off against other taxable income.

The Government do not accept that these highly contrived arrangements have the effect that is sought, but will remove any doubt by introducing appropriate legislation in the 2009 Finance Bill to prevent tax deductions being allowed where liabilities relating to an employment are incurred by employees and former employees with a main purpose of the avoidance of tax. This legislation will have effect from 12 January 2009.

The legislation will not affect genuine cases where tax avoidance arrangements are not involved and will have no impact on the treatment of normal insurance premiums paid by employers to indemnify employees against employment-related liabilities.

Details of this action are contained in a technical note published on HMRC's website.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Russia/Ukraine Gas Dispute

The Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change (Edward Miliband): Yesterday I attended the extraordinary EU Energy Council, called to discuss the dispute over gas supplies between Russia and Ukraine. Ministers discussed the impact of the dispute on member states, the importance of resuming gas supplies to Europe swiftly and the longer-term implications of policy for Europe.

In all, across Europe (European Union and wider), eight countries have declared states of emergency. A further 10 European countries, including Germany, Italy and France, have taken emergency measures. It is clear from the Energy Ministers meeting yesterday that all countries in Europe have an interest in an early resolution of this dispute.

Britain gets less than 2 per cent. of its gas supplies from Russia. UK demand has been met by a number of sources, including from the North sea, imports and storage. However, the Government will continue to be vigilant, working with Ofgem and the National Grid, which is closely monitoring impacts in the gas market.

During the dispute, the gas supply situation in continental Europe has resulted in higher energy prices. However, there has not been a significant impact on wholesale prices in the UK as a result. Furthermore, any short-term movements in wholesale prices would be no excuse for energy companies to delay price cuts, insofar as they buy gas in the forward market and do not therefore have to reflect short term wholesale price movements in their charges to consumers.

European Ministers agreed unanimously that it was totally unacceptable that a commercial dispute between two countries had escalated into something which was now affecting the whole of Europe, and indeed affecting the citizens of some countries very severely, particularly in Bulgaria, Slovakia, Serbia and Moldova.

Since last week, the European Commission and presidency had been working to get both parties to sign up to an agreement to enable transit of gas to Europe to resume. I have made clear the Government's strong support for these efforts.

Both Russia and Ukraine agreed to a solution involving EU monitors to ensure that the levels of gas flowing into and out of Ukraine can be independently verified.

Yesterday, we received assurances from Russian and Ukrainian Ministers present at the meeting that gas would start to flow today. In their interests as well as those of Europe, they need, without further delay, to ensure gas does flow and resolve their differences.

The Energy Council also discussed the longer-term implications of this dispute. Energy security remains primarily a matter for member states and the clear lesson from this situation is that member states need diversity in their supplies of gas and diversity in their energy mix more generally.

It is also clear, and this is reflected in the Council conclusions (attached), that Europe can also play an important role in ensuring the energy security of its member states. This was the rationale for the European Commission's strategic energy review, published late last year.

It is also a key part of the case for early and rigorous implementation of the third package on the EU's internal energy market. These measures will make Europe's gas markets function more effectively and strengthen our resilience to shocks.

As I made clear at the meeting, our priorities in the forthcoming debates will be:

encouraging greater investment in diversification of supply routes, including developing the southern corridor for gas supplies from central Asia; making urgent progress towards ensuring greater interconnection between countries and;

ensuring improved response mechanisms for situations such as these.

The Council agreed that urgent work would be done on these issues for concrete action to be agreed at the spring European Council.

This dispute reminds us of the geo-political nature of energy supplies and the need for Europe to act strategically, but above all, Ministers agreed it was essential to send a united message to Russia and Ukraine about their responsibilities.

HEALTH

Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Dawn Primarolo): The Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council met on 16 and 17 December. The Health and Consumer Affairs part of the Council was taken on 16 December. I represented the UK.

At the meeting, the Council adopted conclusions on the French presidency themes of health security on public health strategies to combat neurodegenerative diseases associated with ageing and in particular Alzheimer's disease. The United Kingdom supported the adoption of these conclusions.

The presidency provided a progress report on the proposal for a directive on cross-border healthcare, which was followed by a debate between member states on the directive. The UK intervened to highlight broad support for direction of discussions, which had taken place under the French presidency and the need to continue to work closely to address our concerns. There was a presentation by the European Commission on the recently published proposal for a Council recommendation on European actions in the field of rare diseases, followed by a brief discussion. The UK expressed broad support for the recommendation, but noted it was important that the recommendation ensured the right balance between EU action to promote co-operative action between member states and respect for member state competence for the management and organisation of their healthcare systems.

Over lunch, there was a presentation from the Commission on the work of the Council High-level Working Group on Public Health and a discussion on forthcoming elections of the World Health Organisation regional director post.

Under any other business, the presidency and the Commission provided information on a range of issues including the recently published pharmaceutical package and green paper on healthcare professionals. The incoming Czech presidency provided information on their priorities for health, which they intend to take forward under their presidency.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Entry Clearance Refusals

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Jacqui Smith): I have today placed in the Library a copy of the report by Mrs. Linda Costelloe Baker, the Independent Monitor for Entry Clearance Refusals with Limited Rights of Appeal, covering the period 1 October 2007 to 31 March 2008. A copy is also being made available on the UKBA website at:

http://www.ukvisas.gov.uk/en/independentmonitor/imparliamentaryreports together with UK Border Agency's response to the Independent Monitor's recommendations.

I am most grateful to Mrs. Costelloe Baker for this positive report based on the 860 sample cases which she has reviewed for the period 1 October 2007 to 31 March 2008, and the 445 cases reviewed during her monitoring visits to visa issuing posts during the period April to September 2008.

In the report Mrs. Costelloe Baker comments that of the file sample analysed this year, 85.6 per cent. of the cases were reasonable and had the correct information on appeal rights an improvement on 83.7 per cent. for the previous report covering the period 1 April to 30 September 2007; and that 91.2 per cent. of decisions were reasonable, an improvement on 91 per cent. for the last report.

She notes a big improvement in evidence based decision making "There has been a marked improvement in the way entry clearance officers handle evidence. In this sample, 98 per cent. of the refusal notices contained applicant specific evidence..."

She further notes that "[the] Overall appearance [of Refusal Notices] has improved tremendously. Most Refusal Notices now look neat and tidy and few have typing or spelling errors...I am pleased to report almost no ridiculous reasons [for refusal]..."

Mrs. Costelloe Baker also makes a number of constructive recommendations as to how UK Border Agency can continue to improve the quality of decision-making, guidance to entry clearance staff, and correspondence and complaint handling. UK Border Agency welcomes these comments and is keen to use these recommendations to drive up the quality of its service to customers whilst maintaining a high level of immigration control.

I wish to record our thanks to Mrs. Costelloe Baker for the work and effort she has put into producing this her third report as Independent Monitor for Entry Clearance Refusals with Limited Rights of Appeal. The Independent Monitor's next report will cover the period 1 April to 30 September 2008 and will be published in the first half of 2009.

CABINET OFFICE

New Opportunities

The Minister for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Liam Byrne): I am today laying before the House a White Paper "New Opportunities" which sets out a strategy for investing in Britain's aspiration and ambition for years to come.

The global economy of the 21st century brings new opportunities and new risks. The way the financial crisis has swept across every economy in just a few months underlines how interconnected our world has become. But beyond today's global slowdown lies a world of new opportunities for which we must prepare. If we put in place the right foundations now, the price is not just a richer country but also a fairer society.

Alongside real help now for families and businesses, we will therefore invest today in Britain's future. Over the next two years we will provide record investment in Britain's public services in families, communities and every stage of a citizen's life. In this way we will ensure that Britain's future performance matches our future potential, and that accident of birth and social background do not hold people back. These two elements together, better jobs and fairer chances, will together produce a more upwardly mobile society.

We build on strong foundations. Over the last decade, provision for pre-school children has been transformed with increased resources and free places for all three and four year olds. Nearly 3,000 children centres are in place. Since 1997 school funding per pupil has doubled in real terms, 600,000 children have been lifted out of poverty, the number of apprenticeships has more than tripled, and almost 300,000 more students are benefiting from higher education.

But we believe there is more to do to enable everyone, whatever their background, to fulfil their talents and potential. To prepare our country today for the opportunities of tomorrow, and supported by the record investment of the next two years, the "New Opportunities" White Paper outlines a number of new key measures:

The extension of free childcare to 15 per cent. of the most disadvantaged two-year-olds spread across every local authority in England: This will reach around 23,000 children per year, in addition to existing provision, and cost £57 million in total. They will provide 10 hours of care per week to the most disadvantaged two-year-olds in the best quality settings for at least 38 weeks a year. Once the child turns three, they will then automatically be entitled to 15 hours of care per week.

A back to work entitlement of up to £500: Trial a back to work entitlement of up to £500 for those who have been carers for at least five years, including parents, to reward their contribution and support their return into the labour market.

The introduction of a new £10,000 incentive to encourage more of the most effective teachers to teach in the most challenging schools: The incentive will be payable in return for three years' service in a single participating school. This package could reach more than 500 schools and up to 6,000 teachers per year. We will work with partners to ensure that this package is taken up by schools, works effectively to attract more of the best teachers, represents good value for money, and to ensure that we set in place the right long-term total reward for teachers who choose to work in the most challenging schools.

The introduction of a guarantee for high potential young people from low-income backgrounds to get the support they need to get into university: We will continue to target existing resources within Aimhigher, Aimhigher Associates and other funds so that more pupils from low-income backgrounds receive a package of structured assistance across their time at secondary school. And to make sure that this targeting is successful, we will guarantee that it ensures that those pupils from low-income backgrounds who are roughly in the top 50 per cent. of performers, wherever they are located, have access to a comprehensive package of assistance to attend university

A support programme for children leaving care: Fund the National Care Advisory Service (NCAS) for the next two years to work with local authorities to develop and test models of support for care leavers into employment. NCAS will work with nine LAs in year one, with a view to extending support to half of all local authorities in year two, as the first phased step of a national roll-out. As part of this policy, the National Apprenticeship Service will work with NCAS to ensure that from September 2009 all suitably qualified care leavers will be offered an apprenticeship place and intend to make this a legal entitlement from 2013.

The creation of 35,000 new apprenticeship places across the public and private sector to help individuals and businesses through the downturn: This will bring the total number of apprentices to well over a quarter of a million for the first time ever. We are expanding apprenticeship places and are legislating so that all suitably qualified young people will have a right to an apprenticeship by 2013. By this stage there will also be an equivalent commitment to a diploma for all learners that want one.

A tripling of professional and career development loans available from 15,000 to 45,000 over the next three years: Career development loans will be renamed professional and career development loans and tripled. As with existing loans they will be offered interest free while people study. We will also make them more attractive by:

Reducing the headline interest rates

By allowing people to apply for greater value loans to study at colleges, universities and private training providers

A fair access to the professions panel: We will establish a high level panel of the major professions which will work closely with the professions to identify barriers to access and propose concrete actions to address them.

A new full-time structured vocational volunteering programme is being created, with places reserved for those not in education, employment or training: We are supporting the charity to deliver volunteering opportunities that offer a clear route to gaining skills and employment. The 33 local authorities that have been selected to deliver this full-time programme will deliver 30 placements.

With the right policies, we can both raise the overall level skills, incomes and the number of good jobs, whilst at the same time building a fair society.

Copies of the "New Opportunities" White Paper have been placed in the Library.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Serious Fraud Office

The Solicitor-General (Vera Baird): My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has made the following written ministerial statement:

"Parliamentary approval for additional resources of £15.45 million will be sought in the spring supplementary estimate for the Serious Fraud Office. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £10 million will be met by repayable cash advances from the Contingencies Fund".

BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

Government Financial Help (Business)

The Minister for Employment Relations and Postal Affairs (Mr. Pat McFadden): My noble Friend the Secretary of State for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform has made the following statement:

In the pre-Budget report on 24 November 2008, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced a package of Government support for small and medium-sized businesses to help them through the current economic difficulties.

Since then the Government have been working alongside the banks, business organisations and financial organisations to ensure that we speedily transform this announcement into real help for business.

I am pleased to announce that as part of the Government's "Real Help" campaign, businesses can now access the full range of support, providing up to £21 billion worth of real help to business.

The Real Help with Finance package will provide:

Up to £1.3 billion of additional lending to smaller businesses through the Enterprise Finance Guarantee. This 75 per cent. guarantee will support bank lending to businesses of less than £25 million turnover who are otherwise credit worthy but are facing problems in accessing working capital because of economic conditions; up to £10 billion Working Capital Guarantee, which by guaranteeing up to 50 per cent. of a portfolio of loans will support bank lending of up to £20 billion. Banks have been invited to submit their portfolios of loans for approval. The first £1 billion guarantee tranche should be operational by 1 March, supporting around £2 billion of loans. Use of this facility will of course be subject to final terms guaranteeing value for money; a £75 million Capital for Enterprise Fund, made up of £50 million of Government funds and £25 million from Barclays, HSBC, Lloyds TSB and RBS. The fund will provide long-term capital to businesses who have exhausted traditional forms of finance.

Information on these schemes and initial diagnosis of eligibility is available at: www.businesslink.gov.uk/realhelp/finance

TREASURY

UK Convergence Programme

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Ian Pearson): Copies of the 2008 UK Convergence Programme are available in the Vote Office and have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

DEFENCE

Call-out Order (Iraq)

The Minister for the Armed Forces (Mr. Bob Ainsworth): With the expiry of the call-out order made last January, I am reporting that a new order was made under section 54 of the Reserve Forces Act 1996 so that reservists may continue to be called out into service to support operations in Iraq. The new order is valid for 12 months.

Some 310 reservists are currently mobilised and deployed in support of operations in Iraq compared with 270 for the same period last year and 640 in December 2006. With the forthcoming drawdown in Iraq, the overall number of reservists deployed to theatre is expected to reduce during the course of this year but nevertheless there is a continued need to call out reservists, particularly to assist with the logistics and service support elements of the operation both in the UK and overseas.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

New Science Agency

The Minister of State, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Jane Kennedy): My hon. Friend the Member for Chatham and Aylesford (Jonathan Shaw) the then Minister for Marine Landscape and Rural Affairs announced on 26 March 2008 the creation of a new DEFRA executive agency to be vested on 1 April 2009. The agency will be formed from merging the Central Science Laboratory (CSL), the Plant Health Division (PHD)/ Plant Health and Seeds Inspectorate (PHSI) and the Plant Variety Rights Office and Seeds Division (PVS). He explained that the new science agency would operate in shadow form from 1 April 2008.

I am pleased to announce that the new agency will be called the Food and Environment Research Agency. The role of the new agency is to provide robust evidence, rigorous analysis and professional advice to Government, international organisations and the private sector, in order to support and develop a sustainable food chain, a healthy natural environment, and to protect the global community from biological and chemical risks. The Food and Environment Research Agency will be a key organisation within Government's strategic science capability and in supporting DEFRA's strategic priorities to:

Secure a healthy natural environment for us all and deal with environmental risks

Promote a sustainable, low-carbon and resource-efficient economy

Ensure a thriving farming sector and a sustainable, healthy and secure food supply

JUSTICE

Coroners and Justice Bill

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Bridget Prentice): The Government have today published the Coroners and Justice Bill.

I have also published today two additional documents which relate to the coroner provisions in the Bill.

The first of these documents is a revised draft Charter for bereaved people who come into contact with a reformed coroner system. This follows our most recent discussion paper on the draft Charter which was issued for comment between June and September last year. The draft illustrates what a Charter for bereaved people under a reformed service might look like. The final version of the Charter would be issued by the Lord Chancellor, following discussion with the new Chief Coroner, when the coroners' provisions in the Bill are implemented. The Charter is intended as an illustration of the key benefits which a reformed coroner system will deliver for bereaved families.

The second document is "Sensitive reporting in coroners' courts—response to comments 2006-08". The Government have carried out extensive consultation on the reporting of inquests, since the draft Coroners Bill was published in 2006, and this document summarises our position as a result of this process.

The draft Coroners Bill originally contained new powers for coroners to impose anonymity of reporting in any case where the coroner believed there to be no public interest in the names of families being made public. In October 2007 I announced that, following our first consultation, we had agreed to remove the provision on reporting restrictions from the Bill—Official Report, 25 October, column 20WS.

On 27 March 2008 we sought views again on alternative approaches—Official Report, 27 March 2008, column 17WS and have concluded that it would be more appropriate to work with the Press Complaints Commission on how their existing code of practice, insofar as it refers to the reporting of inquests, can be brought better to the attention of bereaved families.

Today I have deposited copies of both documents in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies are also available in the Vote Office and Printed Paper Office. Copies are also available on the internet at: www.justice.gov.uk.

TREASURY

ECOFIN (December)

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Alistair Darling): ECOFIN met informally on Thursday 18 December 2008 in Paris. The Financial Secretary to the Treasury represented the UK.

Ministers discussed non-co-operative financial jurisdictions, the IMF's resources, and the setting up of an early warning system for financial risks at an international level. They also discussed taking forwards work at EU level in response to the action plan agreed by leaders at the Washington summit on 15 November.

Ministers asked the Financial Stability Forum to identify jurisdictions believed to be acting non-co-operatively in the financial sector. This will link with the European Commission's presentation of an action plan at the beginning of 2009 in this area. They also committed to reviewing all options to enable the IMF to have adequate resources to continue playing a stabilising role in the financial system. In order to detect macro-economic and financial risks within the global financial system, ECOFIN mandated their experts to identify means to evaluate more effectively the full extent of risks and strengthen collaboration between the IMF and the FSF.

ECOFIN will return to these issues under the Czech presidency of the EU in 2009.

ECOFIN (January)

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr. Alistair Darling): The Economic and Financial Affairs Council will be held in Brussels on 20 January 2009. The following items are on the agenda:

Presidency work programme

The Czech presidency will present its ECOFIN work programme for the first half of 2009.

Follow-up to the December European Council: Impact on Council Work

The presidency will take stock of the work arising from the European Economic Recovery Plan (EERP) agreed by the December European Council. The presidency plans to outline the next steps for two particular issues. The first is reduced rates of VAT, following discussions under the French presidency. The second is how the EU budget can best support infrastructure and energy efficiency projects. On both of these issues, the Government looks forward to working with the Czech presidency to take work forwards.

Economic and Budgetary Policy Strategy for 2009, including economic and financial situation and implementation of European Economic Recovery Plan

Ministers will exchange views, in the light of the economic situation and the EERP, on the economic and budgetary policy messages for ECOFIN work in 2009. This will include discussion of the impact of fiscal stimulus packages on budgetary rules under the stability and growth pact. The presidency will use the messages at this ECOFIN to inform the discussions at the spring European Council in March.

Introduction of the euro in Slovakia

The European Commission and the representative of Slovakia will present a first assessment of the introduction of the single currency in Slovakia on 1 January 2009.

Western Balkans Investment Framework

The Council will hear a report on progress on the establishment of the Western Balkans Investment Framework by 2010.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Non-domestic Rating Valuations

The Minister for Local Government (John Healey): I am today announcing the decapitalisation rates to be used in the "contractor's method of valuation" in non-domestic rating valuations in England for the 2010 revaluation.

Rateable values are assessed independently by the Valuation Office Agency and are generally based on annual rental values. Most are assessed having regard to actual rents but such evidence is not always available. In about 11 per cent. of cases, rateable value is based on capital values, established from the cost of construction and land values, which is then "decapitalised" to give an annual value representing the rateable value. This is called the "contractor's method of valuation". The decapitalisation rates used in the valuation are prescribed by the Government.

Following consultation in the summer, I have decided:

to continue to prescribe the decapitalisation rates for the 2010 revaluation; to retain the existing groupings of properties subject to each of the two decapitalisation rates; and to retain the existing rates at 3.33 per cent. for education, health care and Ministry of Defence properties and 5 per cent. for all other properties.

I have set the rates having regard to the relevant factors outlined in the consultation paper. Those factors suggest that the range of possible outcomes for the decapitalisation rates remains very wide and that the existing rates are broadly in the middle of that range.

The 2010 revaluation is being undertaken by the Valuation Office Agency. Rateable values will be published by 1 October 2009.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

EDF Takeover (British Energy)

The Minister of State, Department of Energy and Climate Change (Mr. Mike O'Brien): On 16 October 2008, Official Report, column 47WS, I informed the House that my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for the Department of Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform wrote to the Business and Enterprise Select Committee in September 2008 to inform members of EDF's takeover offer for British Energy. Copies of this letter were placed in the Libraries of the House.

I am pleased to report that EDF has now successfully completed the takeover of British Energy, which included the 36 per cent stake in the company held by the Nuclear Liabilities Fund (NLF). The sale has raised approximately £4.42 billion for the NLF, which was set up at the time of BE's privatisation in 1996 to meet the eventual decommissioning costs of existing nuclear power stations. EDF will transfer this amount to NLF by Monday 19th January 2009. Completion of the takeover was announced by EDF on Monday 5th January 2009.

HEALTH

"Valuing People Now"

The Secretary of State for Health (Alan Johnson): We are today publishing "Valuing People Now", the new cross-government strategy for people with learning disabilities along with the delivery plan. In addition, we are laying before Parliament the Government's further response to the Joint Committee on Human Rights (JCHR) report "A Life Like Any Other? Human Rights of Adults with Learning Disabilities", which was published on 6 March 2008.

The new strategy is driven by responses to a very wide-ranging consultation last year on priorities for action to deliver real change for people with learning disabilities. Over 2,000 people responded to the consultation and the strategy addresses what people have told us about the support people with learning disabilities and their families need.

The strategy also sets out the Government's response to the ten main recommendations in "Healthcare for All", the report of the independent inquiry into access to healthcare for people with learning disabilities, chaired by Sir Jonathan Michael.

The strategy provides a further response to the Joint Committee on Human Rights report "A Life Like Any Other"? The Government published its response to the conclusions and recommendations in that report on 6 May 2008. In its response the Government committed to providing the Joint Committee with a further response when publishing the final "Valuing People Now" strategy.

"Valuing People Now" has been placed in the Library and copies of both publications are available to hon. Members from the Vote Office.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Humanitarian Assistance (Gaza)

The Secretary of State for International Development (Mr. Douglas Alexander): Yesterday, on the day of a long-awaited ceasefire, I announced an additional pledge of up to £20 million for humanitarian needs in Gaza, bringing the UK's response to the crisis in Gaza to nearly £27 million.

These additional funds are already being spent. Yesterday evening, the Under- Secretary of State for International Development, my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Foster), announced a contribution of £4 million to the International Committee for the Red Cross to carry out immediate work to save lives such as providing medical treatment to the injured. Today I am announcing £1 million to the World Food Programme to co-ordinate the relief items brought to Gaza by the UN and NGOs.

Despite the ceasefire, access for humanitarian agencies will continue to be a major challenge. We will need to do everything we can to ensure that humanitarian agencies have full and safe access to provide help to those who need it. The international community also need to move quickly to carry out an urgent needs assessment so that the slow process of rebuilding Gaza can start. The UK Government will work closely with all its international partners in these efforts.

This £20 million is in addition to our Paris pledge of up to £243 million in aid to the Palestinian people over three years and the £6.8 million in humanitarian assistance to Gaza that I announced on 31 December.

JUSTICE

Corporate Plan

The Secretary of State for Justice and Lord Chancellor (Mr. Jack Straw): I am today publishing the Ministry of Justice Corporate Plan for 2009-2011. This, our first corporate plan, is the culmination of a huge amount of work to provide clarity on what the Department, only 20 months old, will achieve over the remainder of the Spending Review period, how and with what resources.

The plan is based around our four strategic objectives and explains how we will:

- Create a momentum of reform across the justice system with frontline staff working in partnership with local communities to bring about change.
- Build on our good work involving communities in justice so we are more responsive to how the public wants their justice system to develop.
- Ensure justice is not only done, but is seen to be done.
- Ensure that the voice of those who suffer most from the impact of crime—victims—is heard in all aspects of our work.

Like other Government Departments, we will make significant savings over this spending period, while continuing to improve the services we deliver to the public. The plan sets out our internal financial allocations for the next financial year and explains how we will improve performance, drive out duplication, and ensure we have the capabilities to deliver our plan within our resource envelope. Copies of the corporate plan have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, the Vote Office and the Printed Paper Office.

In the short time since it was created, the Ministry of Justice has been leading reform across the justice system. This plan sets out an exciting agenda for the next phase of reform, which will ensure our justice system remains admired and emulated across the world.

BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

Regulation and Redress in the UK Housing Market

The Minister for Trade, Investment and Consumer Affairs (Mr. Gareth Thomas): I am today laying before Parliament the Government review on regulation and redress in the UK housing market. The report for the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform and the Department for Communities and Local Government was prepared by Professor Colin Jones of Heriot-Watt University. The review was announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney) during the passage of the Consumers, Estate Agents and Redress Bill. Copies of the report have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

CHILDREN, SCHOOLS AND FAMILIES

Vetting and Barring

The Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (Ed Balls): Following the coming into force of secondary legislation made under the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006 and debated and approved by Parliament, I can confirm that from today new arrangements come into effect which mean the Independent Safeguarding Authority (ISA) will from now take barring decisions on new referrals under the current barring schemes. This is a further important step towards the full implementation of the new vetting and barring scheme which is being established under the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006.

The safety of children and young people is our top priority. Today's transition is an important part of our reforms to ensure we have the toughest ever vetting and barring system for all those working with, or seeking to work with, children and vulnerable adults.

Independent Safeguarding Authority (ISA)

The ISA was formally established in January 2008 to take forward transitional and preparatory work in readiness for the new vetting and barring scheme. The ISA is an executive non-departmental public body sponsored by the Home Office. Chaired by Sir Roger Singleton, the ISA will be responsible for making all barring decisions under the new vetting and barring scheme, to be established by the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act. This scheme will replace the current List 99, Protection of Children Act (PoCA) list, the Disqualification Orders handed down by the courts, and the Protection of Vulnerable Adults (PoVA) list with new lists barring individuals from working with children and vulnerable adults.

On 17 March 2008, I reported that, as part of the transition, we would begin to transfer the administration of List 99 casework to the ISA, which, since 31 March 2008, has advised the Secretary of State on the barring decisions, under the provisions of paragraph 1 of schedule 8 to the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act.

From today, under transitory provisions, the ISA will receive all new referrals made under the current barring schemes—List 99, PoCA, and PoVA—on safeguarding grounds and consider these cases for possible inclusion on the lists maintained by the ISA for barring individuals from working with children or vulnerable adults. In cases where action has been taken to consider a case before 20 January 2009, the decision will remain with the Secretary of State. The ISA will also be responsible for automatically including all individuals on the barred lists who have committed relevant offences, defined in regulations that were approved by Parliament in December 2008.

In addition to considering new referrals the ISA must, in accordance with statutory instruments which came into force on 7 April 2008, include, or consider including, in the new barred lists all those individuals who are barred under the current schemes. It is our intention that, where possible, this work will be completed before the new vetting and barring scheme is in place.

Progress on List 99

I would also like to update the House on progress on List 99 further to my statement on 17 March 2008.

Amended List 99 regulations came into force on 28 February 2007. These regulations extended the range of offences that will result in automatic inclusion on List 99 to include cautions as well as convictions for sexual offences against children. These changes have ensured that anyone aged 18 or over who is convicted of, or cautioned for, a relevant offence from 28 February 2007 will be automatically included on the list regardless of whether there is evidence that they have been in previous employment in the education and children's work force.

The regulations have been implemented vigorously and effectively since they came into force.

In my statement of 17 March 2008, I reported that, as at 13 March 2008, the number of individuals on List 99 was 8,036. As at 19 January 2009 the total number on List 99 is 12,992. The vast majority of the further increase in the number of individuals on List 99 is as a result of the implementation of the amended List 99 regulations that came into force on 28 February 2007.

In my March 2008 statement I also reported further progress made in following up the commitment made on 19 January 2006 by the then Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend for Bolton, West (Ruth Kelly), to ask Sir Roger Singleton to examine cases where Ministers or officials had decided since 1997 not to include individuals on List 99 where there were sexual offences that indicated a risk of harm to children. I also reported that my predecessor had decided to extend this examination to include all cases where there were sexual allegations between 1997 and 2005, in addition to all cases involving sexual offences or allegations before 1997. The aim of this was to establish whether any individual posed a risk of harm to children and if any action should be taken.

This important and painstaking work has been given the highest priority. In total 2,560 relevant case files have been reviewed by Sir Roger Singleton's panel 1,741 of these files were from the period 1940 to 1997 and 819 were cases from the period 1997 to 2005. In my statement of 17 March 2008 I reported that as a result of the panel's examination of these cases, and further information gathered from the police, 46 individuals had been barred. This work is nearing completion and the number of individuals who have been barred has now increased to 50.

I am extremely grateful for the work of Sir Roger Singleton who has continued to advise me on these cases.

I am also particularly grateful for the assistance of the police in providing information on individuals who have committed relevant offences to my officials in order that barring can be undertaken.

I am also grateful to the ISA for their advice on List 99 cases and wish them every success in the next phase of this vitally important work.

A Home Office Minister will make a statement to the House in due course on the ISA's work and progress towards the implementation of the new scheme.

HEALTH

Dental Services

The Secretary of State for Health (Alan Johnson): The House of Commons Health Select Committee published its report on dental services on 2 July 2008. We made an interim response on 7 October 2008 and said we would look at what actions would have the most immediate and effective impact on access. We are today laying before Parliament the Command Paper that sets out these further actions.

As set out in our interim response, we are confident that the new dental commissioning arrangements introduced in 2006 give primary care trusts greater powers and flexibility to secure high-quality local dental services that meet the needs of local people. New services are opening all over the country and there were 655 more dentists working in the National Health Service in 2007-08 than in the previous year.

But, as we indicated in October, we know there is more to do and we said then that we would work with professional and patient groups to review how we and the NHS could achieve the maximum benefits for patients from the 2006 reforms.

This further response reports on the results of this work. In particular, it sets out the scope of the independent review of dentistry in England that we have commissioned and the work we said we would undertake with strategic health authorities to agree how to secure rapid improvements in availability of NHS dental services.

We are determined to address the long-standing problems of access to NHS dental services and to secure a sustainable system of high-quality NHS dental services that reflect the overall vision of high quality care for all set out in the conclusions of the NHS next stage review.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Deportations With Assurances (Ethiopia)

The Minister for Security, Counter-Terrorism, Crime and Policing (Mr. Vernon Coaker): I am pleased to announce that on 12 December my noble Friend Lord West of Spithead, Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for security and counter-terrorism and Dr Tekeda Alemu, Ethiopian Deputy Foreign Minister, signed a Memorandum of Understanding between the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Government of the Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia concerning the provision of assurances in respect of persons subject to deportation on grounds of national security.

Associated side letters recording the position of the two Governments on the application of the death penalty and the terms of reference for the Ethiopian Human Rights Commission's role as monitoring body have also been exchanged.

This agreement is a practical demonstration of the growing relationship between the UK and Ethiopia in countering terrorism.

Copies of the Memorandum of Understanding and the associated side letters have been placed in the Library of both Houses and on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website.

JUSTICE

Prison Drug Treatment Review Group

The Minister of State, Ministry of Justice (Mr. David Hanson): On 17 March 2008, Official Report, column WS22, by way of a written ministerial statement, together with my right hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, South (Dawn Primarolo), Minister of State for Health and the then Under-Secretary of State for Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, South (Mr. Lewis), announced: additional Department of Health funding for prison clinical drug treatment; a national prison drug treatment strategy review group, to be chaired by Professor Lord Kamlesh Patel; and publication of the executive summary of the PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) report, "A Review of Prison Based Drug Treatment Funding, December 2007".

I am today with my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Health announcing the membership of the national prison drug treatment strategy review group. The remit of the review group will be to consider the PwC recommendations, agree a single set of priorities and compile national guidance around the streamlining of the commissioning, delivery, funding and performance management of drug treatment for offenders.

Professor Lord Kamlesh Patel selected the members of the review group based on the knowledge, expertise and experience that each individual can bring. The criteria for membership were as follows:

Ability to make a positive and constructive contribution to making changes in the commissioning,delivery, funding and performance management of drug treatment for offenders;

Knowledge, experience and a respected track record of creating system changes including a commitment to making a difference;

Known and respected amongst their peers either within the fields of drug treatment, criminal justice or in wider change management;

Direct service user and carer experience;

Ability and capacity to actively contribute to the work of the review group including, when appropriate, attendance at additional sub-group meetings or location and project visits.

The list of members will be placed in the House Libraries.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Anthony Leon Peart

The Solicitor-General (Vera Baird): On 22 November 2007 the then Minister for Security, Counter Terrorism Crime and Policing, the Under-Secretary of State for Justice, and I invited HM Chief Inspector of the CPS, HM Chief Inspector of Constabulary, HM Chief Inspector of Courts Administration and HM Chief Inspector of Prisons jointly to undertake a review into the circumstances which led to Anthony Leon Peart being at liberty on 29 July 2005, when Richard Whelan was fatally stabbed by him. On that day, Peart had been released from Forest Bank prison, Greater Manchester when there was a warrant outstanding for his immediate arrest.

The Chief Inspectors' report was published on 28 April 2008 and made a number of detailed recommendations. A cross-agency working group was convened to take forward the detailed work in implementing the recommendations. A number of these have now been implemented in full and significant work has been conducted on those remaining. I have today placed a short report on progress in the Libraries of both Houses and published it on the Attorney-General's Office website.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Local Government Finance

The Minister for Local Government (John Healey): I have today laid before the House two reports.

The first is the Local Government Finance Report (England) 2009-10. This report establishes the amounts of revenue support grant (RSG) and non-domestic rates (NDR) to be paid to local authorities in 2009-10, and the basis of their distribution. A draft of this report was issued for consultation on 26 November 2008.

The second report is the Limitation of Council Tax and Precepts (Alternative Notional Amounts) Report (England) 2009-10. This sets out the alternative notional amounts for the nine restructuring authorities which will be established on 1 April 2009. This report provides 2008-09 budget requirement figures for these authorities that can be used as a comparison in the event that the Government use our capping powers. A draft of this report was also issued for consultation on 26 November 2008 alongside the finance settlement, on which we received just one response from a restructuring authority, which confirmed its agreement with the figure in the report for its alternative notional amount.

On the settlement, we received a total of 109 written responses from 107 individual authorities, MPs, and formal and informal groupings of authorities. Ministers met delegations from the Local Government Association, London councils, and groups representative of county councils, shire districts and fire and rescue authorities. Having considered the views of the local authority associations and others who have commented on the provisional settlement, I have decided to confirm my proposals for the distribution of the 2009-10 local government grant and for the alternative notional amounts in relation to the financial year beginning 1 April 2009.

The final figures published today for 2009-10 confirm those originally published with the 2008-09 settlement in January 2008. In line with Government's policy on multi-year settlements, it has always been clear that the settlement for 2009-10, as the second year of a three-year settlement, would not be changed from that previously published other than in exceptional circumstances. Having fully considered all the representations received during consultation I have not found such exceptional circumstances.

This settlement represents a continued real-terms increase in investment in local government, which will allow authorities to continue to deliver improving services at an affordable cost. Total formula grant for 2009-10 will be £780 million or 2.8 per cent. higher than in 2008-09 on a like-for-like basis. Specific grants, such as the dedicated schools grant, are on top of these figures and bring the total increase in funding for local authorities to 4.2 per cent. in 2009-10. In the 10 years up to 2007-08 we have increased total Government grant by 39 per cent. in real terms, with an above inflation increase for local government in each and every one of those years. There will be a further total increase over this three-year settlement of £8.9 billion.

Given this substantial rise in investment in local government over more than a decade, there can be no excuse for excessive council tax increases. I have made clear and I repeat today—that the Government expect the average council tax increase in 2009-10 to be substantially below 5 per cent.. We had to take capping action in 2008-09. If necessary, we will do so again in 2009-10 to protect council tax payers if they are faced with excessive increases. No authority should be in any doubt about the Government's resolve in this matter, particularly during this period of economic downturn, including requiring authorities to re-bill if necessary.

I shall be sending copies of the Local Government Finance Report to all local authorities in England and making available full supporting information on the Communities and Local Government website at: http://www.local.communities.gov.uk/finance/0910/grant.htm.

I have placed copies of the reports and related tables showing each authority's allocation of formula grant and other supporting material in the Vote Office and the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Sri Lanka

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (David Miliband): The Government have long-standing concerns with the promotion of peace in Sri Lanka, where the conflict has claimed at least 70,000 lives during the past 26 years. We are now at an important moment.

Since its abrogation in January 2008 of the 2002 Ceasefire Agreement, the Sri Lankan Government have embarked on a policy of militarily defeating the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). In recent months the Government have made significant military gains, including the capture of Kilinochchi, the former administrative centre of the LTTE in the north, and the capture of remaining rebel territory in the Jaffna peninsula. These gains make progress on a political solution even more urgent. The LTTE is a proscribed terrorist organisation with no democratic mandate to represent the Tamil people. It is responsible for a terrorist campaign that has targeted innocent civilians across all communities in Sri Lanka over the past three decades.

Thousands of lives have been lost since the renewal of open hostilities in 2006. We recognise the Government of Sri Lanka's need to root out terrorism. It also has a responsibility to safeguard the rights of all its citizens and adequately to address their political concerns. Our consistent position remains that for peace to be sustainable, an inclusive political process that takes fully into account the legitimate concerns of all Sri Lankan communities—Sinhalese, Tamil and Muslim—is essential. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has said, we must see an end to the conflict and new drive for a lasting political solution. We continue to engage with all political parties across all communities in Sri Lanka to support progress in this direction.

We are deeply concerned by the humanitarian situation in Sri Lanka and the growing number of internally displaced persons (IDPs). My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister spoke about this issue with President Rajapakse when they met last September and we continue to raise our concern at senior levels. The UN estimates that 200,000-300,000 IDPs remain in the conflict area. Although there have been convoys providing basic humanitarian assistance, there are credible reports that these supplies are inadequate. The military gains by the Sri Lankan armed forces have resulted in these IDPs being squeezed into an ever-decreasing space. Further deterioration in the situation would mean acute humanitarian need and distress.

Following on from a Department for International Development (DFID) mission in September 2008, we will be sending a DFID humanitarian expert in the coming weeks to try to assess the situation and to report on the distribution of £2.5 million in humanitarian funding that we have committed to assist IDPs in northern Sri Lanka. In co-ordination with international organisations on the ground, we have urged all parties to abide by their obligations under international humanitarian law, in particular the need to ensure the safety of civilians, to allow their free movement and to enhance access for humanitarian agencies to facilitate the delivery of adequate supplies of humanitarian aid. Safe passage for civilians wanting to escape the hostilities should be guaranteed by all parties and safe humanitarian space provided for them. We believe that a full independent assessment of the IDPs' humanitarian needs is essential. Such an assessment would be a powerful demonstration that everything that can be done is being done to support these vulnerable people. We will continue to press on these matters.

Recent weeks have seen a considerable number of high profile attacks on media freedom in Sri Lanka. We condemn such brazen attacks. Of particular concern was the murder on 8 January of the Chief Editor of the Sunday Leader newspaper, Lasantha Wickrematunge. The Sri Lankan authorities have a duty to take prompt action to ensure a thorough and independent investigation is carried out. Those responsible must be held to account. The lack of progress in securing convictions for such cases indicates that urgent action is needed.

There continue to be reports of abductions, disappearances and acts of violence and intimidation in Sri Lanka. Without strong mechanisms for independent human rights reporting, it is difficult to assess the true scope of the problem. We consistently call upon the Government of Sri Lanka to take decisive action to tackle human rights abuses, including by taking action against those responsible for violations. Creating an environment in which people from all communities in Sri Lanka live without fear is essential to creating the conditions for a sustainable end to the conflict. The recent commitments by militias on release of child soldiers and disarmament following our lobbying are welcome steps that need to be followed through.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has written to President Rajapakse to express our concerns.

HEALTH

NHS Constitution for England

The Secretary of State for Health (Alan Johnson): Lord Darzi's review of the NHS, "High Quality Care for All", concluded that there was a case for a constitution to enshrine the principles and values of the NHS in England. A draft constitution based on extensive evidence and research with public, patients and staff was published for consultation on 30 June 2008. The consultation process was led by strategic health authorities and overseen by a group of experts on the Constitutional Advisory forum. Consultation events for patients, the public and staff were held in each primary care trust and the outcomes fed back to the strategic health authorities and then the Constitutional Advisory Forum. The Department also received over 1,000 direct responses to the consultation, which closed on 17 October 2008.

The NHS values, which form part of the constitution, were developed separately and were the subject of extensive engagement with staff, patients and the public.

The Constitutional Advisory Forum published its report on 11 December, emphasising that the response to the consultation had been overwhelmingly positive, with a broad consensus in favour of an NHS constitution. They made a series of recommendations on how to improve the document and on how to embed it in the NHS. The Department has responded to these recommendations and to the responses to the consultation in the Government response, published today and placed in the Library.

The final NHS Constitution for England, which has been placed in the Library, is an enduring document that sets out the principles and values of the NHS and for the first time brings into one place NHS pledges and the rights and responsibilities of patients, the public and staff.

As a result of the consultation, the NHS Constitution contains a new right to receive the vaccinations that the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation recommends under an NHS-provided national immunisation programme. The new right to choice has also been extended to include a right to information to support that choice. This currently means that any person requiring an elective referral may choose any clinically appropriate secondary care provider for their first consultant-led outpatient appointment and has a right to information to support that choice.

The new legal rights in the NHS Constitution will be created through separate regulations and directions, which are due to come into force on 1 April. Regulations on the right to receive vaccinations have been laid today. Directions on the right to choice and draft directions underpinning the right to rational local decisions on drugs and other treatments have also been published today.

The Health Bill, published on 16 January, provides for a legal duty on all NHS bodies and independent contractors providing NHS services to have regard to the NHS Constitution in their decisions and actions. The Bill also requires the NHS Constitution to be reviewed at least every 10 years following full consultation.

Also published today are the handbook to the NHS Constitution and a statement of NHS accountability, both of which have been placed in the Library. The handbook to the NHS Constitution is designed to give NHS staff and patients all the more detailed information they need. It explains what the rights, pledges and responsibilities mean and explains what to do if rights are not met or pledges are not upheld. It also explains the legal basis of each right.

The consultation on the NHS Constitution asked whether the Government should produce a statement of NHS accountability. The response was highly positive. The Statement of NHS Accountability is a public-facing document, which describes the system of responsibility and accountability for taking decisions in the NHS and provides a summary of the structure and functions of the NHS in England. The NHS Constitution commits the Government always to make available an up-to-date statement of accountability in the future.

An impact assessment on the NHS Constitution has also been published today and a copy placed in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Grants (England and Wales) 2009-10

The Minister for Security, Counter-Terrorism, Crime and Policing (Mr. Vernon Coaker): My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has today laid before the House the Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 2009-10 (HC 148). The report sets out my right hon. Friend's determination for 2009-10 of the aggregate amount of grants that she proposes to pay under section 46(2) of the Police Act 1996, and the amount to be paid to the Greater London Authority for the Metropolitan Police Authority.

General police grant allocations, which include Home Office Police Grant and Department for Communities and Local Government/Welsh Assembly Government General Grant for each police authority for 2009-10 are set out in the table.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Omagh Bombing

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr. Shaun Woodward): In the town of Omagh on 15 August 1998, a criminal terrorist group known as the Real IRA (RIRA) detonated a 500 lb bomb in a car, after issuing warnings which were clearly misleading and resulted in compounding the number of deaths. RIRA murdered 29 men, women and children and two unborn babies.

To date, despite the efforts of then Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) and now Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) and the Garda Siochana, only one person has been convicted on a charge of conspiracy to cause an explosion. This conviction was overturned on appeal in the Dublin Court of Criminal Appeal.

The Government understand that because no one has yet been brought to justice for this heinous crime the pain and grief continues to compound for those who suffered so much.

The events around 15 August 1998 have rightly been the subject of media coverage and understandably continue to generate interest.

On 15 September 2008 the BBC broadcast an edition of the Panorama programme, written and presented by John Ware, entitled "Omagh—What the Police Were Never Told". John Ware had also written an article published in The Sunday Telegraph on 14 September alleging, inter alia, that at the relevant time, vital intercept evidence had not been passed promptly enough to the police and thereby might have prevented the bombing or subsequently assist the investigating officers to bring the perpetrators to justice.

In view of the seriousness of the issues raised, the Prime Minister on 17 September asked Sir Peter Gibson, the Intelligence Services Commissioner, to "review any intercepted intelligence material available to the security and intelligence agencies in relation to the Omagh bombing and how this intelligence was shared". In his review, Sir Peter examined the role of GCHQ in gathering and handling intercept intelligence at the material time. He also investigated what intercept was shared with the RUC.

In preparing his report, Sir Peter drew on a range of highly sensitive and highly classified material made available to him by those agencies involved in the production of intercept intelligence.

Some of this material is inevitably subject to legal constraints. Its publication would disclose information about how our security and intelligence agencies currently function and thereby compromise current operations aimed at ensuring the protection of our national security.

Nonetheless, the Government believe it is right and appropriate to publish as much of the findings of the review as possible.

I have therefore placed in the Library of the House a copy of a document setting out in considerable detail Sir Peter's conclusions. It is also my intention today to make the full, classified report available to Members of the Intelligence and Security Committee for their scrutiny.

At the time of the Omagh bombing the action taken by GCHQ on any interception was governed by procedures agreed between GCHQ and RUC Special Branch. Those procedures were documented in written guidance for the relevant GCHQ team. Specifically, intercepts relating to phone numbers designated by Special Branch as being highest priority were monitored live. GCHQ carried out the tasks it was asked to carry out by Special Branch.

Throughout 1998, including on 15 August, GCHQ ensured intelligence from any interception that might have been relevant to those operations being conducted by Special Branch was made promptly available to them. This included "near real time" provision of information; that is, almost immediately after a call had been listened to itself in near real time. This was in accordance with the pre-agreed criteria.

Any formal intelligence reports were issued within hours of interception in broad accordance with procedures agreed between GCHQ and Special Branch.

Sir Peter concludes he is satisfied that in the days surrounding 15 August, and on the day itself, to the extent that any relevant intelligence derived from interception existed, this was shared with RUC HQ and Special Branch promptly and fully; and done so with the latter by procedures agreed with Special Branch South. He also concludes that there was nothing to suggest either a bomb attack was going to take place on 15 August or the town of Omagh was the target of any such bomb attack.

Sir Peter found no evidence to support the allegations of the Panorama programme that, in the run-up to 15 August, the Garda had warned the police of a likely attack. Crucially, any intelligence derived from interception as might have existed would not have prevented the bombing.

The programme also suggested that the cars involved in the bombing could have been tracked and their journey monitored on a screen.

Sir Peter is also satisfied that in 1998, on the basis of evidence from an independent expert witness from a mobile communications provider, it was neither possible to track mobile phones in real time nor visualise the location and movement of mobile phones in the way shown in the Panorama programme.

Assertions in the programme that live monitoring on the day would have shown what was going to happen are incorrect and unsupported by any evidence.

It was also implied in the Panorama programme that GCHQ did not pass on intercepted intelligence to RUC CID to help the enquiry. This is not supported by the facts.

Further to this, there were arrangements in place at that time which allowed for RUC Special Branch to make requests in respect of further dissemination of any GCHQ material. The records confirm that no such request was made.

The handling of intelligence material by the then Special Branch and their relationship to other investigative arms of the police has been the subject of a number of previous reviews and reports. As the Chief Constable has indicated in a letter sent to me yesterday, a copy of which I have also placed in the Library of the House, in line with the recommendations made by the police ombudsman in her December 2001 report on the bombing, and the subsequent Crompton report, serious and organised crime investigation, including terrorist crime investigation and the intelligence branch were grouped together within one department, crime operations, under a single assistant chief constable.

Special Branch no longer exists, having been replaced by a branch with service-wide responsibility for all intelligence from volume crime to the most serious crime.

A dissemination policy today determines how intelligence is shared for the purposes of a criminal investigation; early investigative expertise is sought in cases of serious crime; and the Police Service of Northern Ireland resources these areas to operate at the highest national standards in respect of handling intelligence and the investigation of serious and organised crime.

The Government share with the British and Irish public the deep regret that those responsible have neither faced justice nor been punished for their wicked crimes. And while it remains right that the police and other agencies charged with protecting the public from terrorism are accountable for their conduct and subject to scrutiny, we must never forget the bomb was the deliberate work of RIRA and we all have a continuing duty to do all we can to bring these criminals to justice.

Written Ministerial Statements

BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

National Minimum Wage

The Minister for Employment Relations and Postal Affairs (Mr. Pat McFadden): The Low Pay Commission (LPC) has asked for the Government's agreement to delay making recommendations on the national minimum wage (NMW) this year. The recommendations were due to be made by the end of February; the request is to extend this to 1 May. The Government have agreed.

The Low Pay Commission made this request to allow them to take account of two further months of data, including the Bank of England's inflation report, employee job figures for December, GDP figures for the fourth quarter of 2008, and updates on average earnings. The Government agree that the LPC recommendations should be based on the best available evidence.

The delay will not impact on the planned date for entry into force of the new rates, on 1 October.

TREASURY

Tax Information Exchange Agreement (United Kingdom/Guernsey)

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Stephen Timms): A new Tax Information Exchange Agreement with Guernsey was signed on 20 January 2009, alongside an arrangement amending the 1952 arrangement with Guernsey for the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to taxes on income. After signature, the text of the agreement and the arrangement were deposited in the Libraries of both Houses and made available on HM Revenue and Customs' website. The texts will be scheduled to a draft Order in Council and laid before the House of Commons in due course.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces Day

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Kevan Jones): I wish to announce today that the Government have selected Chatham Historic Dockyard to be the host for the 2009 Armed Forces Day national event.

We announced our plans to hold an Armed Forces Day when we published our response to the Report of Inquiry into National Recognition of our Armed Forces in October last year[1]. The intent is to provide an occasion during which the whole nation has the opportunity to show its appreciation for the contribution made to society by all those who serve and have served in Her Majesty's Armed Forces.

The title "Armed Forces Day" has been chosen to reflect the wider armed forces family of serving personnel (both regular and reserve), veterans and the cadet forces. This sense of inclusiveness is reflected in the strapline for the Day: "Honouring Britain's Armed Forces, Past, Present and Future".

Building on the success of previous Veterans Day celebrations, we plan to mark the occasion with a wide range of community-led events taking place in towns and cities around the country. Last year, we supported over 100 such events and we expect a similar level of activity this year. To provide a focus for the national recognition, we also intend to support a national event and a number of local authorities and other organisations have also submitted bids to be the national event host. There were a number of compelling bids that offered excellent prospects to host a prestigious and fitting event, but against stiff competition, we have selected Chatham Historic Dockyard to be the host for the 2009 national event.

I will be writing to all Members of Parliament soon setting out more details of our plans for the Day.

[1]The Government's Response to the Report of Inquiry into National Recognition of our Armed Forces, October 2008.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Household Waste Incentives

The Minister of State, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Jane Kennedy): Powers in the Climate Change Act allow up to five local authorities in England to pilot household waste incentives schemes.

The Under-Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change, my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Joan Ruddock), wrote to authorities in June 2008 asking for expressions of interest in piloting a scheme to be sent in within eight weeks after Royal Assent. That date fell yesterday.

No local authorities have so far expressed an interest in taking up these powers. The powers are of course voluntary and were introduced in response to requests from local government. As with all local issues, decisions on waste management are best taken by local government.

There are a range of tools available to local authorities to help them manage their waste more sustainably. Local authorities are working hard to reduce the amount of waste thrown away and increase the amount recycled, and we have seen great progress, with recycling quadrupling in the last 10 years.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

General Affairs and External Relations Council

The Minister for Europe (Caroline Flint): The General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) will be held on 26 January in Brussels. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will represent the UK.

The agenda items are as follows:

GENERAL AFFAIRS

Presentation of the Czech Presidency's Priorities

The presidency will outline their priorities: Economy, Energy and Europe in the World. In practice, this is likely to mean a focus on enlargement, the Eastern Partnership, energy security, single market, economic recovery, post-2013 Lisbon strategy and better regulation, which the Government support.

We also expect the presidency to present their plans for the Eastern Partnership, which they have said will be a key agenda item for the spring European Council on 19 and 20 March. We support the Eastern Partnership, and will work closely with the presidency, Commission and EU partners to develop the initiative. The presidency plans a Summit of Heads of State from the EU 27 and Eastern partner countries on 7 May to launch the partnership.

Energy Security

The Council will discuss the presidency's priority of Energy Security with particular reference to the Russia-Ukraine gas dispute and its impact on the EU. We support the presidency and Commission's handling of this dispute and agree with President Barroso that it has done long-term damage to both parties' reputations as reliable energy partners. We welcome the recently announced agreement by the two parties, and the resumption of gas flow through Ukraine, and hope this will prove to be a long-term, sustainable solution. The situation of the last few weeks cannot be allowed to happen again.

In the longer-term the dispute has highlighted the need to tackle EU energy security as a whole. We therefore expect Ministers to discuss the EU Strategic Energy Review (SEER2), released on 13 November 2008, and look ahead to the adoption of an ambitious action plan at the spring European Council on 19 and 20 March. This will be an important step in ensuring a more coherent EU energy policy. The action plan needs to focus on increasing diversification of energy supplies for the EU and interconnection within the EU, greater transparency of gas flows and improving our ability to respond to supply disruptions. At the same time, the EU needs to increase its energy efficiency and continue to work towards the creation of a fully functioning internal energy market. The SEER2 identifies six strategic energy infrastructure projects. The UK particularly welcomes concrete actions to develop the southern gas corridor, which would bring Caspian gas into the EU via Turkey thereby diversifying both the sources and routes of energy supply.

EXTERNAL RELATIONS

Middle East Peace Process (MEPP)

The Middle East Peace Process, and more specifically Gaza, will be high on the Council's agenda. The GAERC will follow two other EU ministerial meetings which the presidency has convened at short notice to discuss Gaza: an EU-Israel Foreign Ministers meeting on Wednesday 21 January and a meeting between the EU and the Egyptian, Turkish, Palestinian and Jordanian Foreign Ministers on Sunday 25 January.

The outcome of the GAERC will depend in part on developments this week, and the outcomes of these other meetings. But we hope that the Council will welcome the cessation of hostilities in Gaza and call for all parties to make the current ceasefire permanent through the full implementation of UNSCR 1860.

We also expect Ministers to discuss the EU's specific contribution to the peace process, including a focus on: the provision of urgent humanitarian assistance; efforts to reopen the Gaza crossings, including exploring the EU's readiness to relaunch EUBAM Rafah, its border monitoring mission; and efforts to tackle arms smuggling into Gaza. Ministers are also likely to discuss how best to support inter-Palestinian reconciliation and galvanise the international community behind the wider MEPP and the Arab Peace Initiative.

Russia/Ukraine

We expect Ministers to consider the long-term implications of the Russia-Ukraine gas dispute for the EU's relations with both countries.

Zimbabwe

We expect conclusions to express serious concern at the failure of the regime to respond to the deepening humanitarian crisis in Zimbabwe. We anticipate inclusion of a call for regional states to pave the way for the establishment of an equitable power-sharing agreement in Zimbabwe. We expect a call for investigations into links between illicit diamond trading in Zimbabwe and the regime. Conclusions should also note the extension and renewal of targeted measures against individuals and entities associated with the Mugabe regime's violence and human rights violations. The EU will also reaffirm its commitment to the alleviation of suffering through the provision of aid.

Guantanamo Bay

We expect Ministers to welcome President Obama's commitment to close the Guantanamo Bay detention facility, in line with the EU's long standing position. We also expect Ministers to discuss the issues surrounding closure, including any requests by the US for assistance and whether the EU might consider a collective response.

The UK and China: A Framework for Engagement

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (David Miliband): The Government today are launching "The UK and China: A Framework for Engagement". This document sets out our policy towards China over the next four years.

The paper states that, while China is already one of the world's top four economies, we are probably still only in the early stages of its re-emergence. China's impact on UK interests is already critical, and it is growing. Chinese markets and investments are increasingly important for UK business. More broadly, Chinese policies are enormously significant for our global agenda: addressing the need for economic, financial and institutional reform through mechanisms such as the G20, managing global pressure on resources, promoting lower carbon growth and sustainable development, achieving the millennium development goals (MDGs), and reducing conflict and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. On security issues, China is a pivotal member of the UN Security Council and its regional relations will be key to Asian stability.

The framework offers three pillars for the UK's response to this challenge and sets out the series of outcomes we are working for under each. The outcomes are in places aspirational and by necessity subject to review. In a period of economic uncertainty, achieving our targets in trade and economic co-operation will be particularly challenging.

The three pillars are:

Getting the best for the UK from China's growth: this is about encouraging China to see the UK as a global hub, and boosting our business, educational, scientific and cultural gains from the bilateral relationship. It is also about ensuring the UK has the right domestic policies in place to benefit from China's growth.

Fostering China's emergence as a responsible global player: this is about encouraging an approach of responsible sovereignty on international and global issues, from proliferation and international security to sustainable development and climate change. It is also about helping China to define its interests increasingly broadly.

Promoting sustainable development, modernisation and internal reform in China: this is about influencing China's evolving domestic policies, helping China manage the risks of its rapid development and, over time, narrowing differences between us. Greater respect for human rights is crucial to this.

Our strategy also sets out the tools at our disposal to pursue these aims: regular interaction with our Chinese counterparts from the Prime Minister down, our growing network of diplomatic posts, the European Union, and our co-operation with other partners within the EU, with the US and with others. Working towards the outcomes we want will require patience, persistence and effective partnership. We will be candid where we disagree but we will ensure that the relationship remains characterised by co-operation, not confrontation. Building a progressive, comprehensive relationship with China will be a major priority in the years ahead.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Cyprus: De-mining

The Minister for Europe (Caroline Flint): The UK is committed to supporting the settlement negotiations ongoing in Cyprus aimed at reunifying the island. The current negotiations offer the best chance there has ever been at finding a solution to the Cyprus problem.

The UK Government believe the key work done by UN development programme staff in removing land mines in the buffer zone in Cyprus is important in supporting the settlement negotiations. The work has been a highly successful confidence building measure and was vital in enabling the Ledra street crossing point to open.

I expressed my concern about the shortfall in funding for the Mine Action Centre in 2009 during the House of Commons Adjournment debate on Cyprus on 15 January 2009, Official Report, column 454 and underlined my belief that its important work should continue. Therefore I am today announcing a UK donation of €50,000 to the UN Mine Action Centre in Cyprus.

The work to remove landmines in the buffer zone has been largely funded by the EU to the sum of €9 million along with donations from Slovenia, Canada and Hungary. The UK donation of €50,000 will cover the running costs of the Mine Action Centre for February and March while the longer-term, sustainable funding is secured to enable this vital work to continue.

I am delighted that we have been able to lend financial support at a critical time to such a high profile confidence building measure with a proven track record of success. I look forward to seeing the centre's work at first hand during my next visit to the island in February.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Council

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Meg Hillier): The Justice and Home Affairs informal Council was held on 15 and 16 January 2009 in Prague. My right hon. Friend the Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice and I attended on behalf of the United Kingdom. The first day of the informal Council focused on interior items, whilst the second day dealt with justice issues. A planned debate on EU drug policy did not take place but will be added to the agenda of the next JHA Council on 26 and 27 February 2009.

On the implementation of the second generation Schengen Information System (SIS II), the Commission noted that while significant problems remained, consultants had concluded that the architecture of the system did not need to be fundamentally revised. However, a four-month time period is needed to fix the current problems and provide sufficient stability in the central system for testing to resume. The Commission proposed a new, more focused programme management structure to help deliver this test/repair approach, which involved member state experts.

Delegations expressed frustration at the delays and costs incurred and recommended a thorough analysis of what could be repaired and what was beyond repair. Analysis of what had taken place needed to begin in parallel with a full examination of the alternatives with clear timescales in place. It was also argued that any alternative scenarios needed to take into account the investments already made, something upon which the presidency gave assurances. The UK noted that everyone needed to pull together to solve the current situation.

Delegations were divided on when a decision should be taken on the options available, with some, including the UK, arguing for April, and others, including the Commission, suggesting that June was more viable. The presidency brought the debate to a close by noting that an alternative solution should be scoped in parallel to the ongoing work to test and analyse the current system, and a taskforce approach to testing would be implemented to offer greater scrutiny by member states' experts. The February JHA Council will be asked to confirm this approach.

On the use of modern technology for security purposes, the presidency stressed the importance of the core values of mobility, security and privacy in taking forward this work. The Commission emphasised the need for a coherent common strategy to enable information sharing and interoperability, covering all aspects of law enforcement information exchange across the EU. The UK also stressed the need for a broad strategy, but one which was not artificially constrained by the treaty pillars, and which drew on operational needs. The UK agreed that balance of privacy and data sharing was important. In subsequent interventions there was general support for a broad strategy in the area of EU information access that looked at the practical needs and that could then be reflected in the post-Hague JHA work programme. There was also a sense that this work should be taken forward through existing Council structures rather than through the creation of new groups.

On the related issue of the use of modern technologies in border control, migration management and asylum policy, there was clear support for the use of modern technologies to improve border management, including the use of biometric data to manage external borders. There was also broad support to develop the use of Eurodac. The presidency noted that existing mechanisms should be combined to enhance the effectiveness of border management work and said that the entry/exit system and registered traveller system would be ongoing areas of work for its presidency. The Commission recognised the possibility of an automated border system for those with biometric travel documents, but noted that a requirement to make the collection of such data binding would require a change to the current legislation. The Commission thought that new systems should only be developed once the legal instrument had been agreed, and systems needed to be developed in an integrated manner, across all levels (national and EU). The Commission also said that there would be an agency to manage IT systems, which would improve the process and enable member states to be more involved. The UK welcomed the presidency's proposals, noting its extensive use of data in border management, which facilitated travel as well as being a tool for law enforcement and migration management. It was important to learn from one another, and agree on the basic principles and benefits for citizens, for example in the use of passenger name records.

During a working lunch the presidency sought views on the international protection of children, with particular emphasis on the use of IT, including SIS II. The Commission raised the issue of the still small number of member states who currently have an early warning child abduction system in place. The UK called for support on a number of related issues: the work being undertaken by the Child Exploitation and Online Protection (CEOP) Centre to tackle the sale and distribution of abusive images; for member states to consider participation of their law enforcement agencies in the virtual global taskforce (an international collaboration of law enforcement agencies who lead work to tackle child sexual abuse and exploitation both on and offline in their respective countries) to broaden its use within the EU; for consideration of an EU-wide child abduction taskforce and use of a website to exchange information and child alerts. Other delegations stressed the importance of concerted effort at EU level, mentioning specifically the role of internet service providers (ISPs), while warning against duplication of existing Interpol work in relation to child pornography.

As regards the debate on the future of mutual recognition of court decisions and judgments, there was a general sense that mutual recognition should remain the cornerstone of judicial co-operation. However, there were also widespread calls for better implementation and for improved evaluation of existing instruments, and for minimum procedural safeguards in order to enhance trust in each others' systems. The UK stressed the importance of proportionality in the way instruments were applied, and called for existing standards under the European Convention on Human Rights to be better observed.

During the debate on succession and family law, general support was expressed in principle for a proposal that dealt with problems arising from succession and wills involving property in more than one country. However there was widespread caution as to the detail, with some delegations calling for work to proceed slowly and taking full account of the diversity of member states' legal systems. During a short discussion on family law, some states observed that it would be better to focus on implementation of agreed measures before proceeding further. A number of delegations spoke in favour of enhanced co-operation where negotiations on family law measures among all member states had not led to agreement. Nonetheless, the Commission indicated it did not consider that there was the critical mass to proceed with a proposal under enhanced co-operation on choice of law in divorce (following from the failure to reach agreement on Rome III).

Over lunch there was a discussion about e-justice. The presidency announced that they are going to produce a manual listing the location of video-conferencing facilities in every member state. The Commission said that member states would be able to request funding to help them to improve their video-conferencing capabilities.

JUSTICE

Boundary Commission for England

The Secretary of State for Justice and Lord Chancellor (Mr. Jack Straw): I should like to inform the House that I have made the following appointments under schedule 1 to the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986:

Mr. David Elvin QC, appointed as a Member of the Boundary Commission for England, effective from 12 January 2009 until 11 January 2014; and

Mr. Neil Pringle, appointed as a Member of the Boundary Commission for England, effective from 1 July 2009 until 30 June 2014.

Rome I Regulation

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Bridget Prentice): My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Lord Bach, has made the following written ministerial statement:

"I am today announcing the United Kingdom's participation in the European Community Regulation, on the law applicable to contractual obligations (Rome I). The regulation will provide for uniform choice of law rules in contract for all member states (except Denmark) and will come into force on 17 December 2009. The decision to participate follows the United Kingdom's successful negotiation of the proposed regulation. The regulation now improves on the 1980 Rome convention and will give greater legal certainty for business and consumers in Europe.

I would also like to announce the publication of the response paper to the public consultation on whether the United Kingdom should participate in the Rome I Regulation. The consultation period ran from April to June 2008. The responses received to this consultation were almost unanimous in support of the United Kingdom's participation.

As a result of the positive response to the consultation, the United Kingdom notified the European Commission and the Council of its intention to participate in the Rome I Regulation. The Commission, on 22 December 2008, adopted a decision to extend the application of the Rome I Regulation to the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom will be required to implement the regulation by 17 December 2009, at the same time as all other participating member states.

Copies of the Rome I response paper have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses".

CABINET OFFICE

Olympic Funding

The Minister for the Olympics (Tessa Jowell): The Olympic Funders' Group[1] met yesterday and agreed to allow the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) to access £394 million of funders' contingency. This decision provides £68 million, to meet the funding requirements of the International Broadcast Centre/Main Press Centre (IBC/MPC), and £326 million to support the construction of the Olympic village. The overall £9.325 billion public sector funding package remains unchanged.

As a result of good progress being made by the ODA, this investment is affordable from the overall contingency funds available and the contingency provision still available exceeds the assessed value of remaining risks. Alongside other contingency allocations, this means that around £1.5 billion of contingency funds remain available. The additional funding required is due to the shortage of private sector funding and the deterioration in the property market as a result of the current global economic downturn.

IBC/MPC

The IBC/MPC is still planned to be built as two permanent structures, with some temporary elements for games-time, based in Hackney in the north-west corner of the Olympic park as originally planned.

The IBC/MPC will accommodate 20,000 broadcasters and journalists in 2012. It is anticipated that it will contribute to a strong employment legacy post 2012 for the area.

The overall cost of the venue has reduced from £380 million to a new budget of £355 million. The original budget assumed a private sector contribution of £160 million which is no longer available, with £220 million from the ODA budget. As a result, £68 million of funders' contingency is being provided to bridge the funding gap. This allocation by funders is in addition to £67 million that is being made available from ODA Programme Contingency[2], to provide a total budget of £355 million.

The public sector will retain ownership of the asset and the ability to bring in private sector funding at a later stage. The new budget includes funding to ensure that the buildings left in legacy have the flexibility to be adapted to a wide range of uses, to maximise the potential employment opportunities after the games.

Village

The Olympic village is planned to have up to 3,000 apartments, fewer than in original plans, but the IOC requirements for athletes during the games can still be met with this reduced number. The village will house up to 17,000 athletes during the Olympics and over 6,000 during the Paralympics.

The funders' group have agreed to allow the ODA access to a further £231 million in contingency, to maintain the momentum of the project while discussions on private sector financing continue, following the agreement last year that the ODA could spend an initial £95 million this financial year. The total contingency for the village is therefore £326 million.

The ODA is continuing to negotiate with Lend Lease (the anticipated private developer), and the banks, in terms of the private investment for the Olympic village, and this decision on the funding available will enable good progress to continue to be made on site. Negotiations are also continuing with Registered Social Landlords (RSLs), in relation to the provision of affordable housing, which also contributes to the funding of the overall project.

The Olympic village will provide up to 3,000 homes after the games, of which around 30 per cent. will be affordable, creating a core part of the legacy plans for the future regeneration of the Lower Lea valley.

Contingency funds available

The £9.325 billion public sector funding package announced in March 2007 included £2.7 billion of contingency. Some £0.5 billion was released to ODA when its baseline budget was confirmed at the end of 2007, and £0.238 billion was allocated as contingency for security. Some £2 billion of contingency therefore remained available for the ODA. Further details on the total public sector funding package and the ODA baseline budget is available from the "London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games Annual Report: January 2008".

Of the £2 billion remaining available in the baseline budget, only £35 million (as set out in the table below) has been allocated to projects other than the village and IBC/MPC. Taken together with the decisions now being announced, the ODA have now, in total, been given access to around 25 per cent. of the £2 billion contingency remaining at the time of the baseline budget, leaving around £1.5 billion of contingency remaining available.

Part of the funding required is controlled by the Olympic Lottery Distributor (OLD) and the OLD board will consider the issue in due course.

A full picture on the contingency released for other projects, and an update on the overall picture across the programme, will be contained within the next 2012 annual report due to be published next month.

[1]The Ministerial Funders' Group is Chaired by the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Alistair Darling), and also consists of the Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Yvette Cooper), Minister for the Olympics (Tessa Jowell), Culture Secretary (Andy Burnham), Communities Secretary (Hazel Blears) and Transport Secretary (Geoff Hoon). The Mayor of London attends but is not a member.

[2]Programme contingency is for risks managed by the ODA, in relation to delivering a programme of projects on this scale, on a tightly constrained site, against an immovable deadline. Funders' contingency is to cover other risks, beyond the project and programme level—principally risks outside the control of the ODA.

Previously Agreed Contingency Releases

	Funders' Contingency £m	Programme Contingency £m	Total £m
Various - balance of funding required after savings -see below		21.5
Olympic Stadium (roof steel strengthening)		8.2
Handball Arena (acoustics and HD lighting)		2.3
Handball Area (increased seating capacity)	2.4
Olympic Stadium (resilience)	0.7
Totals	3.1	32.0	35.1

The £21.5 million programme contingency referred to above was released in September 2008, as a result of the net balance of funding required following:

budget increases required on a number of projects, including powerlines and legacy requirements for the aquatics centre, and new budgets for sustainability and technical reviews; savings arising on various other projects including: enabling works, various transport projects and structures bridges and highways.

OBSERVATIONS

HEALTH

Health Services (Cornwall)

The Petition of residents of Cornwall, and others,

Declares the Petitioners' concern that the Pharmacy White Paper could result in many rural practices having to stop dispensing medicines to their patients; and further declares that the dispensing of medicines by such practices is often vital to patients who live in more isolated areas.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Secretary of State for Health to protect the rural dispensing of medicines.

And the Petitioners remain, etc.—[Presented by Mr. Mark Prisk, Official Report, 19 November 2008; Vol. 483, c. 333.]

[P000289]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Health:

The consultation on a number of proposals for legislative and structural reform to National Health Service pharmaceutical services arising from the White Paper Pharmacy in England: Building on strengths—delivering the future closed on 20th November 2008.

As part of this consultation, we put forward options for possible reform of GP dispensing arrangements on which we sought views. We are aware of the strength of the responses we received on the various options for amending the criteria for dispensing by doctors. We have taken into account the views expressed and have announced that there will be no change to the current arrangements on GPs dispensing medicines to their patients.

JUSTICE

Criminal Convictions

The Petition of Phil Faber and others,

Declares that too many people are wrongly convicted because the law allows too much weight to be given to the word of one or more people, without other more tangible evidence to support the conviction; believes it is wrong that the jury only have to be persuaded that the defendant is guilty, and that this leaves the system open to abuse and puts people at risk of being convicted because someone has lied to the court or is innocently wrong in their assertions, and the person who tells the lie and secures the conviction can then claim compensation from the Criminal Injury Compensation Board.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Government to ensure that people are not normally convicted when the only evidence is the word of one or more persons.

[P000278]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Justice:

The Government is satisfied that the law provides adequate safeguards for those accused of an offence where the evidence is uncorroborated and has the following observations to make.

Burden and standard of Proof

One of the key features of a criminal trial is that the defence have the opportunity to test the prosecution's evidence by cross-examination. Furthermore, in criminal proceedings the prosecution must prove that the accused is guilty beyond reasonable doubt—a very high standard of proof. Additionally the judge has the discretion, where the evidence is uncorroborated and there are concerns that it is unreliable, to warn the jury to exercise caution whenever he or she considers it appropriate to do so, whether in respect of an accomplice or a complainant or any other witness.

Charging Decision

The Crown Prosecution Service takes decisions to prosecute with great care. When prosecutors make charging decisions they must apply the test in the Code for Crown Prosecutors. The evidential stage of the test requires that Crown Prosecutors must be satisfied that there is enough evidence to provide a "realistic prospect of conviction" against each defendant on each charge. Also when deciding whether there is enough evidence to prosecute, Crown Prosecutors must consider whether the evidence can be used and is reliable. Amongst the questions that they should consider is whether there are concerns over the accuracy or credibility of a witness.

Uncorroborated Evidence Care Warnings

Section 32 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 abolished the rule that a trial judge must warn the jury of the dangers of acting on the uncorroborated evidence of an alleged accomplice or victim of a sexual offence. However judges still retain the discretion to warn the jury to exercise caution whenever they consider it appropriate to do so, whether in respect of an accomplice or a complainant or any other witness.

HEALTH

Health Care (Sunderland)

The Petition of residents of Sunderland and others,

Declares that they support their doctors in urging the Government to listen to local people and invest in every practice in their city to improve the health care of all patients in Sunderland, rather than in a small number of new practices which may benefit only a small percentage of the population.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Secretary of State for Health to review and further invest in the funding of all NHS GP practices in Sunderland to ensure that health care improvements benefit the whole population.

And the Petitioners remain, etc.—[Presented by Bill Etherington, Official Report, 8 December 2008; Vol. 485, c. 380 .]

[P000292]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Health:

Although the Department of Health provides strategic leadership to the NHS and social care organisations in England, it is for local NHS organisations to plan, develop and improve services for local people. Therefore, any proposals for improvements to services are matters to be decided locally.

The Government is investing record amounts in GP services (an increase of over 50 per cent. since 2003-04) and there is a record number of GPs (19 per cent. more than in 1997). This investment has secured major improvements in access to services and in the quality of care for people with long-term conditions. Public satisfaction with GP services is generally high.

Health Services (Wycombe)

The Petition of over fourteen hundred readers of the Bucks Free Press newspaper,

Declares that the Prime Minister should honour his pledge to listen to newspaper campaigns and the voice of the people and order a review of changes to services at Wycombe Hospital.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Prime Minister to order such a review.

[P000293]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Health:

Although the Department of Health provides strategic leadership to the NHS and social care organisations in England, it is for local NHS organisations to plan, develop and improve services for local people. Therefore, any proposals for improvements to services are matters to be decided locally.

South Central Strategic Health Authority reports that in 2004, NHS organisations in mid and south Buckinghamshire consulted the local population about proposed changes to consolidate specialist services (known locally as Shaping Health Services). We understand that this led to improvements in the provision of trauma, planned care, women's and children's services.

Pharmacy Services (Gloucestershire)

The Petition of residents of Cotswold and others,

Declares that the Government has made proposals to change the way pharmacy services are provided in the community; further declares that if the proposals were implemented, the dispensaries at the Moore Health Centre in Bourton-on-the Water and Westwoods Surgery in Northleach would be forced to close; notes that the undersigned value the service currently provided.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Secretary of State for Health to retain the dispensaries at the Moore Health Centre in Bourton-on-the-Water and Westwoods Surgery in Northleach.

And the Petitioners remain, etc.—[Presented by Mr. Geoffrey Clifton-Brown, Official Report, 17 December 2008; Vol. 485, c. 1201 .]

JUSTICE

Dangerous Drivers

The Petition of the family of Aaron Palmer and concerned residents of Vale of Glamorgan and others,

Declares that there should be justice for families of the innocent people who have been killed or injured by drunk drivers; such as 18 year old Aaron Palmer who was knocked down by a drunk driver and killed on Boxing Day 2003. The Petitioners further declare that those found guilty of drink driving should risk having their driving licences permanently revoked.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Government to consider bringing forward legislation to ensure that drink drivers who have recklessly killed someone in a crash have their driving licences permanently revoked.

[P000301]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Justice:

The Government strongly supports the need for stiff penalties for drink-driving and other bad driving which causes death. There was an extensive review and consultation exercise on road traffic offences involving bad driving in 2005, following which two new offences were included in the Road Safety Act 2006: causing death by careless driving, which has a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment; and causing death by driving when unlicensed, disqualified or uninsured, which has a maximum penalty of two years imprisonment. Prior to the introduction of those new offences the maximum sentence for careless, uninsured or unlicensed drivers who caused death was a fine. Those offences complement the previously existing offences of causing death by dangerous driving and causing death by careless driving while under the influence of drink or drugs, which have a maximum penalty of 14 years imprisonment. We believe that that provides an effective sentencing framework for drivers who cause death.

In July 2008 the Sentencing Guidelines Council issued a Definitive Guideline on sentencing for those offences. The Guideline makes clear that an offence will be considered more serious where there is evidence of driving impairment attributable to drink or drugs (where the presence of drink or drugs does not already form part of the definition of the offence).

For each offence, disqualification from driving is a mandatory part of the sentence (subject to very limited exceptions). An order that the disqualification continues until the offender passes an extended driving test is compulsory for those convicted of causing death by dangerous driving or careless driving while under the influence of drink or drugs, and discretionary in relation to the other two offences. Causing death by careless driving while under the influence of drink or drugs carries a minimum disqualification of two years.

Disqualification for life is an option which is open to the courts. There will clearly be cases where very long disqualifications are justified by the circumstances of the offence and if the offender's record shows an irresponsible attitude to the use of vehicles. However, in a number of judgements the Court of Appeal have said that very long periods of disqualification can be counter-productive; that is because the prospect of losing a licence for a very long period, or of never being able to drive lawfully again, may only increase the temptation for offenders to ignore the ban and drive illegally. Very long disqualifications can also militate against rehabilitation, particularly if they affect job prospects. Disqualification for life is seen as a highly exceptional course, for example where the offender represents an extreme and indefinite danger to other road users.

In the light of the many considerations that must come into play in each case, and the often difficult balance that must be struck between the culpability of the offender and the impact on the victim, and between punishment and rehabilitation, we would be reluctant to limit the discretion of the courts in this area. Nevertheless, we are determined to ensure that, whatever the length of the disqualification; its effect is not eroded by time spent in custody for the offence. Provisions in the Coroners and Justice Bill are designed to achieve that aim.

TRANSPORT

Learner Drivers (Brighton and Hove)

The Petition of driving instructors and their pupils, local to Brighton and Hove driving test centres,

Declares that the proposed closure of Brighton and Hove driving test centre by the Driving Standards Agency in order to re-locate to Burgess Hill multi-purpose test centre would be damaging, ill conceived and un-workable for the following reasons:

The Driving Standards Agency's Code of Practice on consultations on driving test centres states that: "In more densely populated areas of the country where the population is equal to or greater than 1, 250 persons per square kilometre the practical test centres should be located so that most customers travel no more than 7 miles to a DTC". In the Brighton area the population density is 3,023 persons per square kilometre, nearly two and a half times the level needed for centres to be located so that most customers travel less than seven miles. The consultation paper suggests that the distance from Burgess Hill to Brighton is only ten miles. The distance "as the Crow flies" is well over ten miles from Brighton sea front and by real roads nearly sixteen miles, well over double the Agency's recommended distance.

Burgess Hill offers nowhere near the same complexity of road layouts that Brighton and Hove does, therefore the driving tests carried out there will not support the Government's aim to improve the standard of driver training.

The driving test traffic from around 40 test routes from the Brighton and Hove centres will be combined with traffic from clients living in areas of mid Sussex onto just 12 routes. With the added traffic from pupils practising to familiarise themselves with the area, local traffic congestion will be intolerable and the efficient running of driving test centres highly unlikely. E.g. there is just one crossroads controlled by traffic lights. If all the tests are to assess performance at this point, and if each learner practises the junction three times before taking the test during working hours, then there will be one learner car at this junction approx every 90 seconds.

The environmental impact of the extended travel should be taken into account. E.g. approx 75 pupils a day will use Burgess Hill instead of Brighton and Hove. They will travel 20 miles extra each time on approximately 5 trips to Burgess Hill to practice and take the test = 93,600 visits per annum = 1,872,00 extra miles per annum. At 139g CO_2 per KM (e.g. Vauxhall Corsa 1.2) this represents almost 419 tonnes of unnecessary CO_2 emissions per annum.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Secretary of State for Transport to reject the Driving Standards Agency's request to close Brighton Driving Test Centre and Hove Driving Test Centre in order to re-locate to Burgess Hill Multi-purpose Test Centre and insist that at least one driving test centre in the city of Brighton and Hove is retained.

[P000294]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Transport:

The Driving Standards Agency (DSA) has a statutory responsibility for setting standards for theory and practical driving tests and assessing the standard of driving at the practical driving test. The Agency is also responsible for decisions as to the location of individual test centres.

DSA is a self-financing organisation, largely reliant upon test fee income for the provision of its services. This imposes a requirement for its services to be delivered efficiently so as to avoid unnecessary costs, which would have to be recovered from its customers via the driving test fee.

As part of the implementation arrangements for European Commission Directive 200/56/EC, which introduced more demanding manoeuvres for practical motorcycle tests, the Agency is establishing Multi-Purpose Test Centres (MPTCs). Burgess Hill was, after careful consideration, chosen as an appropriate site for a MPTC. Senior DSA staff assessed and confirmed the operational suitability of Burgess Hill as a MPTC site. The Agency is satisfied that the number of test routes available will be sufficient for the number of tests forecast to be conducted.

As a consequence of the decision to locate a MPTC at Burgess Hill, existing test centre provision in the wider area was reviewed. The subsequent decision to co-locate Brighton and Hove driving test centres at Burgess Hill MPTC was intended to maximise its utilisation.

DSA considered retaining a test centre in either Brighton or Hove. However, the Agency decided not to pursue this option, in part, because an under-utilised MPTC at Burgess Hill would compromise the objective of providing a cost effective service. Also, neither Brighton nor Hove driving test centre has the capacity to absorb the demand that would be displaced by the closure of the other. This would result in longer waiting times for tests in that area with some candidates then having little option but to book a test at Burgess Hill in order to obtain an early appointment.

The closure of Brighton and Hove driving test centres will result in candidates from the coastal strip having to travel further than 7 miles to take their test at Burgess Hill. But those candidates living further inland, who would previously have needed to travel to Brighton or Hove to take their tests, will have a shorter journey.

It should only be necessary for learner drivers to travel from Brighton or Hove to Burgess Hill for a limited number of pre-test familiarisation lessons. They should gain driving experience on a variety of roads, not simply by following recognised test routes.

DSA has service standards to be met wherever possible. In areas with a population density equal to (or more than) 1,250 persons per square kilometre, they state that most candidates should not have to travel more than 7 miles to a driving test centre. Therefore, in accordance with the DSA Code of Practice on Written Consultations, a public consultation commenced on 21 February and closed on 16 May 2008. The result of the consultation was announced on 31 October 2008.

Written Answers to Questions

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Members: Allowances

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Leader of the House pursuant to the answer of 5 November 2008, Official Report, column 461W, on hon. Members: allowances, (1) what criteria govern the circumstances under which hon. Members may ask for an advance from the 2009-10 communication allowance allocation; [246729]

(2) from what date hon. Members will be able to ask for a communication allowance advance from the year 2010-11. [246730]

Chris Bryant: The rules on advances of the communications allowance are as set out in the House booklet "The Communications Allowance and the use of House stationery" and the Green Book.

Members who wish to make use of an advance of the allowance must contact the Department of Resources which considers all requests on their merit. In broad terms, any advance of money from a future year should be no more than 10 per cent. of the allowance and be to meet a non-recurring expenditure item.

Members must also demonstrate that they will be able to manage within the reduced cash ceiling in the following year and consent to the recovery of any advances from their salary or the resettlement grant if they cease to be a Member and their allowances are overspent.

To date no advance from the communications allowance for 2009-10 has been requested this year nor were any advances made last year.

Members: Pensions

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Leader of the House what procedures will be applied to over-payments of pensions to former hon. Members. [246276]

Chris Bryant: A variety of factors contributed to a significant number of pension payment errors by the Parliamentary Contributory Pension Fund (PCPF) related to the application of the guaranteed minimum pension (GMP). These errors included payment of pension increases at the wrong level and payment of increases too early.

In 2006 the Chairman of the PCPF Trustees and the Leader of the House agreed to an independent person being appointed to advise on the handling of the overpayments, so as to ensure that the approach adopted was fair and consistent and in line with the best practice on the recovery of overpayments of public money.

The independent adviser recommended that full recovery action be taken for all overpayments made within the last six years, apart from:

overpayments of less than £500, unless the scheme member agreed to repay the monies voluntarily; overpayments made to members who had since died and whose estates had been settled; and other cases where legal considerations supported non-recovery.

All future payments to scheme members were corrected.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Leader of the House how much has been overpaid on pensions to former hon. Members during the last three financial years; what the reasons were for this overpayment; and whether the amount overpaid will be recovered from recipients. [246277]

Chris Bryant: A variety of factors contributed to a significant number of pension payment errors by the Parliamentary Contributory Pension Fund (PCPF) related to the application of the guaranteed minimum pension (GMP). These errors included payment of pension increases at the wrong level and payment of increases too early.

Over more than 10 years, overpayments totalling some £402,000 were made to 177 scheme members, pensioners and widow(er)s.

87 scheme members were asked to make repayments, totalling some £185,000.

Some £253,000 has been written off, which includes a small proportion of the sum originally identified as recoverable.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Churches: Water Charges

Mr. Pickles: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what estimate the Church Commissioners have made of the aggregate effect of new water charges on the finances of Church of England churches. [245924]

Sir Stuart Bell: As I told my hon. Friend the Member for Wirral, South (Ben Chapman) on 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 671, it is estimated that the new charges will cost Church of England churches and cathedrals around £5 million or more per annum. In addition, churches using the public sewers will also be liable for highways drainage contributions at an estimated cost of £10 million per annum.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Local Government: Reorganisation

Mr. Spring: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission on what grounds the Boundary Committee for England decides which bodies it is prepared to meet during its consultations on local government structural reviews. [244853]

Sir Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that when carrying out a review the Boundary Committee for England organises a series of roundtable discussions to which it invites the county council, the district councils, the parish and town councils in the county and other bodies who currently work closely with local government and who the committee considers would have views on how any future unitary pattern of local government could work.

The Commission further informs me that the committee also uses stakeholder lists provided by the councils in order to help identify other individuals, organisations and businesses.

Local Government: Suffolk

Mr. Spring: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission on what grounds Forest Heath district council, Waveney district council and St. Edmundsbury borough council have been refused a meeting with the Boundary Committee for England during the consultation period for local government structural review in Suffolk. [244856]

Sir Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that at stages one and two of the review process the Boundary Committee arranged a series of meetings, both collectively and individually, with local authorities in Suffolk in which representatives from Forest Heath district council, Waveney district council and St. Edmundsbury borough council participated.

The Commission further informs me that it is the committee's policy to decline meeting requests from local authorities to discuss schemes not included in the committee's draft report.

Mr. Spring: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment he has made of whether the consultation process undertaken by the Boundary Committee for England in regard to the structural review of local government in Suffolk has so far met all the criteria set out in the Cabinet Office code of practice on consultation to date. [244855]

Sir Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that the consultation carried out by the Boundary Committee has met all the criteria set out in the Cabinet Office code of practice.

Mr. Spring: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what his policy is on whether the Boundary Committee for England's structural review of Suffolk local government should consider the views of the general public in the form of petitions as evidence in its deliberations. [244856]

Sir Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that the Boundary Committee will consider the views of all those who make representations to it, including those in the form of a petition.

However, the Commission also informs me that the guidance from the Secretary of State to which the committee must have regard states that > "the volume of representations for or against a proposal should not of itself be considered to provide a definitive view of that proposal's merits".

Mr. Spring: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how much money the local government structural review in Suffolk has cost to date; how much of those costs are in respect of (a) the salaries of those conducting, (b) consultation and (c) other costs. [244857]

Sir Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that the structural review in Suffolk has to date cost £218,757. This can be broken down into the following areas of expenditure:

Category of expenditure	£
(a) Salaries (including local government consultant)	109,948
(b) Consultation	27,483
(c) Other Costs:
Financial Consultants	65,791
Printing	11,794
Mapping	2,248
Couriers	363
Staff training	1,130
Total	218,757

Policy Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what expert advisers have been commissioned by the Electoral Commission since its inception; on what topic each was commissioned; and whether the adviser so appointed made a declaration of political activity in each case. [246967]

Sir Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that where records are available this information is presented in the following tables. The process for engaging expert advisers was centralised in mid-September 2008 and therefore the records are complete only from this point forward.

The Electoral Commission further informs me that there is no statutory restriction on engaging expert advisers based on political activity. However, given the nature of some of the work expert advisers may be asked to undertake the Commission has since mid-September 2008 required all such advisers to complete a declaration of political activity. Prior to mid-September 2008 declarations of political activity were only required of some expert advisers.

Expert advisers hired after mid-September 2008

Adviser	Purpose of appointment
Elizabeth Butler (made political declaration)	Independent member of the Audit Committee providing external challenge support and advice
Caroline Morris (made political declaration)	To provide legal advice to the Boundary Committee for England and Party and Election Finance Directorate
Trevor Shepherd (made political declaration)	Development of enforcement policies and procedures
Steve Kingston (made political declaration)	Acting Head of Enforcement

Expert advisers hired before mid-September 2008

Adviser	Purpose of appointment
Louise Ferguson	Consultancy services on a project on the design of ballot papers
Nicole Smith (made political declaration)	Consultancy services on the Commission's response to the White Paper on regulation of Party Funding

Expert advisers hired before mid-September 2008

Adviser	Purpose of appointment
Justin Fisher (made political declaration)	Professional services to the Party and Election Finance directorate
George Fairbairn	Provision of advice, guidance and information to electoral administrators and other interested parties on electoral law and practice in Scotland
Denise Wheatley	Provision of advice relating to the Equality Scheme in Northern Ireland
Colin McDonald	Review of the Vote Scotland public awareness campaign
John Roberts	Legal advisor on parish orders
Terence Scarborough	Legal advisor on parish orders
Tessa Dunston	Legal advisor on parish orders
Graham Farrant	Mentoring of trainee practise advisers and project work on Electoral Administration
Peter Stanyon	Electoral Administration Bill guidance

Political Parties: Finance

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment the Electoral Commission has made of the proposals in the Political Parties and Elections Bill that political parties and other donees must take reasonable steps to verify the accuracy of the new declarations for donations over £200; and what assessment the Commission has made of the accuracy of the accompanying Ministry of Justice impact assessment on the issue. [246735]

Sir Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that the requirement for donation recipients to take all reasonable steps to verify declarations was deleted by Government amendments during the Public Bill Committee on the Political Parties and Elections Bill.

CHILDREN, SCHOOLS AND FAMILIES

Academies: Finance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what he expects the level of revenue spending for (a) 11 to 16 provision and (b) 16 to 19 provision in school academies to be each year from 2008-09 to 2010-11; and if he will make a statement. [245600]

Jim Knight: It is not possible to disaggregate 11-16 spend on academies from other age ranges without disproportionate expenditure. The following table provides the details of the current level of the academies revenue budget each year from 2008-09 to 2010-11, and identifies specifically the sums within that budget transferred from the Department's 16-19 budget (which is mostly paid to the Learning and Skills Council at present) for sixth form provision. However, the sixth form figure excludes certain academies (former City Technology Colleges) never funded by the LSC.

The table is based on 55 academy openings in 2009 and 2010. As a result of the National Challenge, the number of actual openings will be greater, but are not yet fixed—although there are likely to be around 80 in 2009. Resources devoted to academies in 2009-10 and 2010-11 will rise accordingly, including the amounts transferred from the 16-19 budget and amounts recouped from local authority allocations of dedicated schools grant, as well as additions from the National Challenge budget for set-up costs.

	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11
Total revenue budget	853.03	1,188.04	1,567.85
Of which:
resources transferred in from LSC budget for sixth forms	51.20	84.77	128.31

Academies: Sponsorship

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what procedures apply when the lead sponsor of an academy withdraws from involvement after the academy has been established. [245243]

Jim Knight: If a sponsor wishes to withdraw involvement once an academy has been opened then the academy trust and DCSF will agree the best way forward. The prime consideration will be the needs of the pupils at the academy.

Building Schools for the Future Programme

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families which local authorities he expects to join the Building Schools for the Future programme after 2010; and if he will make a statement. [245598]

Jim Knight: Including the interim wave we launched this summer, there are now 80 authorities started with projects the Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme. The remaining authorities will enter the programme as soon as is practicable. I aim to announce the revised national programme in early 2009, using the revised expressions of interest which authorities submitted by 30 November. The most highly prioritised projects, which will access funding starting from 2011-12, should enter the programme later in 2009 where they demonstrate that they are ready to deliver.

Children in Care

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many children are in care in each (a) primary and (b) secondary school in each of the principal seaside towns in England. [241502]

Beverley Hughes: Classifications that enable analysis at town level, including seaside towns, are not readily available therefore this information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Data have been published by the Department in SFR—Statistical First Release—23/2008: "Children looked after in England (including adoption and care leavers) year ending 31 March 2008". Table LAA1 of that publication provides information on the number of looked after children at 31 March by local authority for the last five years. This publication can be found on the Department's website via the following link:

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000810/index.shtml

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (1) how many children were in care as a result of their mother's imprisonment in the last year for which figures are available; and what percentage of those children were subsequently returned to their mother's care; [244491]

(2) how many asylum-seeking children are in care; [244512]

(3) how many children in care were convicted of a crime in each of the last five years, broken down by type of crime. [244507]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of children who were in care as a result of their mother's imprisonment and subsequently returned to their care is not held centrally by the Department.

However, information is collected on the number of children who were in care as a result of absent parenting and this can be found in table A1, taken from the Statistical First Release (SFR 23/2008) entitled 'Children looked after in England (including adoption and care leavers) year ending 31 March 2008'. This shows the number of children looked after at 31 March for 2004 to 2008 by category of need. The reason for the parents' absence is not collected.

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000810/FinalSFRTablesoct.xls

Information on the number of asylum-seeking children who are in care can be found in table A4, within the same SFR.

The OC2 data collection collects information on a range of outcomes for looked after children from local authorities. This information has been published in the Statistical First Release "Outcome Indicators for Children Looked After, 12 months to 30 September 2007—England" (SFR 08/2008), which is available on the Department's website via the following link:

This publication contains figures for the period 2005-07.

Information on the number of children looked after continuously for at least 12 months aged 10 or above convicted of a crime or subject to a final warning or reprimand can be found in table E. Information on the type of crime is not collected centrally.

Figures for 2002-04 are also published on the Department's website and are available in volume reference (03/2005) here:

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DBA/VOL/v000580/index.shtml

Children in Care: Coastal Areas

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families with reference to the Answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, columns 1821-3W, on children in care: coastal areas, if he will make it his policy to collect data on looked-after children by (a) ward and (b) lower super output area in the principal seaside towns of England. [244405]

Beverley Hughes: We do not intend to collect data centrally on looked-after children by ward and lower super output area in the principal seaside towns of England.

In line with our commitments in the Local Government White Paper, "Strong and Prosperous Communities" we aim to > "reduce radically the number of nationally-required local targets, performance indicators and reporting" and to replace these with a

> "revised Local Area Agreement (LAA) process through which central Government and local partners will agree and manage a limited number of improvement targets for each local area".

However local authorities will often be collecting information at ward/town level to aid their priority setting and performance management arrangements.

Children: Protection

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families with reference to his Statement of 20 November 2008, Official Report, column 376, on safeguarding children, (1) what professional advice he was given regarding the publication of the serious case review; and from whom; [240898]

(2) on what legal basis he has decided he may not publish the serious case review for Baby P. [243435]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 8 December 2008]: The Department does not routinely publish advice to Ministers.

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many children were on the Child Protection Register in the year ended March (a) 2004, (b) 2005, (c) 2006, (d) 2007 and (e) 2008. [241744]

Beverley Hughes: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1834W

http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm200708/cmhansrd/cm081126/text/81126w0076.htm

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families on how many occasions he has rejected the advice of the expert panel created in 2006 as to whether a person on the sex offenders' register should be employed to work with children; and if he will make a statement. [242144]

Beverley Hughes: There have been no occasions when the Secretary of State has rejected the advice of the expert panel on whether a person should be barred from working with children. The panel was established in January 2006. The panel's role in advising on ongoing List 99 cases was transferred to the new Independent Safeguarding Authority on 31 March 2008.

Any person who has been convicted or cautioned for a sexual offence against a child since 28 February 2007 has been automatically placed on List 99—these cases have not required the advice of the panel.

Children's Centres

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what plans he has to take forward proposals for legislation affecting Sure Start Children's Centres following the recent public consultation exercise; and when he expects the findings of the consultation to be published. [245772]

Beverley Hughes: Yes, we plan to legislate for Sure Start Children's Centres as part of the forthcoming Children, Skills and Learning Bill. The public consultation exercise 'Legislating for Sure Start Children's Centres' closed on 6 November and we received over 300 replies. An overwhelming 97 per cent. of respondents agreed with our proposal to give Sure Start Children's Centres a firm legislative basis. We will publish the consultation report on the Department's consultation website:

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/consultations/

by the end of December.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how much his Department and its predecessors spent on entertainment and hospitality in each year since 1997. [240626]

Ed Balls: The following table sets out spending on entertainment and hospitality in £ thousand for the Department for Children, Schools and Families and its predecessor Departments in the relevant years.

1996-97	24
1997-98	21
1998-99	31
1999-2000	21
2000-01	25
2001-02	11
2002-03	16
2003-04	20
2004-05	35
2005-06	45

The Department's policy on entertainment is in accordance with the principles of Treasury guidance in Managing Public Money and the handbook on Regularity, Propriety and Value for Money.

Entertainment expenditure is limited to occasions when official business can best be transacted in that way. Personal entertainment, in the form of hospitality, is usually restricted to where senior managers (deputy director or above) are acting as host and expenditure must be approved in advance by a director or executive board member.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families with reference to the answer of 21 October 2008, Official Report, columns 326-7W, on departmental publications, which documents his Department has circulated in exceptional circumstances to schools since December 2004. [241592]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: To retrieve the information as to which documents the Department has circulated to schools in exceptional circumstances since December 2004 can be obtained only at a disproportional cost.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1836W, on the education maintenance allowance, how many students have (a) received a notice of entitlement for the education maintenance allowance, (b) successfully enrolled and (c) received at least one payment, broken down by (i) local authority and (ii) constituency. [244906]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) who operate the education maintenance allowance (EMA) for the Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF). Mark Haysom the LSC's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families whether he was kept informed of the number of students who had (a) applied for a notice of entitlement, (b) received a notice of entitlement, (c) enrolled on a course and (d) received a payment during his communications with the Learning and Skills Council about the administration of the education maintenance allowance. [244933]

Jim Knight: Since the beginning of September officials have received daily processing statistics, supplied by the contractor via the LSC, which have included each of the areas in question. These data have been relayed to Ministers in the regular updates they have received on the processing of education maintenance allowance applications.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how regularly he has met or had communication with the Learning and Skills Council to monitor the administration of education maintenance allowance payments. [244934]

Jim Knight: In response to the recent EMA delivery issues Ministers and officials have had direct contact with the LSC on a regular basis. This has included both correspondence and meetings. Since August Ministers have also received regular updates from officials, based upon their communication with the LSC. These updates have been received on a daily basis since the beginning of September.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what his most recent estimate is of the percentage of eligible people claiming education maintenance allowance in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [245024]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) who operate the education maintenance allowance (EMA) for the Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF). The helpline, assessment and payment function for EMA transferred to Capita from 28 November 2008. Mark Haysom the LSC's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member for Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many pupils are receiving hardship payments as a result of a delay in receiving their education maintenance allowance payments; and if he will make a statement. [245575]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) who operate the education maintenance allowance (EMA) for the Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF). The helpline, assessment and payment function for EMA has transferred to Capita as from 28 November 2008. Mark Haysom the LSC's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member for Beverley and Holderness with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many education maintenance allowance payments for 2008 he expects will have been made by 1 January 2009; how many such payments for 2007 had been made by 1 January 2008; and if he will make a statement. [245650]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) who operate the education maintenance allowance (EMA) for the Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF). The helpline, assessment and payment function for EMA has transferred to Capita as from 28 November 2008. Mark Haysom the LSC's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member for Beverley and Holderness with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Faith Schools

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many schools he and his predecessors have designated as being of a religious character in each of the last 10 years. [245852]

Jim Knight: The following table shows the number of brand new maintained faith schools that have opened in each of the last 10 years. All faith schools are designated as having a religious character under the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 and the Religious Character of schools (Designation Procedure) Regulations 1998.

	Number of new faith schools
1998	3
1999	6
2000	3
2001	6
2002	10
2003	10
2004	14
2005	12
2006	7
2007	7
Total	84

These figures include former independent faith schools that have joined the maintained sector. They do not include new faith schools resulting from schools amalgamating or faith infant and junior schools amalgamating to be replaced by a primary school.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many children in (a) Bedfordshire, (b) South Bedfordshire and (c) South West Bedfordshire constituency took one or more science GCSE in the latest year for which figures are available. [244067]

Jim Knight: The requested information is given in the following table for GCSE science entries in 2008:

	Total number of pupils at the end of KS4 entered for GCSE Science
Bedfordshire	4,683
South Bedfordshire	1,364
South West Bedfordshire	1,099

Note:
The data is provisional and subject to change.

Health Education: Skin Piercing

Meg Munn: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families if he will take steps to encourage schools to educate children and young people on the issues surrounding body piercing, with particular reference to the risk of infection. [244111]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: Pupils learn to assess and manage the element of risk in personal choices and situations as part of the Personal, Social, Health and Economic Education. The programme of study focuses on teaching children and young people the skills to recognise risk, minimise harm and to make choices and decisions in a range of contexts, based on accurate information obtained through their own research. Schools may use topics such as body piercing to illustrate and develop the skills needed to deal with risky behaviour.

Higher Education: Finance

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what steps the Government plan to take to increase funding for university (a) research and (b) staff costs. [245809]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

Funding for higher education has increased by 24 per cent. in real terms since 1997 and will have increased by some 30 per cent. by 2010, with higher education research funding set to rise to £1.9 billion by 2010-11 in addition to the funding that universities secure from research councils. Funding for staff and other costs are for universities to determine in the light of the overall level of resources available to them and the need to take sustainable decisions.

Intellectual Property Review

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families when his Department plans to take forward recommendation 36 of the Gowers Review and match penalties for online and physical infringement of copyright. [245151]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

Penalties for criminal copyright infringement must be proportionate to the harm caused to UK industries, so that they act as an effective deterrent. We have recently (31 October) completed a consultation on introducing exceptional summary maxima (above £5,000) in the magistrates courts for offences of online and physical copyright infringement.

Islam and Citizenship Education

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families in how many mosque schools the Islam and citizenship education programme is being piloted; in which cities these schools are located; how the pilot will be evaluated; and when he expects the programme to be rolled out nationally. [245536]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The Islam and citizenship education project is being piloted in 30 mosque schools in London, Bristol, Leicester, Bradford/Kirklees and Oldham/Rochdale. The Institute of Community Cohesion has been commissioned to evaluate the project. The draft lessons are freely available online to all mosque schools and will be updated in April 2009 following the end of piloting.

Languages: GCSE

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families in how many comprehensive schools 50 per cent. or more of pupils achieved a modern languages GCSE at grade A* to C in 2007. [240883]

Jim Knight: In 278 comprehensive schools[1] 50 per cent. or more of the pupils achieved a modern language GCSE at A* to C in 2007.

The data were taken from the 2007 Achievement and Attainment Tables.

National Curriculum Tests

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what marks were required in Key Stage 2 tests in (a) English and (b) mathematics to achieve a level (i) 4 and (ii) 5 in (A) 1999, (B) 2006, (C) 2007 and (D) 2008. [241851]

Jim Knight: The National Assessment Agency (NAA) is responsible for administering national curriculum tests. The NAA has provided the following table of marks required in Key Stage 2 English and mathematics tests to achieve Level 4 and 5. NAA uses a range of statistical and judgmental procedures to ensure that the standards of performance required for the award of each level are maintained consistently from year to year. The content of each test changes every year, therefore different numbers of marks may be required in different years to achieve a certain level. Levels are anchored to the National Curriculum so that a level 4 achieved in one year represents the same level of performance as a level 4 achieved in any other year.

		(a) KS2 English						(b) KS2 Maths
		(i) Level 4			(ii) Level 5			(i) Level 4	(ii) Level 5
		Reading	Writing	Overall	Reading	Writing	Overall
(A)	1999	17	31	48	31	39	70	52	80
(B)	2006	18	25	43	33	37	70	46	78
(C)	2007	18	25	43	33	37	70	46	79
(D)	2008	18	25	43	32	37	69	45	78

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families when he expects a decision to be made on a replacement contractor for next year's key stage tests; and if he will make a statement. [245440]

Jim Knight: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) announced Edexcel as its preferred bidder for the one-year contract to deliver key stage 2 national curriculum tests for 2009 on 15 December 2008.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many five-year-olds did not start formal education until the autumn term in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [244531]

Jim Knight: The requested information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pupil Exclusions: Special Educational Needs

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what proportion of fixed period exclusions were given to pupils (a) with special educational needs and (b) who were children in care in (i) secondary and (ii) primary schools in each year since 1997. [241715]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: Data on the number of pupils with fixed period exclusions was collected for the first time for the school year 2003/04, therefore data can only be provided for the last four school years. Information on the number of fixed period exclusions given to pupils with special educational needs is shown in the table.

Analysis of the number of exclusions of children on the school census, who were in-care at the time of the exclusion would incur disproportionate cost. The number of permanent exclusions of looked after children is however provided by the Department's Outcome Indicators for Looked After Children collection (OC2), which is available at http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000785/index.shtml.

This collection does not cover fixed period collections.

School Census

Schools: Admissions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what steps his Department has taken to reduce the school drop-out rate in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [245020]

Jim Knight: The Government have put in place a number of actions to encourage and support young people to remain in learning beyond compulsory schooling. These include:

the September Guarantee, an offer of a suitable place in learning for all young people leaving Year 11, was extended this year for the first time to 17-year-olds, to support young people on short courses or who were NEET during the year to re-engage. Latest data shows that over 94 per cent. of 16-year-olds and almost 80 per cent. of this 17-year-old group received an offer of a place in learning this year; a range of financial support is available to young people to help them continue in education or training. This includes education maintenance allowance, learner support funds, residential bursaries, Care to Learn and dance and drama awards; the NEET strategy (November 2007) introduced a number of measures to increase participation including a duty on providers to notify Connexions when a young person drops out of learning, and encouraging providers to offer more flexible and responsive provision throughout the academic year.

The Learning and Skills Council has a specific responsibility to raise participation in each local area.

As a result of local and national action and support 78.7 per cent. of young people were in education and training at the end of 2007—the highest rate ever, whilst the proportion of young people not in education, employment or training (NEET) reduced 1 percentage point from 10.4 per cent. in 2006 to 9.4 per cent. in 2007, the equivalent of 20,000 fewer young people NEET.

In the North East, 76 per cent. of 17-year-olds were in education and training at the end of 2006 (the latest date for which data are available). In 2007 the proportion of young people not in education, employment or training (NEET) in the North East was 10.0 per cent. Data are not available for Tees Valley or Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland as the data cannot be broken down to area or constituency level.

Schools: Standards

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1865W, on schools: standards, to which national challenge school the answer refers. [244993]

Jim Knight: I will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested and will place a copy of my response in the Library.

Sex and Relationships Education Steering Group

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of each piece of written evidence that has been presented to the Sex and Relationships Education Steering Group; and if he will make a statement; [245205]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of each piece of research which has been commissioned by the Sex and Relationship Education Steering Group; what the cost was of each; and if he will make a statement; [245206]

(3) how much has been spent by the Sex and Relationships Education Steering Group in each year since its establishment; and if he will make a statement; [244885]

(4) what discussions (a) he, (b) Ministers in his Department and (c) officials in his Department have had since January 2008 with the Roman Catholic church on material disseminated by his Department to Catholic schools on sex and relationship education; what views the Catholic church put forward in those discussions; and if he will make a statement. [244886]

Jim Knight: The Sex and Relationships Education (SRE) steering group was established in March 2008 and had its final meeting in October 2008, at which it signed-off its report and recommendations to Government. Steering group members were reimbursed travelling expenses, but were not paid a fee for participating in the review.

To inform its consideration of the issues, the steering group commissioned:

Two on-line surveys: one seeking young people's views on the SRE they had received at school; and the other seeking teachers' views on what was preventing more effective delivery of SRE. The young-people survey was supplemented with a residential event with a small group of UK Youth Parliament members to discuss issues in more detail. The administration of the surveys, the analysis of the results and facilitation of the residential event were undertaken by the Sex Education Forum, which was paid £13,625 to carry out this work; and

Two literature reviews: one which reviewed the existing evidence on parents' views on SRE; and one which reviewed the international evidence on the impact of SRE. These reviews were carried out free of charge by Professor Roger Ingham, from the Centre for Sexual Health Research, Department of Psychology, University of Southampton, who was a member of the SRE review steering group.

The total cost of the review was £18,630.

Presentations were made to the steering group, summarising the key findings of the on-line surveys and literature reviews. A copy of each presentation will be placed in the House of Commons Library. In addition, a number of individuals and organisations submitted evidence to an 'SRE Review' e-mail account that was established to allow those who were unable to be accommodated on the steering group itself, to submit views. These submissions were circulated to the SRE review steering group for their consideration. Copies of these submissions will also be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Oona Stannard, Chief Executive of the Catholic Education Service was a member of the SRE Review steering group and was in full agreement with the group's report and recommendations. Other than the SRE guidance published in 2000, and the non-statutory programmes of study for Personal Well-Being issued in 2007, the Government have not issued guidance to Catholic or other schools on SRE delivery. The resources that schools use to support delivery of their SRE programmes are determined by each individual school.

The Government published their response to the report by the SRE review steering group on 23 October. A copy of both the group's report and the Government response are available at:

http://www.teachernet.gov.uk/docbank/index.cfm?id=13030

Social Services: Complaints

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many complaints were made against social services departments in each local authority area in Yorkshire and the Humber in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [244691]

Beverley Hughes: This information is not collected centrally. However, local authorities are required to keep a record of:

each representation/complaint received;

the outcome of each, that is, the decisions made in response to the representation/complaint and any action to be taken; and whether there was compliance with the time limits.

Each local authority must produce an annual report drawing on this information. This report should not contain personal information that is identifiable about any individual complainant.

Young People: Mental Health

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what assessment he has made of the recommendations relevant to his Department's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capital and Wellbeing, with particular regard to those recommendations concerning young people and adolescents; and if he will make a statement. [244012]

Beverley Hughes: We welcome the Foresight report 'Mental Capital and Wellbeing: Making the Most of Ourselves in the 21st Century', published in October 2008. The report's broad analysis and recommendations are very much in line with the approach in the Children's Plan. In particular, we welcome the distinction made in the report between the development of positive well-being and tackling of mental health conditions.

We are already taking forward key programmes of work that are highlighted within the report such as work around parenting, children's social and emotional skills and the early years foundation stage.

In addition, the Government's initial response to the final report of the independent review of Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services, 'Children and Young People in Mind', published on 18 November, set out a strong package of proposals and action that are directly relevant to much of the Foresight report's findings. We have set up a National Advisory Council for children's mental health and psychological well-being to advise us on implementing the recommendations of the independent review of CAMHS report and hold us to account on progress. Services for vulnerable children have been identified as a key priority area for the implementation of the CAMHS review's recommendations.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency: Pay

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans there are to pay bonuses to staff at the Child Support Agency in respect of the present year. [242173]

Kitty Ussher: The administration of the child maintenance system is a matter for the commissioner of the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Child Maintenance Commissioner.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what plans there are to pay bonuses to staff at the Child Support Agency in respect of the present year. [242173]

The Child Support Agency was an executive Agency of the Department for Work and Pensions until 31 October 2008 when responsibility for the Agency and its people transferred to the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission. In this present year the Commission will operate bonus schemes similar to those already agreed when the Agency was part of the Department for Work and Pensions.

There are two bonus schemes: the individual performance bonus scheme and the special bonus scheme. Individual performance bonuses are based on annual appraisals markings and are awarded at the end of the operational year. Additional special bonuses can be awarded to an individual outside the annual appraisal system, to recognise and reward an exceptional personal or team achievement.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Children: Maintenance

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what consideration is made of the implications for child poverty in second homes when debts to the Child Support Agency are enforced. [241925]

Kitty Ussher: The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission is responsible for the child maintenance system. I have therefore asked the Child Maintenance Commissioner to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Child Maintenance Commissioner as the Child Support Agency is now the responsibility of the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what consideration is made of the implications for child poverty in second homes when debts to the Child Support Agency are enforced. [241925]

Child maintenance debt is owed by non-resident parents to their children as a result of their failure to meet their financial responsibilities. If the non-resident parent has a second family with which he or she lives the children of that family are taken into account in the maintenance calculation and the non-resident parent's liability is adjusted accordingly. There is an over-riding duty to consider the welfare of the child in child support law and this extends to the responsibility the non-resident parent may have towards any second family. The Child Support Agency also takes into account representations of hardship from the non-resident parent when negotiating an arrears arrangement.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much uncollectable Child Support Agency arrears has been categorised as (a) probably and (b) possibly uncollectable, broken down by debt analysis type. [242175]

Kitty Usher: The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission is responsible for the child maintenance system. I have therefore asked the commissioner to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Child Maintenance Commissioner.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how much uncollectable Child Support Agency arrears has been categorised as (a) probably and (b) possibly uncollectable broken down by debt analysis type. [242175]

The Agency undertakes an annual debt analysis exercise based on a sample of cases, to estimate the amount of debt assessed as collectable, and that which is deemed either possibly, or probably uncollectable. The results of this annual sample exercise are subject to review by the National Audit Office as part of their audit of the Agency's accounts. The estimate for the year ending March 2008 was published with the Agency's 2008 Annual Report and Accounts in July this year. A copy of the Annual Report and Accounts can be found in the House of Commons Library or on line at the following link:

http://www.csa.gov.uk/en/about/publications-corporate.asp#AnnRep

The latest estimate is also routinely published in Table 22 of the Agency's Quarterly Summary of Statistics, and has been set out in the attached table for ease.

It should be noted that classing a debt as possibly or probably uncollectable does not mean the Agency will not take action in the future to collect any outstanding money. The Agency will continue to make every effort to ensure parents fulfil their financial responsibility to their children.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Child Support Agency

Total gross child maintenance debt outstanding at March 2008	3.8
Of which:
Possibly uncollectable[1]	0.1
Probably uncollectable[2]	2.2
Collectable[3]	1.5

[1] "Possibly uncollectable" debt refers to amounts outstanding which the debt analysis exercise revealed some uncertainty over whether it will be collected. The amounts are considered doubtful where, for example, payments have been infrequent or it has not been possible to establish an arrears agreement or impose a deduction of earning order.

[2] "Probably uncollectible" debt refers to the amount outstanding which the debt analysis exercise revealed is likely to be very difficult to collect due, for example, to the lack of contact with, or the personal circumstance of, the non-resident parent. In many of these cases, the Agency has suspended recovery action until such time as the individual's circumstances change.

[3] "Collectable" debt refers to the amount outstanding which the debt analysis exercise revealed is likely to be collected. This takes into account factors such as regular contact with the non-resident parent, where regular payments are being made or an arrears agreement has been set up.

Notes:

1. Figures are taken from the Agency's annual report and accounts and from table 22 of the Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest £0.1 billion.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many uncleared Child Support Agency applications there have been in each month since May 1997. [242190]

Kitty Usher: The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission is responsible for the child maintenance system. I have therefore asked the Commissioner to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Child Maintenance Commissioner as the Child Support Agency is now the responsibility of the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many uncleared Child Support Agency applications there have been in each month since May 1997. [242190]

Information on the number of uncleared cases is routinely published in Tables 1 and 2.1 and the Summary and Target sections of the Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics, the latest copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library or online at:

www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/csa.asp.

Table 1 provides the available information on old scheme cases, by quarter from May 1999, information prior to this date is not available. Table 2.1 provides the information requested for current and old scheme cases but not including cases cleared clerically, from March 2003 when the current scheme was introduced.

Under its three year Operational Improvement Plan, the Agency committed to reduce the number of current scheme applications to 90,000 by the end of March 2009. As of September 2008 the Agency had reduced the number of uncleared current scheme cases by 66% from 220,100 cases in March 2006 to 75,700 including cases cleared clerically.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many letters requesting payment of child maintenance arrears have been sent to non-resident parents by the Child Support Agency in each month in the last three years; [242191]

(2) how many requests for full settlement of outstanding arrears of child maintenance have been sent to non-resident parents by the Child Support Agency in each month in the last three years. [242194]

Kitty Usher: I have consulted with the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission who have confirmed that the information requested is not available.

Departmental Conditions of Employment

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance his Department provides to its managers on the right of employees of the Department to request flexible working; and what estimate his Department has made of the extent to which its staff in offices across the country have taken up this right. [244139]

Jonathan Shaw: Departmental guidance supports managers by covering both the legislative requirement and the Department's application of its legislative requirement for employees to change the hours they work, the times they are required to be at work and also the ability to work from home.

At the end of October 2008, 35 per cent. (39,440) of employees in DWP were on part-time flexible working contracts. In addition there are employees who job share or work from home, either contractually or on an ad hoc basis.

Departmental Contracts

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many contracts his Department and its executive agencies have made with the training provider Inspire2Independence; and if he will make a statement; [245230]

(2) what steps Jobcentre Plus has taken to encourage the involvement of football clubs in Inspire2Independence's welfare to work programme; [245231]

(3) what assessment he has made of the performance of Inspire2Independence's football-related contracts with his Department and its agencies in (a) involving people outside the working population and (b) helping such people into work. [245232]

Jonathan Shaw: Inspire2Independence currently hold three DWP contracts for the delivery of welfare to work provision. The organisation plays a valuable role both in terms of delivering a range of welfare to work services and in helping develop activity to improve performance of welfare to work commercial services generally.

Jobcentre Plus has played no role in encouraging the involvement of football clubs in provision delivered by Inspire2Independence, though they are responsible for managing the referral of customers to provision. The "Coaching Academy" model developed by Inspire2Independence does make use of a number of football club facilities to deliver its services.

Inspire2Independence were given a challenging implementation plan and their performance against this is improving month by month. Their performance in November was in the top 25 per cent. of DWP welfare to work providers and overall they are achieving mid range performance.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether responsibility for data security is assigned at a senior level and included within relevant job descriptions in his Department; and if he will make a statement. [240332]

Jonathan Shaw: The Department's Information Security Committee (a sub-committee of the Department's Executive Team) is responsible for information security issues across the Department. Operational responsibility for security is assigned to respective chief executives and heads of businesses. Other senior staff in the Department's agencies have specific responsibilities for promoting data security and report to their respective chief executives. Following the publication of the Cabinet Office's Review of Data Handling Procedures in Government, specific senior civil servants across the Department have been designated as information asset owners who provide assurance to the Department's senior information risk owner that data assets are properly protected.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what independent assurance he has obtained on the adequacy of data security and information governance arrangements across his Department and its associated agencies. [240341]

Jonathan Shaw: Independent assurance on the adequacy of the Department's controls is provided from a range of sources including internal audit reviews conducted in accordance with governance arrangements that are overseen by the Departmental Audit Committee, comprising an independent chair and independent members.

In addition, new procedures introduced as part of Cabinet Office's review of data-handling procedures in Government, have led to the designation of information asset owners—senior staff—who provide assurance to the Department's senior information risk owner on the adequacy of the arrangements for the management of information assets. The departmental security officer, who is independent of the operational management chain, also provides an annual assessment on the prevailing level of security, and the consequent assurance that can be obtained across the broad range of security risks, including those relating to information.

These assurances, along with other information, will be used to inform the statement of internal control which will be published in the Department's resource account for the year ending 31 March 2009.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what formal data owners there are for each dataset held by his Department and its agencies; and if he will make a statement. [240815]

Jonathan Shaw: In accordance with the Cabinet Office's report on Guidance on Mandatory Roles: AO, SIRO, IAO (accounting officer, senior information risk owner and information asset owner) published in April 2008, the Department has appointed a senior information risk owner and information asset owners who will have responsibility for meeting the requirements of the Cabinet Office data handling report.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the adequacy of (a) staff recruitment and management practices, (b) administrative processes and (c) technical controls in maintaining data security in his Department and its agencies. [241304]

Jonathan Shaw: The Department takes its responsibilities for data security very seriously. In the last year, the Department has made substantial and extensive improvements to its handling arrangements for such data including the implementation of the recommendations of the Cabinet Office review of data handling procedures in Government.

In respect of the specific information sought, the following measures have been introduced:

(a) Staff recruitment: the Department has introduced additional background checks on new recruits, including the checking of identity and criminal records.

(b) Administrative processes: new procedures have been introduced that have considerably tightened up the handling of information, including improvements in the way data is transferred across the Department, and exchanged with external partners. Staff have been provided with improved guidance; security and discipline policies are being reviewed and refreshed; and major steps have been taken to improve security awareness.

(c) Technical controls: all the Department's laptop computers have been encrypted, and strict IT controls implemented which prohibit the use of unencrypted media (memory sticks, disks, etc). Wherever possible, data is transferred electronically rather than relying on physical media.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) procedures and (b) staff training programmes his Department has put in place on maintaining data security. [241305]

Jonathan Shaw: A wide range of new procedures has been developed and introduced, including implementation of encryption products for physical media and laptops, restrictions on the transfer of certain categories of information, and better control where paper documents are moved by courier services. All these changes have been supported by improved guidance to staff. In addition all new staff now undertake security awareness training as part of their routine induction. These activities are being supplemented by a concerted and significant campaign of staff awareness.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what records his Department maintains in relation to the classes of data held by his Department and its agencies. [241391]

Jonathan Shaw: The Department is registered as a data controller in accordance with the Data Protection Act, and the records maintained in relation to personal data comply with that registration. A very wide range of data records are necessary to deliver the extensive range of services and benefits administered by the Department. Such records as are held will vary according to the particular requirements of the related purpose under the legislation.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on how many occasions (a) information and (b) data was (i) lost and (ii) stolen from his Department in each year since 1997; and what estimate he has made of the cost to his Department of recovering such losses. [244045]

Jonathan Shaw: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Ceredigion (Mark Williams) on 22 October 2008, Official Report, column 408W.

Departmental Gifts

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many members of staff in his Department have received gifts valued at £100 or higher in the course of their duties in each of the last three years; what these gifts were; and from whom they were received. [242019]

Mr. McNulty: The following table shows the number of staff within the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) who received gifts valued at £100 or higher in the course of their duties within the last three years:

	Number of staff	Details of gifts received	Estimated value of gifts (£)	From whom the gifts were received
2006	1	12 bottles of wine	150	London Business School
2006	1	Leather Folder, pen and book	150	Booz Allen Hamilton

None of the aforementioned items were kept by the individual recipient but were retained by the Department and used for official purposes.

The rules and guidance on receipt of gifts by civil servants are set out in the Civil Service Management Code, and in departmental staff handbooks.

Departmental ICT

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1960W, on departmental ICT, (1) how many individuals have been disciplined over the loss of the items referred to; [240827]

(2) what steps have been taken to reduce future losses of ICT equipment; [240828]

(3) how much has been spent trying to recover the missing items referred to; [240829]

(4) which of the items of ICT equipment recorded as lost or stolen had software protection installed; and if he will make a statement; [240860]

(5) what assessment he has made of the types of data held on the ICT equipment which has gone missing from his Department since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [240861]

Jonathan Shaw: The Department takes very seriously its responsibilities to safeguard personal and other sensitive data. In the last 12 months, a number of major changes have been made in the way that data is handled and stored, especially insofar as items of removable equipment (such as laptop computers and memory sticks) are concerned. Significant improvements have been introduced, including the widespread deployment of encryption.

The information about lost and stolen equipment, given in response to the question referred to, was obtained from centrally maintained records of security incidents. Detail is not available from these central records to indicate the nature of disciplinary action that was taken in individual cases. Such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, given that the bulk of these incidents occurred a number of years ago. However, the Department is currently reviewing its disciplinary policies to better reflect the importance which it attaches to the security of valuable assets and information.

Following the Cabinet Office Review of Data Handling Procedures in Government, the Department has designated senior staff as information asset owners, who are personally accountable for providing assurance in relation to the information assets within their respective business areas. Additional steps taken to reduce future losses include measures which prevent employees from copying information to removable media, except where this has been encrypted.

Information on the costs of seeking to recover earlier lost or stolen equipment and which of such items had software protection installed is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what records his Department keeps of computer (a) software failures, (b) viruses, (c) hacking attacks and (d) denial of service attacks. [241311]

Jonathan Shaw: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer the Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Timms) gave the hon. Member for Hornchurch (James Brokenshire) on 10 March 2008, Official Report, column 17W.

Departmental Information Officers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many dedicated Jobcentre Plus (a) special advisers and (b) press officers his Department employs. [240858]

Jonathan Shaw: Jobcentre Plus has no dedicated special advisers or press officers employed by the Department.

Their work is just one of the responsibilities looked after by the special advisers and press officers employed for the Department.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions with reference to the answer of 22 July 2008, Official Report, column 1207W, on speeches, how much Mr. Phil Collins has been paid for speech-writing services to his Department to date. [242051]

Jonathan Shaw: Nothing.

Departmental Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make it his policy to ensure that those temporary and permanent employees at the same grade in his Department who are paid at an hourly rate are paid at the same rate. [244381]

Jonathan Shaw: DWP treats temporary and permanent employees in the same way. All employees are paid on the basis of an annual salary and not an hourly rate. The appropriate starting salary is determined by grade and employees are normally recruited onto the minimum of their pay band. Progression up the pay band is based upon the annual pay review. It is possible for employees within a grade to be on different rates of pay but this is normally due to factors such as individual length of service or the effects of pay increases following previous promotion.

Departmental Press Releases

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many press releases his Department has issued in the last 12 months. [240859]

Jonathan Shaw: The Department has issued 245 press notices in the last 12 months.

This includes ministerial press releases, policy announcements, statistical and analytical releases. The Department also issued press releases for Jobcentre Plus, Office for Disability Issues, Pensions, Disability and Carers Service and several advisory committees.

It also includes operational notes alerting the media to briefings and visits.

Departmental Rail Travel

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date he last used a train in the course of his official duties. [242601]

James Purnell: I last used the train for official duties on Wednesday 3 December 2008.

Employment Services: Cancer

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information his Department and its agencies provides on returning to work to those who have had cancer. [242862]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what information his Department and its agencies provides to those who have had cancer on returning to work. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

People with a health condition or disability, including those people who have had cancer, can get a range of information and support from Jobcentre Plus. Customers in receipt of incapacity benefits or the Employment and Support Allowance can access Pathways to Work, which offers a series of interviews with a specialist personal adviser, a condition management programme and the possibility of financial incentives when the customer returns to work. People making a fresh claim for incapacity benefits will be required to take part in Pathways to Work and existing customers can volunteer for the help available.

Customers in receipt of other benefits or no benefits, who have a disability that affects them in the workplace, can receive information and support from the Disability Employment Adviser. The Disability Employment Adviser can also provide access to a number of specialist programmes that can help them move into paid work, including, Work Preparation, Residential Training and WORKSTEP, a programme of supported employment.

Access to Work may also be available to those customers with a long term disability. Access to Work gives the customer and their employer advice and support with extra costs which may arise because of the customer's needs. The programme can provide grants towards the additional costs of travelling to work; providing Support Workers; adapting work premises, and providing special aids and equipment in the workplace. Disability Employment Advisers can signpost customers to Access to Work.

Customers have access to a variety of leaflets from jobcentres. In addition, information about the help that may be available to people with a health condition or disability is available on the internet at:

www.jobcentreplus.gov.uk or www.direct.gov.uk.

I hope this information's helpful.

Employment Services: Redundancy

Anne Moffat: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps Jobcentre Plus is taking to assist people recently made redundant back into work. [240276]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what steps Jobcentre Plus is taking to assist people recently made redundant back into work. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

A person who is made redundant and makes a claim to Jobseeker's Allowance is interviewed by one of our Personal Advisers, to explain the help and support available which is then tailored to their individual needs. They are helped to draw up a job plan and Jobseeker's Agreement, which is reviewed fortnightly. Jobseekers can also access job vacancies on our website and our electronic jobpoints, as well as contact our Jobseeker Direct telephone helpline.

We have also recently introduced a "Finding your way back to work" leaflet to help people understand what help is available, and a "Jobkit" to help those made redundant in preparing to find a new job.

Where a business announces a number of redundancies we provide our Rapid Response Service to support the employer and employees. This can involve a range of support, such as workplace briefings by Jobcentre staff, skills assessments, and advice on how to look for a new job. The budget for this service was doubled this year, from £3m to £6m, and will be doubled again next year to £12m. This will enable us to deal more effectively with situations involving 20 or more redundancies, or where there is a group of smaller redundancies in one locality.

We have also announced that more people who are made redundant will get help through Programme Centres. These provide people with different kinds of help such as help in CV-writing and gaining jobsearch skills. Access to Programme Centres was previously restricted to those furthest from the labour market. Advisers will now have the discretion to allow any customers to access this help as soon as they become unemployed. This will be useful for people who have been in work for a long time and have no recent experience of job hunting.

We are also extending the successful Local Employment Partnerships to provide help for newly redundant people. Through these, Jobcentre Plus is already working successfully with over 13,000 employers, and has helped over 70,000 people into work.

Employment Vacancies

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many job vacancies there were in (a) Hemel Hempstead, (b) Hertfordshire and (c) England at the latest date for which figures are available. [242678]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is in the table.

Jobcentre Plus vacancies in England, Hertfordshire local authority area and Hemel Hempstead parliamentary constituency as at October 2008

	Notified vacancies	Live unfilled vacancies
England	313,928	335,266
Hemel Hempstead Parliamentary Constituency	691	627
Hertfordshire Local Authority	5,742	5,443

Notes:
1. Interpretation of these data needs to take account of changes in recent years to Jobcentre Plus procedures for taking and handling vacancies. These figures are not fully comparable over time and may not indicate developments in the labour market. A more detailed explanation is available on the nomis website.
2. Notified vacancies include any speculative placings recorded by Jobcentre Plus. Datasets from May 2006 may reflect substantially reduced levels of speculative placings as part of the notified series. Consequently, care should be taken in interpreting time-series data.
3. The stocks of unfilled vacancies reflect more accurately job opportunities available via Jobcentre Plus. In the case of unfilled vacancies, use of the figures on live vacancies is recommended (i.e. excluding suspended vacancies), and this is the default option. Live vacancies may still include some vacancies which have already been filled or are otherwise no longer open to recruits, due to natural lags in procedures for following up vacancies with employers.
4. Data are unrounded.
5. Figures cover only those vacancies advertised through Jobcentre Plus, and so will not capture all available vacancies. Comprehensive estimates of all job vacancies (not just those notified to Jobcentre Plus) are available from the monthly ONS Vacancy Survey since April 2001, based on a sample of some 6,000 enterprises. However, the ONS survey is currently designed to provide national estimates only.

European Social Fund

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the European Social Fund spending announced on 15 October 2008 and 4 November 2008 came from funds already in his Department's budget for the spending period 2008-09 to 2010-11. [244801]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The European social fund spending is additional to the funds in the Department's budget for the spending period 2008-09 to 2010-11.

Income Support

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions with reference to the answer of 16 July 2008, Official Report, columns 474-5W, how many and what proportion of his Department's 8,950 customer-facing staff have received specific training on the changes to the eligibility rules for income support which came into effect in November 2008; and if he will make a statement. [241029]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave her on 20 October 2008, Official Report, 145W.

Income Support: Mortgages

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with Treasury Ministers on income support mortgage interest. [244807]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 18 December 2008]: We continue to work jointly with other Government Departments including HM Treasury to consider how best we can support those borrowers who may be facing difficulties.

In the pre-Budget report on 24 November, the Chancellor announced two further enhancements to the support that we provide to owner-occupiers through the income-related benefits. The standard rate of interest used in Support for Mortgage Interest will be fixed for six months at 6.08 per cent. for all customers who receive help with their mortgage repayments. And the capital limit up to which interest can be paid on eligible housing costs will increase from £100,000 to £200,000 for new, some repeat, and some existing customers from January.

Jobcentre Plus

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the total net change in personnel in Jobcentre Plus in each of the next two calendar years. [245036]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what estimate has been made of the total net change in personnel in Jobcentre Plus in each of the next two calendar years. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Information on estimated changes in Jobcentre Plus personnel is currently unavailable in calendar years. Our workforce plans are prepared by financial year, which runs from April to March. For the 2009/10 year, current estimates are that there will be a net increase of around 6,000 full time equivalent staff. Plans for 2010/11 are under review in the light of the increase in 2009/10, and a firm figure is not yet available.

Jobcentre Plus: Closures

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, columns 1993-4W, on Jobcentres, (1) how many Jobcentres were (a) opened and (b) closed in each year for which figures are available; [241039]

(2) for what reasons the number of Jobcentre Plus offices has decreased. [241041]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking how many Jobcentres were (a) opened and (b) closed in each year for which figures are available, and for what reasons the number of Jobcentres has decreased.

This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

I am only able to provide information relating to Jobcentre Plus since its creation in April 2002.

The table below sets out (a) the number of newly transformed Jobcentres which have opened since April 2002 and (b) the number of offices which were open to the public and subsequently closed as part of Jobcentre Plus transformation. The majority of Jobcentre closures since April 2002 are a consequence of that transformation programme with a small number being attributable to service delivery reviews subsequently undertaken by Customer Service Directors.

	Transformed Jobcentres rolled out by Jobcentre Plus	Jobcentre Plus offices open to the public and subsequently closed
2003	257	47
2004	217	95

In common with most large, modern organisations the great majority of our services are now delivered through the telephone and internet. For example, to give customers more convenient access, we have more than half a million vacancies on-line at any time (our website receives close to one million job searches every working day), and new claims to benefit are predominantly taken by telephone with some taken on-line. We remain the largest office network in Government with 747 modern Jobcentres which are supported by 31 contact centres and 79 main benefit processing centres. This has brought our customer facing services together in a more coherent and integrated network and I believe Jobcentre Plus is well-placed to respond to the full range of economic conditions.

I have asked the Customer Service Directors in our Regions to review their service delivery plans for every Jobcentre Plus District in the light of the current economic conditions and welfare reform changes planned for the next two to three years. This exercise will be completed by early 2009. As an immediate measure, I have decided to suspend proposed further Jobcentre closures while the current economic uncertainties exist, which will allow us to increase our capacity to deliver services to those in need of help.

Jobcentre Plus: Finance

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate his Department has made of the budget required for the Jobcentre Plus network in each of the next five years. [241457]

Kitty Ussher: The Department's published three-year plan is available in the Library and sets out the planned expenditure of Jobcentre Plus over the CSR2007. The Department will publish a revised plan before the end of the current financial year providing further details on future Jobcentre Plus expenditure.

Jobcentre Plus: Manpower

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, columns 1993-4W, on Jobcentres, how many people were employed in Jobcentres in each year for which figures are available. [241040]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question, with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, columns 1993-4W, on Jobcentres, how many people were employed in Jobcentres in each year for which figures are available. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The table shows the number of full time equivalents (FTEs) that have been identified as being employed within Jobcentres each year within the period April 2003 to March 2008. Information prior to April 2003 is not available.

	Number of FTE staff in Jobcentres
April 2003	33576.19
March 2004	36080.59
March 2005	40008.09
March 2006	40400.27
March 2007	26028.53
March 2008	27870.67

Notes:
1. Headcount figures are quoted in full-time equivalents using the Office for National Statistics criteria for counting headcount.
2. The figures quoted include all staff who have been identified as being employed within a Jobcentre. It does not include individuals in Social Security Offices or regional/district offices.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of jobseeker's allowance applications received by Jobcentre Plus were from people who had claimed jobseeker's allowance within the previous (a) three, (b) six and (c) 12 months of the claim being made in each quarter of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [241004]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not routinely collected and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what activities qualify as work-type activity for the purposes of receiving jobseeker's allowance. [242361]

Mr. McNulty: In order for a person to qualify for jobseeker's allowance they must be available for, capable of, and actively seeking work.

Actively seeking work means that a person must carry out a reasonable number of activities, normally a minimum of three, every week in trying to secure work. At the beginning of a claim and at regular intervals thereafter, the customer will discuss with their adviser what employment they are looking for. They will then be required to actively seek work in whatever way is most appropriate for that type of employment and their individual circumstances. These activities will be agreed by both parties.

When considering the reasonableness of the activities, the adviser will take into account the customer's skills, qualifications and abilities, along with any personal limitations they may have. They will also consider how long the customer has been unemployed and the current availability of that work in the local labour market.

Examples of the types of activities a person may engage in are: speculative enquiries with employers; using all means available to locate suitable work, such as Jobseeker Direct, Jobpoints, internet, newspapers and magazines; registering with appropriate recruitment and employment agencies; and applying for all suitable jobs by the most appropriate means. This list is not exhaustive.

Jobseeker's Allowance: Bexley

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what courses were offered to claimants of jobseeker's allowance in the London borough of Bexley in the last 12 months; and what the cost was per person of each course completed. [243048]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what courses were offered to claimants of Jobseeker's Allowance in the London borough of Bexley in the last 12 months and the cost per person of each course completed. Maintenance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many new cases have been brought to the Child Support Agency in the last 12 months; and how many of these cases the CSA has started maintenance payments. [243467]

Kitty Ussher [holding answer 15 December 2008]: The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission is responsible for the child maintenance system. I have therefore asked the Child Maintenance Commissioner to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Child Maintenance Commissioner.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many new cases were brought to the Child Support Agency (CSA) in the last 12 months; and in how many of these cases the CSA has started maintenance payments. [243467]

The information requested is provided in the attached table and is routinely published in tables 2.1, 2.2 and 2.3 of the Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics. The latest version is available in the House of Commons library or online at the following link:

It should be noted that in July 2008 compulsion to use the Agency was lifted for all new parents with care claiming income based benefits. Prior to this a proportion of new applications received from Jobcentre Plus were in fact change of circumstances to existing cases or are actually closed prior to a maintenance schedule being set up. These applications are included in the attached table.

As there can be a delay between the time an application has been assessed, and maintenance requested and the receipt of the first payment of maintenance a larger proportion of applications made in recent months will therefore not yet have started payment. The number of applications resulting in a payment for recent months will therefore increase over time, and these figures will be revised in future versions of the Quarterly Summary of Statistics.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Number of current scheme applications cleared each month and the number of those that have resulted in a maintenance payment being made

September 2008	[4]15,300	[4]4,200	27	[3]1,500	[5]36

Notes:

1. Applications for the period include all applications from potential non-resident parents or parents with care as well as, for the period to 14 July 2008 all applications from Jobcentre Plus when a parent with care applies for benefits and their details are sent directly to the Agency. Many of these applications are in fact a change of circumstance on an existing case or are closed prior to a maintenance schedule being set up.
2. Applications resulting in a payment include cases both where a payment has been made through the Agency and where a maintenance direct agreement has been arranged between a non resident parent and parent with care.
3. This table consists of information already published in tables 2.1, 2.2 and 2.3 of the Child Support Agency Quarterly Summary of Statistics.
4. From 14 July 2008, new benefit claimants were no longer compelled to use the Child Support Agency. This has resulted in a reduction in the number of applications and potential applications received from Jobcentre Plus and therefore the number of clearances.
5. A significant proportion of applications cleared and which have progressed to payments stage in August and September 2008 will not yet have received the first payment, the number of cases cleared in these months that subsequently receive payment will rise.
6. The figures in this table are a snapshot of the status of cases at the end of September 2008 and are therefore subject to revision.
7. This table counts applications for Child Support. Not all applications become live cases. Information on the number of cases that are progressed clerically is not included in this table.
8. Refers to cases assessed as initially having a positive maintenance liability, which also progress to payment stage, including Maintenance Direct Cases. It does not include cases initially assessed with a positive maintenance liability which are subsequently closed or reassessed as not having a maintenance liability.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission plans to take to speed up the enforcement process, with particular reference to non-compliant self-employed non-resident parents. [243883]

Kitty Ussher: The administration of the child maintenance system is a matter for the Commissioner of the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Child Maintenance Commissioner.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what steps the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Committee plans to take to speed up the enforcement process, with particular reference to non-compliant self-employed non-resident parents. [243883]

The Child Maintenance and Other Payments Act 2008 will provide the Commission with tools to establish reliable collection as quickly as possible and enable it to streamline the enforcement process and take action at the earliest opportunity.

The Commission will be able to make deduction orders to administratively remove funds from bank accounts, either periodically or in a lump sum, without going to court. Deduction orders can be used in cases where a deduction from earnings order (currently the most important enforcement tool used by the Commission) cannot, for example because the non-resident parent is self-employed.

The requirement to apply to the courts for a liability order before taking enforcement action will be removed and replaced with an administrative process; and the procedure for registering liability orders in the county court will be rationalised enabling swifter more effective enforcement action to be taken.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Mental Health Services

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the recommendations relevant to his Department's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capacity and Well-Being, with particular reference to the costs to the benefits system of those with mental ill-health; and if he will make a statement. [244028]

Jonathan Shaw: In general, the Foresight report provided helpful reassurance that scientific evidence supports the welfare reforms the Government are and will be making. More specifically, as chapter 8 sets out, its findings fed into Professor Dame Carol Black's review of the health of the working population of Britain. The Government have accepted her recommendations and will be developing the first ever cross-Government national strategy for mental health and employment, which will help us improve work outcomes for people with mental health problems across the spectrum. This will incidentally contribute to benefit savings as well as their health and wellbeing.

National Insurance: Fraud

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of national insurance numbers which were used for fraudulent purposes in each of the last five years. [242172]

Mr. McNulty: The national insurance number (NINO) is a unique personal reference number used for tax, national insurance contributions, social security benefits, state pension, tax credit and student loan award purposes. The number links an individual with their tax payments and national insurance contributions to Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and the Department for Work and Pensions, and is needed to make a claim to benefit. Estimates of NINOs used fraudulently for all of these purposes are not available.

DWP has robust checks in place to prevent NINOs being used fraudulently within the benefit system. Where DWP identifies that a NINO has been used for attempted benefit fraud or where DWP is aware that a NINO may be vulnerable to fraudulent use, the relevant NINO record is annotated accordingly. Any subsequent benefit claim using that NINO would automatically be subjected to close scrutiny, and if appropriate, referral to DWP's Fraud Investigation Service.

The number of NINO accounts annotated for these reasons over the last five years is in the following table.

	Number of marked accounts
2003-04	2,341
2004-05	1,087
2005-06	2,521
2006-07	2,965
2007-08	3,234

New Deal Schemes

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what modelling his Department has conducted on economic and labour market conditions in assessing the (a) funding and (b) anticipated employment outcome of the flexible new deal contracts; and if he will make a statement. [244047]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave her on 26 November 2008, Official Report, 2006W.

Pathways to Work

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much he plans to spend on the pathways to work programme in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11. [243476]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 December 2008]: The Department for Work and Pensions has allocated around £1 billion in the pathways to work programme between 2008 and 2011. A breakdown of planned expenditure is in the table.

Pathways to Work planned expenditure

2008-09	280
2009-10	380
2010-11	380

Notes:
1. Figures provided for 2008-09 are budgeted allocations based on invitations to tender. Actual spend will be reported in due course.
2. Figures provided for 2009-10 and 2010-11 are indicative allocations based on current assumptions and are subject to change.

Pathways to Work: Disabled

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what provisions are in place for incapacity benefit and employment support allowance claimants participating in pathways to work to access specialist disability employment services. [244043]

Mr. McNulty: Jobcentre Plus offers support to incapacity benefit and employment and support allowance customers participating in pathways to work to access specialist disability employment services through the advice and guidance provided by specialist incapacity benefit and employment and support allowance advisers, disability employment advisers in Jobcentre Plus offices and the provider in provider-led pathways to work districts.

These advisers provide support advice and guidance about what services are available, and suitable, for customers and how they can access them.

Pension Credit

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether restitution payments made to holocaust survivors are disregarded for the purposes of calculating entitlement to pension credit. [244953]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 18 December 2008]: Lump sum payments made to compensate those who were slave labourers, forced labourers or suffered personal injuries or property loss during World War II are fully disregarded when calculating entitlement to pension credit.

In addition payments made to parents whose child died during the Second World War are fully disregarded when calculating entitlement to pension credit.

Social security pensions paid by the German or Austrian Government are fully taken into account. However pensions paid under special provisions by the German or Austrian Government to victims of National Socialist persecution are taken into account subject to a £10 disregard when calculating entitlement to pension credit.

Pension Credit: Leeds

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed pension credit in Leeds West constituency in each year since 2005. [245281]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The answer is in the following table.

Number of households recipients and individual beneficiaries of pension credit in Leeds, West parliamentary constituency

As at May each year	Household recipients	Individual beneficiaries
2005	4,580	5,440
2006	4,640	5,550
2007	4,610	5,510
2008	4,600	5,520

Notes:
1. The number of households in receipt are rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Household recipients are those people who claim pension credit either for themselves only or on behalf of a household.
3. Individual beneficiaries includes both claimants and their partners.

Pension Credit: Overpayments

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much pension credit has been clawed back by his Department in each (a) month of 2007-08 and (b) of the last five financial years; and if he will make a statement. [241217]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information in relation to pension credit overpayment recoveries for each month in 2007-08 is in the following table:

2007-08
April	2.3
May	2.2
June	2.4
July	2.4
August	2.5
September	2.5
October	3.2
November	2.9
December	2.4
January	2.5
February	2.5
Total	30.0

Note:
Rounded to the nearest decimal point.

In relation to pension credit overpayment recoveries in past years, I refer the hon. Member to the written answer the Minister of State, (Mr. McNulty) gave the hon. Member on 26 November 2008, Official Report, volume 170, column 2014W .

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to ensure (a) that those receiving payments from his Department may opt to use the Post Office card account on the same basis as any other method of payment and (b) that the process to select the option to use the Post Office card account is neutral in its effect as between alternative payment methods. [245472]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Opening a Post Office card account is already very straightforward and we have plans to make it even easier for customers by automating parts of the process. We provide information which helps customers choose the account which best meets their needs and circumstances, including making the card account easily available to those who need it. And more than 10,000 new Post Office card accounts are opened on average each month.

We have already made changes to the booklet being sent to existing cheque customers so that it explicitly refers to the Post Office card account. We have also updated the messages that staff use when speaking to customers to reflect the fact that the Post Office card account will now continue until at least 2015. Other communications material will be kept under review.

Poverty: Children

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimate he has made of the number of disabled children living below the poverty line in (a) Hemel Hempstead and (b) Hertfordshire in each of the last 10 years; [242671]

(2) how many and what percentage of children in each age group in (a) Hemel Hempstead and (b) Hertfordshire were living in absolute poverty in each year since 1997. [242672]

Kitty Ussher: The information requested is not available.

Our child poverty statistics, published in the Households Below Average Income series, only allow a breakdown of the number of children in relative or absolute poverty at Government office region level. Information is therefore not available at parliamentary constituency or county level.

Poverty: Leeds

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to tackle child poverty in Leeds West constituency; and if he will make a statement. [245284]

Kitty Ussher: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave him on 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 2024W.

Social Security Benefits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many unemployment benefit claimants there were in each quarter of the last 30 years. [243470]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 December 2008]: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of processing (a) disability living allowance, (b) attendance allowance and (c) carers' allowance was in (i) 2006-07 and (ii) 2007-08. [244542]

Jonathan Shaw: The information is in the following table:

Cost of processing disability living allowance (DLA), attendance allowance (AA) and carer's allowance (CA)

Social Security Benefits: Arrears

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department's latest estimate is of the effect on its expenditure from changing the backdating period for (a) pension credit, (b) council tax benefit and (c) housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [240521]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The proposal to change the allowed length of backdating from 12 months to three months was part of a wider package of pensions measures to increase take-up and make benefit processes simpler. Older people will be able to claim pension credit, housing benefit and council tax benefit in one phone call without having to fill in, sign or return any claim forms. This will benefit thousands of pensioners often put off by complicated claim forms and the fear of large amounts of personal information being required. Over the long-term the package results in extra expenditure for pensioners, rising to £250 million per year by 2050.

For working age people, the Government's response to the Social Security Advisory Committee's consultation report, published on 15 September, recognised arguments presented by the committee on the potential effect of the changes to Housing benefit and council benefit backdating on vulnerable groups and announced that backdating for housing benefit for working age customers will move initially to 6 months rather than three months. Details of the estimated costs and savings associated with the original proposals in the wider package of measures can be found in the SSAC report.

Social Security Benefits: Cohabitation

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria his Department and its agencies apply when determining whether a person receiving benefit is cohabiting with another person; and if he will make a statement. [244427]

Mr. McNulty: When deciding whether two people are living together as husband or wife or in a civil partnership (LTAHW/CP) a Decision Maker must take into account the whole of the customer's relationship with the other person. There is no single factor which can determine whether or not two people are LTAHW/CP; for example, it is important that a decision is not made solely on the basis of their financial arrangements.

Among the other factors to be considered will be the existence of a shared household, the stability of the relationship, responsibility for children and the existence of a sexual relationship.

Social Security Benefits: Disabled

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of adults with autism claiming (a) jobseeker's allowance and (b) incapacity benefit. [244041]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not available.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average clearance time for disability living allowance claims was in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08; and how many claims were cleared in a period longer than the average in each year. [244100]

Jonathan Shaw: Information about the actual average clearance time for disability living allowance (DLA) new claims is in the following table:

DLA new claims actual average clearance times

Days

	2006-07	2007-08
Achievement	36.8	36.0
Target	39	38

Source:

Information about the number of DLA new claims cleared in a period longer than the average for these years is not available.

Social Security Benefits: Foreigners

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what benefits were paid to nationals of (a) other EU and (b) non-EU countries and their families in each of the last 12 quarters, broken down by (i) county and (ii) category of benefit. [244475]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 16 December 2008]: The information requested is not available.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people reported benefit fraud online in each of the last three years; how many of those reports were made anonymously; how many such reports were followed up with an investigation; and how many successful prosecutions for benefit fraud there were over that period. [241157]

Mr. McNulty: Information for council tax and housing benefit is not available. The available information for DWP administered benefits is in the following table:

	Internet contacts	Internet referrals
2008-09[1]	84,852	81,063
2007-08	80,127	78,230
2006-07	71,01	69,866

[1] April 2008 to October 2008

Note:
The National Benefit Fraud Hotline only started systematically collecting management information on fraud referrals from the 2007-08 operational year.

All reports made to the National Benefit Fraud Hotline via telephone and internet can be made anonymously. No figures are available on the number of occasions when individuals have chosen to identify themselves when reporting their suspicions.

The information in the following table provides aggregated details of outcomes derived from all hotline referrals, which were then followed up by an investigation and how many were successfully prosecuted in the last three years. The outcome data are not currently split into telephone and internet categories.

The available information is in the following table:

Benefit Fraud Hotline outcomes, Great Britain

	2005-06[1]	2006-07[1]	2007-08[2]
Investigations	62,886	51,458	54,284
Prosecutions	811	679	910
Convictions	723	533	664

1. Figures for National Benefit Fraud Hotline outcomes from 2005 to 2007 include only FIBS (Fraud Information by Sector) data.
2. Figures for National Benefit Fraud Hotline outcomes for 2007-08 also include FRAIMS (Fraud Referral and Intervention Management System) figures with the exception of 'Convictions' as this information is not yet available.
3. The figures in all three tables above relate solely to DWP referrals and outcomes and do not include referrals sent to local authorities by NBFH nor their outcomes.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) males and (b) females were (i) convicted and (ii) received a custodial sentence in respect of an offence of benefit fraud in (A) each of the last three years and (B) each quarter of each of the last three years; for those people fined, what the average fine was; and how many people were dealt with by way of caution in the same period. [241158]

Mr. McNulty: Information on housing benefit fraud is not available broken down by either gender or by the number that received a custodial sentence.

The available information for total convictions, cautions and administrative penalties for housing benefit is in the following table.

Housing benefit administrative returns supplied by local authorities

For DWP-administered benefits, there is no information available prior to June 2007 on departmental systems which provides a break down by gender of convictions, custodial sentences, and court fines.

This information is now being captured on an individual case basis by the Fraud Referral and Intervention Management System (FRAIMS) which was rolled-out on a region by region basis between June 2007 and February 2008.

However, this information cannot currently be extracted from FRAIMS at summary level.

The available information 2005-07 is as follows.

Notes:
1. For 2007-08 figures marked with an asterisk ("*") are not yet available from FRAIMS. Therefore, the information for the four quarters represents FIBS data only. Although this information is recorded on individual cases, it cannot be extracted at a summary level. Work is currently being undertaken to enable this to be done.
2. The same applies to providing data on the number of persons being fined following conviction, although it is not envisaged that average fine values will be able to be generated. The amount of fine imposed is a matter for the courts
3. Information has been included in the above tables showing the number of Administrative Penalties issued.
4. Administrative Penalties are used for less serious cases of fraud; those where the overpayment is below £2,000. Formal cautions are designed to correct claimant behaviour by getting them to admit to the offence. Administrative Penalties, which became available through the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Act 1997, give the claimant the opportunity to avoid prosecution by paying a penalty of 30 per cent. of the overpayment, as well as having to repay the overpayment in full.

Social Security Benefits: Interviews

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which member of staff at Jobcentre Plus offices will carry out a claimant's first work-focused interview. [244044]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking which member of staff at Jobcentre Plus offices will carry out a claimant's first work-focused interview. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

A Personal Adviser, skilled in dealing with the customer's specific requirements, will carry out a customer's first Work Focused Interview. For example, a lone parent moving from Income Support to Jobseekers Allowance will see a specialist lone parent adviser to take them through the new claims interview. Personal Advisors are well versed in the barriers customers may face when looking for work and they are able to offer appropriate tailored advice.

Unemployed: Voluntary Work

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment his Department has made of the effects on local communities of the long-term unemployed engaging in voluntary work; [242359]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the likelihood of long-term unemployed persons who engage in voluntary work returning to paid work thereafter; [242356]

(3) what estimate his Department has made of the proportion of the long-term unemployed who have been engaged in voluntary work (a) since February 2008 and (b) during the last two years. [242936]

Mr. McNulty: We do not collect information about voluntary work, aside from when it is done as a mandatory part of a new deal programme, so we are not able to supply the figures requested.

The Government believe that voluntary activity can play an important role in helping unemployed people to keep in touch with the labour market. Voluntary work can also provide benefit recipients with skills and experience that may improve their chances of finding paid employment, and can improve social cohesion. However, there must be a proper balance between allowing benefit recipients to pursue voluntary activity, while at the same time encouraging them to retain a clear focus on moving off welfare into paid employment.

Recent research has looked at volunteering in the context of mandatory options in the new deals, including "The Longer Term Impact of the New Deal for Young People" (DWP working paper 23, 2008) and changes to benefit rules related to volunteering, "Volunteering and Availability for Work: An evaluation of the change to Jobseeker's Allowance regulations" (DWP working-age research report 190, 2004).

Copies of these reports are available in the Library.

Unemployment

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he has (a) taken since July 2008 and (b) plans to take in the next 12 months to reduce levels of unemployment; what recent representations he has received about the issue; and if he will make a statement. [241159]

Mr. McNulty: The Government are doing all they can to support people who become unemployed and through Jobcentre Plus and the new deal we are offering more support to help individuals move back into work as quickly as possible. The pre-Budget report made available to DWP an additional £1.3 billion of funding which will ensure that over the next two years, through Jobcentre Plus and our private and voluntary providers, we not only maintain, but increase, the support we offer.

We have already doubled the resources available to the rapid response teams who offer advice and support to those affected by redundancy. These funds will be doubled again from April 2009. The support provided by these teams can include information about sources of alternative jobs within the labour market or help with applying for existing vacancies; on-site job shops and fairs; helping people draw-up CVs or brush-up their job search skills; and, where appropriate, job-focused training to help individuals develop skills needed within the local labour market or other support to overcome barriers to taking up a specific job offer, such as travel to work expenses.

The Government are also increasing their engagement with employers. Through Local Employment Partnerships, Jobcentre Plus is already working with employers across the country to help them meet their recruitment needs locally, and to help long-term unemployed customers find work. As announced in the pre-Budget report, LEPs will now be extended to cover the newly redundant and the Prime Minister will chair a National Employment Partnership comprising major private and public sector employers who will work with the Government to agree what more employers can do to help tackle rising unemployment.

The publication of the White Paper 'Raising expectations and increasing support: reforming welfare for the future' on 10 December 2008, CM 7506, also demonstrates the Government's commitment to further reform to reduce welfare dependency and support more people into work. There are still many new job opportunities coming up all the time. Last month Jobcentre Plus took an average of 10,000 new vacancies every working day, with many more coming up through other recruitment channels. Together with the advice and support provided through Jobcentre Plus, this means that most of those who become unemployed can find another job quickly; over half of new claimants leave jobseeker's allowance within three months and around three quarters leave within six months.

Vacancies

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employment vacancies there are in (a) Castle Point constituency, (b) Essex and (c) London. [243812]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is in the table.

Jobcentre Plus vacancies in Castle Point parliamentary constituency, Essex and London as at October 2008

Notes:
1. Interpretation of these data needs to take account of changes in recent years to Jobcentre Plus procedures for taking and handling vacancies. These figures are not fully comparable over time and may not indicate developments in the labour market. A more detailed explanation is available on the nomis website.
2. Notified vacancies include any speculative placings recorded by Jobcentre Plus. Datasets from May 2006 may reflect substantially reduced levels of speculative placings as part of the notified series. Consequently, care should be taken in interpreting time-series data.
3. In the case of unfilled vacancies, use of the figures on live vacancies is recommended. Live vacancies may still include some vacancies which have already been filled or are otherwise no longer open to recruits, due to natural lags in procedures for following up vacancies with employers.
4. Data are unrounded.
5. Figures cover only those vacancies advertised through Jobcentre Plus, and so will not capture all available vacancies. Comprehensive estimates of all job vacancies (not just those notified to Jobcentre Plus) are available from the monthly ONS Vacancy Survey since April 2001, based on a sample of some 6,000 enterprises. However, the ONS survey is currently designed to provide national estimates only.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his most recent estimate is of the number of job vacancies (a) in each region and (b) in Blaenau Gwent. [243872]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is in the table.

Number of vacancies in each region and nation and in Blaenau Gwent parliamentary constituency: as at October 2008

	Notified vacancies	Live unfilled vacancies
Blaenau Gwent	267	228
North East	19,238	14,397
North West	48,673	43,708
Yorkshire and The Humber	33,566	28,858
East Midlands	28,973	76,744
West Midlands	38,574	33,647
East	30,028	27,913
London	37,742	31,784
South East	45,305	41,539
South West	31,471	31,236
Wales	19,251	16,690
Scotland	33,511	28,375

3. The stocks of unfilled vacancies reflect more accurately job opportunities available via Jobcentre Plus. In the case of unfilled vacancies, use of the figures on live vacancies is recommended (i.e. excluding suspended vacancies), and this is the default option. Vocational Training: Redundancy

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many on-site advice surgeries Jobcentre Plus's rapid response service has held in each region in each year since Jobcentre Plus was established. [241005]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many on-site advice surgeries Jobcentre Plus's rapid response service has held in each region in each year since Jobcentre Plus was established.

This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Employees of companies who have accepted offers of Rapid Response Service support are provided with advice through a number of channels including on-site advice surgeries. Figures for the number of on-site surgeries held are not collected.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) by what means his Department has informed employers of the existence of Jobcentre Plus's rapid response service since it was established; [241012]

(2) what steps (a) Jobcentre Plus's rapid response service and (b) Jobcentre Plus staff take to identify companies with employees who may benefit from the rapid response service. [241014]

Mr. McNulty: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking by what means his Department has informed employers of the existence of Jobcentre Plus's rapid response service since it was established and what steps (a) Jobcentre Plus's rapid response service and (b) Jobcentre Plus staff take to identify companies with employees who may benefit from the rapid response service. These fall within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The rapid response service was introduced in April 2002 and has been delivered through Jobcentre Plus in conjunction with a range of partners such as Regional Development Agencies, local authorities and the Learning and Skills Council in England, and equivalent bodies in Scotland and Wales, to help employees facing redundancies. As you know the Secretary of State announced recently an extension of the service.

Employers are made aware of the service in three main ways. First, Jobcentre Plus is informed by the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform when employers notify redundancies of 20 or more employees. We contact each of these employers to discuss the range of support that Jobcentre Plus is able, with its partners, to offer employees, and to decide which measures will be helpful. Second, we provide information through channels that employers use regularly, including: the Jobcentre Plus website www.jobcentreplus.gov.uk/employers, the websites of organisations who help to deliver the rapid response service to employers and a range of leaflets and business/trade media. Third, some employers receive an account management service from Jobcentre Plus in return for their commitment to helping our individual customers to find work. In that context, employers facing difficulties may discuss their needs directly with Jobcentre Plus and appropriate levels of support will be offered.

Jobcentre Plus now aims to contact and offer support to every employer which we learn is making 20 people or more redundant. We also make efforts to identify situations where employers are making fewer than 20 people redundant and to offer rapid response service-style support whenever we consider this likely to be the most effective way of helping the people involved.

Winter Fuel Payments

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many winter fuel payment cheques were issued in the last financial year; and how many of these were not cashed. [242846]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In winter 2007-08 we made over 12 million winter fuel payments to over 8.5 million households. The vast majority of winter fuel payments are made automatically into bank accounts. Only a small proportion of people receive their winter fuel payment in the form of a cheque.

In winter 2007-08, 295,769 cheques were issued in respect of winter fuel payments and over 96 per cent. of these were cashed.

Winter Fuel Payments: Glasgow

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow South West he estimates will be eligible for cold weather payments in 2008-09. [243031]

Kitty Ussher [holding answer 10 December 2008]: The estimated number of households eligible for cold weather payments is not available by local authority or parliamentary constituency boundary, but only by weather station.

Winter Fuel Payments: Multiple Occupation

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints his Department has received regarding incorrect winter fuel payments being made to persons living in buildings which contain multiple self-contained flats in the last 12 months. [243844]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The requested information is not available.

Mr. David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people have received an incorrect payment of winter fuel allowance because they were incorrectly assessed as living with another qualifying individual in a single building divided into multiple dwellings in the last 12 months; [243019]

(2) what steps he has taken to ensure that people living in properties divided into multiple dwellings receive the correct rate of winter fuel payment. [243020]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Each year, before winter fuel payments are made, the DWP carries out a complex data matching process involving around 18 million records. The aim is to determine or confirm personal circumstances and calculate the payment amount due.

The data matching exercise identifies any issues, including those relating to household arrangements. Issues often arise when customers provide incomplete addresses, for example they may omit a flat number. If DWP identify large numbers of people residing at the same address action is taken to try to identify if it is a multiple dwelling address.

If a customer contacts the Department because they feel their winter fuel payment is for the wrong amount, the position is checked and the payment corrected if necessary. Out of 12 million payments in 2007-08 less than a quarter of 1 per cent. of individuals received a top up due to incorrect payments.

Waste Management: Local Authorities

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will require the Health and Safety Executive to provide guidance to local authorities on the most suitable type of waste management treatment facility taking account of the geography and topology of the area and the nearness to residents of the facility. [244218]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: While general guidance has been provided by both bodies, it is not within the remit either of the Health and Safety Executive or the Environment Agency to provide guidance to individual local authorities on what is the suitable type of waste management treatment facility for their area.

Specific guidance for local authorities through Planning Policy Statement 10 (PPS10) is also to be taken into account by waste planning authorities and forms part of the national waste management plan for the UK.

PRIME MINISTER

Banks

Grant Shapps: To ask the Prime Minister on what dates he held meetings with (a) HBOS, (b) Nationwide, (c) Abbey, (d) Lloyds TSB, (e) Northern Rock, (f)

Barclays, (g) RBS and (h) HSBC prior to the announcement of the Government's repossessions policy on 3 December 2008; and what matters were discussed. [245609]

The Prime Minister: My officials and I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals on a range of subjects.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Office had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244713]

The Prime Minister: Since January 2008, my Office has received approximately 500,000 pieces of correspondence. My Office aims to deal with correspondence within the 15 working day time frame.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister what expert advisers have been commissioned by his Office since 1997; on what topic each was commissioned; and whether the adviser so appointed made a declaration of political activity in each case. [246970]

The Prime Minister: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each pay band. Updated information will be published in the usual way.

Imperial College London

Mr. Hands: To ask the Prime Minister with reference to the answer of 3 November 2008, Official Report, column 279W, on Imperial College London, whether the audience at the question and answer session he held on 27 October 2008 was selected solely at the discretion of Imperial College. [245780]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 3 November 2008, Official Report, column 279W.

Iran: Nuclear Power

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Prime Minister whether he discussed the Iranian state shareholding in the French state Uranium Enrichment Company during the visit of President Sarkozy on 8 December 2008. [244884]

The Prime Minister: I discussed a wide range of issues with President Sarkozy. I refer the hon. Member to the press conference I held with President Sarkozy and President Barroso on 8 December. A transcript is available on the No. 10 website at:

http://www.number10.gov.uk/Page17733

A copy has also been placed in the Library of the House.

Israel: Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Prime Minister what matters concerning (a) Israel's nuclear weapons arsenal and (b) Iran's nuclear programme, he discussed in his meeting with his Israeli counterpart on 16 December 2008. [245675]

The Prime Minister: I discussed a wide range of issues with Prime Minister Olmert.

Right of Search

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister whether he or any Minister, civil servant or adviser sought to influence the content of Mr. Speaker's statement of 3 December 2008, Official Report, columns 1-3. [246591]

The Prime Minister: The statement was entirely a matter for Mr. Speaker.

INNOVATION, UNIVERSITIES AND SKILLS

Departmental Data Protection

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills how many civil servants in his Department have been (a) investigated, (b) suspended and (c) dismissed for (i) losing and (ii) deliberately disclosing (A) data stored on departmental equipment and (B) confidential information in each year since its inception. [242920]

Mr. Simon: Between the creation of the Department in June 2007 and November 2008, no civil servants have been investigated, suspended or dismissed for losing or deliberately disclosing information. There have been no cases of data loss or disclosure of sensitive information requiring investigation.

The Department takes any breach of security very seriously and, in some cases, may take disciplinary action against those who commit such breaches. Policies and guidance on IT security are available to all staff on the departmental intranet. Logging into the Department's IT system requires that staff must agree to abide by these policies.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [244613]

Mr. Simon: The Government's Delivery Plan for "Sustainable Procurement and Operations on the Government Estate", published in August 2008, provides a full account of the initiatives Departments are taking to reduce their energy waste. The Government have committed to updating the Delivery Plan on a six monthly basis, and the first of these updates was published on 18 December 2008.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246022]

Mr. Simon: In the Department, the employee breakdown is as follows:

(a) 457 male (52.3 per cent. of all staff);

(b) 417 female (47.7 per cent. of all staff);

(c) 45 staff declared from black and minority ethnic (BME) backgrounds (5.1 per cent. of all staff), 376 not known (43.0 per cent.), 13 prefer not to say (1.5 per cent.);

(d) 39 declared a disability (4.5 per cent.), 515 not known (58.9 per cent.), 19 prefer not to say (2.2 per cent.);

(e) 13 declared not heterosexual (1.5 per cent.), 238 sexual orientation not known (27.2 per cent.), 29 prefer not to say (3.3 per cent.);

(f) Three staff declared Buddhist (0.6 per cent.), 192 Christian (22.0 per cent.), three Hindu (0.3 per cent.), one Jewish (0.1 per cent.), five Muslim (0.6 per cent.), five other religion (0.6 per cent.), 119 no religion (13.6 per cent.), 511 not known (58.5 per cent.), 35 prefer not to say (4.0 per cent.).

Departmental records on the numbers of BME staff are based on voluntary self-declaration on the basis of the categories used in the 2001 census. Records on the numbers of disabled staff are also solely based on voluntary, self-declaration of being a disabled person as defined by the Disability Discrimination Act, and not connected in any way to a formal register of disability. Similarly, records on religion or beliefs are solely based on voluntary, self-declaration.

The Department has a Diversity Action Plan and is currently developing its diversity targets.

Departmental Gifts

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills how many members of staff in his Department have received gifts valued at £100 or higher in the course of their duties since his Department's creation; what these gifts were; and from whom they were received. [242025]

Mr. Simon: The Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills (DIUS) was created as a result of Machinery of Government changes in June 2007.

The Department keeps a record of all gifts received.

No member of staff has received a gift valued at £100 or more.

The rules and guidance on receipt of gifts by civil servants are set out in the Civil Service Management Code, and in departmental staff handbooks.

English Language: Education

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills how many staff in his Department are employed in (a) administering the English for Speakers of Other Languages programme and (b) developing content for citizenship courses; and what estimate he has made of the cost of employing such staff in (a) 2008-09 and (b) each of the next two financial years. [245584]

Mr. Simon: The team responsible for English for Speakers of Other Languages policy has evolved during 2008 so I am unable to provide a precise costing. This figure is an estimation based on the current cadre of five full-time equivalent staff at a cost of £290,000 for 2008-09. This does not include any Learning and Skills Council resource. Future costs are not provided as these would be predicated on future pay remits agreed with HM Treasury and the cadre may change according to policy priorities.

The Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills does not employ staff to develop content for citizenship courses. Citizenship materials are developed to meet Home Office criteria and content for these courses are developed by the Learning and Skills Improvement Service.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills with reference to the answer of 24 June 2008, Official Report, column 248W, on English language: education, when he expects to publish the independent impact assessment report on the English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) measures introduced in August 2007; and what the expected cost of provision of ESOL is expected to be in (a) 2008-09 and (b) the two following years. [245706]

Mr. Simon: The Department commissioned an independent review of the changes made to ESOL fees in 2007 to inform any future policy decisions. This work is not yet concluded because the initial work necessitated further in-depth research to produce a more complete picture. No decision has yet been taken on publication.

The cost of provision of ESOL is expected to be in the region of £300 million in 2008-09 and this will be maintained at a similar level for the following two years.

Foreign Students

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills how many (a) Swedish and (b) Danish nationals are engaged in full-time study in English universities. [245270]

Mr. Lammy: In the 2006/07 academic year, the most recent year for which figures are available, there were 2,400 Swedish domiciled enrolments and 925 Danish domiciled enrolments on full-time courses at English higher education institutions.

The figures come from the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) student record and cover enrolments to all levels study.

Higher Education: Charities

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills (1) how much has been spent on the charitable research projects at higher education institutions which receive funding from the Charity Research Support Fund in each year since its creation; [246248]

(2) what the planned expenditure for the Charity Research Support Fund is for 2009-10. [246250]

Mr. Lammy: The Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) provides a Quality Related (QR) block grant for research to higher education institutions. The QR grant is determined by adding together a number of elements—the "charity support element" is calculated by reference to institutions' levels of charitable research income. The funding that arises from this calculation is distributed to institutions within their overall QR block grant rather than as a separate fund. It is for institutions that receive QR to determine how to use that funding in line with their own priorities.

The amount to be allocated to the charity support element for 2009-10 and any subsequent year will be determined by HEFCE in due course, having regard to the resources available for distribution at the time.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills how much funding has been provided by UK charities for (a) medical research and (b) cancer research in higher education institutions in each of the last five academic years; and what information his Department has on equivalent figures in other European countries for benchmarking purposes. [246249]

Mr. Lammy: Statistics on higher education institutions' income are collected by the Higher Education Statistics Agency.

Research income received by higher education institutions in England from UK-based charities for the last five academic years for which data are available is shown in the following table.

	Income (£ million)
2002/03	542
2003/04	577
2004/05	586
2005/06	610
2006/07	645

Information is not collected on the type of research that this income was used for.

The Department does not collect equivalent figures from other European countries.

Higher Education: Finance

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills when the Higher Education Funding Council for England plans to publish its report on means to increase the capacity for teaching Islamic studies. [245586]

Mr. Lammy: The Higher Education Funding Council for England has produced the following reports on their work to develop Islamic studies in the UK—all these reports can be found on its website at:

www.hefce.ac.uk/aboutus/vis/islamic/

1. Circular letter 03/2008 provides information about the conference held in April 2008 on Islamic Studies.

2. Islamic Studies: current status and future prospects: November 2007

3. Islamic Studies: the way forward in the UK, April 2008

4. Desk based report: International approaches to Islamic Studies in Higher Education

5. Islamic Studies: Trends and profiles report September 2008

6. Sector Impact Assessment of Islamic Studies

7. Board Paper B93 September 2008 sets out HEFCE's proposals for taking forward the development of Islamic Studies in the UK.

No further reports are due at this time.

Higher Education: Job Evaluation

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what appeals process is available for academic staff who dispute their gradings under the higher educational role analysis evaluation process; and if he will make a statement. [246284]

Mr. Lammy: As universities are autonomous, independent bodies they are responsible for determining their own academic and administrative affairs, including terms and conditions for their staff and staff grading structures. The Government play no part in determining grading structures for higher education staff. As such any appeals process for staff under this or any other job evaluation process would be a matter for the universities to determine in consultation with their recognised trade unions.

Higher Education: Leeds

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills how many new higher education students in (a) Leeds West and (b) Leeds metropolitan district will receive a maintenance grant in 2008-09. [245433]

Mr. Lammy: Reliable information is not available at constituency level.

In academic year 2007/08, there were 2,520 new university entrants from the Leeds metropolitan district who received a maintenance grant or special support grant.

Information for the 2008/09 academic year is not yet complete. Students can apply for support up to nine months after the start of their course, and in exceptional circumstances, this limit can be extended. Applications generally take six to eight weeks to process.

The Statistical First Release published on 28 November shows the provisional number of new students successfully applying for support in England in academic year 2008/09 under the 2008/09 entry regulations reached 278,100 by mid-November 2008. The provisional distribution shows that 40 per cent. of these students received the full maintenance grant of £2,835 and 29 per cent. received a partial maintenance grant. 31 per cent. received no maintenance grant. No specific information is available yet for the Leeds metropolitan district.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what buildings are occupied by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC); what the cost of occupying these buildings is in 2008-09; when each of the lease agreements for occupying these buildings expires; and to what use those buildings will be put following the abolition of the Learning and Skills Council in 2010. [246251]

Mr. Simon: A list of buildings occupied by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) and the year of expiry of lease agreements are provided in the following table. The total cost of the LSC's property portfolio for 2008-09 is £26.1 million. DIUS and DCSF are undertaking an assessment of the detailed options, costs and benefits for the estate to support effective delivery by the Young People's Learning Agency (YPLA) and Skills Funding Agency (SFA).

We have already announced that the YPLA and SFA headquarters will be co-located in Coventry.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills how many staff employed by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) he expects will become employed by (a) local authorities, (b) the Young People's Learning Agency, (c) the Skills Funding Agency and (d) the National Apprenticeship Service in 2010; and whether all current LSC staff will be offered alternative employment [246252]

Mr. Simon: We have identified that there will be some 3,300 full-time equivalents in 2010, which is in line with existing LSC staffing levels.

We expect to transfer around 1,000 posts to local authorities. This will be supported by the Young People's Learning Agency (YPLA), a non-departmental public body which will have approximately 500 posts in total, with around 200 at the national office and 300 in the regions. The YPLA will support local authorities in their new role in the commissioning process and delivery of good outcomes for young people.

The Skills Funding Agency (SFA) will be an agency of DIUS and will have approximately 1,800 posts, including the 400 posts in the National Apprenticeship Service.

We are committed to retaining the expertise of LSC staff in the new arrangements. DCSF and DIUS officials are working with the LSC and wider further education sector to finalise the details of these plans and processes over the coming months.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills whether staff currently employed by the Learning and Skills Council will continue to be covered by the Civil Service Pension Scheme if they become employed by (a) local authorities, (b) the Young People's Learning Agency, (c) the Skills Funding Agency and (d) the National Apprenticeships Service in 2010. [246272]

Mr. Simon: DIUS and DCSF are being guided by the Cabinet Office Staff Transfers in the Public Sector Statement of Practice (COSOP) in our approach to the treatment of LSC staff in this transfer of responsibilities under the Machinery of Government changes. This includes the principle that there should be appropriate arrangements to protect occupational pensions and the application of "A fair deal for Staff Pensions" (which sets out the policy on staff pensions that must be followed by Central Government Departments and Agencies, and which Ministers expect to be adopted by other public sector employers).

We expect that staff transferring to the Young People's Learning Agency and Skills Funding Agency, which will house the National Apprenticeships Service, will continue to be covered by the Civil Service Pension Scheme and staff transferring to local authorities will have access to local government schemes. We are working with the Government Actuaries Department and representatives of the various pension's schemes to establish the details for every member of staff affected by this transfer.

Learning and Skills Council: Telephone Services

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what guidelines are in place for telephone calls by employees of the Learning and Skills Council to telephone numbers at the Palace of Westminster. [245186]

Mr. Simon: This is an operational matter for the LSC, and I have therefore asked Mark Haysom, the LSC's chief executive, to write to the hon. Member with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Mental Illness

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what assessment he has made of the recommendations relevant to his Department's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capital and Well Being, with particular regard to life-long learning policy objectives; and if he will make a statement. [244017]

Mr. Simon: The Secretary of State was pleased to receive the Foresight report on Mental Capital and Wellbeing on behalf of Government and to oversee progress by Departments in their consideration and uptake of its findings over the coming year.

Part of that process will involve an assessment of what the report might mean for DIUS policy on life long learning and the Department will report on this in due course.

Research

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills (1) what assessment his Department has made of the economic impact of research in universities which have received less than £2 million of quality-related research funding in each year since 2002; [245616]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of research in universities with a strong profile in excellent research of national significance, as determined by the 2002 research assessment exercise, upon innovation and applied research in respect of (a) international companies, (b) the regional economies, (c) higher education exports, (d) the NHS and (e) other public and not-for-profit sectors. [245617]

Mr. Lammy: DIUS carries out a wide range of work to measure the impact of research carried out in universities. Each year, the Department publishes a report summarising this work. The latest report, 'Economic Impacts of Investment in Research and Innovation' is available via the DIUS website at http://www.dius.gov.uk/publications/documents/Science/Science/2008Economic_impact_report.pdf.

This report includes sections on the economy, innovation, health care, and the higher education, public and business sectors. It covers research carried out in all universities, regardless of their previous results in the research assessment exercise or the amount of quality-related research funding that they have received.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what his Department's strategy is for ensuring that students in universities which are leaders in widening participation have equal access to a well-resourced research infrastructure in their university. [245618]

Mr. Lammy: The Government's policy are that students should have access to the higher education courses that best suit their needs, and universities should leverage their research activities to enrich undergraduate programmes as appropriate. This will not happen in the same way in all universities, and we do not believe it should. The Government's debate on the future of higher education offers an opportunity to discuss how teaching should develop over the next 10 to 15 years.

Research: Standards

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills (1) how many institutions assessed in the 2008 research assessment exercise had at least five per cent. of the research activity in one of their submissions rated as (a) four stars, (b) three stars, (c) two stars and (d) one star; and if he will make a statement; [246606]

(2) if he will make it his policy that the Higher Education Funding Council has as objectives for the distribution of quality-related research funding to universities to ensure that (a) world leading, internationally excellent and internationally recognised research is funded wherever it has been found and (b) universities with profiles in research which have received national recognition receive funding. [246607]

Mr. Lammy: Of the 159 higher education institutions in the UK that submitted to the 2008 Research Assessment Exercise:

150 had at least 5 per cent. of their submitted research activity judged to be at the 4* quality level in at least one submission;

159 had at least 5 per cent. of their submitted research activity judged to be at the 3* quality level in at least one submission;

159 had at least 5 per cent. of their submitted research activity judged to be at the 2* quality level in at least one submission;

Results for the 2008 Research Assessment Exercise were presented as a quality profile indicating the proportion of research activity in each submission that was judged to reach each quality level.

These figures show that virtually every higher education institution in the United Kingdom that made a submission in the exercise has some research activity assessed to be of world leading quality; and all submitting institutions have some research activity that was assessed as internationally excellent. This is a very strong positive verdict on the strength and diversity of the national research base.

Decisions on allocation of funding arising from the RAE results have not yet been made.

Sight Impaired

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what guidelines his Department follows in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness. [245719]

Mr. Simon: The Department follows the guidelines of COI.

COI Informability recommends that the use of red and green together as text/background should be avoided. They also recommend that using yellow and blue together should be avoided.

Students: Loans

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what the monetary value of the last three valuations of the student loans book were. [243335]

Mr. Lammy: The student loan book valuation for 31 March 2008 and 31 March 2007 is disclosed in the resource accounts of the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills. Prior to this, the student loan book valuation was disclosed in the resource accounts of the Department for Education and Skills.

More details on the valuation methodology for the student loan book can be found in note 21 of the resource accounts of the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills.

Young People: Unemployed

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills what proportion of young people in each of the principal seaside towns were not in employment, education or training at the latest date for which information is available. [244425]

Mr. Simon: Details of young people not in employment, education or training are not available for small geographical regions such as principal seaside towns. The smallest geographical area for which these numbers are available is by local education authority, and this data can be found in the reply given to the hon. Member for Havant (Mr. Willetts) on 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1721W.

SCOTLAND

BBC Scotland

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent meetings he has had with BBC Scotland; what topics were discussed; and with what outcomes. [242398]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Aside from interviews, since I took up appointment on 3 October 2008 I have had no meetings with BBC Scotland.

Departmental Assets

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assets of his Department are planned to be sold in each financial year from 2007-08 to 2010-11; what the (a) description and (b) book value of each such asset is; what the expected revenue from each such sale is; and if he will make a statement. [245293]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office have little by way of disposable assets, and we have no plans to dispose of any between 2007-08 and 2010-11.

Departmental Buildings

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent by his Department on renovation and refurbishment of its properties in each of the last five years. [245302]

Ann McKechin: Under the terms of its building leases the Office is required to maintain the buildings to an acceptable standard of decoration and repair. The Scotland Office does not separately identify the costs of renovation and refurbishment from the routine repair and replacement of existing facilities. Over the period of the last five years, the Office has shared its accommodation with a number of other Government Departments. The following figures show the gross total for repairs and maintenance of Scotland Office buildings, but does not include the contribution by the Departments towards their share of the costs.

	Cost (£)
2003-04	179,853
2004-05	374,129
2005-06	331,803
2006-07	355,071
2007-08	[1]1,011,254

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244715]

Ann McKechin: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of departments in replying to Members-Peers-correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

(b) In respect of emails, this information is not centrally held and is not possible to collect within the disproportionate cost limit.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of contractors and suppliers to his Department have reported that they are compliant with the Government's security standards following publication of the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government, and the accompanying document, Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action, on 25 June 2008. [245307]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office does not directly use external suppliers or contractors to carry out its responsibilities. As an associated office, the Scotland Office is provided with a range of corporate and support services by the Ministry of Justice, who place an obligation on all of their contractors to provide IT and data management systems that meet Government security standards.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many contracts his Department has which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract is held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245335]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office has no such contracts in place.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; when the appointment was made; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245369]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office is part of the Ministry of Justice (MoJ). The Ministry of Justice's Senior Information Risk Owner (SIRO) is the Director General of the Democracy, Constitution and Law Group who took over this responsibility in spring 2008, in advance of the Data Handling Review's publication.

Departmental Electronic Equipment

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, columns 807-08W, on departmental electronic equipment, how many flat screen televisions were purchased in 2007-08. [245268]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office purchased four flat screen televisions in 2007-08.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246012]

Ann McKechin: All staff in the Scotland Office are on secondment from the Scottish Executive or the Ministry of Justice. Information relating to the diversity of staff are held by the parent Departments.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244354]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office has generally, but not exclusively, obtained office furniture through central procurement contracts set-up by the Scottish Executive. The Office does not separately identify the source of supply.

Departmental Gifts

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many members of staff in his Department have received gifts valued at £100 or higher in the course of their duties in each of the last three years; what these gifts were; and from whom they were received. [242021]

Ann McKechin: No members of staff in the Scotland Office have received gifts valued at £100 or higher in the course of their duties in any of the last three years.

Departmental ICT

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what IT projects his Department is undertaking; and what the most recent estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the completion date of each is. [245300]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office shares an information technology system (SCOTS) with the Scottish Executive, which is responsible for the development, administration and maintenance of the system; consequently, the Office does not directly undertake IT projects.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the IT systems in his Department is fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245378]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office shares an information technology system (SCOTS) with the Scottish Executive, which is responsible for the development, administration (including data compliance and security) and maintenance of the system.

Departmental Information Officers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many press and communications officers are employed by his Department. [245299]

Ann McKechin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 3 November 2008, Official Report, column 9W, to the hon. Member for South-West Surrey (Mr. Hunt).

Departmental Internet

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for which websites his Department provides funding. [245396]

Ann McKechin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 808W, to the right hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May).

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which internet providers his Department uses. [245497]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office shares an information technology system (SCOTS) with the Scottish Executive, which is responsible for the development, administration and maintenance of the system.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many full-time equivalent staff in his Department work to assist special advisers; and what the cost of employing such staff was in each of the last three years. [245294]

Ann McKechin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 809W, to the hon. Member for Runnymede and Weybridge (Mr. Hammond).

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what expert advisers have been commissioned by his Department since its inception; on what topic each was commissioned; and whether the adviser so appointed made a declaration of political activity in each case. [246964]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999.

My Office publishes information relating to the use of external consultants on Hansard and since 2003, the names and overall costs of special advisers by pay band are published on an annual basis.

Further to this, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland (Mr. Murphy) has responsibility for appointing members of the Boundary Commission for Scotland.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent on (a) departmental Christmas parties and (b) staff entertainment in the last three years. [243742]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office has not spent anything on departmental Christmas parties or staff entertainment in the last three years.

Departmental Older Workers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of new recruits to his Department were aged over (a) 55 and (b) 60 years old in 2007-08. [245305]

Ann McKechin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 3 November 2008, Official Report, column 9W, to the hon. Member for Upper Bann (David Simpson).

Departmental Pensions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many civil servants working in his Department have pensions with a cash equivalent transfer value of over £1 million. [245395]

Ann McKechin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 22 October 2008, Official Report, column 392W, to the hon. Member for Cardiff, Central (Jenny Willott).

Departmental Procurement

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland with reference to the answer of 5 November 2008, Official Report, columns 462-3W, on departmental procurement, for what reason and for what premises the kettles and television sets were purchased. [242036]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office purchased two kettles at a total cost of £35.90 for our tea preparation areas in Melville Crescent in Edinburgh and four television sets for our ministerial offices in Dover House in London at a total cost of £2,076.00.

Departmental Sick Leave

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of hours of work lost through sickness absence on the part of staff working in his Department in the last 12 months. [245304]

Ann McKechin: All staff are on secondment from the Scottish Executive or the Ministry of Justice; who as parent Departments have absence management policies that apply to those of their staff working in this office. We do not maintain a separate central record of sick absences. Such records are held by the parent Departments who publish their sick absence statistics.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by his Department for public access to services. [246984]

Ann McKechin: The Office does not use telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers.

Departmental Written Questions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day his Department has answered on the due date in the current Session of Parliament. [245295]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office has received two written questions for answer on a named day in the current Session of Parliament. 100 per cent. were answered on the due date.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246334]

Ann McKechin: All staff in the Scotland Office are on secondment from the Scottish Executive or the Ministry of Justice; who remain their employers. It is for these Departments to determine their policy on employing former prisoners.

Plain English

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department has spent on Plain English Campaign training courses for its staff in each of the last five years. [245303]

Ann McKechin: No expenditure has been incurred on Plain English Campaign training courses.

Wines

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spent on wine in each of the last 24 months. [245301]

Ann McKechin: The Scotland Office records its hospitality expenditure in accordance with the principles of "Managing Public Money". It keeps no separate record of expenditure on wine.

DEFENCE

Warship Construction Programme

8. Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what timetable he has set for the warship construction programme; and if he will make a statement. [246447]

Mr. Quentin Davies: We are currently engaged in the most substantial peacetime naval shipbuilding programme since the first world war. This is centred on the Type 45 destroyers, the Astute class submarines and the future aircraft Carriers. Following on from these we will have the future surface combatant and successor class submarine. This programme will provide the capability the Royal Navy needs to remain one of the world's most powerful maritime forces. As the House knows we have announced that the in-service dates of the carriers will be delayed by one to two years allowing closer alignment for the entry into service of the aircraft which will fly from them. HMS Daring, the first of class of the T45 destroyers, is expected to enter service next year with its five successors at a rate of approximately one a year thereafter. The House will also know that there has been some delay to the Astute programme. We are re-baselining the programme and I will make an announcement in due course. The future surface combatant will follow-on from the carriers, but it is far too early to announce an in-service date. The future surface combatant and the successor class submarines are at the very early stages of design.

Eurofighter

9. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the size of the Eurofighter tranche 3 contract is expected to be; and if he will make a statement. [246448]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Negotiations with partner nations and industry are continuing on the Typhoon Tranche 3 contract and decisions will be taken once these negotiations are complete.

NATO/EU Military Commitments

10. Mr. Binley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the compatibility of the UK's NATO and EU military commitments. [246449]

18. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the compatibility of the UK's EU and NATO military commitments. [246457]

Mr. Hutton: The UK works to ensure NATO and EU military commitments complement each other. One recent example has been the smooth transition of counter-piracy and escort duties off the coast of Somalia from the NATO Standing Maritime Group 2 to the EU maritime taskforce.

Equipment Programme

11. Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the review of his Department's equipment programme on the capabilities of the armed forces. [246450]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The effect has been very positive. We are pressing ahead with Future Lynx and giving a new priority to the Warrior upgrade and the FRES reconnaissance vehicle. These are all very important programmes for current operations and the nation's future defence capability. We have been able to do this by re-profiling the carrier build programme without any loss to defence capability. Although the in-service dates of the new carrier have been delayed, of which the House is aware, this has allowed us to more closely align their entry into service with the aircraft which will fly off them.

Jackal Deployment: Iraq

12. Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Jackals have been deployed in Iraq since 2003; and if he will make a statement. [246451]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Jackal was bought for Afghanistan in response to the requirements of that theatre. It provides excellent mobility and firepower and is well adapted for manoeuvring in the Afghan desert. Heavy firepower in Iraq has been effectively delivered by Warrior and Challenger, both of which are well adapted to the Iraqi terrain. No Jackals have therefore been deployed on operations in Iraq.

Afghanistan

13. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the security situation in Afghanistan. [246452]

21. Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the security situation in Afghanistan. [246460]

22. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the security situation in Afghanistan. [246461]

Mr. Hutton: Considerable progress has been made but the insurgency remains resilient. The majority of people can go about their daily lives but, in certain areas of the country, particularly in the south and east, significant security challenges remain. The Taliban have failed using conventional tactics and are turning to increasingly indiscriminate attacks, which show complete disregard for the safety of the local population.

Iran

15. Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of potential military threats posed by Iran. [246454]

20. Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of potential military threats posed by Iran. [246459]

24. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of potential military threats posed by Iran. [246463]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. Jones).

Armed Forces Day

16. Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent progress has been made on preparations for Armed Forces Day; and if he will make a statement. [246455]

Mr. Kevan Jones: As my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Armed Forces announced in our response to the National Recognition Study, the first Armed Forces Day will be held on 27 June this year, building on the success of Veterans Day events held in previous years. The day will provide an opportunity for the public to show their appreciation for the contribution made to society by those who serve and have served the nation in the armed forces. We are working with a wide range of organisations to deliver events that will mark the day and planning is progressing well.

Post-Combat Stress Disorder: North Yorkshire

17. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received on access to treatment by those with post-combat stress disorder who live in North Yorkshire. [246456]

Mr. Kevan Jones: During the past 12 months both my predecessor and I have responded to parliamentary and ministerial correspondence relating to access to treatment for specific individuals in the North Yorkshire area who are suffering from PTSD.

We are working with the four UK Health Departments in piloting a new mental health service for veterans in five NHS trusts across the UK to address treatment of veterans' mental health problems. I spoke at a conference in Hull which has pioneered support for veterans.

We are also working with the King's Centre for Military Health to monitor the mental health of a cohort of serving personnel to better understand the true prevalence of psychiatric disorders and the treatment required.

Snatch Land Rover

19. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to procure an alternative to the Snatch Land Rover. [246458]

Mr. Quentin Davies: We are already replacing Snatch Land Rover with Snatch Vixen. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence said in his written ministerial statement of 16 December 2008, Official Report, columns 103-04WS, we do not believe that there is a better vehicle than Snatch Vixen currently available anywhere in the world to fulfil the Light Protected Patrol Vehicle requirement. But we are also looking to the future and anticipating new threats, and we have begun a programme to develop the next generation of these vehicles which will in due course take the place of Snatch Vixen.

Defence Capability

23. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effects of his proposed reductions in defence procurement expenditure on the UK's defence capability. [246462]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The defence procurement budget has not been reduced. The effect of the examination has been to focus our budget on the delivery of those capabilities of highest immediate urgency for current operations, while allowing us to continue to invest in those capabilities needed to respond to future threats.

Piracy

25. Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to combat piracy on the high seas; and if he will make a statement. [248464]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: In most parts of the world, incidents of piracy and maritime armed robbery are decreasing. It is clear however, that the increase in incidents around the Horn of Africa is a growing problem that needs to be tackled by the international community.

The Ministry of Defence is therefore supporting two international efforts to counter piracy off the coast of Somalia—the Coalition Maritime Forces operations, and the EU counter piracy mission, which a UK officer will command and for which we are providing the operational HQ and one Frigate.

We have also stiffened our rules of engagement and instructed Royal Navy vessels to actively seek out pirates. Under these new guidelines, HMS Cumberland successfully deterred an attack and rescued a pirated Yemeni vessel and crew last November.

We are determined to play our part, through the Royal Navy, and in close co-operation with other countries, to tackle piracy and to protect legitimate trade and transport.

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Prime Minister's statement on the European Council, Afghanistan, India and Pakistan of 15 December 2008, Official Report, columns 813-31, what units will form the increase of 300 troops to Afghanistan. [245183]

Mr. Hutton: As detailed in my statement of 16 December 2008, Official Report, column 105WS, The Second Battalion, The Princess of Wales' Royal Regiment are temporarily deployed to Afghanistan until March 2009.

They will be replaced by The Second Battalion, The Royal Regiment of Fusiliers, who will be deployed until August 2009.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Prime Minister's statement on the European Council, Afghanistan, Pakistan and India of 15 December 2008, Official Report, columns 813-31, what the Government's policy is on the number of trained Afghan national army troops required for security purposes in Afghanistan. [245184]

Mr. Hutton: We welcome the decision taken by the Afghan authorities and the International Community on 10 September 2008 to increase the size of the Afghan National Army from 80,000 to 134,000. This includes operational units, trainers and enablers.

Building Afghanistan's capacity to provide security for its people remains key to success. Therefore the UK supports ANA expansion both of its combat capabilities and in key supporting elements such as engineering, intelligence, and logistics.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the security situation in Afghanistan. [246537]

Mr. Hutton: The majority of people in Afghanistan can go about their daily lives without fear of violence but, in certain areas of the country, particularly in the south and east, significant security challenges remain.

The Taliban have failed using conventional tactics and are turning to increasingly indiscriminate attacks, which show complete disregard for the safety of the local population.

Air Force: Training

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many training hours were flown from (a) RAF Linton-on-Ouse, (b) RAF Cranwell and (c) RAF Valley in each of the last three years for which records are available; [246398]

(2) how many flying training hours are planned to be flown from (a) RAF Linton-on-Ouse, (b) RAF Cranwell and (c) RAF Valley in each of the next three years; [246399]

(3) what effect he estimates the award of the UK Military Flying Training System contract will have on the number of flying training hours flown from (a) RAF Linton-on-Ouse, (b) RAF Cranwell and (c) RAF Valley. [246416]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The flying hours flown in the last three years and anticipated for the next three years are detailed in the following table. It should be noted that figures for future years are estimates only and may be subject to change as part of the normal management process.

	Flown			Planned
RAF Linton-on-Ouse	11,737	12,842	12,347	14,500	14,500	14,500

The UK Military Flying Training System (UKMFTS) will cater for the future flying training needs of the armed forces. Delivery will be incremental, with full delivery of the service planned for early in the next decade. No decisions have yet been taken on the number of UKMFTS flying training hours to be undertaken from individual stations.

Aircraft Carriers: Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the planned in-service dates of (a) HMS Queen Elizabeth and (b) HMS Prince of Wales are. [244566]

Mr. Quentin Davies: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 December 2008, Official Report, column 766W, to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis).

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the effects on the project cost of later than originally planned in-service dates for HMS Queen Elizabeth and HMS Prince of Wales. [244572]

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate his Department has made of the effect on his Department's costs of the decision to put back the in-service date of HMS Queen Elizabeth and HMS Prince of Wales. [245216]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 18 December 2008]: We have estimated the costs of a delay to in-service dates in close consultation with the Aircraft Carrier Alliance and other stakeholders. Further negotiations with industry will be necessary to reach a firm figure and I am therefore withholding this information as its release would, or would be likely to, prejudice commercial interests.

Armed Forces

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the latest Chief of the General Staff's Briefing Team report. [245096]

Mr. Kevan Jones: A copy of the most recently published report, that for second half of 2007, compiled by the Chief of the General Staff's Briefing Team was placed in the Library of the House and remains current. I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, gave on 1 September 2008, Official Report, column 1464W. The next report is being prepared for publication in 2009 and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House when formally published.

Armed Forces: Accommodation

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's long-term housing plan. [245125]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Defence Accommodation Management Strategy will set out how single living accommodation and service family accommodation will be managed over the next 10 years.

It is our intention to publish the strategy in the new year.

Armed Forces: Deployment

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many forces personnel are deployed on operations, broken down by location. [245094]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The endorsed force levels for UK military operations are set out in the following table.

Location	Endorsed number (at 16 December 2008)[1]
Afghanistan[2]	8,050
Southern Iraq	4,150
Baghdad[3]	250
At sea	1,050
Falklands/South Atlantic	1,300
Qatar	700
Cyprus	300
Kuwait	550
Kosovo	150
Bahrain	50
Bosnia	<50
Other[4]	150

[1] Rounded to 50

[2] On 15 December 2008, the Prime Minister announced a temporary increase in the number of British troops deployed to Afghanistan, from just over 8,000 to 8,300 (Official Report, column 816). The endorsed figure for Operation Herrick 9 remains unaffected.

The precise number of personnel in each theatre at any one time fluctuates on a daily basis for a variety of reasons, including mid-tour rest and recuperation, temporary absence for training, evacuation for medical reasons, the roulement of forces, visits and other factors.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the Armed Forces are deployed on (a) operations and (b) other military tasks. [245097]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The following table shows the percentage of armed forces personnel deployed on operations and undertaking military tasks during quarters one and two of financial year 2008-09.

	Percentage deployed on contingent operations	Percentage undertaking military tasks
	Q1	Q2	Q1	Q2
Naval service	5	6	13	9
Army	13	12	7	8
RAF	7	7	7	7
Total armed forces	9	9	9	8

This information is published annually in the Ministry of Defence annual report and accounts. The latest version can be found in Volume I: Annual Performance Report 2007-08 at the following link:

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reservist personnel are currently deployed, broken down by (a) service and (b) location. [245099]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Data on the number of reservist personnel currently deployed by service are available in table 1, footnote 3 of Tri-Service Publication (TSP) 01 (UK Regular Forces Strengths and Changes). TSP 01 can be found at:

http://bravo.dasa.r.mil.uk/applications/newWeb/www/index.php?page=48&thiscontent=30&date=2008-11-27&pubType=1&PublishTime=09:30:00&from=home&tabOption=3

TSP 01 is a monthly publication; the number of reservists deployed at 1 November will be available from 19 December.

The number of reservists deployed by location is not held centrally in individual level databases and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of each battalion of the infantry are in breach of their harmony guidelines for tour intervals. [245118]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Tour intervals are measured at unit level. Harmony guidelines at the individual level are expressed in terms of separated service, which relates to the number of nights spent away from an individual's home base. The guideline for the Army is no one to exceed 415 days separated service in any 30-month period.

Separated service figures for each battalion of the infantry are not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The latest available figure for the infantry as a whole (as at 31 December 2006), shows 10.7 per cent. of personnel exceeding the separated service guideline. It is hoped that separated service data will in future be provided by the joint personnel administration system.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times elements of the Theatre Reserve Battalion in Cyprus have been deployed to (a) Afghanistan and (b) Iraq in each year since 2003, broken down by (i) length of deployment and (ii) unit down to the company level. [245119]

Mr. Hutton: The Theatre Reserve Battalion, based in Cyprus, has been deployed on the occasions listed in the following table.

Date	Unit	Grouping	Theatre	Duration (months)
January 2005	1 Royal Highland Fusiliers	Battalion HQ and 3 Companies	Iraq	1
October 2005	1 Royal Highland Fusiliers	1 Company	Iraq	1.5
April 2006	2 Royal Regiment Fusiliers	2 Companies	Iraq	2
July 2006	2 Royal Regiment Fusiliers	1 Company	Afghanistan	4
September 2006	2 Royal Regiment Fusiliers	Battalion HQ and 2 Companies	Iraq	2
January 2007	2 Royal Regiment Fusiliers	1 Company	Afghanistan	3
April 2007	1 Royal Welsh	Battalion HQ and 1 Company	Afghanistan	5
May 2007	1 Royal Welsh	1 Company	Iraq	4
October 2007	1 Royal Welsh	1 Company	Afghanistan	1
November 2007	1 Royal Welsh	1 Company	Afghanistan	2
January 2008	1 Royal Welsh	1 Company	Afghanistan	1
February 2008	1 Royal Welsh	1 Company	Afghanistan	4
June 2008	2 Princess of Wales Royal Regiment	1 Company	Afghanistan	3
August 2008	2 Princess of Wales Royal Regiment	Battalion HQ and 1 Company	Afghanistan	3

One Company from 2 Princess of Wales Royal Regiment is currently deployed to Afghanistan.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the compatibility of the UK's NATO and EU military commitments. [245271]

Mr. Hutton: The UK works with international partners and allies to ensure that NATO and EU military commitments complement each other. One recent example of this complementarity has been the smooth transition of counter-piracy and escort duties off the coast of Somalia from the NATO Standing Maritime Group 2 to the EU maritime taskforce.

Armed Forces: Drugs

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) serving and (b) former members of the armed forces are in (i) drug and (ii) alcohol rehabilitation. [244936]

Mr. Kevan Jones: Information on the total number of service personnel currently receiving any treatment for substance misuse is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, information on the number of new attendances at military Departments of Community Mental Health (DCMH) in 2007 for which an initial diagnosis of substance misuse was given is contained within UK Armed Forces Psychiatric Morbidity report which is produced by DASA and is available to view on their website at www.dasa.mod.uk/. The number of such initial diagnoses at DCMHs between 1 January and 31 December 2007 are shown as follows; these figures will include regular service personnel, mobilised reservists and entitled de-mobilised reservists as part of the Reserve Mental Health programme.

	Psychoactive substance misuse	Of which disorders due to alcohol[1]
January to March 2007	101	—
April to June 2007	121	115
July to September 2007	134	121
October to December 2007	88	82

The Department has issued guidance to commanders on substance misuse and all three services have robust drug and alcohol policies in place. As such early intervention by the chain of command is likely to occur for disciplinary or welfare reasons before treatment by the Defence Medical Services would become necessary.

Service personnel identified by the chain of command as being at risk of alcohol misuse receive counselling and welfare support, this can include attendance on preventative early intervention programmes designed to alert them to the harm that alcohol can cause to themselves and others. More serious cases are treated through specialist medical and psychological treatment and rehabilitation, including where appropriate as in-patients.

Drug use is seen as being incompatible with military service and as such there is a zero tolerance policy which is reinforced by Compulsory Drug Testing (CDT). In the majority of cases a positive CDT result will lead to an immediate administrative discharge. In very exceptional circumstances service personnel may be retained if their drug use is considered to be uncharacteristic and their retention would be in the interest of the service. In these cases retention is subject to the successful completion of a special programme, which is designed to re-educate and give training in cognitive behavioural therapy.

The Department does not hold information regarding veterans receiving treatment for drug or alcohol misuse.

Armed Forces: Homelessness

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate his Department has made of the number of former members of the armed services who were homeless at the latest date for which figures are available. [244773]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Department for Communities and Local Government and the Devolved Administrations lead on homelessness policy. They have strategies that recognise veterans issues. The Ministry of Defence does not collect on a national basis data on the numbers of homeless veterans. We have however estimated that the proportion of veterans among the non-statutory homeless population, at least in London, has fallen over the last 10 years. Independent research by the university of York published this year has shown that the proportion of veterans among the non-statutory homeless population in London in 2007 was about 6 per cent. This is a much lower proportion than in the mid-1990s when separate research reported a figure of 20-25 per cent.

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces are living in temporary accommodation. [244937]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Armed Forces: Housing

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to report assets held by Annington Homes on his Department's balance sheet under IFRIC 12. [245131]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Ministry of Defence is currently undertaking a review of all PPP/PFI and leasing-type arrangements, including the Annington Homes contract, in order to meet the HM Treasury timetable for the implementation of IFRS as adopted by the public sector for 2009-10.

Armed Forces: Influenza

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the answer of 17 June 2008, Official Report, on influenza: disease control, what lessons to enhance the robustness and resilience of the system were identified in Operation United Endeavour II; in what ways these lessons are being addressed; and if he will make a statement. [245606]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

Wherever possible, the information systems used in a pandemic will be based on existing surveillance arrangements for seasonal influenza. Following United Endeavour II, technical work has been undertaken to facilitate daily provision, in a pandemic, of data relating to general practitioner flu consultations and syndromic surveillance from NHS Direct. Work has also been undertaken to confirm the arrangements for co-ordination with equivalent information systems in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and to ensure that the National Pandemic Flu Line Service will be able to provide necessary additional surveillance information.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the answer of 20 June 2008, Official Report, column 1205W, on armed forces: influenza, what proportion of the A/H5N1 vaccine stockpile held by the Department of Health is reserved for use by the armed forces. [245611]

Mr. Kevan Jones: MOD has a total allocation of 108,000 doses of H5N1 vaccine, which is sufficient for 54,000 courses of treatment at two doses per person.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the answer of 20 June 2008, Official Report, column 1204W, on armed forces: influenza, at which overseas locations antivirals are currently held; and what the total number of antiviral courses at each location is, broken down by type of antiviral. [245612]

Mr. Kevan Jones: As stated in my previous answer, in accordance with Defence Medical Services guidance, 10 antiviral courses have been pre-positioned in medical facilities overseas; five courses in the role 2 (enhanced) field hospital unit at Basra in Iraq and five at Camp Bastion in Afghanistan.

A further 18,000 antiviral courses for use in the event of an outbreak of pandemic influenza have been distributed to overseas locations where MOD personnel and their dependents are based. To protect the integrity of the stocks in the event of a pandemic, locations and quantities are not placed in the public domain. The quantities have been calculated in accordance with Department of Health guidance; stockholdings are kept under regular review, and there has been no need to change them since June 2008.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the answer of 20 February 2008, Official Report, column 698W, on Armed Forces: influenza, if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance note entitled Recovery of operational capability in the aftermath of a pandemic; what the titles are of all other guidance notes on which work was ongoing; whether work is ongoing on other guidance notes; and if he will make a statement. [245699]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The generic MOD Pandemic Influenza Framework brings together activities which for the most part will be undertaken by Defence business units and operational commands so that they can put in place the necessary response arrangements before a pandemic emerges. The guidance notes support the key tasks identified in the framework and are in the form of one-page summaries.

All the guidance notes, including the note "Recovery of operational capability in the aftermath of a pandemic", have now been completed, although as the framework is a live document, they will be subject to regular review and amendment. I will place a copy of the latest version of the MOD Pandemic Influenza Framework containing the key tasks and guidance notes (dated October 2008) in the Library of the House.

Armed Forces: Journalism

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost to the public purse has been of embedding journalists in the armed forces in each year since 1997. [246741]

Mr. Kevan Jones: A key requirement for the MOD as a Department of State is to communicate its activities to ensure openness and transparency of government. In order to assist this we have routinely embedded journalists in operational theatres. No charges have been applied to embedded news journalists.

In all instances where journalists are embedded this is undertaken using existing facilities. Nominal or marginal costs in the field such as food and field accommodation are not significant and are not accounted for centrally.

Armed Forces: Labour Turnover

Christopher Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many newly-commissioned officers joined (a) the Army, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) the Royal Air Force in each year since 1987. [244592]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The information requested is as follows.

Officers can become commissioned:

when they complete training; while they are still untrained; or on direct entry to the trained strength.

Newly-commissioned officers can not be derived directly from centrally held records, but the majority of officers become commissioned when they complete training.

The following table shows the number of officers completing training and joining the trained strength of the UK Regular Forces[1] by Service from 1999-2000 to 2007-08. Prior to 1999-00 these data could not be derived directly from centrally held records.

[1] UK Regular Forces includes Nursing services and excludes Full Time Reserve Service personnel, Gurkhas, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment and mobilised reservists. It includes trained and untrained personnel.

Christopher Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers left the (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) Royal Air Force in each year between 1987 and 1997. [244593]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The following table shows the number of officers leaving the UK Regular Forces[1] 1987-88 to 1996-97 by Service.

[1] UK Regular Forces includes Nursing services and excludes Full Time Reserve Service personnel, Gurkhas, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment and mobilised reservists. It includes trained and untrained personnel.

Armed Forces: Uniforms

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many orders for military uniforms his Department has placed with Turner Virr in the last 10 years. [245282]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Turner Virr has been awarded 33 contracts for the supply of military uniforms in the last 10 years.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the procurement strategy for army uniforms is; and if he will make a statement. [245283]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Our aim in procuring clothing for the armed forces is to achieve best value for money through the use of competition. Requirements are advertised and competed in accordance with the Public Contracts Regulations 2006.

Armed Forces: Weapons

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department records the number of (a) armoured vehicles, (b) aircraft, (c) helicopters and (d) weapons systems removed from service as a result of battle damage in Iraq and Afghanistan since 2003. [249089]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Such information is held, but I am withholding it as its disclosure would, or would be likely to prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of the armed forces.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on repairing (a) armoured vehicles, (b) aircraft, (c) helicopters and (d) weapons systems damaged owing to their use in Iraq and Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [245091]

Mr. Quentin Davies: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Armoured Fighting Vehicles

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the answer of 10 November 2008, Official Report, column 775W, on armed forces: weapons, when he expects upgrading and modification of the warrior chain gun for (a) Warrior and (b) Challenger 2 MBT fleets to take place. [244615]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The upgrade and modification programme of the Chain Gun Control Unit has already started. To date approximately 80 per cent. of the Warrior fleet and all but a small number of the Challenger 2 fleet have been upgraded. The process of identifying the outstanding vehicles is ongoing with a target for completion of January 2009.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the answer of 10 November 2008, Official Report, column 775W, on armed forces: weapons, whether the instances of undemanded firing of the Warrior chain gun referred to resulted in (a) injuries and (b) deaths. [244616]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Of the four confirmed incidents of chain gun undemanded firing since 2000, sadly two resulted in death or injuries. An incident in 2003 caused serious injury to a British servicemen and an incident in 2004 tragically resulted in the death of an Iraqi civilian and injury to another.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armoured vehicles were in-service in the Army in (a) 1997 and (b) 2008, broken down by type. [245098]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Vehicle	In service 1997	In service 2008
Challenger 1 Main Battle Tank	426	0
Challenger 2 Main Battle Tank	0	345
Challenger 2 Driver Training Tank	0	22
Challenger Armoured Repair and Recovery Vehicle	81	81
Trojan	0	28
Titan	0	28
Centurion Beach Recovery Vehicle	5	0
Beach Recovery Vehicle	0	4
Warrior	794	793
Saxon (GWR and Patrol)	660	147 Patrol
Samson	52	52
Spartan	640	495
Scimitar	341	325
Samaritan	69	50
Sultan	272	205
FV430	1,833 (Mk2 only)	1,487 (Mk2 and Bulldog)
Mastiff	0	108
Jackal	0	130
Vector	0	166 plus 12 ambulances
Viking	0	116
Panther	0	100

The Saxon GWR was declared obsolete on 31 March 2008 and the vehicles were disposed of. Spartan, Scimitar, Samaritan, Sultan and FV430 numbers have reduced due to revised Total Fleet Requirements.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Supacat M-WMIK have been supplied to UK armed forces in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan; how many of them were armoured to become Jackals in each case; and how many M-WMIKs are operating unarmoured in each country. [245229]

Mr. Hutton: Specific operational information on the number of Jackals (M-WMIK) supplied to UK armed forces in Iraq and Afghanistan is withheld as its disclosure would, or would be likely to prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of the armed forces. All Jackals deployed on operations are armoured.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the dimension specifications are for (a) the Cheetah Force Protection vehicle and (b) the Snatch Land Rover. [246135]

Mr. Quentin Davies: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 1 September 2008, Official Report, column 1448W.

Armoured Fighting Vehicles: Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on the procurement of the Future Rapid Effects System Utility Vehicle variant to date. [244571]

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what total expenditure has been to date on the FRES utility variant programme; and if he will make a statement. [245104]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Expenditure on the Future Rapid Effects System Utility Vehicle by variant up to the end of November 2008 was some £132 million.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the procurement of a new fleet of reconnaissance vehicles for the Army. [244621]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Our plan for a new fleet of reconnaissance vehicles will form part of the Future Rapid Effect System (FRES). Outline plans for this requirement were stated by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence in his recent written ministerial statement on 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 65WS. As part of the wider FRES programme, the FRES Reconnaissance family of vehicles is in its assessment phase. The first variant into service is expected to be the FRES Scout.

Astute Class Submarines

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the clearing date is for each of the four Astute-class SSNs (a) under construction and (b) due for construction at Devonshire Hall, Barrow. [246319]

Mr. Quentin Davies: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 November 2008, Official Report, column 141W, to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis).

Astute Class Submarines: Finance

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what budget line was used for the £227 million expenditure on Astute overheads identified in the Ministry of Defence Major Projects Report 2007 from the Committee of Public Accounts, HC 433; and what effect this allocation had on expenditure on the UK nuclear deterrent programme in each year from 2005-06 to 2007-08. [246699]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The MOD Major Projects Report 2007 (HC433) noted the transfer of £227 million from the Astute budget line to another within the Submarine Production Integrated Project Team. This funding, which was used for the generation and sustainment of nuclear skills necessary to support the submarine-building industry, was not additional expenditure but an existing part of the Astute programme.

The transfer had no direct effect on spending on the UK's nuclear deterrent. A sustainable submarine industry is, however, essential for the effective delivery of the future submarine programme, so this expenditure will have indirect benefits.

Barron Report

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the Barron Report on defence land needs. [245123]

Mr. Kevan Jones: A copy of the 'Barron Report', which was prepared some years ago, is being obtained and will be placed in the Library of the House.

Cyprus: Peacekeeping Operations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what systems are used to (a) monitor and (b) obtain information on turtle populations on the sovereign bases in Cyprus. [245415]

Mr. Kevan Jones: There are currently four voluntary 'Turtlewatch' groups operating on the SBAs. Three groups in the Western Sovereign Base Area (WSBA) and one group in the Eastern Sovereign Base Area (ESBA).

Of the three WSBA groups, Episkopi patrols and monitors beaches focused around the Episkopi station area, which includes non-military and military controlled land. This group is predominantly led by British ex-pats and consists of 80-100 members with some serving military personnel assisting in their own time. In addition some beaches in the Episkopi area are monitored by Pissouri turtlewatch, and both Pissouri and Episkopi turtlewatch work together in this respect.

Akrotiri turtlewatch monitors beaches around the Akrotiri peninsular, which includes military and non-military controlled land. This group has a larger proportion of military personnel contributing and the key co-ordinators are serving. Akrotiri turtlewatch is also working with Glasgow university and up to 12 students assist with monitoring every year.

In the ESBA there is one turtlewatch group at Dhekelia that monitors the local station beaches. This is co-ordinated by serving military/civilian personnel in their spare time.

Patrols are undertaken by these groups on an almost daily basis on known or potential turtle nesting grounds between May and September to identify turtle tracks and nest sites. Once a nest is located it is protected from stray dogs and foxes by placing a metal cage and tape around the general area of the nest. Around hatching time the nest is observed from a distance and after three days following the first hatch, the nest is excavated to ensure all the hatchlings can escape to the sea.

The active members of Turtlewatch are licensed by the SBAA's Environment Department to undertake these activities following appropriate training.

Since 2007 all data relating to turtle nests, hatches and deaths etc. are collated by the Sovereign Base Area Administration (SBAA Environment Department) for use in developing SBA environmental policy and assessing the impact of foreshore activities.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many turtles hatched at RAF Akrotiri in each of the last three years. [245416]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The number of turtles hatched on the beaches at RAF Akrotiri in each of the last three years is as follows:

	Number
2008	1,254

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces take part in his Department's Turtlewatch scheme in Cyprus. [245417]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The number of military personnel taking part in the Turtlewatch activities is difficult to determine accurately, given the voluntary nature of the work. But, British Forces Cyprus work closely with volunteer organisations to monitor and safeguard protected species and habitats around the Sovereign Base Areas.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Territorial Army members and (b) reservists have participated in the UN Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [245051]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: As at 18 December 2008 there were 246 members of the Territorial Army deployed as a formed TA unit on Operation TOSCA, the UK contribution to UNFICYP. In the nine years previous to the current deployment, TA personnel were only sent as individual augmentees. Approximately 10 TA augmentees per year were deployed during this period.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the Government has contributed to the UN Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus in (a) monetary support, (b) troops and (c) senior officers in (i) 2008-09 and (ii) each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [245052]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Our assessed contributions to the UN in respect of the costs of the UNFICYP mission for 2008-09 are 2,740,207 USD (until payment is made and exchange rates are known, it is not possible to provide a sterling figure). The following table shows our assessed contributions over the previous three years:

	Assessed contribution (£)
2007-08	960,793
2006-07	1,162,502
2005-06	709,830

We also contribute to the mission through the provision of personnel. Since March 2005 our contribution has been steady at approximately 274; this comprises 245 Other Ranks, 16 Junior Officers (Captain and below) and 13 Senior Officers (Major and above). Our contribution includes the Chief of Staff to the mission.

The national costs in providing this contingent are defrayed by payments from the UN, which currently average around $1,000 per soldier per month.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate (a) he and (b) the UN Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus have made of the (i) number and (ii) strength of Turkish forces in north Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245053]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the then Minister for Europe (Mr. Jim Murphy) on 29 November 2007, Official Report, column 692W.

I cannot speak on behalf of UNFICYP.

Defence Equipment

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his Written Ministerial Statement of 11 December, Official Report, column 65WS, on defence equipment, whether the defence budget will be required to repay the full cost or half the cost of urgent operational requirement purchases over £635 million in financial year 2009-10. [245204]

Mr. Quentin Davies: We have agreed with HM Treasury an estimate for Reserve expenditure on other UORs in 2009-10 of £635 million. This is in addition to the funding that will be provided from the Reserve for the Protected Mobility package for 2009-10. I can confirm that any excess UOR spend over the estimate of £635 million will be repaid in full (100 per cent.) from the Defence budget in two years' time (FY2011-12).

Defence Equipment: Expenditure

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the effect of increases in equipment costs on the defence budget. [242879]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The effects of changing costs are taken into account in the Department's regular planning rounds. We are currently conducting Planning Round 2009, which will conclude in the first half of this year. We are also engaged in work which is designed to give a better indication of the overall impact of price variation on the Defence programme.

Defence Estates: Manpower

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are employed by the Defence Estates; how many of those are employed in Scotland; what the equivalent figures were for (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06, (c) 2006-07 and (d) 2007-08; what the personnel costs of the agency are in 2008-09; and what they were in (i) 2004-05, (ii) 2005-06, (iii) 2006-07 and (iv) 2007-08. [241122]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The information is shown in the following table, with staff numbers rounded to the nearest 10:

Defence Estates

	Personnel costs (£ million)	Total average staff (number)	Employed in Scotland (number)
2004-05	101.3	3,130	230
2005-06	144.8	4,180	210
2006-07	153.3	4,020	200
2007-08	157.3	4,250	190
2008-09 (forecast)	158.7	4,280	200

Defence Estates' overall numbers have risen due to additional responsibilities transferred to it from other parts of the MOD, in particular in Germany and Northern Ireland.

Defence Logistics Organisation: Finance

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much and what proportion of its staffing budget for 2007-08 the Defence Logistics Organisation spent in Scotland; and what the equivalent figures were for (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06 and (c) 2006-07. [241118]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Defence Logistics Organisation ceased to exist as a discrete budgetary area in April 2007 when its functions were merged with those of the Defence Procurement Agency to form Defence Equipment and Support. Personnel costs, broken down as requested to show the proportion spent in Scotland, are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Defence Vetting Agency: Manpower

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of those people are employed by the Defence Vetting Agency; how many of those are employed in Scotland; what the equivalent figures were for (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06, (c) 2006-07 and (d) 2007-08; what the staffing costs of the agency are in 2008-09; and what they were in (i) 2004-05, (ii) 2005-06, (iii) 2006-07 and (iv) 2007-08. [241120]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The information is shown in the following table. These figures are sourced from the Defence Vetting Agency and show all staff employed within the period. As such they may differ from statistics published by the Defence Analytical Services Agency which include only staff employed on 1 April each year and are subject to rounding.

Defence Vetting Agency

	UK personnel numbers	Scotland personnel numbers	Total personnel costs (£000)
Current year	396	7	[1]6,887
2007-08	386	6	10,992
2006-07	357	6	9,789
2005-06	346	6	9,045
2004-05	348	6	8,407

[1] To December 2008

Defence: Finance

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total defence budget is planned to be in each of the next two years. [245869]

Mr. Hutton: The Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR07) settlement set the defence budget for the financial years 2009-10 and 2010-11. The total departmental expenditure limits for these years, as published in Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2008, are £35,371 million and £36,897 million respectively.

Democratic Republic of Congo: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the next discussion between EU defence ministers about EU military options for the Democratic Republic of Congo to take place. [246302]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: There are currently no plans for EU Defence Ministers to discuss EU military options for the Democratic Republic of Congo.

Departmental Accounts

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will break down in near cash terms the tables included in note (a) 24 of the MoD Resource Accounts 2001-02, (b) 25 of MoD Annual Report and Accounts 2002-03, (c) 26 of MoD Annual Report and Accounts 2003-04 and (d) 26 of MoD Annual Report and Accounts 2004-05; [245132]

(2) if he will break down in near cash terms the tables included in note 24 of the MoD Annual Report and Accounts (a) 2005-06, (b) 2006-07 and (c) 2007-08. [245133]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The expenditure in the notes requested is expressed in total resource costs terms. Near cash expenditure is not separately identified in the final resource accounts or the centrally held supporting records and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Consultants

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on the purchase of consultancy services, with reference to the Standard Chart of Account code 51401400, in 2007-08. [245120]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Department's final audited outturn on the purchase of consultancy services, against the Standard Chart of Account code 51401400 which includes Management Consultancy of Business Performance, Financial and Accountancy Services, Corporate Governance and Audit in 2007-08 was £113 million.

This figure is reflected in the 2007-08 report "Summaries of the Ministry of Defence External Assistance Expenditure", which is available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Contracts

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on contract and agency staff, with reference to the Standard Chart of Account code 51404000, in 2007-08. [245121]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Standard Chart of Account code 51404000 which includes Management Consultancy of Business Performance, Financial and Accountancy Services, corporate Governance and Audit is no longer in use. Expenditure on contract and agency staff is now included within overall staff costs.

Using internal management accounts, the Department's final audited outturn on contract and agency staff in 2007-08 was £64 million. This category is for casual labour and employment agencies' staff employed for less than 11 months.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department plans to spend on contract and agency staff, with reference to the Standard Chart of Account code 51404000, in 2008-09 to 2010-11. [245122]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Standard Chart of Account code 51404000, which covers Management Consultancy of Business Performance, Financial and Accountancy Services, Corporate Governance and Audit, is no longer in use. Expenditure on contract and agency staff is now included within overall staff costs.

Using internal management accounts, the Department's current forecast on contract and agency staff is £77 million. This category is for casual labour and employment agencies' staff employed for less than 11 months.

The Department's plans for future spend on contract and agency staff are currently being examined in the Planning Round 2009.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244702]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to correspondence from Members and Peers. Information relating to calendar year 2008 will be published as soon as it is collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS.

Departmental Data Protection

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) desktop computers, (b) laptop computers, (c) hard drives and (d) memory sticks which have gone missing from (i) his Department and (ii) each of its agencies in each year since 2003 have since been recovered. [245085]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The following tables show the number of officially issued assets centrally reported as recovered from the MOD and its agencies since 2003. Some delayed reporting of recoveries of hardware has led to minor updates to the figures in this answer compared with information provided in previous answers. The following figures reflect the latest data held as at 18 December 2008.

Figures for recovered desktop computers, laptop computers, hard drives and USB flash memory devices for the MOD from 2003 to 2008

Other—the MOD agency could not be identified.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the IT systems in (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245384]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Ministry of Defence and its Agencies have several hundred computer systems in use ranging from corporate IT systems serving thousands of users across the Department and its Agencies, to business area systems serving smaller communities. The following data cover those systems within the MOD and its Agencies where accreditation is centrally controlled by Defence Security and Standards Assurance (DSSA), which are either connected to the MOD networks, or are stand alone above Secret, or are systems that contain significant value to the MOD e.g. those systems that contain particularly sensitive or personal data. It does not include those systems where authority for accreditation has been delegated e.g. stand alone systems with no onward connectivity, and where a further breakdown of information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

58 per cent. of systems have been through the accreditation process. Of these, 27 per cent. of systems are classed as fully accredited and are being operated in a manner within the MOD's Senior Information Risk Owner (SIRO)'s risk appetite; 31 per cent. of systems are currently classed as having conditional or interim accreditation with constraints placed on the operation of the system to ensure that identified risks are adequately managed within SIRO's risk appetite.

The balance of systems (42 per cent.) are in the process of being accredited; this represents the significant workload undertaken to plan and develop solutions for new equipment systems or platforms; this also includes applications from legacy systems, many of which will be migrated onto the developing Defence Information Infrastructure.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [244608]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Ministry of Defence (MOD) is committed to improving energy efficiency of the defence estate and the latest performance confirms that the Department is on target to meet, and possibly exceed sustainable operations on the Government estate (SOGE) energy related targets.

The MOD's consolidated, weather corrected performance for 2007-08 relative to 1999 to 2000 levels as reported by the Sustainable Development Commission in December 2008 was:

	Tonnes/percentage
Tonnes CO_2 2007-08	1,895,879
Tonnes CO_2 Baseline	2,112,568
Performance against target (percentage)	-10.26

This significant reduction has been achieved through a combination of estate rationalisation, greater focus and co-ordination of effort to increase energy awareness and the development of effective local initiatives to reduce carbon emissions and improvements in data management. In addition, the MOD continues to identify opportunities to further reduce energy consumption for example, investing in our infrastructure to improve building energy management and efficiency, installing more energy efficient lighting, automated metering and making available funding for energy efficiency/carbon reduction projects.

Departmental Freedom of Information

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many requests his Department has received under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in each of the last three years; in how many cases requests were refused; and what the average time taken to respond to such requests was. [245115]

Mr. Kevan Jones: Under the Freedom of Information Act we are obliged to send a response within 20 working days, and to record for performance purposes, whether this deadline was met or not.

Statistics for the last three complete years for all Government Departments are published on the Ministry of Justice website (see following table), which includes the number of requests made to each Department, and the number refused. It also gives a percentage of those answered 'in time' (normally within the 20 working day deadline). The Department does not record an average time for responding.

Departmental Legal Proceedings

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many legal proceedings naming his Department as a defending party are under appeal. [244938]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many legal proceedings naming his Department as a defending party are ongoing or unresolved. [244939]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Lost Property

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value is of departmental equipment (a) lost and (b) stolen in each of the last five years, broken down by service. [245112]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The value of assets lost or stolen is included, with a range of other types of losses, in the summary of losses and special payments published in the MOD's annual report and accounts. Copies of the annual reports and accounts are available in the Library of the House and on line at:

http://www.mod.uk/DefenceInternet/AboutDefence/CorporatePublications/AnnualReports/

(see note 29 in the departmental resource accounts for financial years 2003-04 and 2004-05 and note 31 for subsequent financial years). The summary identifies those individual cases with a value of £250,000 or more.

Departmental Manpower

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much and what proportion of its staffing budget for 2007-08 the Financial Management Shared Service Centre spent in Scotland; and what the equivalent figures were for (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06 and (c) 2006-07. [241117]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Financial Management Shared Service Centre, including its predecessor organisation the Defence Bills Agency, has not employed any staff in Scotland in any of these years.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many special advisers were employed in his Department at each pay band on 30 November 2008; and what his Department's total expenditure on special advisers was in 2007-08. [243576]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The MOD had two special advisers on 30 November 2008, on pay bands 2 and 3. The Government are committed to publishing an annual list detailing the number and costs of special advisers. Information for 2007-08 was published by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 July 2008, Official Report, columns 99-102WS.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on Ministerial hospitality in (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06, (c) 2006-07 and (d) 2007-08, expressed in current prices. [241249]

Mr. Kevan Jones: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to ensure that those temporary and permanent employees at the same grade in his Department who are paid at an hourly rate are paid at the same rate. [244395]

Mr. Kevan Jones: MOD civilians are salary paid. Temporary staff are paid on the same pay scales as permanent staff.

Departmental Procurement

Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of invoices for goods and services procured from small and medium-sized businesses were paid within 10 days of receipt by (a) his Department and (b) the agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 2006-07 and (ii) 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [243496]

Mr. Quentin Davies [holding answer 16 December 2008]: Information in respect of payments within 10 days of receipt could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department is reviewing the processes associated with the overall payment cycle. Once this work is complete it should ensure that the Department is able to measure report performance against the Government's 10 day target. The 10 day target will apply to all MOD suppliers, irrespective of size, as it would be impractical to differentiate between small and medium size enterprises and others.

While the Department is working towards a meeting the 10 day target, it currently measures performance against the Late Payment of Commercial Debts (Interest) Act requirement of 30 calendar days. This allows up to 19 days for MOD branches to confirm that the services or goods supplied have been satisfactorily delivered and then 11 calendar days for the Financial Management Shared Service Centre (FMSSC) to check the invoices and make payment.

The information available and published in the Annual Report and Accounts for 2006-07 and 2007-08, shows that 99.8 per cent. of all valid UK bills were paid within 11 calendar days of receipt in the FMSSC.

Departmental Project Statements

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library unredacted copies of his Department's major project statements from 1983 to 1992. [245126]

Mr. Quentin Davies: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how his Department's 2007-08 outturn main estimate breaks down between (a) near cash and (b) non-cash on the same basis as set out in his Answer of 4 March 2008, Official Report, column 2346W. [244576]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's expenditure was on schools and community relations, as referred to in his Department's resource account code hierarchy, in near cash terms, in each financial year since 2000-01. [245092]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The total resource costs for schools and community relations are set out in the following table:

Financial year	£ million
2000-01	0.439
2001-02	0.371
2002-03	0.224
2003-04	0.466
2004-05	2.457
2005-06	2.889
2007-08	5.439

Near cash expenditure is not separately identified in the resource accounts or the centrally held supporting records. Total resource costs have therefore been provided; however it is unlikely that there are any non cash costs attributed to the expenditure items which would result in the near cash expenditure being significantly different from the resource expenditure.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's projections for repayment to the Exchequer for funding for urgent operational requirements are for each financial year for which figures are available. [245107]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The Department's Comprehensive Spending Review 2007 settlement made provision of £200 million in 2010-11 to meet the cost of repaying to HM Treasury a proportion of urgent operational requirement (UOR) costs in 2008-09, with the aim of ensuring that these arrangements are cost-neutral for the Defence budget. We currently expect UOR repayments in 2010-11 to fall within this £200 million envelope.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the latest versions of the cost of defence output categories taxonomy. [245127]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I have placed the most recent version of the Cost of Defence outputs taxonomy in the Library of the House; this was updated in December 2007.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's response to HM Treasury's consultation paper on accounting for PPP arrangements, including PFI contracts. [245312]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Yes, I have placed a copy of the Department's responses to HM Treasury's letters referenced RABIG (2007) 23 entitled "Accounting for PPP Arrangements, including PFI, under IFRS" and RABIG (2008) 03 entitled "Accounting for PPP arrangements, including PFI, under IFRS: text for the IFRS-based Financial Reporting Manual (iFReM)" in the Library of the House.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies for public access to services. [246987]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The use of 0845 numbers and others that charge at a similar rate is determined at local level in accordance with individual business requirements and obtained directly from the supplier. Records of such numbers are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Depleted Uranium

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are taken to monitor civilian populations who have been in danger of exposure to depleted uranium; and how many persons so exposed have responded to newspaper advertisements and have been voluntarily tested for contamination. [246605]

Mr. Kevan Jones: It is the responsibility of sovereign states where depleted uranium (DU) munitions have been used to monitor for any possible health risk to the civilian population. The Ministry of Defence has conducted environmental surveys for DU in southern Iraq and the Balkans. No widespread DU contamination sufficient to impact the health of the general population or deployed personnel has been found in these surveys. Similar studies have been carried out by the United Nations in the Balkans and Kuwait and information presented at a recent conference suggests that the results of environmental monitoring by Iraqi scientists will be published later this year.

In 2004-05, the independent Depleted Uranium Oversight Board (DUOB) placed adverts in UK newspapers announcing the availability of a retrospective testing programme for the analysis of uranium isotopes in urine. The test was offered to eligible ex-Service or serving personnel and certain categories of civilians who served in the Persian Gulf area between 1 August 1990 and 31 July 1991 or in the former Republic of Yugoslavia on or after 5 August 1994. A total of 496 individuals took up the offer to be tested. No evidence of the excretion of DU was found in the urine of any of the individuals tested. As far as we are aware, there has been no other initiative of this type.

Disposal Services Agency: Finance

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much and what proportion of its staffing budget for 2007-08 the Disposal Services Agency spent in Scotland; and what the equivalent figures were for (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06 and (c) 2006-07. [241121]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Disposal Services Authority

	Scottish personnel costs (£000s)	Percentage of personnel costs spent in Scotland
2004-05	148.8	5.1
2005-06	193.9	4.3
2006-07	218.5	5.0
2007-08	205.0	5.4

Ex-Servicemen

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the answer of 25 November 2008, Official Report, column 1171W, on ex-servicemen, for what reasons the actual number given is lower than the required number in each case; and what steps he is taking to increase the actual numbers where these do not meet requirements. [242841]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The information provided represented a snapshot, and in each case where the actual number of resettlement staff was below the required number, this was the result of natural and temporary gapping of posts, as a result of promotion, transfers etc. of the previous incumbent. In each case normal recruitment or posting action, depending on whether the post was civilian- or military-filled, is being undertaken to fill the vacancies, and it is not intended to leave the posts vacant for any longer than necessary to complete recruitment action.

FCR Scoping Study

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of the (a) FCR Scoping Study, (b) FOM Mapping Study, (c) DRMP Information Strategy and (d) DRMS Information Systems Strategy produced for his Department. [245129]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: I will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

Future Carrier Programme

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the current in-service dates are for the Future Carrier programme; and if he will make a statement. [245102]

Mr. Quentin Davies: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 December 2008, Official Report, column 766W, to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis).

Gray Review

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the terms of reference of the Bernard Gray review are; and when it is due to report; [245106]

(2) pursuant to his written ministerial statement of 11 December, Official Report, column 65WS, on defence equipment, what the terms of reference are for the defence acquisition review; and when it will report. [245203]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Within the policy set by the Defence Industrial Strategy, the review is to examine progress with implementing reforms through the MOD's Acquisition Change Programme and to make any further recommendations on how to secure better value for money and deliver major acquisition programmes within budget and on time.

The review is expected to be complete by the summer.

Iraq: Legal Systems

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Prime Minister's statement of 18 December 2008 on Iraq, what legal protection UK forces will have under either international or Iraqi domestic law if the draft law on the status of UK forces currently before the Iraq Parliament is not brought into effect by 1 January 2009. [246828]

Mr. Hutton: UK forces in Iraq have the legal basis they need to complete their tasks. On 1 January 2009, Iraqi Council of Representatives Resolution 50/2008 came into effect, authorising the temporary presence of UK forces in Iraq and providing specific legally-binding jurisdictional immunities for UK personnel as set out in the Iraqi Council of Ministers Resolution 439/2008. On the same date, a Government-to-Government Memorandum of Understanding came into effect, setting out the tasks that the Government of Iraq have requested that we continue and complete by 31 May 2009.

I am placing copies of the texts of both resolutions and the Memorandum of Understanding in the Library of the House.

Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British service personnel have been (a) injured and (b) killed by friendly fire in Iraq since 2003. [240350]

Mr. Hutton: Records show that eight members of the UK armed forces have been killed as a result of friendly fire incidents in Iraq since 2003, although it is not always possible in each and every case precisely to determine the cause of death. Details of the number of UK military personnel injured by friendly fire incidents are not recorded centrally.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what equipment he plans to gift to Iraq once Operation Archive is under way. [244622]

Mr. Hutton: As the Prime Minister said in his statement to the House on 18 December, we plan to reduce force levels in Iraq as we complete our remaining key tasks in Basra in the early months of next year. Planning for the withdrawal of UK forces continues and any proposal to gift equipment to Iraq would follow established procedures.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK armed forces bases have been established in Southern Iraq in each year since 2003; what the (a) location and (b) names of each is; and on which date each was vacated. [245226]

Mr. Hutton: The UK armed forces bases established and subsequently vacated in Iraq since 2003 are as follows:

Base name	Year established	Location	Date of vacation
Camp Chindit	2003	Az Zubayr	29 September 2005
Camp Smitty	2004	As Samawaha	30 July 2006
Camp Abu Naji	2003	Maysan	30 August 2006
Old State Building (Al-Saie)	2003	Basrah	20 March 2007
Shaat Al'Arab Hotel	2003	Basrah	8 April 2007
Shaibah Logistics Base	2003	Basrah	24 April 2007
Basra Palace	2003	Basrah	5 September 2007
Contingency Operating Base (COB)	2003	Basrah	UK forces remain in residence

This table does not include details of occasions when UK forces have operated from bases run by other coalition partners. It also does not include details of small temporary operating bases.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many attacks of each type have been launched against UK armed forces bases in southern Iraq since 1 May 2003. [245227]

Mr. Hutton: The following table contains details of all reported attacks against multi-national force bases in MND(SE) since the period requested. To distinguish between attacks against UK bases and those of other coalition partners would incur disproportionate costs.

	Total number of reported attacks[1]
2004	732
2005	111
2006	820
2007	1,374
2008	108

Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability Programme

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what estimate he has made of the effect on the project cost of a later than originally planned in-service date of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability programme; [244573]

(2) when he expects the main decisions on funding for the (a) Fleet Tanker, (b) Fleet Solid Support and (c) Joint Sea-Based Logistic elements of the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability programme to be made. [244574]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) programme is in its assessment phase.

It is MOD policy not to publish in-service dates or project costs, including demonstration and manufacturing costs, while procurement programmes are still in their assessment phase.

We have reviewed the Fleet Tanker element of the MARS programme and have concluded that there is scope for considering alterative approaches to its procurement. We expect to determine a way forward in 2009, after which the main investment decision will be taken. The later classes of MARS ship, Fleet Solid Support and Joint Sea Based Logistic, are at an earlier stage of their procurement than the Fleet Tankers. It is, therefore, too early to determine when their main investment decisions will be taken.

Military Aircraft

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft are in-service with the Royal Air Force, broken down by type. [245062]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The numbers of aircraft in service with the RAF on 31 March 2009 as contained in the latest RAF Management Plan are detailed in the following table:

Aircraft type	Fleet number
Typhoon	54
Tornado GR	136
Tornado F3	64
Harrier	77
Nimrod MR2	15
Nimrod R	3
Nimrod MRA4	1
Tristar	9
VC10	15
Sentry	7
Sentinel	5
Hercules K	14
Hercules J	24
BAe 146	2
BAe 125	6

Aircraft type	Fleet number
Sea King	25
Dominie	9
Hawk T1	107
Hawk T2	4
Tucano	95
Viking	82

These figures are used for planning purposes and the actual numbers of aircraft in service on 31 March 2009 will be dependent on a combination of delivery plans, withdrawals from service and aircraft lost through accidents or other circumstances.

Military Aircraft: Helicopters

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what fleets of helicopters are available to UK armed forces in (a) Afghanistan and (b) Iraq; and what future (i) enhancements to the helicopters and (ii) changes to the number of helicopters are planned by his Department. [244575]

Mr. Hutton: We currently have Apache, Chinook, Lynx and Sea King helicopters deployed in Afghanistan and Merlin, Puma and Lynx helicopters deployed in Iraq. I am withholding the number of helicopters we have deployed or will deploy as release would, or would be likely to prejudice the capability, effectiveness or security of our armed forces.

As I set out in my written ministerial statement on 11 December 2008, Official Report, columns 65-67W, we intend to upgrade 12 Lynx Mk9 helicopters with new T800 engines in order to enhance the capability of those helicopters to operate effectively in Afghanistan. We already have work in hand to revert eight Chinook Mk3 aircraft to deliver additional capability from late 2009 and I have set out our intention to deliver additional Apache capability to Afghanistan and switch the Merlin Force there once its mission in Iraq is complete.

Military Aircraft: Procurement

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Future Lynx aircraft his Department plans to procure; and if he will make a statement. [245105]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Under the revised arrangements for the Future Lynx project announced on 11 December 2008, Official Report, columns 65-66WS, we now plan to buy 34 Future Lynx helicopters for the Army and 28 for the Royal Navy. These new arrangements will provide increased commonality leading to greater versatility and flexibility. The In-Service dates remain as 2014 and 2015 respectively.

Military Aircraft: Warships

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to allow French (a) fixed-wing and (b) rotary-wing aircraft on (i) HMS Prince of Wales and (ii) HMS Queen Elizabeth. [245993]

Mr. Quentin Davies: While there are currently no plans for French aircraft to operate from HMS Prince of Wales or HMS Queen Elizabeth, it is standard practice for fixed wing and rotary wing aircraft from allied nations to embark each other's ships for training purposes.

Nimrod MRA4 Aircraft

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) adopting and (b) maintaining annually the (i) Nimrod MRA4 platform and (ii) American Rivet Joint for his Department's purposes; [244033]

(2) how many jobs would be (a) created and (b) maintained as a result of ordering the Nimrod MRA4 aircraft; [244034]

(3) what estimate he has made of the service life of the (a) Nimrod MRA4 and (b) American Rivet Joint aircraft; and if he will make a statement; [244035]

(4) what range of attack weapons the (a) Nimrod MRA4 and (b) American Rivet Joint aircraft can carry. [244036]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The Nimrod Maritime Reconnaissance and Attack (MRA4) and the US Rivet Joint aircraft perform entirely different functions.

The MRA4 aircraft is being procured to provide maritime patrol, anti-shipping, anti-submarine and search and rescue capability. It will take over from the Nimrod Maritime Reconnaissance (MR2) aircraft. The cost of the programme for the nine MRA4 aircraft currently on order is some £3.6 billion. Support costs are currently being examined. When it comes into service, the MRA4 will carry Stingray torpedoes but through life it can be adapted to carry an extensive range of weapons and equipment including anti-ship and anti-submarine weapon systems. Its current estimated service life is 25 years. We estimate that there are around 800 jobs associated with MRA4 production at Woodford working for the contractor, BAE Systems.

The US Rivet Joint system provides an integrated airborne electronic surveillance capability. It is not equipped with attack weapons. The costs of adopting and maintaining the Rivet Joint aircraft to meet the UK's Helix airborne electronic surveillance requirement are being assessed, along with those of using the Nimrod MRA4 and Nimrod R1 platforms, as part of the preparations for a main investment decision expected in 2009. The Helix programme envisages the provision of capability out to the 2025 period.

Nuclear Accident Response Organisation: Airwave Service

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Airwave handsets issued to the Nuclear Accident Response Organisation have been lost in each year since their introduction; and how many handsets issued to the organisation have been disabled by the service provider through (a) loss, (b) breakage and (c) other reasons in each such year; [246181]

(2) how many Airwave handsets issued to (a) the Ministry of Defence Police and (b) the Ministry of Defence Guard Service have been lost in each year since their introduction; and how many handsets issued to each service have been disabled by the service provider through (i) loss, (ii) breakage and (iii) other reasons in each such year; [246182]

(3) how many Airwave handsets issued to armed forces units based on the UK mainland have been lost in each year since their introduction; and how many handsets issued to UK-based forces have been disabled by the service provider through (a) loss, (b) breakage and (c) other reasons in each such year. [246183]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: No Airwave handsets have been lost by the Nuclear Accident Response Organisation.

The number of Airwave handsets reported as lost by the Ministry of Defence Police, the Ministry of Defence Guard Service and armed forces units based on the UK mainland is as follows:

	2005		2006		2007		2008
	Lost	Recovered	Lost	Recovered	Lost	Recovered	Lost	Recovered
Ministry of Defence Police	8	5	14	7	33	26	18	15
Ministry of Defence Guard Service	—	—	0	n/a	3	2	2	1
Armed Forces	5	4	2	0	6	2	15	6

n/a = Not applicable.
Note:
MGS received Airwave Radios in 2006.

Airwave handsets are disabled within one hour of being reported lost.

Records of airwave handsets reported damaged or with technical failures are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All repairable handsets are not disabled but are repaired and reconfigured for use.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to the answer of 1 July 2008, Official Report, column 754W, on nuclear submarines, on what date the number of operative submarine berths at Southampton was increased from one to two; and when such berths were redesignated from Z to operational submarine berths. [244580]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The number of berths, as determined by the Port Authority at Southampton, has always been two; but they are only cleared to support one submarine at any one time. With respect to when berths were re-designated from Z to Operational submarine berth, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 June 2008, Official Report, column 849W.

Nuclear Weapons: Testing

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason his Department commissioned an exercise to decontaminate the atomic test sites on Kiritimati in 2005. [246872]

Mr. Kevan Jones: Work on Kiritimati Island was commissioned in response to a request from the Government of Kiribati for the removal of the military waste (not necessarily decontamination) resulting from military activity during the 1950s and 1960s.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what levels of radioactivity were recorded during the 2005 decontamination exercise on Kiritimati; what materials were recovered during the exercise; what types of contamination were removed from the island; and at what levels. [246874]

Mr. Kevan Jones: Removal of waste arising from the UK nuclear weapons test programme on the island of Kiritimati was undertaken between 2005 and 2008. Previous survey work had identified elevated levels of radioactivity associated with the presence of radium-226, commonly used to luminise vehicle instruments at the time of the test programme, but no other elevated levels of radioactivity substances were identified during the 2005 and 2008 programme.

The materials (including non-radioactive) comprised approximately:

	Cubic metres/kg
Bitumen	15,000 cubic metres
Metal items	25,000 cubic metres
Rubber	150 cubic metres
Asbestos	150 cubic metres
Radium luminised dials	175 kg

A total of 111 individual locations were identified where elevated levels of radioactivity associated with radium-226 were present. Removal of the radium required both the actual instrument and a small quantity of soil to be taken from the site.

The highest radioactive material fell into the low level waste category.

All of the sites were extremely localised with radium-226 restricted to an area of no more than a few square metres.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246348]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The information is not held centrally in the form requested. The Department's policy for recruitment follows the Civil Service Management Code. A criminal conviction or prison sentence does not in itself prevent an individual from being employed by the Department: decisions are based on suitability for employment based on the nature of any convictions and the role for which they are being considered, and taking into account legal requirements concerning rehabilitation of offenders. The details of the character enquiries which would show unspent convictions are held on individual personal files, and the number of those who may have served a prison sentence could be established only at disproportionate cost.

Operation Atlanta

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all vessels comprising the EU Operation Atlanta under the command of Rear Admiral Phil Jones fly the European Union flag; and from what position the flag is displayed on each vessel. [245225]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: On 3 December the EU Force Commander of Operation Atlanta issued an instruction to the EU task force that all vessels in the force should fly the European Union flag in addition to their national ensigns.

The EU flag will be flown from the yard arm; this is the position in which the NATO flag would be flown if the vessels were participating in a NATO operation. National ensigns will continue to be flown from the number one position on the stern or main mast.

Peace Operations Training Centre

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to support the Peace Operations Training Centre in Sarajevo after responsibility for running the centre has been transferred to the Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities. [244534]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The Peace Support Operations Training Centre in Sarajevo is a UK-led organisation that is owned and managed jointly with Bosnia and Herzegovina and 13 other international partners. A date for the transfer of ownership to Bosnia and Herzegovina has yet to be agreed formally but is not likely to be before 2013. Subject to our partners' agreement we expect the UK to remain the lead nation until then. It is too early at this stage to consider what our involvement might be after that date.

Reserve Forces: Deployment

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average amount of time was between the first contact signalling activation of a reserve member of the armed forces and that individual's mobilisation date in each year since 2000. [246700]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The information requested is not held. I can confirm that in preparation for Operation TELIC in 2003 large numbers of Reservists were called out, some at very short notice. This was because the rapidly developing situation in Iraq at that time required us to act quickly and we were not able to give as much notice to Reservists as we would have wished. Since then, the mobilisation process now ensures that Reserve units receive advance notice that they will be required to provide individuals to support a specific operation (this can be up to six months notice). More importantly, once Reservists have been selected for mobilisation, we have tried to ensure that, whenever possible, a minimum notice of 28 days is given to the individual and his employer before the Reservist reports for duty. In many cases it is far more than 28 days. However, it must be accepted that the nature of military operations means that inevitably individuals may receive less notice of mobilisation due to rapidly changing requirements.

Reserve Forces: Training

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions individual reservists' scheduled two-week training camps have been rescheduled within two months of the scheduled date in each year since 2000. [246702]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The information requested is not held.

Security: Airports

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of security measures at British airports, with particular reference to those used for departures of flights transporting troops overseas. [245863]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: All commercial flights departing the UK are regulated by the National Aviation Security Programme and are subject to routine inspection, audits and tests by the Department for Transport, as well as inspection by EC officials. The security measures applied at airports used for troop movements are commensurate with the current threat.

Somalia: Piracy

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what circumstances the cost of pirates arrested by British units off Somalia may be delivered to (a) countries where attached vessels are registered, (b) countries where capital punishment is possible, (c) the UK, (d) jurisdictions within the EU, (e) the UN and (f) a third party. [243699]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Every incident of piracy is different and the decision over the transfer of suspected pirates to a third party state, or to bring them back to the UK for prosecution, will always be considered on a case by case basis.

Nevertheless, the UK transfers to third party states in accordance with its international law obligations and will always seek assurances of fair treatment and international standards of human rights.

The UK recently set up an arrangement with the Kenyan government which allows the transfer of suspected pirates to Kenya for prosecution. This can be called upon when necessary.

Submarines: Construction

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of how the building process of the Trident II will affect the building process of the Astute-class SSNs. [244743]

Mr. Hutton: Current departmental plans expect that construction of the successor to Vanguard class submarines will occur in parallel with construction of later Astute Class Submarines. The lessons learnt from the Astute programme are being applied to the design and build phase of the successor programme. Any opportunities arising from the successor programme that may benefit the Astute Class will be considered as part of normal business between closely related programmes.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Trident II systems his Department is planning to build; and what his estimate is of the interval between the delivery of each Trident II. [244762]

Mr. Hutton: The Trident II D5 ballistic missile is the delivery system for the UK's nuclear deterrent that is carried by our Vanguard-class submarines. It is an evolutionary development of the Trident IC4 missile that the UK originally planned to procure but was superseded by a decision in 1982 to procure the Trident II D5 missile. As we made clear in the December 2006 White Paper: "The Future of the United Kingdom's Nuclear Deterrent" (Cm 6994), we are participating in a programme to extend the life of the Trident II D5 missile until around 2042.

With regard to the new class of submarines to replace the Vanguard-class, as we have previously stated, the first of class is forecast to enter service in around 2024. Also, as explained in the December 2006 White Paper, a final decision on the number of submarines that will be procured will be made when we know more about their detailed design. That decision will determine the timetable for entry into service of further submarines.

Submarines: Safety

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department is planning to spend on submarine safety, with particular reference to (a) hull structure, (b) hydromechanics and (c) maritime life support in each of the next five years. [244736]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Maintaining safety is an integral part of all aspects of submarine development, procurement, operation and support, whether carried out by the MOD, its contractors or the Royal Navy. The total MOD expenditure on submarine safety cannot therefore be distinguished from the wider costs of the submarine programme.

Information about expenditure that relates only to safety is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Territorial Army: Manpower

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the strength of the Territorial Army has been in each of the last 10 years. [245114]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Armed Forces Personnel Statistics are published annually by the Defence Analytical Services and Advice (DASA) and copies are placed in the Library. The requested figures are available within DASA's Tri-Service Publication Number 7 (TSP07—UK Reserves and Cadets Strengths) reports at the following website address:

www.dasa.mod.uk/natstats/natstatsindex.html

The latest edition containing figures as at 1 April 2008 was published on 3 October 2008.

Trident Submarines: Maintenance

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the maintenance cost of Trident submarines in (a) 2013-14 and (b) each of the next five years. [246939]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The estimated maintenance costs of Vanguard class submarines in 2013-14 and each of the next five years, which cover fleet maintenance and capital expenditure incurred as part of the Long Overhaul Period (Refuel) maintenance programme, are:

	Total (£ million)
2013-14	161
2014-15	148
2015-16	118
2016-17	163
2017-18	142
2018-19	137

Veterans Policy Unit: Finance

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much and what proportion of its staffing budget for 2007-08 the Veterans' Policy Unit spent in Scotland; and what the equivalent figures were for (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06 and (c) 2006-07. [241119]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Veterans Policy Unit has not employed any staff in Scotland in any of these years.

Veterans: Pensions

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many veterans are members of (a) Armed Forces Pension Scheme 75 and (b) Armed Forces Pension Scheme 05. [244827]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The number of veterans belonging to the Armed Forces Pension Schemes (AFPS) 1975 and 2005 as at 31 March 2008 is shown in the following table.

Pension scheme	Pensioners[1]	Deferred[2]
AFPS 1975	363,087	—
AFPS 2005	674	—
Gurkhas and Minor Schemes	26,488	—
Total	390,249	324,002

[1] Pensioners are those who have left the service, their spouses and dependants, who are in receipt of a pension.

[2] Deferred are preserved pensions that are payable when an individual reaches the age of 60 (AFPS 1975) or 65 (AFPS 2005). A separate breakdown of personnel who are deferred members of AFPS 1975, AFPS 2005 and the Gurkhas and Minor Schemes cannot currently be provided.

Warships

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in deciding where to baseport the Royal Navy's frigates. [246099]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The scope of work carried out at the three naval bases (Portsmouth, Devonport and Clyde), including the base porting of Royal Navy vessels, is currently being considered as part of the Maritime Change Programme. This work is now reaching a conclusion although we need to ensure that final decisions are fully aligned with the recently announced changes to the equipment programme. An announcement on the Maritime Change Programme will be made as soon as is practicable.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Biomass

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how his Department plans to assess the sustainability of large-scale wood biomass energy plants of 50 megawatts and over; and if he will take into account that assessment in the potential impact on UK wood processing industries of large biomass plants purchasing their feedstock from UK wood markets. [244240]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As part of the reforms to the renewables obligation (RO) to take effect on 1 April 2009, we are introducing a sustainability reporting requirement for all plants using biomass to generate electricity with a net capacity greater than 50kW. Generators will be required to provide information including the type and origin of the biomass used, and whether it was certified under an environmental quality assurance scheme.

The Government recognise that sustainability includes whether using particular types of biomass for electricity generation is the best use to which it can be put, and that this is a particular concern where there are other industries that already make sustainable use of all or most of the available supply. We will continue to monitor the sustainability of biomass use for electricity generation through the above information provided by generators. In addition, the Government are engaging with the European Commission process to establish sustainability criteria for biomass for heat and power.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether (a) the effect on existing wood industries and (b) the sustainability of material is taken into account in deciding whether to grant planning permission for large-scale biomass energy projects of 50 megawatts and over. [244241]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The sourcing and purchasing of biomass for power generation is a matter for the developer. However, previous biomass generating stations consented by the Secretary of State have included conditions aimed at ensuring only sustainable biomass is used. The Government are also introducing a sustainability reporting requirement for generators using biomass to generate electricity with a net capacity greater than 50kW, to take effect from 1 April 2009, as part of the reform of the renewables obligation.

Carbon Emissions: EU Action

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the Prime Minister's Statement on the EU Council Afghanistan, India and Pakistan of 15 December 2008, Official Report, columns 814-17, what the financial mechanism is to make available funds for the commercial demonstration of carbon capture and storage (CCS) technology; how much of the nine billion euro of such funding will be contributed by the United Kingdom; and when he expects the first CCS demonstration project to be commissioned. [245507]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 17 December 2008 the European Parliament passed the directive governing phase III of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme (ETS), which will make available until 31 December 2015 up to 300 million free allowances from the new entrants' reserve for the construction and operation of up to 12 demonstration projects of carbon capture and storage (CCS) and innovative renewable energy projects. This does not require member states to make individual contributions, although any one project may claim only a maximum of 15 per cent. of the total number of allowances and projects must be co-financed by the operator. The total amount of funding that will be made available for CCS depends on the carbon price and the number of CCS projects that are put forward by the member states. The criteria for allocating allowances to projects will be determined over the next few months, but the aim of the mechanism is to stimulate investments in projects which will be operational by 2015.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 15 December 2008, Official Report, column 76WS, on the EU Energy Council, if he will (a) place in the Library and (b) post on his departmental website copies of the documents presented to the meeting by the Presidency and European Commission respectively; and if he will make a statement on the Government's responses to the proposals. [245607]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The documents relating to the Energy and Climate Change package, the Second Strategic European Energy Review and energy efficiency were all placed in the Library when they were first published, with Explanatory Memoranda, which set out the UK's initial position.

The documents relating to the issues discussed at the Energy Council can all be found on the European Commission's website through links on the European energy pages of the Department of Energy and Climate Change's website.

Carbon Emissions: Standards

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change by what date he expects legislation to be passed to implement the 20 per cent. increase in the carbon emissions reduction target announced by the Prime Minister on 11 September 2008. [242500]

Joan Ruddock: The amendment to the Electricity and Gas (Carbon Emissions Reduction) Order 2008 is subject to statutory consultation followed by debate in both Houses. We intend to consult on the proposed amendments early next year, with a view to completing the legislative process by the summer recess.

Climate Change and Energy Programme

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether his Department is contributing (a) resources and (b) personnel to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Climate Change and Energy Programme; and if he will make a statement. [243943]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department of Energy and Climate Change works closely with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on international climate change and energy issues, but is not currently contributing resources or personnel to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Climate Change and Energy Programme.

Coal: Prices

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the change in the price of domestic coal has been in each year since 2004; and if he will make a statement. [246396]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The annual change in the price of domestic coal from 2004 is shown in the following table:

Coal and smokeless fuels, Retail Price Index (RPI)

	Cash Terms		Real Terms
	Index 1990=100	Percentage change	Index 1990=100	Percentage change
2004	151.7	—	102.3	—
2005	167.1	10.1	110.2	7.7
2006	179.6	7.5	115.4	4.8
2007	192.5	7.2	120.3	4.2

Annual figures for 2008 are not yet available. The RPI for coal and smokeless fuels increased by 29.3 per cent in cash terms between January and November 2008.

Departmental Air Travel

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many journeys (a) he and his predecessors and (b) his officials have made by aeroplane in the course of their duties since his Department's inception. [246773]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is not possible to answer this question without incurring disproportionate costs. Travel by Ministers and civil servants is undertaken in accordance with the "Ministerial Code" and the "Civil Service Management Code" respectively.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what contracts to which his Department is a party continue beyond 1 July 2010. [242148]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department is not at present party to any contracts which continue beyond 1 July 2010, as the Transfer of Function Order related to the creation of DECC has not yet come into force. Existing contracts related to energy and climate change matters will remain with BERR and DEFRA respectively until the Transfer of Function Order comes into force.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244703]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/peers correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House. When responding to all correspondence, the Department abides by the guidance as set out in "Handling correspondence from MPs, Lords, MEPs and Members of Devolved Assemblies" which was published by the Cabinet Office in July 2005.

In respect of e-mails, the Department is not be able to provide the information within the disproportionate cost limit (£750) as to do so would require gathering information from every official in the Department.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what his Department's budget is for financial years (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11; and if he will make a statement. [243944]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) was formed on 3 October 2008. Negotiations with the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BERR) and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) on the machinery of government changes are ongoing. The budgets for DECC will be determined once negotiations are complete.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how much has been spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms since it was established. [244344]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department has not purchased any furniture since its formation on 3 October 2008.

Departmental Internet

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how much has been spent on the design and implementation of his Department's website to date; how much is forecast to be spent on the migration of relevant information on websites belonging to the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs; when he expects such migration to occur; and if he will make a statement. [246357]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department of Energy and Climate Change's interim website is hosted by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, and has not required any expenditure by the Department. The Department is in the process of procuring a new website. The process for any content migration that may be required in replacing the relevant parts of other Departments' websites, and any associated costs, are still under consideration.

Departmental Official Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what records his Department maintains of its expenditure on (a) official hospitality and (b) alcohol for official hospitality. [240473]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) was created on 3 October 2008, bringing together staff from the Climate Change Group of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) and from the Energy Group of the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BERR). DECC at present makes use of the BERR and DEFRA accounting systems. In the case of both BERR and DEFRA accounting systems, expenditure on official hospitality is recorded as an account code. All expenditure, including that on official hospitality, is incurred, and recorded, in accordance with the principles of Managing Public Money and the Treasury Handbook on Regularity and Propriety. Expenditure on alcohol for official hospitality is not distinguished from other expenditure on official hospitality in the accounting systems.

Departmental Pay

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many people his Department employs who receive a salary of over £100,000 per annum. [245875]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department of Energy and Climate Change does not employ any staff until it is formally constituted via the Transfer of Functions Order and Parliament votes a supply via the Spring Supplementary Estimate. Details of staff transferring from the Departments for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform are also still being finalised. Until these Machinery of Government changes have been completed, I am unable to answer this question.

Departmental Responsibilities

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the cost of establishing his Department has been; and how much has been spent on (a) relocation, (b) the logo, stationery, building signs and electronic media, (c) fees paid to advisers and consultants on establishment and (d) other transition costs. [246356]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To date, the cost of establishing the Department have been: (a) £54,000 on relocating and establishing staff in the new Department Headquarters in 3 Whitehall Place; (b) £18,000 on logo design, branding, signage and pull-up displays.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by his Department for public access to services. [246975]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: None.

Energy Supply

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change if he will place in the Library a copy of written advice he received from officials on competition issues prior to the meeting he held with main energy supply companies on 17 November 2008. [242485]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement of 18 November in which I reported to the House on the outcome of the 17 November meeting.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what steps the Government is taking to ensure that energy suppliers in (a) the UK, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency do not increase their distant profits through increases to direct debit payments. [245841]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (Ofgem) is responsible for regulating gas and electricity supply in Great Britain. Responsibility for gas and electricity supply in Northern Ireland is devolved. Ofgem is currently considering the representations it has received from customers and others about suppliers' reassessments of the levels of direct debits, and is seeking explanations from suppliers. It will decide what, if any, action it should take in the light of that consideration.

Energy: Conservation

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what assessment he has made of the robustness of the UK MARKAL model on least cost optimisation of energy use, as used by his Department; and whether the MARKAL model is made available to (a) academic institutions, (b) non-governmental organisations and (c) other external bodies. [245614]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In the last five years, the UK MARKAL model has been substantially upgraded allowing improved modelling of macro economic impacts and with particular emphasis on cost data. The work undertaken has been peer reviewed both in the academic community and in workshops and the model is considered state of the art. Model outputs have appeared in peer reviewed journals.

The model is available for use by anyone who is prepared to pay the licence fees and sign the memorandum of understanding which ensures transparency of use and a contribution to the modelling community.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the Government's targets are for reducing fuel poverty; what changes have been made to these targets since October 2008; what discussions he has had with (a) the Chancellor of the Exchequer and (b) other Ministers on this issue since October 2008; what recent representations he has received on fuel poverty; and if he will make a statement. [245082]

Joan Ruddock: The Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act 2000 requires the Government to ensure, so far as reasonably practicable, persons do not live in fuel poverty. This Act (and the Fuel Poverty Strategy published under the Act) sets a target date of 2010 for the eradication of fuel poverty, so far as reasonably practicable, for vulnerable households, and 2016 for all households.

These targets were set when the strategy was first published in November 2001. These targets have not been amended since that date.

In October of this year, Friends of the Earth and Help the Aged brought a judicial review action against the Secretary of State alleging that he was failing to fulfil his statutory duties under the Act. The High Court dismissed this application. However, this decision is being appealed by Friends of the Earth and Help the Aged. The Secretary of State has received a skeleton argument from Friends of the Earth and Help the Aged which sets out the arguments in support of their appeal.

Ministers in the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) have regular discussions with colleagues in other Departments with responsibility for aspects of fuel poverty policy including those in HM Treasury.

Fuel Poverty: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what steps he is taking to reduce fuel poverty in Peterborough by 2010; and if he will make a statement. [244137]

Joan Ruddock: Tackling fuel poverty is a priority for the Government. Since 2000, the Government have spent £20 billion on fuel poverty benefits and programmes.

The UK Fuel Poverty Strategy was published in November 2001 and sets out the approach of the Government (and the Devolved Administrations) for tackling fuel poverty. The latest version of the Fuel Poverty Strategy reflects the requirements of the Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act to do all that is reasonably practicable to end fuel poverty among vulnerable households by 2010.

The Government's Sixth Annual Progress Report on Fuel Poverty shows that, in England, the overall number of households estimated to be in fuel poverty in 2006 is 2.4 million of which around 1.9 million are vulnerable. This represents a rise of 900,000 households since 2005 and a rise of 700,000 vulnerable households over the same period.

Since 2000 Warm Front has been the Government's main scheme to tackle fuel poverty in private sector households to improve the energy efficiency of properties. Since 2000 Warm Front has assisted 1341 households, investing a total of £1,795,962.34 on insulation and/or heating in Peterborough.

Fuel Poverty: Tendring

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what assessment he has made of progress towards the elimination of fuel poverty in vulnerable households in Tendring by 2010; and if he will make a statement. [242614]

Joan Ruddock: Tackling fuel poverty is a priority for the Government. Since 2000, the Government have spent £20 billion on fuel poverty benefits and programmes.

The UK Fuel Poverty Strategy was published in November 2001 and sets out the approach of the Government (and the devolved Administrations) for tackling fuel poverty. The latest version of the Fuel Poverty Strategy reflects the requirements of the Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act to do all that is reasonably practicable to end fuel poverty among vulnerable households by 2010.

The Government's Sixth Annual Progress Report on Fuel Poverty shows that, in England, the overall number of households estimated to be in fuel poverty in 2006 was 2.4 million, of which around 1.9 million were vulnerable. This represents a rise of 900,000 households since 2005 and a rise of 700,000 vulnerable households over the same period.

Since 2000, Warm Front has been the Government's main scheme to tackle fuel poverty in private sector households to improve the energy efficiency of properties. Since 2005, Warm Front has assisted 3,254 households with insulation and/or heating in Tendring.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the waiting time for emergency work to be carried out under the Warm Front scheme is; and if he will make a statement. [243817]

Joan Ruddock: Warm Front is not designed to be, and cannot act as, an emergency service.

Currently, eaga plc, the Scheme Manager, has a target timescale for performing the survey on a property of 21 working days following application. Following this survey, where a heating measure has been recommended the Scheme Manager has a target to complete this work within 120 working days. In practice most measures are installed well within this timeframe, with a current average waiting time for a survey of less than 10 days, and a further average waiting time of less than 66 days for the installation of a heating measure this year.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme: Essex

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change when he expects works under the (a) Warm Front and (b) over seventies scheme in Essex to restart; and if he will make a statement. [243813]

Joan Ruddock: Warm Front is an ongoing process. We are aware that the Scheme Manager eaga plc, did, with the Department's knowledge, stop allocating work for a five day period between 3 and 9 November while a new computer upgrade was being implemented. This is now fully operational and work is being allocated an usual.

The over seventies scheme in Essex is almost certainly part of the Carbon Emissions Reduction Target (CERT), which commenced in April and operates throughout Great Britain. CERT places an obligation on energy suppliers to meet targets through encouraging households to take up energy efficiency measures. It is at suppliers' discretion how they meet their targets, but they will typically use subsidised offers to promote key measures such as loft and cavity wall insulation, and high-efficiency lights and appliances.

Suppliers must focus 40 per cent. of their activity on a priority group of vulnerable and low-income households, which includes those over 70. All six major household energy suppliers currently offer priority group households free loft insulation (where less than 60mm already exists) and free cavity wall insulation, subject to a survey of the property.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change when the Minister of State plans to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 21 October 2008 on the monopoly of storage banks. [242435]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 11 December 2008]: Unfortunately DECC has no record of having received correspondence from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire dated 21 October 2008 on this subject. My officials have been in contact with the hon. Member's constituency office to request a copy of the letter.

Mental Illness

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what assessment he has made of the recommendations relevant to his Department's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capacity and Well-Being; and if he will make a statement. [244019]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department was pleased to receive the Foresight report and will be considering it with a view to taking up any relevant findings.

Part of that process will involve an assessment of what the report might mean for DECC's policies.

Microgeneration

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what plans are in place to implement a micro-generation strategy across all government buildings; and what the budget is for this work. [244786]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department provides grant funding for the installation of microgeneration technologies to public sector and charitable bodies through Phase 2 of the Low Carbon Buildings Programme. This is a £50 million grant scheme that runs until June 2009. More information is available from the scheme's website at:

www.lowcarbonbuildingsphase2.org.uk.

The Government have a target to reduce carbon emissions from the Government estate by 12.5 per cent. by 2010-11—the sustainable operations on the Government estate (SOGE) target. The Office of Government Commerce (OGC) Centre of Expertise in Sustainable Procurement (CESP) asks Departments to submit details of the plans they have established to meet this target.

The on-site generation plans that have been reported to the OGC are forecast to save over 7,000 tonnes of CO_2. The Government Delivery Plan Update, which was published on 18 December 2008 and is available from the OGC website:

contains details of departmental plans to deliver this SOGE target.

A number of Departments have already reported plans to install on-site generation technologies, some of which include microgeneration technologies. For example, the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform will be installing solar photovoltaic (PV) panels; the Department for International Development are undertaking two projects—a wind turbine and a biomass installation; the Department for Transport will be installing a second combined heat and power (CHP) plant; the Department for Work and Pensions plan to install a wind turbine; the Foreign and Commonwealth Office have plans for a biomass project and a wind turbine project; and HM Revenue and Customs plan a mixture of biomass and wind turbine projects.

DECC also plans to consider options for microgeneration on its own estate, as part of a wider strategy to improve the energy efficiency and wider sustainability of the Department.

National Grid: Standards

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change on how many occasions the system frequency of the UK electricity system has been outside the limits specified in the Electricity Supply Regulations in each of the last 10 years. [242501]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The system frequency of the UK electricity system has been outside the limits specified in the electricity supply regulations twice in the last 10 year—on 27 May 2008 for nine minutes and on 26 May 2003 for 12 seconds.

Prior to May 2008, the previous reportable frequency deviation was in February 1996, which was for three minutes.

Nuclear Liabilities Fund

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what his most recent estimate is of the monetary value of the Nuclear Liabilities Fund. [242504]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As at 31 March 2008, the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BERR) estimated the value of the assets held by the Nuclear Liabilities Fund (NLF) at £7.8 billion, based on the share price of British Energy at that time. Since then, HMG has committed to sell the NLF's stake in British Energy to EdF for the cash offer price of 774p per share. Assuming the sale completes, this would take the value of the NLF's assets to around £8 billion.

Nuclear Power: Finance

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change with reference to the remarks by the Minister of State for Energy on 19 November 2008, Official Report, column 123WH, on nuclear industry finance, for what reasons a copy of the departmental minute on Sellafield indemnification was not placed in the Library following the letter of 14 July; and for what reasons the placement of the letter was checked in October 2008. [244565]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As I explained during the Westminster Hall debate on 19 November 2008, Official Report, columns 119-26WH; the letter, from my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Energy to the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, was not placed in the Library in July because of an administrative error.

Policy officials sought confirmation that the letter had been placed in the Library in October when my hon. Friend raised this as an issue. The letter was placed in the Library on the day the error was discovered.

Nuclear Power: Insurance

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change which insurance companies insure nuclear installations owned by the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority; in what country or countries they are based; and what criteria were applied in their selection. [244589]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority arranges insurance for its nuclear installations with the following insurers:

Type of insurance	Insurer	Domicile
All Risks including Machinery Breakdown and Business Interruption	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Construction All Risks	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Nuclear Site Liability	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Nuclear Marine Transit Liability	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Liability Package	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Primary Public/Products Liability	CNA Insurance Company (Europe) Ltd.	UK
Excess General Public/Products Liability	QBE Insurance Group Ltd.	UK
	AIG UK Ltd.	UK
Radiation Liability	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Employers' Liability	AIG UK Ltd	UK
Motor Accidental Damage, Fire and Theft	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
UK Motor Third Party Liability	Royal and Sun Alliance Insurance plc	UK
Group Sickness	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Group Life	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Personal Accident and Travel	Royal and Sun Alliance Insurance plc	UK
Marine Package	Rutherford Indemnity Ltd.	Guernsey
Third Party Airside Liability	Lloyd's underwriters	UK

Rutherford Indemnity Ltd. is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority. The key criteria that the NDA uses in assessing potential insurers is value for money.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change with reference to his statement of 19 November 2008, Official Report, column 126WH, on nuclear industry finance, what additional assessment the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority made of the availability of private sector insurance for the public body to manage Sellafield. [244591]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Sellafield site is managed by Sellafield Ltd., a company not a public body. The low level waste repository facility near Drigg is similarly managed by a private company. It was necessary to provide the contractor for this facility with a nuclear indemnity but before doing so I am told that the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) approached the private nuclear insurance market in 2007 in connection with insurance for nuclear liability claims to courts outside the UK and not party to the Paris and Brussels Convention. It became clear from these discussions that commercial insurers were not prepared to quote on these potential liability claims. This established an insurance industry position in principle, in light of which the NDA and its professional advisors concluded that the position that insurers would take on the specific issue at Sellafield was clear and therefore no additional conversations were required.

River Severn: Tidal Power

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate DTZ made of the (a) employment cost and (b) cost to the local economy of the Cardiff-Weston Barrage in its economic impact assessment presented to the Severn Tidal Power Feasibility Study; and if he will make a statement. [246400]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The aim of the DTZ study is to provide an initial assessment of the potential economic impacts of proposed Severn Tidal Power schemes, including a Cardiff-Weston barrage, on the regional economies of Wales and the South West of England. In assessing economic impact the study has focused on those sectors that are expected to be most significantly impacted by tidal power development. Where possible, impacts have been quantified in terms of employment and gross value added variances.

I plan to consult on the interim findings of the Severn Tidal Power feasibility study early in the new year; the DTZ report will be published at the same time.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change which consultants have been commissioned to work on the Severn Tidal Power Feasibility Study; in what area of work each has been commissioned; and when he plans to publish their reports. [246401]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: A consortium led by Parsons Brinckerhoff were awarded the contract to manage a Strategic Environmental Assessment (SEA) of the Severn Estuary and initial technical options assessment.

In addition, PricewaterhouseCoopers were appointed to advise on how a Severn tidal power scheme could be financed, the potential ownership options and possible government support mechanisms. DTZ were also appointed in collaboration with MDS Transmodal and Arthur D. Little to undertake an initial assessment of the potential regional economic impacts of a Severn tidal power scheme.

Subject to internal review these reports will be published alongside the public consultation in early 2009.

Sellafield

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the monetary value is of the contract signed between the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority and the Nuclear Management Partners for the management of Sellafield; for what period the contract will last; what options for its extension are contained in the contract; and what provision there is in the contract for the foreign corporate partners to repatriate any profits to the US and France respectively. [244227]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Under the terms of the Parent Body Agreement signed with the NDA, Nuclear Management Partners (NMP) and Sellafield Ltd., NMP was appointed as the Parent Body Organisation and owner of the shareholding in Sellafield Ltd. on 24 November 2008. The Parent Body Agreement, which has no direct monetary value, is for an initial term of five years. The agreement contains extension options for two further five-year terms and one two-year term, totalling a potential 17 years, which the NDA is entitled to exercise in any order. During this contract period, NMP are entitled to receive dividends based on the fee earned by the Site Licence Company (SLC), Sellafield Ltd. This fee is dependent on the quality and effectiveness of the SLC's performance. The fee is currently anticipated to be worth around £50 million a year. There are no provisions in any of the contracts in relation to the entitlement of foreign corporate partners to repatriate any profits to the US and France respectively.

Voluntary Organisations

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether his Department plans to publish a third sector strategy. [242515]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) was created on 3 October 2008, bringing together the Climate Change Group of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) with the Energy Group of the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BERR). Third sector organisations have a key role in helping us to solve the twin challenges of climate change and energy supply and we are considering the most effective way of working with third sector organisations to achieve our aims, building on DEFRA's Third Sector Strategy, which was published in November 2008, and the focus on the third sector in the BERR Better Regulation Executive's Simplification Plan, which was published in December 2008.

Warm Front Scheme

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change if he will estimate the number of additional households that could be raised out of fuel poverty for each £1 million increase in the planned budget of the Warm Front scheme in the financial years (i) 2009-10 and (ii) 2010-11. [242514]

Joan Ruddock: Based on the existing specification, the Government expect Warm Front to assist between 25,000-30,000 households for every £1 million spent in each of the aforementioned years.

We do not have estimates for the number of these households that will be brought out of fuel poverty. This is because fuel poverty is dependent on variables such as fluctuations in energy prices and household income which are not possible to accurately forecast.

DECC is currently looking closely at the existing eligibility criteria for Warm Front to ensure that we are reaching those most in need. In doing so, we shall be considering the comments and recommendations made in the National Audit Office's Value for Money report on Warm Front which is due to be published in early 2009. Any proposed changes would be announced in due course.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the average waiting time was between applicants applying for assistance under the Warm Front scheme and the delivery of such assistance in the latest period for which figures are available. [246878]

Joan Ruddock: The latest period for which figures are available is 1 April 2008 to 1 November 2008. The average waiting time for heating measures under Warm Front was 66 working days, against a contractual target of 120 working days. The average waiting time for insulation was 38 working days, against a contractual target of 40 working days.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many claims for assistance with heating made through the Warm Front scheme were rejected by his Department in the last period for which figures are available. [246879]

Joan Ruddock: All eligible households that apply to the scheme are entitled to a Warm Front grant. The measures they receive will depend on the heating and insulation requirements of the property.

Warm Front does not record the number of ineligible households that approach the scheme seeking assistance.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many individuals have received assistance from the Warm Front scheme in the last 12 months. [246881]

Joan Ruddock: Between 1 December 2007 and 30 November 2008, 233,178 households received assistance from the Warm Front scheme.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what assessment he has made of the efficiency of the Warm Front scheme in assisting vulnerable individuals who require heating for their homes; and if he will make a statement. [246882]

Joan Ruddock: The National Audit Office (NAO) is currently performing a value for money review of Warm Front. The NAO anticipates publishing its report early this year.

DECC is also currently looking closely at several aspects of the scheme to ensure that we are providing the best value possible to our vulnerable customer base.

Warm Front Scheme: Finance

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how much was allocated by his Department for the Warm Front scheme in the last period for which figures are available. [246880]

Joan Ruddock: The Warm Front budget for the financial year 2008-09 is approximately £395 million.

Warm Front Scheme: Hertfordshire

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many individuals received assistance from the Warm Front scheme in (a) Hemel Hempstead and (b) Hertfordshire in the last year. [246877]

Joan Ruddock: The following table illustrates the number of households who received Warm Front Grants in (a) Hemel Hempstead and (b) Hertfordshire between 1 April 2007 and 30 March 2008.

Households assisted

	Number
Hemel Hempstead	349
Hertfordshire	2,233

2008 National Capabilities Survey

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the 2008 National Capabilities Survey. [245640]

Dawn Primarolo: The 2008 National Capabilities Survey (NCS) is not a document, it is a process by which the national extent of emergency preparedness is surveyed and assessed. For reasons of national security, it would not be appropriate to publish the detailed findings of the NCS or place the NHS National Report in the Library.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) adults and (b) children were admitted to accident and emergency departments in the north-east after drinking alcohol in each of the last four years. [245805]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many accident and emergency departments there were in NHS organisations in England in the most recent quarter since figures are available from his Department's Quarterly Monitoring of Accident and Emergency Services dataset. [245983]

Mr. Bradshaw: National health service trusts self-report the number of accident and emergency (A&E) services they provide against definitions provided by the Department.

For the quarter ending September 2008, national health service trusts in England self-reported a total of 203 type 1 (major) accident and emergency services.

Alcoholic Drinks: Misuse

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many admissions to hospital in which the patient had a primary or secondary diagnosis which was alcohol related at the start of his or her stay there were in 2007-08, broken down by primary care trust. [244788]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data on admissions in 2007-08 are not yet available. We expect these data to be available early in the new year.

Ambulance Services: East of England

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of ambulances despatched responded within eight minutes of an emergency call in the east of England in each month since May 2005; and if he will make a statement. [244205]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information on performance is published by the Information Centre in the annual statistical bulletin, 'Ambulance Services, England'. Data by month are not available. The annual bulletins are available on the Information Centre for health and social care website at the following links:

'Ambulance Services, England 2005-06' is available at the following:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/audits-and-performance/ambulance/ambulance-services-england-2005-06

'Ambulance Services, England 2006-07' is available at the following:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/audits-and-performance/ambulance/ambulance-services-england-2006-07

'Ambulance Services, England 2007-08' is available at the following:

www.ic.nhs.uk/statistics-and-data-collections/audits-and-performance/ambulance/ambulance-services-england-2007-08.

Ambulance Services: Floods

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his most recent assessment is of the level of readiness of the ambulance service to respond to incidents of flooding; and if he will make a statement. [242715]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under the Civil Contingences Act 2004, ambulance trusts are expected to respond appropriately to civil emergencies, including flooding.

The 2008 National Capability Survey (100 per cent. response from NHS organisations) assessed that the NHS, and particularly ambulance trusts, have contributed to multi-agency Local Resilience Forum (LRF) flood plans which have been submitted to, and reviewed by, the Environment Agency (EA).

NHS ambulance trusts are, therefore, fully involved in the flood planning process, are statutory consultees of the EA, and participate in multi-agency flood related exercises, as well as participating on LRF and associated multi-agency working groups. Recent exercise scenarios have included coastal flooding, tidal surges, fluvial flooding, surface water flooding and flooding caused by torrential rain conditions. "Lessons learned" from these exercises and real flooding events, are used by the Ambulance Service, with the relevant agencies in individual LRFs, to develop specific medical assistance protocols for the care and effective transportation of patients from flooded areas.

Ambulance trusts receive quarterly updates of EA Flood Plans pertinent to their geographic area of operational responsibility.

Ambulance Services: Standards

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the arrival of (a) volunteer responders, (b) paramedics and (c) other ambulance service staff stops the clock for the purposes of recording the ambulance target arrival times. [246552]

Mr. Bradshaw: For the purposes of reporting ambulance response time standards, the 'clock stops' when the first emergency response vehicle arrives at the scene of the incident. For the purposes of the Category A (life-threatening) eight-minute standard, an emergency response may only be by:

an emergency ambulance; or a rapid response vehicle equipped with a defibrillator to provide treatment at the scene; or an approved first responder equipped with a defibrillator, who is accountable to the ambulance service; or when a health care professional is at the location of the incident, equipped with a defibrillator and deemed clinically appropriate to respond by the trust. A first responder is not a substitute for an ambulance response and an ambulance response should be dispatched to all calls attended by an approved first responder.

For the purposes of the Category A and B 19-minute standard, a permitted response is a fully equipped ambulance vehicle able to transport the patient in a clinically safe manner. This may be a car or ambulance as determined by the information received by the caller.

Anaemia

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has commissioned into treatments for pernicious anaemia. [244918]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department funds national health service research and development through the National Institute for Health Research (NIHR). The Institute's health technology assessment programme is currently funding a project assessing deferasirox for the treatment of iron overload associated with regular blood transfusions in patients suffering with chronic anaemia; and the NIHR clinical research network is supporting a number of studies concerned with anaemia. Details of the latter can be found on the UK Clinical Research Network portfolio database at:

http://pfsearch.ukcrn.org.uk.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) is one of the main agencies through which the Government support medical and clinical research. The MRC is an independent body that receives its grant-in-aid from the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills.

The MRC is not currently funding any research on pernicious anaemia. However, the MRC does fund a wider portfolio of basic haematology research which may benefit the condition.

Billing

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate he has made of the proportion of invoices to his Department payable to small and medium-sized enterprises which are settled within 10 days. [245913]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has configured its systems to enable its performance to be measured against 10-day targets announced by the Prime Minister on 8 October 2008. However, it is not possible at present to identify those suppliers that fall within the definition of 'small and medium sized enterprises'.

The first formal data collection on performance against the 10-day target is being co-ordinated across Government by the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform based on November 2008 statistics. 98.02 per cent. of payments made to all suppliers, regardless of size, by the Department in November were made within 10 working days of receipt of the invoice.

Biomedicines

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent discussions there have been between the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence and specialist clinicians on future appraisals of biosimilar medicines; and if he will make a statement; [246079]

(2) what guidance his Department has issued to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) on the safety precautions to be reflected in NICE guidances on biosimilar medicines; and what account NICE takes of the safety precautions recommended by the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency and the European Medicines Agency in formulating such guidance. [246084]

Phil Hope: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is an independent body and should be approached directly for information on any recent discussions with specialist clinicians.

We have not issued any guidance to NICE on the appraisal of biosimilar medicines. Any relevant advice from the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency and the European Medicines Agency will be taken into account by NICE in its work.

Breast Cancer: Screening

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the proportion of women diagnosed with early stage breast cancer who have received HER2 testing. [245623]

Ann Keen: This information is not available centrally.

Cancer: Drugs

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 4 November 2008, Official Report, columns 371-76W, on cancer: drugs, what the eligible patient population for each treatment was in each (a) month and (b) year; and how many of the eligible patient population died in each (i) month and (ii) year. [246032]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Care Homes: Elderly

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 19 November 2008, Official Report, column 518W, on the elderly: mentally incapacitated, which of the care homes were run by (a) private sector companies, (b) local authorities and (c) third sector organisations. [246062]

Phil Hope: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Care Homes: Yorkshire and the Humber

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) care homes and (b) care home places for people suffering from dementia there were in each local authority area in Yorkshire and the Humber in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [244683]

Phil Hope: We are informed by the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that it does not register care homes according to the number of people from a specific client group, such as those suffering dementia, which they may accommodate. CSCI will register a home as being able to care for at least one person from a particular client group. CSCI is able to produce data from 2004. Information from earlier years is not available centrally.

The following table shows the numbers of care homes and registered places in each local authority area within the Yorkshire and Humberside region where at least one place in the home is registered as at 15 December 2008 to provide dementia care.

[1] Homes are not registered according to the actual number of places they have for each client group. They indicate which groups they can provide at least one place for. The number of registered places shown is for all client groups homes have informed CSCI they can accommodate as at 15 December 2008. This is because CSCI does not hold historic data for client group registration.
[2] Local council data are derived from the postcode of the service. Where post code is not provided the service is recorded as Unknown.

Carers

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what support the NHS national operating framework gives to carers with respite care and funding for short breaks; [246408]

(2) what assistance is provided by his Department for carers' training; and if he will make a statement; [246409]

(3) how the NHS national operating framework is intended to assist carers; and if he will make a statement. [246410]

Phil Hope: The operating framework for the national health service, which sets out the specific business and financial arrangements for the NHS in any given year, first made specific references to supporting carers in the 2008-09 report. The recently published operating framework for 2009-10 goes further. It requires primary care trusts (PCTs) to work with their local authority partners and publish joint plans on how their combined funding will support breaks for carers, including short breaks, in a personalised way.

£150 million will be included in PCT allocations over the next two years. £50 million will be provided in 2009-10 and £100 million in 2010-11. This money will support all carers.

The 2006 White Paper 'Our health, our care, our say' announced the New Deal for Carers. It included Caring with Confidence (CwC)—a training programme for carers. The first training commenced in August 2008 and distance-training modules will be available from January 2009. It is being run by a consortium led by the Expert Patients Programme and includes the three main carers' organisations (Carers UK, Crossroads and the Princess Royal Trust for Carers) and Partners in Policymaking. £4.4 million per year has been allocated to fund this programme.

The delivery of CwC will be through existing local providers of services—whether from the third or statutory sectors. Local providers have been invited to become part of this delivery process, through a nationally advertised tendering process; from this work CwC will put in place a national network of local providers.

Carers: Advisory Services

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department's carers' information service and helpline have been established. [245731]

Phil Hope: The website will go live toward the end of January 2009, with some 200 pages of information and another 600 pages will be added by the end of March 2009.

The Department has awarded a contract to bss (a charity that specialises in not-for-profit helplines) to provide the helpline (available by phone, e-mail and post). It is anticipated that the helpline will be in place in April 2009.

Child Health Promotion Programme

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the schedule to and guidance on the most recent update of the Child Health Promotion Programme was published. [245755]

Ann Keen: The updated Child Health Promotion Programme Guide, for children up to five years of age, was published and launched on 17 March 2008.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research his Department has conducted or evaluated on the relationship between myalgic encephalopathy/chronic fatigue syndrome and mitochondrial damage. [244739]

Ann Keen: Neither the Department nor the Medical Research Council is funding research on the relationship between chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalopathy and mitochondrial damage.

Collaborations for Leadership in Applied Health, Research and Care

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the work of Collaborations for Leadership in Applied Health, Research and Care; and if he will make a statement. [245767]

Dawn Primarolo: Nine of the national health service and university partnerships that earlier this year bid for collaboration for leadership in applied health research and care (CLAHRC) status were successful. Their National Institute for Health Research (NIHR) funding began on 1 October 2008 and is for a period of five years.

An evaluation of the CLAHRC initiative is being commissioned via the NIHR service delivery and organisation programme. Details are available at:

www.sdo.nihr.ac.uk/currentcalls.html

Community Care: Finance

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which local councils received a preventative technology grant in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [245732]

Phil Hope: All councils in England with social service responsibilities received a preventative technology grant in 2006-07 and 2007-08. Full details are in Local Authority Circular LAC (2006)5 which has been placed in the Library.

Connecting For Health

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, on connecting for health, what the maximum potential sum for each contract is. [246029]

Mr. Bradshaw: The maximum potential sum for each of the national programme for information technology core contracts is the total sum payable to the supplier over the lifetime of the contract. This figure for each contract is in the table.

Core contracts

London	1,021.0
South	1,104.0
North East	1,035.0
East	930.0
North West and West Midland	1,042.0
Spine	889.0
N3 network	530.0
Choose and Book	144.5

Note:
2004-05 prices: reported in The National Programme for IT in the NHS: Project Progress Report (National Audit Office 16 May 2008)

Contraceptives: Young People

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on the use of the contraception pill by female teenagers. [245846]

Dawn Primarolo: One of the aims of the Government's Sexual Health and HIV Strategy and Teenage Pregnancy Strategy is to reduce teenage pregnancies. It is therefore vital that sexually active young people have access to the full range of methods of contraception, including the contraceptive pill. It is, however, for the health care professional, in conjunction with the young woman, to decide the most suitable method of contraception for her.

Cooperation and Competition Panel

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the Cooperation and Competition Panel was launched; and if he will make a statement. [246054]

Mr. Bradshaw: Lord Carter of Coles, Chair of the Cooperation and Competition Panel (The Panel) has publicly stated that the Panel would open for referrals in January 2009.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received of the prevalence of new variant CJD in the population carrying the MV gene; and what steps he is taking in response to such reports. [246359]

Dawn Primarolo: There have been a total of 167 cases of clinical vCJD in the United Kingdom. All of these patients have been of MM genotype. There has been one reported case of sub-clinical vCJD in a person of MV genotype, who died of an unrelated cause without having developed clinical symptoms of vCJD.

In December 2008, BBC Newsnight reported a case of CJD in a patient of MV genotype. As part of a well established system, all known suspect cases of CJD are reviewed and followed up by the National CJD Surveillance Unit in Edinburgh and the National Prion Unit in London. To date, the National CJD Surveillance Unit has not identified a definite or probable case of vCJD in a non-MM genotype individual.

The measures that have been put in place to minimise the risk of person to person transmission of vCJD are appropriate for the whole population, irrespective of the genotype of the patient.

Dementia

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the role of the NHS national operating framework is with regard to supporting a national dementia strategy. [246407]

Phil Hope: The National Dementia Strategy has been identified as a priority in the National Operating Framework for primary care trusts (PCTs) for both this year and next. Early intervention in cases of dementia by PCTs is cost-effective and can improve quality of life for people with dementia and their families.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of contractors and suppliers to (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have reported that they are compliant with the Government's security standards following publication of the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government, and the accompanying document, Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action, on 25 June 2008. [245324]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department's Senior Information Risk Owner (SIRO) wrote to all Directors in November 2008 requiring them to seek assurance from contractors and suppliers within their area of responsibility that they are aware of, and comply with, the Government's security standards set out in the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government, and the accompanying document, Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action. The response to this exercise will be recorded in end of year assurance statements in March 2009.

Security and information assurance conditions are available for use by NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (PASA) and the wider NHS in relevant tendering exercises, i.e. where personal or other confidential information will be used, disseminated or handled by the relevant public body or any third party associated with the contract (including but not limited to ICT contracts). These conditions fully comply with the latest data handling procurement policy guidance published by OGC in November 2008. NHS PASA is in the process of contacting its own suppliers to ensure they are compliant with the Government security standards.

The Medicines and Healthcare Regulatory products Agency (MHRA) and all its suppliers are compliant with the Government's security standards and the Data Handling Procedures.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract are held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245345]

Mr. Bradshaw: Neither the Department nor its agencies, the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency or the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency, have any contracts allowing contractors to store personal data of United Kingdom citizens overseas.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; when the appointment was made; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245363]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department appointed a senior information risk owner (SIRO) on 15 March 2004 in response to a letter from Cabinet Office in February 2004, and consequently before the requirements for such an appointment in the report, "Data Handling Procedures in Government" and the accompanying document "Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action".

The SIRO is a director general.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the IT systems in (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245387]

Mr. Bradshaw: All the Department's information technology (IT) systems meet the requirements set out in the Security Policy Framework (SPF), the "Data Handling Report" (DHR) and related "Cross Government Actions: Minimum Mandatory Measures". They also comply with ISO27001, the standard for Information Security Management.

Of its agencies, the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency's IT systems are fully certified to ISO27001 and they are required to comply with the requirements of the SPF and the DHR.

The Medicines and Healthcare Regulatory products Agency and all its suppliers are compliant with the Government's security standards and the data handling procedures.

Departmental Deposits

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what deposits (a) his Department and (b) the NHS has overseas. [246566]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department of Health has no deposits overseas.

The Department does not hold any information on the individual deposits held by national health service trusts, primary care trusts or strategic health authorities.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) sterling and (b) foreign exchange deposits (i) his Department and (ii) the NHS has abroad. [246567]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has no sterling or foreign exchange deposits abroad.

The Department does not hold any information on the individual sterling or foreign exchange deposits held by national health service trusts, primary care trusts or strategic health authorities.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246021]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department holds workforce data on sex, ethnicity, age and disability and will be collecting data on sexual orientation and religion or belief, which will be available in 2009. These data are used to track progress, on a quarterly and annual basis, against its diversity targets.

This year the Department has exceeded the Cabinet Office targets for women, black and minority ethnic staff and disabled staff in the senior civil service, apart from those for women in top management posts.

Departmental Freedom of Information

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many requests for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 have been made to his Department since 2005; how many such requests were (a) agreed to and (b) refused in each of those years; how many refusals were subject to appeal to the Information Commissioner in each of those years; how many appeals were successful; if he will place in the Library copies of the material subsequently provided in each case; how much was spent by his Department opposing each appeal; which (i) consultants and (ii) law firms were employed by his Department in connection with each appeal; and if he will make a statement. [245078]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following table provides a breakdown of the number of requests under the Freedom of Information Act to the Department since 2005; requests agreed to and refused in each of those years; how many refusals were subject to appeal to the Information Commissioner in each year; and how many appeals were successful. A copy of the material provided in each successful appeal to the Information Commissioner has been placed in the Library.

Legal advice on Information Commissioner appeals is provided to the Department by Department of Health Legal Services, which is part of the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) Legal Group. Department of Health Legal Services provides a full range of legal services to the Department of Health including arranging representation in court. The Department has not directly employed consultants or separate law firms in connection with any Information Commissioner appeals. Elements of the Department employ law firms during the course of their business and, as such, may contribute to the Department's handling of ICO appeals. The Department of Health's Connecting for Health and Commercial Directorate use separate lawyers. To extract the component regarding appeals can be achieved only at a disproportionate cost.

Departmental Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by his Department were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) in each year from 1997 to 2008; and how many of these were upheld by the ASA in each year. [246651]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information on the number of complaints made about departmental advertising to the Advertising Standards Authority is not kept centrally and to gather the information would incur a disproportionate cost.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on (a) departmental Christmas parties and (b) staff entertainment in the last three years. [243738]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under the Department's Code of Business Conduct, public money must not be used to fund occasions such as social gatherings, retirement or office parties.

Departmental Public Consultation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on which occasions his Department has convened a citizens' jury or randomly drawn panel of people to aid the Department's policy making since 2000; whether the participants were paid in each case; and if he will make a statement. [243047]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department recognises the important contribution that the public can make in developing policy and carry out a wide range of activities which allow Ministers and officials to listen to and understand the views of the public and stakeholders in developing policy.

Data from 2000 on the number of citizens' juries and consultation with a random panel of people to aid decision-making by the Department is not readily available. Supplying the occurrences of citizens' juries and deliberative consultations would require a substantive investigation into all public engagement programmes undertaken by various divisions within the Department at a disproportionate cost.

However, we can identify some of the recent major occasions that the Department has convened citizens' juries or consulted random panels of people who were paid since 2000. These include:

Potential impact of opt-out system for Organ Donation (2008)

Review into the Consequences of Additional Private Drugs for the NHS (2008)

NHS Next Stage Review—led by Lord Darzi (2007-08)

Primary and Community Care Review (2008)

Carer's Strategy Consultation (2007-08)

Your health, your care, your say (2005)

Choosing Health (2004).

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on banner stands bearing his image and title since his appointment; and how many such stands have been procured. [246857]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has not spent any monies on procuring or designing banner stands bearing the Secretary of State's image and title since his appointment.

Departmental Redundancy

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff in his Department left under (a) involuntary and (b) voluntary staff exit schemes in each year since 2005-06; how many of them in each case were paid (i) up to £25,000, (ii) £25,001 to £50,000, (iii) £50,001 to £75,000, (iv) £75,001 to £100,000 and (v) over £100,000 in the year before they left; and how much (A) was spent in each of those years and (B) is planned to be spent on such schemes in (1) 2008-09 and (2) 2009-10 by (y) his Department and (z) each of his Department's agencies. [242255]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information is not available in the form that has been requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Senior Civil Servants

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what remuneration packages senior civil servants in his Department receive; and what benefits in kind each has received in the last 12 months. [245982]

Mr. Bradshaw: Details of the remuneration packages for the Department's Directors-General are shown in the Remuneration Report part of the annual Resource Accounts. A copy of the Department's Resource Accounts for the financial year 2007-08 has already been placed in the Library and can be accessed at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/DH_089421

The Department Resource Accounts for financial year 2008-09 will be laid before Parliament in 2009 and placed in the Library, in line with standard procedures.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies for public access to services. [246973]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department runs or supports six 0845 telephone numbers for use by the public.

Two of these numbers, those serving recruitment for social care and social workers, will be moved over to the new 0300 tariff by the end of February. The use of 0845 numbers for the other four lines is currently under review.

The Department's Executive agencies, the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency and the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency have no 0845 or similar cost telephone numbers for use by the public.

Diabetes: Bexley

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children under the age of 16 had (a) type one and (b) type two diabetes in the Bexley Primary Care Trust area in the most recent year for which figures are available. [244753]

Ann Keen: Data for the number of children of school age diagnosed with diabetes are not available. However, estimates suggest there are an estimated 20,000 children with diabetes in England (the vast majority Type 1 diabetes), and some experts suggest that there may also be up to 1,000 children with type 2 diabetes in England.

Domestic Violence: Ethnic Groups

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date his Department's report on developing effective responses for Asian women experiencing domestic violence was published. [245750]

Phil Hope: The report 'Effective mental health responses for Asian women experiencing domestic Violence' will be published early in 2009.

Down's Syndrome: Research

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent on research into Down's syndrome in each of the last five years. [245856]

Phil Hope: The available information is shown in the following table.

	Department of Health	Medical Research Council
2003-04	111	183
2004-05	137	21
2005-06	178	71
2007-08	299	112

The Departmental figures relate to national research programme expenditure. They do not include the significant expenditure on Down's syndrome research from the research and development allocations that have over the last 10 years been made annually to national health service providers. That information is not held centrally.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) is one of the main agencies through which the Government support biomedical research. The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills.

Drugs: Coastal Areas

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his most recent estimate is of the number of drug and alcohol support personnel employed in each of the principal seaside towns of England. [245006]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the number of people employed in drug and/or alcohol treatment services is not collected centrally.

Eating Disorders: Internet

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent meetings his Department has had with internet service providers regarding websites which are pro-anorexia or pro-bulimia. [245489]

Ann Keen: The Department has had no meetings with internet service providers about pro-anorexia or pro-bulimia websites.

The Government are concerned about the risks posed by websites which encourage anorexia or bulimia. We continue to explore a variety of courses of action. For example, we have worked with a media agency which offered their expertise pro bono to run advertisements directing youngsters to more appropriate sites.

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent steps his Department has taken to promote awareness among parents of the dangers of pro-anorexia and pro-bulimia websites. [246089]

Ann Keen: Responsibility for the regulation of the internet rests with the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform.

The Government are concerned about the risks posed by websites which encourage anorexia or bulimia. However, these sites are not in themselves illegal, and may be hosted by internet service providers based overseas, so the Government are normally unable to take legal action against them.

Elderly: Abuse

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 229W, on elderly: abuse, what each of the 15 reports of serious case reviews was; and what account was taken of them in the drafting of the consultation document. [245234]

Phil Hope: Of the 15 reports analysed for the draft research study on serious case reviews, to be published this winter, 10 involved a fatality and evidence of neglect or abuse (whether or not such neglect or abuse was clearly causative of death). The remainder involved either sexual assault, or institutional abuse. Of the 15 reports, seven of the cases involved neglect or abuse taking place at the service user's home.

The development of the consultation document involved consideration of a wide range of information and views from a wide range of key stakeholders. The information from the draft research report on serious case reviews provided useful information to help formulate the questions asked in the consultation document about serious case reviews.

Electromagnetic Fields: Health Hazards

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish a response to the Stakeholder Advisory Group on Electro-Magnetic Radiation report on high voltage power lines and health; and if he will make a statement. [244745]

Dawn Primarolo: A Government response to the First Interim Assessment published by the Stakeholder Advisory Group on Extremely Low Frequency Electromagnetic Fields is likely to be published early in 2009.

Food: Safety

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 15 December 2008, Official Report, column 450W, on food: safety, where the 21 public analyst laboratories are located. [245679]

Dawn Primarolo: The laboratories are located in Aberdeen, Belfast, Bristol, Cardiff, Dundee, Durham, Edinburgh, Glasgow, London (Acton), Morley (Leeds), Llanelli, Manchester, Norwich, Preston, Southsea, Stafford, Stourport, Taunton, West Malling, Wigston (Leicestershire) and Wolverhampton.

General Practitioners: Finance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which GP practices depend on the minimum practice income guarantee to continue in operation. [246856]

Mr. Bradshaw: At present around 91 per cent. of general medical services (GMS) general practitioner practices receive the minimum practice income guarantee. In the vast majority of practices these protection payments make up only a small proportion of their total national health service income. However we estimate that in just over 1 per cent. of GMS practices the minimum practice income guarantee comprises more than 25 per cent. of their total NHS income.

Health Services: Elderly

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provisions have been made to enable older people with debilitating health conditions to travel to treatment centres outside their locality from April 2008. [246224]

Mr. Bradshaw: Regardless of their age, national health service patients with a medical need for transport (as determined by a healthcare professional) are entitled to free transport to and from their treatment as part of non-emergency Patient Transport Services (PTS). Primary care trusts are responsible for securing the provision of PTS for the population it covers to such an extent, as they consider necessary to meet all reasonable requirements. This includes paying for transport to or from out of area healthcare providers, and transport between healthcare providers.

Health Services: Finance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether local authorities are required to set a financial limit on the amount awarded to an individual for social care under an Individual Budget. [246001]

Phil Hope: Local authorities are not required to place a financial limit on an individual budget when undertaking personal assessment of a person's social care needs.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in developing his better-targeted approach to payment for specialised services; and if he will make a statement. [246057]

Mr. Bradshaw: Health Resource Group version 4 (HRG4) has been designed over a number of years specifically for Payment by Results (PbR), with substantial clinical involvement. The Department is planning for HRG4 to be introduced for payment of tariff from April 2009. The changes underpinning the new tariff have already been extensively discussed and tested with a wide range of stakeholder groups.

The new tariff is currently being 'road tested' by the NHS, the purpose of which is to support early service and financial planning and invite comments on the clarity and comprehensiveness of guidance. The Department is also using the exercise to identify whether the new tariff has any unintended consequences. Following the road testing exercise, the final tariff is expected to be confirmed in January.

The Department has already determined though, that in order to help trusts adjust to the new tariff, the full range of potential changes will not be introduced in 2009-10. Tariffs for accident and emergency services will remain based on the current tariff structure, and although HRG4 has the capability to generate HRGs for procedures in outpatients clinics, there will not be a mandatory tariff for these procedures next year. The full benefits of the new design will be realised gradually, as the quality of underlying activity and cost data improves.

The Department has undertaken an analysis which shows that because funds are directed more accurately to specialised services under HRG4, the number of services requiring specialised service 'top-ups' is reduced from nine to two. The only two services requiring top-ups in 2009-10 are orthopaedics and specialised services for children, and in both cases the level of top-ups is lower than in 2008-09.

Health Services: Foreigners

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals with an NHS number were foreign nationals in each year since 1997. [246871]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department does not hold this information centrally.

Health Services: Greater London

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his latest assessment is of the financial position of (a) Havering Primary Care Trust and (b) Barking, Havering and Redbridge NHS Trust; and if he will make a statement. [246821]

Mr. Bradshaw: At quarter 2 of 2008-09 Havering Primary Care Trust is forecasting a year end outturn surplus of £695,000. Barking Havering and Redbridge NHS Trust is forecasting a year end outturn deficit of £23.3 million.

Barking Havering and Redbridge NHS Trust continues to be designated as a Financially Challenged Trust and as such continues to work with the Department through its Strategic Health Authority (NHS London) to develop sustainable operating and financial solutions going forward.

Health Services: Recruitment

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the results of the national social care recruitment campaign; and if he will make a statement. [245762]

Phil Hope: The latest social care recruitment campaign took place during March 2008. The campaign generated more than twice the level of contacts to the call centre than the previous campaign and increased the number of unique web visitors by a factor of three. In total during the campaign period there were just under 180,000 contacts and unique web visitors. The campaign research also indicated a significant increase in awareness of the advertising among the general adult population compared to the previous campaign.

Health Services: Research

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the result of the independent research programme commissioned by his Department to evaluate the impact of health sector reform is; and if he will make a statement. [246056]

Mr. Bradshaw: The independent Health Reform Evaluation Programme consists of interconnected research projects looking at the impact of key health reforms. The projects were commissioned during 2007 and 2008 and have three years to run. They are expected to report during 2010 and early 2011.

Health Services: Standards

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the support and development framework for commissioners developed by strategic health authorities. [245 42]

Mr. Bradshaw: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are leading on the support and development of World Class Commissioning locally. Programmes and frameworks will be determined locally by an assessment of needs in their primary care trusts. The Department does not hold the details of SHA frameworks.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on modernising the regulation of healthcare workers; and if he will make a statement. [245764]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Extending Professional Regulation Working Group is developing criteria to assess whether new groups of health care professionals should be brought into a system of regulation. Following a successful event in November 2008 with a wide variety of stakeholders, a report on next steps is currently being drafted for consideration by Ministers. This report is due for completion shortly.

Health Services: Training

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in developing a National Skills Academy for Social Care; and if he will make a statement. [245763]

Phil Hope: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills announced in October that the expression of interest in developing a national skills academy for social care had been approved by the Learning and Skills Council to go into business planning. Work is proceeding to develop a business plan that meets the requirements of the Learning and Skills Council to be submitted in spring 2009 together with some programmes.

Health: Young People

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to encourage a healthy lifestyle amongst teenagers in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [245019]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department is working closely with the Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF) and the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills across England to address healthy lifestyles for children and young people on a variety of key health issues, including sexual health, tobacco and alcohol.

Holistic health initiatives include the Healthy Schools Programme, the developing Healthy Further Education Programme and the development of a new Child Health Promotion Programme for five to 19-year-olds, as well as the availability of the NHS Teen LifeCheck (a quick quiz-style online questionnaire for 12 to 15-year-olds).

There is also specific action on alcohol as set out in "The Youth Alcohol Action Plan" (CM7387) (DCSF) published in June 2008 and media campaigns such as the RU Thinking campaign and the Want Respect: Use a Condom campaign which address sexual health. A copy of "The Youth Alcohol Action Plan" is available in the Library.

All these activities are aimed at supporting young people throughout England. Each Government office, primary care trust and local authority receives support and guidance from the Department to ensure optimum implementation across their local area. In addition, the Department funded the two-year Teenage Health Demonstration Sites pilot to examine ways of delivering better health information, advice and guidance to young people. Northumberland was one of the four demonstration sites. The evaluation report will be available in the new year, and early results look promising.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations govern private companies selling hearing aids to people with hearing impairments; and if he will make a statement. [240806]

Mr. Thomas: I have been asked to reply.

Private companies selling hearing aids to people with hearing impediments are regulated by the Hearing Aid Council Act 1968, as modified in 1989. The Act makes it a statutory requirement that hearing aids may only be sold by a dispenser who is suitably qualified and who is registered with the Hearing Aid Council (HAC)—which was established by the Act to set standards of professional training, performance and conduct for individuals and companies involved in the assessment of hearing loss and subsequent sale of hearing aids in the private sector.

Following the Hampton Review of Regulators, the Hearing Aid Council is due to be abolished and its regulatory functions transferred to the Health Professions Council (HPC). This is currently due to occur by March 2010.

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for action on the regulation of hearing aid dispensers; and if he will make a statement. [246216]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are working towards the required legislation to enable the transfer of the Hearing Aid Council's register of dispensers to the Health Professions Council by March 2010.

Hepatitis

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Eddisbury of 6 October 2008, Official Report, columns 424-25W, on hepatitis, how many drugs were dispensed for the treatment of hepatitis B in each year since 1997 (a) for England in total, (b) in each strategic health authority area and (c) broken down by type of drug. [245646]

Dawn Primarolo: The following three tables show the number of prescription items dispensed in the community for the treatment of hepatitis B. The information is provided according to the individual British National Formulary (BNF) categories hepatitis B drugs fall within. Figures are split by strategic health authority (SHA) and presented in thousands. The data do not cover drugs dispensed in hospitals, including mental health trusts, or private prescriptions.

Due to the disclosive nature of the data, it was not possible to present the data by type of drug. As such, data were aggregated to BNF category to maintain some measure of difference between drug type. The SHA totals may not match the England total due to rounding.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Eddisbury of 6 October 2008, Official Report, column 422W, on hepatitis, how many notifications of hepatitis B have been made to the Health Protection Agency and its predecessor bodies in each year since 1997 (a) for England in total and (b) in each strategic health authority area; and what estimate he has made of the overall prevalence of hepatitis B in each strategic health authority area. [245647]

Dawn Primarolo: Data for notifications of hepatitis B by current and previous strategic health authorities (SHAs) are shown in the following table.

The Health Protection Agency Centre for Infections is not able to produce estimates of the prevalence of hepatitis B at SHA level.

HIV Infection

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of those diagnosed with HIV and AIDS have received treatment in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in each of the last five years. [244896]

Dawn Primarolo: The following tables contain data for diagnosed HIV-infected individuals who attend for HIV-related care at national health service sites. Not all HIV-infected individuals are recommended to start antiretroviral therapy (ART) immediately; British HIV Association (BHIVA) guidelines for this period recommended that individuals with CD4 cell counts of 200 cells per mm^3 or less should be on therapy—this threshold has been used in the following tables to calculate the number of individuals who were recommended to be on ART.

HIV Infection: Grants

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding the Government is providing to each local authority in AIDS support grant in 2008-09. [246308]

Dawn Primarolo: The 2008-09 AIDS support grant allocations to each local authority in England have been placed in the Library.

Hospices

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support his Department plans to give to hospices in the next two years. [245853]

Phil Hope: For children's services, the Department in May 2006 committed central grant funding of £27 million over three years for children's hospice services. In 2008, this was increased by a further £20 million to continue the support for children's hospices over the comprehensive spending review period—amounting to a funding package of £47 million over the five years 2006-07 to 2010-11.

For adult services, we are making £286 million of revenue and capital funding available in the two years to 2011 to support the implementation of the End of Life Care Strategy. Most of this will be allocated to primary care trusts. The funding includes a £40 million capital grant for adult hospices in 2010-11.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) children's hospices and (b) all hospices have received from the Government in each of the last five years. [245854]

Phil Hope: This information is not held centrally. It is for individual primary care trusts (PCTs) to decide the level of funding they allocate to end of life care services, including hospices, based on assessments of local needs and priorities. The level of funding a hospice receives is a matter for negotiation between the local PCT and the hospice.

However, the Department has made available an additional £27 million over three years to be given to hospices as grants. 36 grants were awarded in 2006, 40 more in 2007 and a further 40 in 2008.

In September 2006, the Government established a £40 million capital fund, which adult hospices were able to bid for to improve their physical environments. 146 hospices, with 191 projects, were allocated funding from the fund.

Influenza

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 14 July 2008, Official Report, columns 203-4W, on influenza, (1) whether the antiviral stockpile referred to in the answer has now been procured; over what period he intends the antiviral stockpile to be built; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the tender for the procurement; [245505]

(2) what further consideration his Department has given to a policy of using antivirals for (a) household and (b) other prophylaxis; [245506]

(3) which antibiotics will be needed to treat the bacterial complications of pandemic influenza; when he intends to begin to stockpile those antibiotics; and if he will make a statement. [245812]

Dawn Primarolo: Suppliers have responded to the Invitation To Tender for antiviral medicines to increase the stockpile which was published in the Official Journal in August 2008, and these have now been evaluated. Orders have not yet been placed. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it is not yet possible to make any announcements on the speed of the stockpile build. I will arrange for a copy of the tender documents to be placed in the Library when public procurement procedures allow.

There is ongoing discussion at scientific and policy level of antiviral household prophylaxis. For example, the Department has completed modelling which indicates that this is an effective strategy. We have also sought scientific advice on the issue from the Scientific Advisory Group on Pandemic Influenza (SPI), our external scientific advisory committee. This has concentrated on issues such as the size of the stockpile needed and the strategic approach to prophylaxis when the stockpile contains more than one type of antiviral. We are currently considering the delivery implications of a policy based on household prophylaxis, and the procurement approach to be followed. We are not currently considering other forms of prophylaxis.

Experts from the British Thoracic Society, British Infection Society and Health Protection Agency developed Clinical Management Guidelines for patients with pandemic influenza. These include proposals for antibiotics to be used for the treatment of bacterial complications. The guideline suggests antibiotics active against Heamophilus influenzae, Streptococcus pneumoniae and Staphylococcus aureus the bacteria, which most commonly cause respiratory infections. These include penicillin based products such as co-amoxiclav or a tetracycline such as doxycycline. For those allergic to penicillin, a macrolide such as erythromycin or clarithromycin is recommended. Complications requiring antibiotic therapy would be treated with a cephalosporin such as cefuroxime, which are administered with IV fluids.

Suppliers of antibiotics have responded to the Invitation To Tender published in the Official Journal in August 2008. These bids are currently being evaluated.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many courses of zanamivir have been stockpiled to protect pregnant women in the event of an influenza pandemic; [245620]

(2) what proportion of the antiviral stockpile for use in the event of an influenza pandemic is for use by (a) adults and (b) children; [245643]

(3) what the mass in milligrammes of oseltamivir stockpiled for use in the event of an influenza pandemic is; what the assumed dose in milligrammes of an individual course of treatment for (a) an adult and (b) children is; and if he will make a statement; [245644]

(4) how many doses of A/H5N1 vaccine are held by his Department; what proportion of the stockpile is reserved for the (a) armed forces, (b) healthcare workers and (c) other groups; and if he will make a statement; [245645]

(5) with reference to the answer of 13 December 2007, Official Report, columns 873-4W, on influenza disease control, when his Department's stockpile of Tamiflu will pass its shelf-life. [245811]

Dawn Primarolo: At the time of purchasing the current stockpile of antivirals, adult dosages were applied from age seven upwards. The relative proportions are 7.6 per cent., and 92.4 per cent., for children under seven and adults respectively.

The total mass of the current stockpile of Oseltamivir (Tamiflu) for the UK is 11 billion mg. The dosages per treatment course are 750 mg and 200-600 mg for adults and children respectively.

The bulk of the current stockpile of Tamiflu is due to reach the end of its shelf life in financial year 2010-11, the remainder is due to expire in financial years 2011-12 and 2012-13.

Approximately 275,000 courses of zanamivir have been stockpiled to protect pregnant women in the UK.

The UK holds 3.3 million doses of H5N1. The relative proportions are 2.9 per cent., 86.2 per cent., and 10.9 per cent., for the armed forces, health care workers and other groups respectively.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what modelling work on the effects of an influenza pandemic has been undertaken by his Department in the last 12 months. [245631]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department continues to work in collaboration with a number of modelling and analytical groups both nationally and internationally to take forward both operational and epidemiological modelling work to assist preparedness for a possible pandemic. The main topics considered over the past 12 months have been the appropriate use of clinical countermeasures, the potential effectiveness of social distancing measures and the arrangements for real time modelling during the pandemic.

Where the consideration of these issues has led to a modification of the advice to policy makers the new advice has been recorded in the SPI-M modelling summary at:

http://www.advisorybodies.doh.gov.uk/spi/modelling.htm

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who the members of the independent committee which developed an ethical framework to inform the response to an influenza pandemic are, as referred to on page 14 of his Department's National Framework for responding to an influenza pandemic. [245632]

Dawn Primarolo: The membership of the Committee on Ethical Aspects of Pandemic Influenza (CEAPI) is as follows:

Chair: Very Reverend Graham Forbes, Provost of St. Mary's Cathedral, Edinburgh

Mrs. Julie Acred, Chief Executive, Derby Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust

Mr. Chris Chaloner, Ethics Adviser, Royal College of Nursing

Mr. John Colvin, Consultant and Honorary Senior Lecturer in Anaesthesia and Intensive Care Medicine, Ninewells Hospital and Medical School, Dundee

Mr. Jane Cowan, Medicolegal Adviser, MPS Risk Consulting

Mr. Jean Jacques de Gorter, Director of Clinical Services, BUPA Hospitals Ltd.

Professor Robert Dingwall, Director of the Institute for the Study of Genetics, Biotniks and Society, University of Nottingham

Mr. Eugene Gallagher, Head of Primary Care and Family Practitioner Services in the Western Health and Social Services Board, Belfast

Professor Trisha Greenhalgh, Professor of Primary Health Care at University College London

Professor John Harris, Professor of Bioethics, School of Law, University of Manchester

Dr. Victor Larcher, Consultant in General Paediatrics and Clinical Ethics, Great Ormond Street Hospital, London

Professor Jonathan Montgomery, Professor of Health Care Law, University of Southampton; Chair, Hampshire Primary Care Trust

Professor Vivienne Nathanson, Director of Professional Activities, British Medical Association

Ms Jane O'Brien, Head of Standards and Ethics, General Medical Council

Professor Michael Parker, Professor of Bioethics and Director of the Ethox Centre at the University of Oxford

Dr. Clive Richards, Consultant in public health medicine, Nottinghamshire

Mr. Hugh Robertson, Senior Policy Officer with responsibility for Prevention, Rehabilitation and Compensation, Trades Union Congress

Mrs. Shahwar Sadeque, Educational and ICT Consultant and Chief Executive of TriEs Ltd.

Professor John Saunders, Consultant Physician, Nevill Hall Hospital, Abergavenny; Chairman of the Committee for ethical issues in medicine, Royal College of Physicians

Mr. Roy Taylor, Director of Community Services, Kingston upon Thames

Mr. Geoff Watts, freelance journalist

Professor Richard Williams, Professor of Mental Health Strategy, University of Glamorgan; Consultant Child and Adolescent Psychiatrist, Gwent Healthcare NHS Trust

Dr. Patricia Wilkie, Chair, Academy of Medical Royal Colleges patient/lay committee.

Representatives of the devolved Administrations attend as observers.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next intends to issue an updated national framework for responding to an influenza pandemic. [245633]

Dawn Primarolo: The national framework is due to be updated during 2009-10.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria will be used to assess whether an individual should be admitted to (a) secondary and (b) critical care in the event of an influenza pandemic. [245641]

Dawn Primarolo: Our guidance document entitled "Pandemic influenza: surge capacity and prioritisation in health services - provisional guidance", which has been issued to primary care trusts and other stakeholders for consultation and is due to be published in the new year, included an assessment tool for admitting individuals to secondary or critical care. We also plan to further refine assessment criteria, in consultation with key stakeholders, over the course of the year.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what work has been undertaken by the Scientific Pandemic Influenza Behaviour and Communication sub-group since it was established; on what dates it has met since it was established; and if he will place in the Library copies of (a) papers considered by the sub-group and (b) minutes of all its meetings. [245642]

Dawn Primarolo: The Scientific Pandemic Influenza Advisory Committee's Behaviour and Communication sub-group has met twice since its establishment in June 2008. These meetings were held on 19 August 2008 and 1 October 2008.

At these meetings, the group identified behavioural science-related research gaps relevant to pandemic influenza preparedness. The group has also assessed the feasibility of undertaking research to address any gaps.

The documents the sub-group considered were excerpts relevant to behavioural science from documents SPI/01/09a and SPI/01/09b, which were presented at the main SPI meeting in April 2008 and available on the SPI website. A copy of these papers has been placed in the Library.

The conclusions of the Behaviour and Communication sub-group meetings were recorded in the submission to the main SPI on the pandemic influenza research gap analysis discussed on 11 November 2008. A copy of this paper has been placed in the Library. It is also available to download on the Department's Scientific Pandemic Influenza Advisory Committee (SPI) website at:

http://www.advisorybodies.doh.gov.uk/spi/index.htm

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 9 January 2008, Official Report, column 597W, on influenza, what consideration has been given to the merits of stockpiling (a) aprons and (b) gloves in case of an influenza pandemic. [245698]

Dawn Primarolo: My previous answer highlighted the importance of gloves and aprons in supporting good hygiene practices in an influenza pandemic. The quantities and type of gloves and aprons, based on the number and type of patient interactions, are currently being investigated. The large numbers required and the need to ensure availability at point of use strongly favours the creation of a pandemic stockpile (without impacting on the Business As Usual requirement for these products). We are currently considering the most appropriate commercial options for building this stockpile.

Influenza: Vaccination

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received from (a) members of the public and (b) health care professionals on the supply of seasonal influenza vaccines for the 2008-09 winter. [245634]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department has received several inquiries from members of the public mainly relating to specific general practitioner (GP) surgeries and their influenza vaccine supplies.

GP surgeries order influenza vaccines directly from the suppliers. As such, GP surgeries contact individual manufacturers if they experience supply problems.

The Department holds regular discussions with the UK Vaccine Industry Group (UVIG) to ensure adequate vaccine supply for the influenza programme. The UVIG has confirmed that there is sufficient vaccine to meet all orders placed with the suppliers.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure an adequate supply of seasonal influenza vaccines for the winter 2008-09 seasonal influenza immunisation programme; what discussions he has had with vaccine manufacturers on their capacity to supply adequate stocks of vaccine; which manufacturers are supplying vaccine to the UK; what information he has received about vaccine manufacturers encountering difficulties in (a) manufacturing and (b) delivering vaccines; and if he will make a statement. [245635]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department holds regular discussions with the UK Vaccine Industry Group (UVIG) to ensure adequate vaccine supply for the influenza programme. The UVIG has confirmed that there is sufficient vaccine to meet all orders placed with the suppliers.

UVIG have also confirmed that there have been no difficulties in manufacturing and delivering vaccines.

The manufacturers which have supplied vaccine during this season are GSK, MASTA, Novartis Vaccines, Sanofi Pasteur MSD, Solvay Healthcare and Wyeth Vaccines.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what ways his Department is communicating to health care workers the importance of seasonal influenza immunisation, as stated in the minutes of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation's meeting of 13 February 2008. [245638]

Dawn Primarolo: As stated in the chief medical officer letter of 31 March 2008, responsibility for immunisation for occupational staff rests with employers and should be provided by occupational health services. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library.

The Department has recently published a new leaflet, fact sheet and poster encouraging health care professionals to get vaccinated against the flu.

Also in June 2008, the Department held a national flu immunisation conference for primary care trust flu leads. This conference focused on flu vaccinations for health care workers and the issues around improving uptake.

Injuries: Offensive Weapons

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he was informed by the NHS information centre that data relating to patients attending hospital with knife wounds, provided to 10 Downing street, had been or was due to have been published. [246696]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State was aware on the day of publication, 11 December.

Lyme Disease

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to make Lyme disease a notifiable disease. [245187]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 234W.

Medical Records

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each health care trust spent on sending patient medical records by taxi in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [245681]

Mr. Bradshaw: This information is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mental Health Services

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the proposed NHS Constitution will guarantee mental health service users a choice of hospital. [245014]

Ann Keen: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for North Norfolk (Norman Lamb) on 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 234W.

Mental Health Services: Ex-servicemen

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where the NHS-led community mental health pilots for ex-servicemen are located; and when he expects each pilot to report. [246002]

Phil Hope: The community mental health pilot schemes for ex-service personnel are located in Stafford, Camden, Cardiff, Bishop Auckland, Lothian and St Austell. The pilots, which began in November 2007, will be independently evaluated over a period of two years.

Mental Health Services: Finance

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been made available to primary care trusts to assist them in fulfilling their statutory obligation to commission independent mental health advocates for people who have been detained under the Mental Health Act; and how that funding has been calculated. [245945]

Phil Hope: Primary care trusts' (PCTs) new statutory duty to commission independent mental health advocate services has been reflected in PCT baseline allocations for 2009-10 and 2010-11. PCT allocations reflect the outcome of the comprehensive spending review, which takes account of a range of baseline and policy pressures, including the Mental Health Act. It will be a matter for local determination how PCTs meet their statutory duty, using their available resources.

Mitochondrial Damage

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research his Department has conducted or evaluated on the relationship between mitochondrial damage and (a) the use of certain medications such as anti-inflammatories, anaesthetics, angina medications, antibiotics, anti-depressants, statins, mood-stabiliser lithium and (b) chemotherapy. [244738]

Dawn Primarolo: None.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) is one of the main agencies through which the Government supports medical and clinical research. The MRC is an independent body that receives its grant-in-aid from the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills.

The MRC is not currently funding research directly relating to the relationship between mitochondrial damage and the use of these medications or chemotherapy. However, the MRC does support a portfolio of more basic research on the effects of mitochondrial damage including support for the MRC Mitochondrial Dysfunction Group at the MRC Dunn Human Nutrition Unit in Cambridge. Information about the group's research can be found at:

www.mrc-dunn.cam.ac.uk/research/mitochondrial_dysfunction/

In addition, the Department's National Institute for Health Research and the MRC have recently agreed funding for the MRC Centre for Translational Research in Neuromuscular Disease Mitochondrial Disease Patient Cohort (UK) led by Professor Douglass Turnbull at Newcastle university. The development of this cohort will facilitate large-scale interventional trials of drugs and novel treatments such as sequential resistance-endurance exercise. The cohort will also provide the opportunity to assess various prevention strategies including those for cardiomyopathy, stroke-like episodes, migraine and epilepsy.

National Capabilities Survey

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 9 January 2008, Official Report, column 596W, on influenza, to which private sector organisations the National Capabilities Survey is sent. [245503]

Dawn Primarolo: The National Capabilities Survey is sent to Category 1 and 2 organisations (as defined by the Civil Contingencies Act), Government Departments and several independent health care providers in England and Wales. From the Independent Healthcare Sector, 35 organisations were asked to respond to the survey.

National Institute for Health Research Senior Investigators

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the first cohort of National Institute for Health Research Senior Investigators has been appointed. [245768]

Dawn Primarolo: National Institute for Health Research senior investigators are selected in open competition by an international panel of judges. The first cohort of 100 investigators took up post in April this year. A directory is available at:

www.nihr.ac.uk/faculty_senior_investigators_directory.aspx.

Their appointments are for three to five years.

National Strategy for Dementia Care

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department plans to publish the National Strategy for Dementia Care. [245696]

Phil Hope: We will publish the National Dementia Strategy early in 2009, which will be a major landmark in improving services for people with dementia and their carers.

NHS Direct: Contracts

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the names are of all suppliers with which the NHS Direct NHS Trust holds contracts. [245626]

Mr. Bradshaw: This information is contained in the list of NHS Direct suppliers which has been placed in the Library.

NHS Direct has contracts with those suppliers listed providing various goods and services and these include the following:

contracts under Framework Agreements set up by:

1. the Purchasing and Supplies Agency (PASA);

2. the Office of Government Commerce (OGC);

3. the Central Office of Information (COI); contracts awarded following OJEU notices advertised where over the EU thresholds; contracts awarded following competitive tender where under EU thresholds; and ad-hoc orders placed in line with the Trusts Standing Orders Reservation and Delegation.

NHS Foundation Trusts

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of NHS (a) acute and (b) mental health trusts have become NHS foundation trusts. [245743]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are 225 acute and mental health trusts that are eligible to become NHS foundation trusts. The following table gives the information requested.

	NHS foundation trusts	NHS trusts	Total	Percentage of NHS foundation trusts
Acute	82	87	169	48.5
Mental health	31	25	56	55.4
Total	113	112	225	50.2

NHS Foundation Trusts: Governing Bodies

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department plans to extend membership of NHS foundation hospital trusts' boards to members of the public; and whether a timescale has been produced for this policy. [244177]

Mr. Bradshaw: The constitution of both the board of governors and board of directors of a NHS Foundation Trust is set out in National Health Service Act 2006 schedule 7 sub 7, and sub 15 respectively.

Requirements for the board of governors include that more than half must be elected by the members, and at least three members must be elected by the staff constituency. One member must be appointed by a primary care trust for which the FT provides services, and at least one member of the board must be appointed by a local authority. If any of the FT's hospitals includes a medical or dental scheme provided by a university, at least one of the board of governors must be appointed by that university. An organisation specified in the constitution as a partnership organisation may appoint a member of the board of governors also.

There are no plans to extend the membership of boards and therefore no timescale.

NHS Trusts: Billing

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health trusts have not met the 10 day invoice payment target to small and medium-sized enterprises. [246105]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not currently collect such performance data because no specific requirement has yet been placed on national health service bodies to meet a 10 day target.

However, David Nicholson, NHS Chief Executive, wrote to all NHS Trust Chief Executives on 21 October 2008 asking them to examine and review existing payment practices and payment performance and to move as closely as possible to the 10-day payment commitment that has been set for Government Departments wherever practical. Bill Moyes, Executive Chair, Monitor, has written similarly to all Foundation Trusts.

NHS prompt payment performance against the 30 day payment target is reported in annual accounts. The 2007-08 accounts for NHS Trusts recorded an 83 per cent. achievement against the 30 day payment target for non-NHS payments.

NHS Trusts: Finance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts' financial balances are most at risk from being reported under international financial reporting standards; and what the balance in question is in each case. [246841]

Mr. Bradshaw: National health service organisations will be required to prepare their statutory accounts in accordance with international financial reporting standards (IFRS) for the first time for the 2009-10 financial year.

The 2009-10 operating framework requires NHS organisations to submit their final IFRS compliant financial plans for 2009-10 in March 2009. As such the detailed financial impact of moving to IFRS is not currently available.

NHS Trusts: Leasehold

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts have (a) leases and (b) private finance initiative undertakings; and what the value of such leases and initiatives are in each case. [246555]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information in respect of the private finance initiative (PFI) schemes has been placed in the Library. This shows the capital value of each PFI scheme which has reached financial close as well as all the annual and total payments from revenue sources to the private sector under the life of the contract.

Information on operating and finance leases for both national health service trusts and primary care trusts has also been placed in the Library with appropriate explanatory notes. These are recorded separately by NHS bodies as they have different accounting effects. Under current standard United Kingdom accounting practice, the entity assessed to enjoy the risks and rewards of ownership, irrespective of legal title, will recognise the leased asset in its balance sheet. Where an NHS body is the lessee in a finance lease, the asset will appear in that body's balance sheet; as a lessee in an operating lease no asset is recorded (i.e. it is off balance sheet).

NHS: Accountancy

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of the use of international financial reporting standards on the budgets of (a) the NHS and (b) foundation trusts. [246556]

Mr. Bradshaw: National health service organisations will be required to prepare their statutory accounts in accordance with international financial reporting standards (IFRS) for the first time for the 2009-10 financial year.

The 2009-10 operating framework requires NHS organisations to submit their final IFRS compliant financial plans for 2009-10 in March 2009. As such, the detailed financial impact of moving to IFRS is not currently available.

2008-09 NHS accounts will continue to be prepared and published under current accounting guidance.

Accounting information in respect of NHS foundation trusts is not collected by the Department, but is available from the independent regulator, Monitor.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the projected surplus or deficit for NHS trusts (a) against current accounting standards and (b) against international financial reporting standards in (i) 2008-09 and (ii) 2009-10. [246557]

Mr. Bradshaw: National health service organisations will be required to prepare their statutory accounts in accordance with international financial reporting standards (IFRS) for the first time for the 2009-10 financial year.

2008-09 NHS accounts will be prepared under current accounting guidance. At the end of quarter 2 of 2008-09, the NHS (excluding foundation trusts) is forecasting an overall surplus of £1.73 billion.

The 2009-10 operating framework requires NHS organisations to submit their final IFRS compliant financial plans for 2009-10 in March 2009. As such projected outturns are not currently available.

NHS: Data Protection

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken, or intends to take, to ensure that incomplete or invalidated data returns from NHS bodies shared across Government for internal purposes are not used publicly. [246687]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government attach the highest importance to Departments maintaining the integrity of official statistics and to upholding the rules relating to their publication.

The Cabinet Secretary is working with the Permanent Secretaries of the Departments concerned, including my own, to understand what happened in the case of last month's release of statistics on knife crime. It would be inappropriate to comment further at this stage.

NHS: Finance

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether local NHS trusts will be allowed to retain any surpluses made this financial year to spend on local health services in future years. [245076]

Mr. Bradshaw: Any surplus made by a national health service trust in the 2008-09 financial year is retained within their accounts as part of their cumulative income and expenditure reserve.

The surpluses generated and held locally, are giving NHS organisations much more flexibility to be even more responsive to patient needs, giving clinicians and managers the necessary headroom to better plan for new services and to manage risk.

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much local NHS trusts spent on training in each of the last five years for which records are available. [245077]

Ann Keen: Information about local NHS trusts spend on training is not collected centrally.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what spending on the NHS in England has been in (a) real terms and (b) nominal terms in each year since 1990; and what estimate he has made of expenditure on the NHS in (i) real terms and (ii) nominal terms in England in each year until 2010-11. [245625]

Mr. Bradshaw: The requested information is given in the following table.

Total net NHS expenditure in (a) real and (b) nominal terms 1990-91 to 2010-11

[2] Figures are not consistent over the period (1971-72 to 2010-11), therefore it is difficult to make comparisons across different periods.
[7] Capital expenditure has been modified in 2009-10 and 2010-11 to reflect the changes announced in the pre-Budget report.
Notes:
1. Expenditure excludes NHS (AME)
2. Total expenditure is calculated as the sum of revenue and capital expenditure net of non-Trust depreciation and impairments. This is in line with HMT Guidance.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts (a) paid and (b) did not pay 95 per cent. or more of undisputed invoices within contracts terms or 30 days where no terms had been agreed in (i) 2005-06, (ii) 2006-07 and (iii) 2007-08; and what the monetary value of those invoices was in each case in each year. [245984]

Mr. Bradshaw: National health service prompt performance against the 30 day target is reported in annual accounts. Year-on-year performance for NHS organisations (excluding foundation trusts but including the relevant part of the year for part-year foundation trusts) has been placed in the Library.

Overall performance for NHS trusts has improved year-on-year, from 77.5 per cent. in 2005-06, 79.1 per cent. in 2006-07 to 83.3 per cent. in 2007-08.

NHS: Information and Communications Technology

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what fines have been (a) levied against and (b) paid by CSC for late delivery of the Lorenzo system; whether local service providers will be paid for upgrades from interim solutions to Lorenzo; and whether the local service providers will pay hospitals' costs incurred in upgrading from such interim solutions where they have been installed. [243192]

Mr. Bradshaw: National programme for information technology contracts do not contain provision for "fines", but do provide for delay deductions to be paid by the local service provider (LSP) should the LSP fail to achieve certain key milestones. Under these arrangements some £22.7 million has to date been paid by the Computer Sciences Corporation, some of which has been earned back.

The LSP is paid for all deployments including upgrades from agreed interim solutions to Lorenzo. The deployment of interim solutions allows the trust to gain early benefit from business change that will be required when Lorenzo is implemented.

The local implementation costs of national programme systems and services, including upgrading from agreed interim systems are paid by the NHS bodies that benefit from them and they receive funding out of normal NHS allocations.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 12 November 2008, on NHS: information and communications technology, if he will place in the Library a copy of each of the breach of contract notices sent to Fujitsu. [246030]

Mr. Bradshaw: Publication of the breach of contract notices issued to Fujitsu, in the context of ongoing negotiations to reach an agreement with the company, would put that objective at risk and could potentially compromise the Department's position in any possible future litigation. Either outcome would or would be likely to cause prejudice to the commercial interests of the Department.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 12 November 2008, on NHS: information and communications technology, how many contractor event of default notices have been issued; on what dates and to whom such notices have been issued; what the reasons for issue were in each case; and if he will place in the Library a copy of each such notice. [246031]

Mr. Bradshaw: As part of the normal contractual processes, a number of contractor event of default notices have been issued, reflecting operational matters identified during the normal course of contract delivery that need to be addressed. The majority of the matters identified have been addressed using the existing contractual remedies.

The information requested is in the table.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 930W, on NHS: information and communications technology, how many one-off payments have been made. [246033]

Mr. Bradshaw: The total number of payments relating to deployments made to local service providers (LSPs) since the inception of the contracts is 107. This includes a number of forward payments, a proportion of which have subsequently been depleted in recognition of successful deployments.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 930W, on NHS: information and communications technology, (1) what payments have been made to aid with suppliers' capital costs under Connecting for Health and the London Programme for IT; [246034]

(2) what payments have been made in advance to aid with Fujitsu's capital costs; and what mechanism there is for recouping those payments in the case of work not completed. [246035]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is in the following table.

Contract	Total forward payments (£ million)
London LSP	333.18
South (Fujitsu)	486.05

Forward payments are repayable on demand in the event of non-delivery.

NHS: Standards

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in developing a series of practical human rights tools to improve service planning and delivery in the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [245758]

Phil Hope: The Department has a programme of work on human rights that has resulted in the publication of 'Human Rights in Healthcare—A framework for local action', launched on 7 October 2008. The framework, a copy of which has been placed in the Library, contains guidance for national health service organisations on promoting human rights in their work, and includes a CD-Rom containing practical tools developed by five NHS trusts who have been piloting human rights based approaches in health care. These tools are also available on the Department of Health website, together with an independent evaluation of this work by Ipsos MORI. A copy of the evaluation has been placed in the Library.

NHS: Waiting Lists

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were on waiting lists for NHS treatment in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in each year since 1997. [244897]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information is not available in the format requested. However, the following table shows information on the total commissioner based inpatient waiting list from 1997 to present.

	Middlesbrough Primary Care Trust (PCT)	Redcar and Cleveland PCT	Stockton PCT	Hartlepool PCT	Tees Health Authority (HA) area	North East Strategic Health Authority area	England

Obesity: East Riding

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number and percentage of children under the age of 16 who are clinically obese in the East Riding of Yorkshire PCT area; and if he will make a statement. [244781]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the format requested. Prevalence data on obesity by primary care trust (PCT) are only available for children in two school years. The number of children who are obese is not available.

Information on the proportion of children that are obese in the East Riding of Yorkshire PCT is collected through the National Child Measurement Programme (NCMP). The NCMP report provides high-level analysis of the prevalence of obese children, in reception year (aged four to five years) and year six (aged 10 to 11 years), measured in England in the school year 2007-08.

This information is available in the "National Child Measurement Programme 2007/08 school year headline results", which was published on 11 December 2008. The prevalence of obese children at PCT level can be found in annex 1: Detailed tables, Table A (pages 31-32). A copy of this publication has already been placed in the Library.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246344]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department does not hold figures on the number of former prisoners it employs.

It is departmental policy to not automatically exclude an individual from applying for a post if he or she has a previous conviction. In common with other Government Departments the Department applies the Cabinet Office's Baseline Personnel Security Standard. That Standard includes a check on Criminal Record Declaration of 'unspent convictions' by the applicant. The Department's Human Resources division then decide on a case-by-case basis, making a judgment based on that conviction and the post applied for, and considering whether there would be any conflicts of interest in employing that individual.

The Department would usually not know about any 'spent' convictions under the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act. When a member of staff needs to be security cleared under National Security Vetting procedures, a part of that procedure is a Criminal Record Declaration of all previous convictions. These declarations are checked by the Department's Security Vetting Team against police records who then make a decision whether to grant security clearance.

Organogram

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's administrative organogram. [243837]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information available has been placed in the Library.

Pacesetters Programme

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many strategic health authorities are taking part in the Pacesetters programme. [245761]

Dawn Primarolo: To date, six strategic health authorities (SHAs), and six trusts in each of their areas, are currently participating in the Pacesetters programme. The SHAs are: East Midlands, London, South East Coast, South West, West Midlands, and Yorkshire and the Humber.

Partnership for Patients Programme

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the Partnership for Patients Programme; and if he will make a statement. [245738]

Mr. Bradshaw: National health service primary care trusts are working with local libraries as part of the Partnership for Patients Programme to help support patients in using information to make their choices when they are referred to hospital. Following successful pilots, librarians are now being trained, via e-learning, as information providers who can help patients access choice information from NHS Choices and make their hospital booking through Choose and Book.

The Partnership for Patients Programme is one of the levers the Department recommends primary care trusts use to make their local population aware of the range of choices open to them, currently around 500 of a possible 3,044 public libraries are currently offering this support. The 10 national health service strategic health authorities are now leading the implementation of the library project at a local level.

Patient Choice Schemes

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Choose and Book system is now operational throughout England. [245740]

Mr. Bradshaw: All national health service hospitals are now using Choose and Book, along with 93 per cent. of general practitioner (GP) practices in England. There are now up to 28,000 bookings taking place every day, and 107,000 referrals every week. Over 10 million referrals having been made using the system.

Choose and Book continues to become the everyday method of referral across the national health service. Around half of all GP referrals to first consultant out-patient appointments are going through Choose and Book, and the number of referrals to other services, including community based services and allied health professionals are increasing steadily.

Choose and Book is easy and convenient to use, and over the last 12 months the national system has been available for use over 99 per cent. of the time.

Pharmacy

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has had on proposals in the Pharmacy White Paper; and if he will make a statement. [245756]

Phil Hope: We are currently analysing responses to the consultation "Pharmacy in England: Building on strengths - delivering the future - proposals for legislative reform" which ended on 20 November 2008 and will make further announcements in due course. However, in respect of the consultation proposals to amend the criteria for dispensing by doctors, I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer given to the hon. Member for Bassetlaw (John Mann) on 16 December 2008, Official Report, column 952.

Power Stations: Health Hazards

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to issue guidance on any known effects on humans of prolonged residence in proximity to power stations to families who live near such installations; and if he will make a statement. [244213]

Dawn Primarolo: The Environment Agency regulates emissions from power stations, which have an important influence on air pollution levels but do not alone lead to local breaches of the air quality objectives in the Air Quality Strategy. There has been no specific study of the health of people living around power stations but the health benefits of reductions in emissions from power stations overall (locally and nationally) have been assessed in reports available on the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/airquality/publications/stratreview-analysis/index.htm

Guidance on the health effects of air pollution in general is available on the website of the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants:

http://www.advisorybodies.doh.gov.uk/comeap/statementsreports/healtheffects.htm.

There have been studies of the incidence of childhood cancer undertaken around nuclear power stations in particular and these have been reviewed by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE). In its 10th report, it concluded that there was no evidence of excess numbers of cases in any local 25 km area around any of the nuclear power stations:

Prescription Drugs

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps his Department is taking to (a) ensure equitable payment to dispensing appliance contractors and pharmacy contractors for equivalent services under Part IX of the Drug Tariff proposals and (b) extend the expensive prescription fee to dispensing appliance contractors; [245704]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the competition implications of not extending the same prescription fee structure to dispensing appliance contractors and to pharmacies; and if he will make a statement. [245703]

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the competition implications of not extending the same prescription fee structure to dispensing appliance contractors and to pharmacies; and if he will make a statement. [245798]

Phil Hope: A review of the arrangements under Part IX of the Drug tariff for the provision of stoma and urology items—and related services—in primary care is currently under way. One of the stated aims of the review is that it seeks to make service provided by and payment provision to dispensing appliance contractors (DACs) and pharmacy contractors more equitable. A number of proposals have been put forward in consultation issued by the Department and extending the expensive prescription fee to DACs has been raised by respondents and will therefore be considered. The consultation closed in September 2008; details of the how this work will progress in light of responses and a final impact assessment will be published in the new year.

Primary Care Trusts

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his national support programme for primary care trust board development. [245741]

Mr. Bradshaw: As part of the World Class Commissioning Programme, "PCT Board Development Framework" can be found at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Managingyourorganisation/Commissioning/Worldclasscommissioning/Supportanddevelopment/DH_084999 and a copy has been placed in the Library.

Primary Care Trusts: Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what proportion of primary care trust revenue allocations for the 2009-10 financial year the health inequalities formula has been applied, with the meaning described on page 28 of his Department's Report of the Advisory Committee on Resource Allocation published 8 December 2008. [245627]

Mr. Bradshaw: One Advisory Committee on Resource Allocation (ACRA) objective is to help to reduce avoidable health inequalities through resource allocation. To achieve this objective, a separate health inequalities formula has been developed which targets funds at the places with the worst health outcomes. This is a more transparent way of contributing towards the reduction in health inequalities through resource allocation, and highlights our commitment to tackling the issue of health inequality.

ACRA could not determine the proportion of allocations to apply the health inequalities formula to and left it to ministerial decision. Ministers decided to apply the formula to 15 per cent. of the allocations, excluding the mental health component of the formula (which already includes an adjustment for unmet need) and HIV/AIDS. This keeps the distribution of funding between the most and least deprived areas in line with the previous formula.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what variables are included in the weighted capitation formula used to inform primary care trust revenue allocation for 2009-10; and what the data sources are for each. [245628]

Mr. Bradshaw: The variables included in the weighted capitation formula for 2009-10 primary care trust revenue allocations and their data sources are set out in the Department's publication Resource Allocation: Weighted Capitation Formula (Sixth Edition), which has been placed in the Library, and which is also available at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_091849.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the weighted capitation targets per (a) unweighted and (b) weighted head are for (i) 2008-09 and (ii) 2009-10 (A) for England on average and (B) for each primary care trust. [245629]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information is provided in the table for 2009-10. Weighted capitation targets were not calculated for 2008-09 because the formula which determines them was frozen while the Advisory Committee on Resource Allocation were granted more time to conclude their review.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 8 December 2008, Official Report, columns 30-8WS, on primary care trust revenue allocations/NHS operating framework, what assessment he has made of the pace of change policy relating to the new resource allocation formula; and in what year he expects primary care trusts will receive an actual revenue allocation equivalent to the target revenue allocation determined by the weighted capitation formula. [245813]

Mr. Bradshaw: Pace of change policy for the 2009-10 and 2010-11 revenue allocations ensures stability of funding for primary care trusts (PCTs), and allows them to make progress nationally and in local priority areas:

no PCT will receive less than an average of 5.2 per cent. per year over two years;

under target PCTs will receive average growth (5.5 per cent.) per year, or above; and by the end of 2010-11, no PCT will be more than 6.2 per cent. below its fair share of available resources.

We are committed to bringing PCTs to their target allocations as soon as is practicable. However, this has to be consistent with all PCTs receiving sufficient extra funding to enable them to deliver on national and local priorities. Pace of change policy for the next round of allocations will be considered in the light of the overall resources available for the NHS.

Public Analyst Laboratories

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which public analyst laboratories were open in 1997. [245803]

Dawn Primarolo: In 1997 there were public analyst laboratories in Aberdeen, Belfast, Birmingham, Bristol, Carmarthen, Cardiff (Cardiff City Authority laboratory), Cardiff (Mid-Glamorgan Authority laboratory), Chester, Dundee, Durham, Edinburgh, Exeter, Glasgow, Hull, Leicester, Liverpool, London (London Bridge), London (New Cross), Manchester, Matlock, Newcastle, Norwich, Preston, Salford, Sheffield, Southsea, Stafford, Wakefield, Worcester, Taunton, West Malling and Wolverhampton.

Race for Health Programme

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary care trusts are taking part in the Race for Health Programme. [245760]

Ann Keen: To date, 21 primary care trusts are participating in the Race for Health programme. The PCTs are: Berkshire East, Bradford and Airedale Teaching, Bristol, Ealing, Haringey Teaching, Hastings and Rother, Lambeth, Leeds, Leicester City, Liverpool, Luton Teaching, Manchester, Norfolk, Oldham, Shropshire County, South Birmingham, Suffolk, Trafford, Wandsworth, Westminster, and Wolverhampton City.

Scarborough and North East Yorkshire Healthcare NHS Trust: Billing

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will encourage the Scarborough and North East Yorkshire Healthcare NHS Trust to settle its invoices to small and medium-sized enterprises within the target of 10 days. [246107]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not currently collect such performance data because no specific requirement has yet been placed on national health service bodies to meet a 10-day target.

However, David Nicholson, NHS Chief Executive, wrote to all NHS trust Chief Executives on 21 October 2008 asking them to examine and review existing payment practices and payment performance and to move as closely as possible to the 10-day payment commitment that has been set for Government Departments wherever practical. Bill Moyes, Executive Chair, Monitor, has written similarly to all NHS foundation trusts.

Schizophrenia

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department plans to allow patients with paranoid schizophrenia who have a history of violence to choose their own treatment options. [245730]

Phil Hope: "Our Choices in Mental Health", written in consultation with service users and carers and published in 2006, sets out a framework that will make choice available locally to people who use mental health services in England. A copy of the publication has been placed in the Library. When "Our Choices in Mental Health" was published, it was considered that offering a choice of provider or treatment to service users with more severe and enduring conditions would not always be appropriate.

The Care Programme Approach, the process of assessing mental health users' needs, should provide each mental health service user with an opportunity to be actively involved in agreeing their treatment plans with their care coordinator.

Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Advisory Group

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the work of the Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Advisory Group; and if he will make a statement. [245759]

Phil Hope: In autumn 2007 the Department decided to review the work of the Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Advisory Group (SOGIAG) to date with a view to strengthening procedures and giving the group more support from officials. The Office for Public Management (OPM) was commissioned to undertake this independent review. A copy of their report has been placed in the Library.

Following the OPM report the Department has refreshed the group. In summer 2008 the Department went through an open appointments process and now has a new external high-level Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender (LGBT) Advisory Group. Work has begun on several projects, including in the areas of suicide prevention for LGBT people, the social care needs of LGBT people, and partnership working with community organisations.

The Department has also begun a process of reviewing how we engage with all equality stakeholders and this review is due to report in spring 2009.

Sight Impaired

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department follows in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness. [245717]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department follows Royal National Institute of Blind People 'See it Right' guidelines in the production of its publications. This includes guidelines on the use of red and green in printed materials. All departmental publications are published through Central Office for Information, which has a policy of adherence to these guidelines.

Social Enterprise Investment Fund

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much he expects the Social Enterprise Investment Fund to spend in 2008-09. [245746]

Phil Hope: Applications to the Social Enterprise Investment Fund are currently being assessed. However, £11 million capital and £7 million revenue has been allocated to the Social Enterprise Investment Fund for 2008-09.

Social Enterprise Pathfinder Projects

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on each of the 26 social enterprise pathfinder projects set up by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [245747]

Phil Hope: This information is not held centrally. The Department has commissioned an external evaluation of the Social Enterprise Pathfinders. The evaluation report is expected in early spring 2009.

Social Services

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase public awareness and understanding of national social care needs. [244765]

Phil Hope: Ahead of publishing the Care and Support Green Paper early in 2009, the Department has been raising awareness of existing social care services while seeking views about future care and support services. A six-month public engagement process was established this year in order to gather views and comments from stakeholders, service users and members of the public which will help inform next year's Green Paper. In addition, we achieved media coverage both national and regional, and worked with stakeholders to obtain coverage in their communication channels, including newsletters and websites. Once the process of analysing the responses has been finalised, plans will be made to publish a report of the responses received alongside the Green Paper.

The 'Putting People First' initiative was set-up in 2007 as a concordat with other Government Departments and range of stakeholders from the care sector. This identifies a key role for local government in providing access to information, advice and advocacy (where it is needed) in enabling people to exercise choice and control over their lives.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission research to analyse potential financial savings to the Department of Health of providing preventative care services to people with low and moderate needs. [244768]

Phil Hope: We recognise the importance of research to support development in this area, which is why we have invested in the Partnership for Older People Projects and the work of the Care Services Efficiency and Delivery Team on enablement. Both of these provide an evidence base on the most effective forms of early intervention and this work is continuing.

The Government have also published "Improving Health and Work: changing lives" on 25 November 2008, which is our vision to create a society where the links between work and health are recognised by all, where everyone aspires to a healthy and fulfilling working life and where health conditions and disabilities are not a bar to enjoying the benefits of work. A copy of the publication has been placed in the Library. This includes evidenced based policy work on early intervention, for example 'fit for work' pilots. These aim to help people back to or remain in work when they develop a health condition or impairment. We are testing a range of services to provide support for people who develop health conditions.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure that social care needs are met. [245018]

Phil Hope: The responsibility for delivery of social care and ensuring that social care needs are met rests with local authorities. The Department provides the policy framework to support local authorities in meeting their statutory requirements.

Local authorities have reported a continued increase in social care expenditure. Last year (2007-08), provisional data show that local authorities reported gross current spend on adult social care services was £15.6 billion. This has increased by 85 per cent. over the last 10 years.

From 2008-11, the Department has committed to contributing over £3.5 billion into adult social care services specific revenue grants and the area based grant (ABG—this enables flexibility for local authorities to make decisions concerning local priorities, of which social care is one, and delivering public services). This is an average increase of over 10 per cent. per year from the Department.

The Department will continue to work collaboratively with local authorities and their representative bodies, other Government Departments (working across the boundaries of social care, health, housing and employment), service users and other key stakeholders to evaluate the risks and opportunities to support the delivery of social care. The vision for social care is laid down in "Putting People First", a copy of which has already been placed in the Library. This document was signed by six Secretaries of State and a range of key stakeholders from local government and partner bodies. The Department is now working with all of these stakeholders to support the delivery of that vision. The Department is investing more than half a billion pounds in developing more personalised care services through the Social Care Reform grant.

Social Services: Fees and Charges

Roger Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to meet the Coalition on Charging to discuss its report Charging into Poverty as part of his formulation of policy on charging for social care. [244101]

Phil Hope: Most members of the Coalition on Charging have been meeting with departmental officials as part of the stakeholder engagement, which is helping to inform the development of the Green Paper on the future of care and support. We will take full account of the Coalition's report in considering the future arrangements for care and support.

Social Services: Public Consultation

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the forthcoming Green Paper on social care will include proposals on supporting people. [246834]

Phil Hope: The whole ethos of the Care and Support Green Paper, to be published early in 2009, will be how people can be better supported in the future.

The Government intend to publish its proposals for reform in order to address demographic changes and an estimated widening gap in funding. Ahead of producing the Green Paper, the Department has run a six-month public engagement process in order to gather views and comments from stakeholders, service users and members of the public to help inform the Green Paper to help ensure this will meet the needs of those requiring support.

Social Workers

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of social workers working with local authorities but employed by an agency; and if he will make a statement. [245568]

Phil Hope: The number of agency staff working in social services departments by local authority is not held centrally. The Local Government Association estimated in 2006 that the average percentage of agency staff working in posts for adults within local authority social services departments in England was 5.2 per cent. This was estimated to equate to around 8,800 agency staff covering a range of roles including field social workers but also residential care workers and administrative staff.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent by each local authority on employing social workers via agencies in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [245569]

Phil Hope: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has issued to local authorities on the employment of social workers via agencies; and if he will make a statement. [245570]

Phil Hope: The General Social Care Council has issued statutory codes of practice for social care workers and their employers under section 62 of the Care Standards Act 2000. They provide a clear guide for all those who work in social care, setting out the standards of conduct workers and their employers should meet. They also mean that people who use services, carers and the wider public will know what standard of conduct and practice they can expect.

Third Sector Funding and Investment Review

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the implications for the Section 64 scheme and the Opportunities for Volunteering scheme of his Department's strategic review of funding and investment in the third sector; [245548]

(2) what progress the Third Sector Funding and Investment Review has made on the development of a strategic framework for investment in the third sector by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [245549]

Phil Hope: In July 2008 the Department published a response to the strategic review of Third Sector Funding and Investment consultation, undertaken between December 2007 and March 2008. A copy has been placed in the Library.

The vision for future funding of the third sector included: investment in strategic partners; support for innovation excellence and service development; promote and support volunteering; and contracting for expertise required at national level. There was strong support for this vision and the principles underpinning this approach.

From the feedback on the proposals we have developed a funding framework that underpins a wider third sector investment programme. The programme will be developed over time as more funding schemes in the Department are brought into the framework. For 2009-10 the third sector investment programme will include:

Innovation Excellence and Service Development Fund - this replaces the Section 64 General Scheme of grants - project funding; and Strategic Partner Programme - this replaces the Section 64 General scheme of grants-core funding.

We anticipate that from 2010-11 a new volunteer investment fund, building on the existing Opportunities for Volunteering Scheme, will form part of the Third Sector Investment Programme. Moving forward, policy specific funding schemes and initiatives will be drawn under the banner of the wider programme.

This process will result in transformation of previous piecemeal arrangements for funding the third sector into a strategic portfolio of investments that will more explicitly support delivery of the Department's objectives and priorities supporting a fundamental step change in the Department's funding relationships with third sector organisations.

Tobacco

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to publish the responses made to his Department's consultation on the Future of Tobacco Control; and if he will make a statement. [244755]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement made by the Secretary of State for Health on 9 December 2008, Official Report, columns 46-47WS.

The Government have published a report summarising the more than 96,000 responses received during the consultation. There are no plans to publish specific consultation responses.

The report has already been placed in the Library and is also available on the Department's website at:

http://www.dh.gov.uk/en/Consultations/Responsestoconsultations/DH_091382.

Transsexuality

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average waiting time between a patient being accepted for NHS gender reassignment surgery and completion of the operation was in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in the latest period for which figures are available; [244893]

(2) how many people are waiting for NHS gender reassignment surgery in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency; [244894]

(3) how many people have unsuccessfully applied for NHS gender reassignment surgery in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in each of the last five years. [244895]

Mr. Bradshaw: This information is not collected centrally. The Department's guidance for general practitioners and other professionals on the care of gender variant people, was published in May 2008.

Tuberculosis

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of tuberculosis cases notified in England were of (a) homeless persons, (b) problem drug-users and (c) prisoners in the last 12 months; and what proportion of such people in each category received directly-observed therapy from the start of their treatment in that period. [245427]

Dawn Primarolo: No data are collected on these risk factors, nor on the proportion of people receiving directly observed therapy. The Health Protection Agency has recently redeveloped its surveillance system to collect this information about risk factors and whether patients started on treatment are under direct observation, and the new system is currently being rolled out nationally.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many instances of tuberculosis have been recorded in (a) Gravesham, (b) Kent and (c) England in each quarter of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [246003]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table indicates the number of tuberculosis cases in Gravesham, Kent and England for the calendar years 2000 to 2006.

Area	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006
Gravesham	8	<5	<5	8	7	8	11
Kent	60	73	78	90	76	84	105
England	6,091	6,414	6,638	6,741	7,049	7,846	7,862

Notes:
1. Cases in Gravesham and Kent were determined on the basis of local authority (of patient's residence).
2. Data for Gravesham are for Gravesham local authority; data for Kent comprise: Medway, Ashford, Canterbury, Dartford, Dover, Gravesham, Maidstone, Sevenoaks, Shepway, Swale, Thanet, Tonbridge and Malling, and Tunbridge Wells local authorities.
3. We have not provided data by quarter because the case numbers per quarter would be very small and would have to be suppressed due to the risk of deductive disclosure. Local authority information is not yet available for 2007.

Vitamin B12

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the guideline thresholds for vitamin B12 levels set by his Department and the World Health Organisation differ; and if he will make a statement. [244917]

Dawn Primarolo: The "guideline thresholds" have been taken to refer to the recommended or reference nutrient intakes for vitamin B12.

In 1991, the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy (COMA) set the Reference Nutrient Intake (the amount of a nutrient which meets the needs of almost all individuals) for vitamin B12 at 1.5 micrograms vitamin B_{12} per day for UK adult men and women.

In 2004, the World Health Organisation (WHO) revised its recommended nutrient intakes for vitamin B_{12} upwards, from 1.0 microgram per day (set in 1988) to 2.4 micrograms per day for adults. The WHO recommendation appears to be largely based on the USA Institute of Medicine's (IOM) Dietary Reference Intakes for vitamin B_{12} published in 2000. The Institute of Occupational Medicine recommendation was based on a review of evidence some of which was not available to COMA in 1991.

The most recent National Diet and Nutrition Survey (NDNS) of adults aged 19-64 years reported mean daily vitamin B_{12} intakes exceed both COMA and WHO recommendations at 6.8 micrograms and 5.1 micrograms for men and women respectively.

WALES

Departmental Assets

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assets of his Department are planned to be sold in each financial year from 2007-08 to 2010-11; what the (a) description and (b) book value of each such asset is; what the expected revenue from each such sale is; and if he will make a statement. [245407]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department has no plans to sell assets, our main asset is Gwydyr House, which we occupy.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244719]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House. When responding to all correspondence, the Wales Office abides by the guidance set out in 'Handling correspondence from MPs, Lords, MEPs and Members of Devolved Assemblies' which was published by the Cabinet Office in July 2005.

In respect of emails, the information is only available at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of contractors and suppliers to his Department has reported compliance with the Government's security standards following publication of the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government, and the accompanying document, Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action, on 25 June 2008. [245306]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office does not directly use external suppliers or contractors to carry out its responsibilities. The Wales Office is provided with its IT and support services by the Ministry of Justice, who place an obligation on all of their contractors to provide IT and data management systems that meet Government security standards.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many contracts his Department has which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract is held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245334]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office does not store or process personal data overseas.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245372]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The responsibility of Senior Information Risk Owner was transferred to the newly-created post of Head of Corporate Services in November. The postholder is a member of the Department's Management Board.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the IT systems in his Department is fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245377]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office's IT services are provided by the Ministry of Justice. These IT systems are fully accredited to Government standards.

Departmental ICT

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what IT projects his Department is undertaking; and what the most recent estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the completion date of each is. [245403]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office is provided with its IT services by the Ministry of Justice. Consequently, the Department does not directly undertake IT projects.

Departmental Information Officers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many press and communications officers are employed by his Department. [245402]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office has three press and communications officers.

Departmental Internet

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spent maintaining its website in each of the last five years. [245397]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department has spent the following on maintaining our website.

2004-05	1,600

2005-06	1,600
2006-07	1,600
2007-08	6,936

The 2007-08 figure includes the cost of designing and establishing the new Wales Office website.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department has spent on broadband internet in each of the last five years. [245399]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office installed two broadband lines in January 2008, prior to this, we did not have any broadband. The cost of each line is £111 per quarter.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for which websites his Department provides funding. [245411]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My Department funds two departmental websites:

www.walesoffice.gov.uk

and

www.swyddfa.cymru.gov.uk

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many full-time equivalent staff in his Department work to assist special advisers; and what the cost of employing such staff was in each of the last three years. [245408]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office has no full-time support staff for special advisers.

Departmental Pensions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many civil servants working in his Department have pensions with a cash equivalent transfer value of over £1 million. [245409]

Mr. Paul Murphy: It is not appropriate to disclose pension information for civil servants other than board members, whose details are shown in the remuneration report in annual resource accounts for the Ministry of Justice.

A copy of the resource accounts for financial year 2007-08 can be found in the Library, or accessed electronically using the following link:

http://www.official-documents.gov.uk/document/hc0708/hc08/0869/0869.asp

Departmental Sick Leave

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hours of work were lost through sickness absence on the part of staff working in his Department in the last 12 months. [245405]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office does not record the sickness absence of its staff in terms of hours, but in terms of days and half days.

In the year to March 2008, 505.5 days were lost to sickness absence.

Departmental Written Questions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day his Department has answered on the due date in the current Session of Parliament. [245400]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office have not received any named day questions in the current parliamentary Session.

Plain English

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spent on Plain English Campaign training courses in each of the last five years. [245404]

Mr. Paul Murphy: No expenditure was incurred, but through staff development and coaching, my Department encourages all its staff to use Plain English.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Climate Change

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment his Department has made of its capacity to adapt to climate change; and what plans he has to publish a climate change adaptation strategy. [241172]

Mr. Woodward: The Adapting to Climate Change programme is responsible for the co-ordination of the Government's work on adaptation in England. In Northern Ireland—as in Scotland and Wales—the devolved Administration is responsible for considering how climate change will affect issues such as health, education and planning. However, it is recognised that there is a need to ensure coherence across the Administrations, and take a UK-wide approach on issues.

Therefore the UK Administrations are committed to working closely together to share best practice and develop initiatives.

My Department is working in conjunction with the NI Departments in responding to the challenges of climate change. In January 2007 the Scotland and Northern Ireland Forum for Environmental Research published a report entitled "Preparing for a changing climate in Northern Ireland". The report examined the ways in which Northern Ireland must prepare to meet both the opportunities and threats presented by the impacts of a changing climate. It focuses specifically on the impacts on, and the need for adaptation by, the public sector in Northern Ireland.

Under the Climate Change Act 2008 Northern Ireland will participate in the development of a UK-wide risk assessment which will help inform the development of a Northern Ireland Adaptation Strategy.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244712]

Mr. Woodward: The information is as follows.

(a) The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/peers correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House. When responding to all correspondence the NIO abides by the guidance as set out in "Handling correspondence from MPs, Lords, MEPs and Members of Devolved Assemblies" which was published by the Cabinet office in July 2005.

(b) In respect of e-mails, the NIO is unable to provide the information within the disproportionate cost limit as to do so would require gathering information from every official in the Department.

Departmental Data Protection

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many civil servants in his Department have been (a) investigated, (b) suspended and (c) dismissed for (i) losing and (ii) deliberately disclosing (A) data stored on departmental equipment and (B) confidential information in each year since 1997. [242917]

Paul Goggins: There have been three such cases in the Northern Ireland Office and its agencies and legal offices since 1997. As there are fewer than five cases, details about the cases cannot be released for reasons of confidentiality. The Northern Ireland Office has clear policies and processes in place to ensure that staff understand the importance of data security and data confidentiality and to ensure that any cases of potential data loss can be properly dealt with.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of contractors and suppliers to (a) his Department and (b) its agencies has reported compliance with the Government's security standards following publication of the report, "Data Handling Procedures in Government", and the accompanying document, "Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action", on 25 June 2008. [245328]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office breakdown percentage of contractors and suppliers that have reported compliance to Government requirements is: (a) the core Department—80 per cent.; and (b) our agencies—60 per cent. My departmental officials are working with our contractors and suppliers to ensure they maintain and improve compliance.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many contracts (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract is held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245349]

Mr. Woodward: There are no contracts in the Northern Ireland Office and its agencies that allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the IT systems in (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245391]

Mr. Woodward: The percentage of IT systems holding protectively marked data accredited in my Department is as follows: (a) the core Department 100 per cent., and (b) the agencies—75 per cent. The remaining systems that hold protectively marked data are in the accreditation process.

Departmental Drinking Water

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many water coolers are used by his Department. [243228]

Mr. Woodward: My Department's general policy is to use tap water where it is available. It currently has 16 coolers in six buildings and further reductions are planned.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246013]

Mr. Woodward: The civil service diversity strategy, 'Promoting Equality, Valuing Diversity', published in July, sets civil service wide targets in relation to gender, ethnicity and disability for the next three to five years.

The Department retains Human Resource information on staff including details of (a) sex and (c) age. Human resource information may also include voluntary monitoring declarations on (b) ethnicity and (d) disability, and (d) disability data are also held following the provision of reasonable adjustments and for emergency evacuation purposes.

In Northern Ireland, (where (f) religion and belief legislation does not apply) Northern Ireland legislation requires statutory monitoring of Northern Ireland community background to be undertaken for the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland.

At present, the Department is examining ways to sensitively monitor (e) sexual orientation.

The Department regularly assesses the diversity of its work force against its targets. In addition, Cabinet Office peer assessment of the Department's Diversity delivery plan for 2008-10 will take place in early 2009.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244352]

Mr. Woodward: Information on furniture spend by country of manufacture is not held and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. No goods have been purchased by my Department from Remploy.

Departmental Marketing

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 13 November 2008, Official Report, column 1318W, on departmental marketing, what each advertisement referred to was; and how much each cost. [243503]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is contained in the following table.

Type of Advertisement	Number	Advertisement referred to	Cost (£)
Newspaper	2	Understanding corporate manslaughter and Homicide Act 2007	2,447.00
Newspaper	1	Public consultation on a proposed Draft Criminal Justice (NI) Order 2007	2,252.53

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many special advisers were employed in his Department at each pay band on 30 November 2008; and what his Department's total expenditure on special advisers was in 2007-08. [243566]

Paul Goggins: The Government are committed to publishing an annual list detailing the number and costs of special advisers. Information for 2007-08 was published by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 July 2008, Official Report, columns 99-102WS.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent on (a) departmental Christmas parties and (b) staff entertainment in the last three years. [243734]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office does not allocate official funds for departmental Christmas parties.

Information on departmental expenditure specifically on staff entertainment could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Expenditure on entertainment is set out in accordance with the principles of Managing Public Money and the Treasury handbook on Regularity and Propriety.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 881W, on departmental hospitality, how much was spent by his Department's (a) agencies and (b) non-departmental public bodies on hosting events in the last 12 months. [244008]

Mr. Woodward: My Department's agencies spent £24,238 on hosting events in the last 12 months.

Information for the Northern Ireland Office's executive non-departmental bodies is an operational matter for each of the bodies, who operate independently of Government. I would encourage the hon. Member to write to the respective chief executives. Details of the NIO's non-departmental public bodies can be found in the NIO 2008 Departmental Report:

http://www.nio.gov.uk/northern_ireland_office_departmental_report_2008.pdf.

All expenditure has to be incurred in accordance with the principles of Managing Public Money and the Treasury handbook on Regularity and Propriety.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 881W, on departmental hospitality, which suppliers were contracted by (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department in connection with events hosted in the last 12 months. [244009]

Mr. Woodward: For the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) and its agencies, it would only be possible to impart a full listing of all suppliers who provided goods and services in connection with hosting events, at disproportionate cost.

Information for the NIO's executive non-departmental bodies is an operational matter for each of the bodies, who operate independently of Government. I would encourage the hon. Member to write to the respective chief executives.

Details of the NIO's non-departmental public bodies can be found in the NIO 2008 Departmental Report:

http://www.nio.gov.uk/
northern_ireland_office_departmental_report_2008.pdf.

Departmental Official Visits

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent on his transport on official visits in the last 12 months. [243443]

Mr. Woodward: Information on travel by the Secretary of State on official visits is not recorded separately from travel for normal ministerial duties, and to provide this breakdown could only be done so at disproportionate cost.

All ministerial travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to ensure that those temporary and permanent employees at the same grade in his Department who are paid at an hourly rate are paid at the same rate. [244387]

Mr. Woodward: All Northern Ireland Office (NIO) employees are paid on NIO pay scales in accordance with NIO terms and conditions, regardless of whether they are temporarily or permanently employed.

Departmental Television

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, columns 885-6W, on television, from which suppliers his Department has purchased televisions in the last 12 months. [244054]

Mr. Woodward: All television purchases in the last 12 months were made from suppliers on approved contracts for electrical supplies in line with procurement guidelines.

Departmental Temporary Employment

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 28 October 2008, Official Report, column 796W, on departmental temporary employment, how many staff were recruited through each company in each year; and for how long on average staff recruited through these companies worked for the Department in each year. [242309]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of temporary agency staff recruited through each company and the average length of time of employment for each person is not centrally held by the department.

These details could be ascertained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Vehicles

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 883W, on departmental vehicles, how many vehicles were owned by the Department in each year. [243235]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office excluding its agencies and executive non-departmental bodies owned six vehicles in each of the years 2003-04 to 2006-07 and three vehicles in 2007-08.

Inquiries

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which legal firms have worked on the Robert Hamill Inquiry; for what periods; who each firm represented; how much his Department has spent on legal fees related to the Inquiry; how much has been spent on the Inquiry in each month since it was established; and when the Inquiry is expected to report. [243393]

Mr. Woodward: I am advised by the Robert Hamill Inquiry that the following legal firms have worked on it.

Legal firm	Period of engagement	Representation
P. J. McGrory	July 2004 to date	Hamill family (Interested Party)
Eliott Duffy Garrett	June 2008	Legal services to the inquiry in relation to litigation conducted in Northern Ireland only

In accordance with the Robert Hamill Inquiry's published funding protocol, witnesses to the inquiry are also entitled to reasonable legal advice at the inquiry's expense and a number of firms have represented witnesses.

Regarding the naming of the participants in the inquiry who these firms represent, the inquiry has not yet concluded the anonymity process. The inquiry is still receiving fresh and renewed applications on article 2 and medical grounds. It has an ongoing duty of care to all witnesses and cannot therefore give the names out at present. Once a witness has given their evidence or had their statement read out at the oral hearings, their name will be in the public domain. This is not the current position.

This schedule excludes witnesses who, subject to the inquiry's prior approval, will be granted two hours of legal advice and assistance prior to them giving oral evidence but no legal representation at the oral hearings. These costs have not yet been incurred.

The total cost incurred by the Robert Hamill Inquiry for legal fees is £7.57 million.

The monthly spend of the inquiry is as follows:

Some of these firms have represented only anonymous witnesses, some have represented only witnesses seen in public, and some have represented both. For security (to preserve anonymity) and public interest reasons (not all the witnesses of either type have yet been called to give evidence) it is not felt appropriate to release even the names of the 'public' witnesses before the end of the hearings.

The total cost incurred by the Rosemary Nelson Inquiry for legal fees is £12.57 million.

The monthly spend of the inquiry is as follows:

The inquiry is expected to report by March 2010.

Mental Health

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the recommendations relevant to his Department's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capacity and Well-Being; and if he will make a statement. [244023]

Paul Goggins: The Northern Ireland Office welcomes the Foresight report and will be considering it with a view to taking up any relevant findings.

Part of that process will involve an assessment of what the report might mean for the Department's policies on absence management, flexible working and learning and development.

Reoffenders

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals there are in Northern Ireland who were released under the early release scheme in 1998 and following re-arrest or conviction are now in prison. [245138]

Paul Goggins: Of the 450 persons released 'early' on their sentences under the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998, available information indicates that 13 persons are currently in prison following re-arrest and conviction. Of the 13, one is in prison in England and another is in prison in the Republic of Ireland. In addition a further person is in prison in Northern Ireland for breach of licence without having been convicted of a further offence and another is in prison in Northern Ireland on remand for alleged further offending.

Sexual Offences: Registration

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were on the sex offenders' register in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [246331]

Paul Goggins: The number of sex offenders in Northern Ireland subject to the notification requirements of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 was as follows:

As at 31 March each year	Number
2008	774
2007	670
2005	544

The majority of persons who come under the notification requirements are subject to a notification period of five years or more and the annual increase largely reflects the number of new convictions.

A breakdown of figures for sex offenders subject to the notification requirements was not recorded on an annual basis until 2005. I am not, therefore, able to provide the information requested for 2004.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

African Horse Sickness

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department provides compensation to owners of horses infected with African horse sickness which are destroyed by his Department's veterinary surgeons to prevent further infection. [244536]

Jane Kennedy: In the event of an outbreak of African horse sickness, the Animal Health Act 1981 provides for compensation to be paid for equines slaughtered under the Act where they are infected or suspected of being infected with the disease. DEFRA is committed to discussing with the equine industry the issue of compensation, including the appropriate level.

Where the affected equine has been imported and slaughtered under the Animals and Animals Products (Import and Export) (England) Regulations 2006, there is no duty under the regulations to pay compensation.

Agriculture: Animal Welfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much his Department has allocated to support sustainable livestock production in 2008-09. [244681]

Jane Kennedy: Support aimed at improving the competitiveness of the livestock industry is available under Axis 1 of Rural Development Programme for England (RDPE). Some £249 million will be spent in total on Axis 1 over the period 2007-13, and a minimum of £107 million out of that total will be specifically devoted to the sustainable livestock industry. In 2008-09 the minimum allocated to the livestock sector is £23 million.

Livestock producers also will benefit from both a proportion of the £1.5 billion that is paid annually to English farmers under the Single Payment Scheme and the £3.2 billion that has been allocated for agri-environmental schemes which operate under Axis 2 of the RDPE over the period 2007-13.

Agriculture: Subsidies

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what estimate his Department has made of unspent funds under the single payment scheme; and what plans he has to allocate this funding for Article 68 measures; [243176]

(2) what plans his Department has to allocate funding under Article 68 measures under the Common Agricultural Policy. [243177]

Jane Kennedy: The difference between payments to date under the 2007 Single Payment Scheme and the theoretical maximum is in the region of £50 million, largely as a result of farmers not claiming against all of their entitlements. No decisions have been made to date on the use of 'Article 68' measures.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his policy is on the EU Common Agricultural Policy Health Check; and when he expects full decoupling to be achieved. [243461]

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the answer of 12 November 2008, Official Report, columns 1222-6W, on the Common Agricultural Policy, what recent assessment he has made of progress on decoupling as a result of the decisions made in the CAP Health Check. [243525]

Jane Kennedy: I refer to the written statement made to Parliament on 25 November by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State (Hilary Benn) about the outcome of the CAP health check negotiations. We believe that the health check will take the level of decoupled farm payments from 89 per cent. to 96 per cent. by 2013, although we estimate that the use of "national envelopes" could reduce that amount by up to 2.7 per cent., depending on how member states choose to implement them. The Government will continue to press in the EU for full decoupling of all farm payments.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment his Department has made of progress towards meeting the Rural Payments Agency's target of administering 75 per cent. of single farm payments to farmers in England by the end of January; [244179]

(2) what percentage of farmers in England have received their single farm payments for 2008. [244180]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 16 December 2008]: I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement that I made on 17 December 2008, Official Report, column 120WS.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the 2007-08 budget for the Common Agricultural Policy was allocated to the 10 recipients who received the most in payments under the policy. [244231]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 16 December 2008]: The percentage of the 2007-08 Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) budget allocated to the 10 recipients in England who received the most in payments under the policy was 1.1 per cent.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many demands to repay overpayments have been made against single farm payment scheme claimants in each of the last three years; and how many repayments have been made. [244977]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: Of the Single Payment Scheme (SPS) claims examined by the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) to date 6,557 overpayments invoices have been issued against SPS claimants broken down as follows for each of the last three years.

SPS scheme year	Invoices issued
2005	3,893
2007	416

RPA has received repayments from 1,610 customers either in full, as part of a repayment agreement or as a partial interception of a claim.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) mean, (b) median, (c) highest and (d) lowest demand has been to repay overpayments made against single farm payment claimants in each of the last three years. [244978]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: Of the Single Payment Scheme (SPS) claims examined to date the average, median, highest and lowest demand to repay overpayments made against SPS claimants in each of the last three scheme years are:

	Scheme year
	2005	2006	2007
Average	4,292.46	4,339.64	2,804.88
Median	802.74	1,040.43	922.21
Highest	738,198.25	649,138.33	117,493.20
Lowest	68.21	67.95	252.29

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total amount received is as a result of overpayment claims for the single payment scheme in each of the last three years. [244979]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: To date we have received the following amounts as a result of overpayment claims, for each of the last three years:

SPS scheme year	Value (£)
2005	9,372,627.72
2006	4,046,321.80
2007	158,718.75
Total	13,577,668.27

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reasons reclaims of single farm payment overpayments were made in the latest period for which figures are available. [244980]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The Rural Payments Agency is obliged to recover overpayments. The reasons for these Single Payment Scheme (SPS) overpayments include entitlement correction work—some of which claimants asked us to carry out, partial payments—which were made in the 2005 and 2006 SPS scheme years and where the final claim value once validation is completed is now less than the amount paid and penalties.

Penalties can be applied to SPS applications for several reasons; submission of an application after the deadline, inaccuracies in an application, if a farmer does not meet cross compliance standards, or if they apply, set aside management rules. The size of the penalty will depend on the problem found. For example the size of a land penalty will depend on the amount of invalid land claimed. The size of a late submission penalty will depend on the number of days after the deadline on which an application was received.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Single Payment Scheme payments for 2008 have been made to people in Morecambe and Lunesdale constituency; and what percentage of farmers in that constituency have received payment. [246102]

Jane Kennedy: Detailed analysis of Single Payment Scheme (SPS) payments by constituency is not available.

From April 2009, in accordance with EC Commission Regulation 259/2008, SPS payment details will be available on the UK CAP payments website for payments made between 16 October 2007 and 15 October 2008, which is the EU financial year. Subsequent scheme payments will be published on this website each April, together with all other common agricultural policy payments made.

Animal Welfare: Codes of Practice

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which codes of conduct to be issued under the Animal Welfare Act 2006 the Government is currently working on; and which bodies have been appointed to advise on each code. [243291][1]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA is currently consulting on three draft codes of practice to be made under the Animal Welfare Act 2006—cats, dogs and equines. We are also proposing to draft codes on the private keeping of primates and on the rearing of gamebirds for sporting purposes.

DEFRA has had the assistance and co-operation of the following stakeholders in the preparation of these codes:

Cat: British Small Animal Veterinary Association, Companion Animal Welfare Council, Feline Advisory Bureau, Pet Care Trust, Peoples Dispensary for Sick Animals, Pet Food Manufacturers Association, Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and an independent veterinary adviser. Representatives from the Scottish Executive and the Welsh Assembly Government acted as observers.

Dog: Companion Animal Welfare Council, Blue Cross, Dogs Trust, Kennel Club, Pet Care Trust, Pet Food Manufacturers Association, Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and an independent veterinary adviser. Representatives from the Scottish Executive and the National Assembly for Wales acted as observers.

Equine: DEFRA is consulting on a similar code of practice prepared by the Welsh Assembly Government. This code was prepared by Welsh Assembly Government in consultation with a number of horse interest bodies.

Primates: Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and a combination of animal keepers, dealers, with an interest in primates. Representatives from the Scottish Executive and the Welsh Assembly Government will act as observers.

Gamebirds: Animal Health, British Association for Sport Shooting, Countryside Alliance, Country Landowners Association, Game Conservancy Trust, Game Farmers Association, League Against Cruel Sports, National Gamekeepers Association, Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and two independent advisers. Representatives from the Scottish Executive and the Welsh Assembly Government will act as observers.

Bluetongue Disease

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research his Department has evaluated on the transmission of bluetongue disease during animal transit; and what measures he has put in place to inhibit the transmission of the disease. [242908]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA has funded research on bluetongue which includes:

Studies on midge vectors, including surveys of abundance and seasonality, and biting rates.

Studies on use of insecticides to control vectors during transport, and the usefulness of housing in protecting livestock.

This research was used to define vector-free periods, and to provide advice about the conditions of movement licences regarding timing of movements and vector control.

This work was also used to contribute to the development of a model of bluetongue disease spread within and between farms. Collaborative work between the Meteorological Office and the Institute for Animal Health has resulted in tools to predict vector-borne disease incursions into the UK. This is currently being developed further.

The default control measures set out in legislation to combat bluetongue are aimed at preventing disease spread (through for example restriction of animal movement and through vector mitigation measures). Broadly, the controls can be summarised as follows:

Veterinary investigation on suspect premises, and restrictions which includes a ban on movement of susceptible animals on and off the premises.

On confirmation that bluetongue virus is circulating, restrictions remain in place and are extended to a zone of 20 km radius around the infected premises (IP).

Wider zone(s) must also be declared setting a protection zone and a surveillance zone (of at least 150 km radius around an IP).

Movement of susceptible animals out of these zones are banned except under licence (although animals can move freely within those zones) and we must implement surveillance programmes.

There is some flexibility in demarcating the zones (with Commission agreement), but various factors such as local geography must be taken into account.

1. [Official Report, 9 February 2009, Vol. 487, c. 9MC.]

We have an agreed policy for controlling incursions of any new serotypes under the existing UK Bluetongue Control Strategy. This strategy was reviewed recently in light of this year's experience and to address risk from other serotypes, and was published on the DEFRA website on 1 December.

Details of the Control Strategy are currently available on the DEFRA website. Copies will also be placed in the House Library.

DEFRA continues to urge industry to consider the risks and check the health and vaccination status of animals when sourcing any animals, from within the UK or abroad.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department provides compensation to farmers whose cattle have been destroyed by his Department's veterinary surgeons following the discovery of bluetongue. [244535]

Jane Kennedy: Compensation is payable for all animals which are compulsorily slaughtered for the purposes of disease control under the powers provided for in the Animal Health Act 1981 and the Bluetongue Regulations 2008. Compensation is paid under the Bluetongue (Compensation) Order 2007, at the market value of animals immediately before they are slaughtered.

However, compensation is not payable when imported animals are slaughtered under the powers provided for in the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) (England) Regulations 2006.

Imported animals have been culled under these powers on a number of occasions where the veterinary risk assessment warranted this, most recently with BTV1 infected animals in Lancashire. Compensation is not payable under these circumstances.

Bluetongue Disease: Vaccination

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what quantities of vaccine for the (a) BTV1 and (b) BTV6 strains of bluetongue disease are (i) available and (ii) on order. [242075]

Jane Kennedy: No vaccines against Bluetongue serotypes 1 or 6 are currently authorised for use in the UK.

DEFRA is in discussion with existing manufacturers of BTV1 vaccine, and companies with BTV1 vaccine in development, to encourage applications to the Veterinary Medicines Directorate for provisional marketing authorisations (PMAs). If vaccine should be required, the early granting of PMAs will help supply to the market to be achieved more quickly. DEFRA has not placed orders for vaccine against serotypes 1 or 6. To our knowledge, there are no BTV-6 vaccines yet in development.

We have an agreed policy for controlling incursions of any new serotypes under the existing UK Bluetongue Control Strategy. This strategy was reviewed recently in light of this year's experience and to address risk from other serotypes, and was published on the DEFRA website on 1 December.

DEFRA also continues to urge industry to consider the risks and check the health and vaccination status of animals when sourcing any animals, from within the UK or abroad.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the success rate of bluetongue vaccination in Gloucestershire was; how many strains of bluetongue virus have been identified; what evidence there is on the origin of each strain; and if he will make a statement. [244412]

Jane Kennedy: Bluetongue is caused by a virus within the Orbivirus genus of the family Reorvirades. At present 24 distinct serotypes have been identified as a result of serum neutralisation tests.

Bluetongue was first described in South Africa but has since been recognised in most countries in the tropics and sub-tropics. Since 1999 there have been widespread outbreaks of Bluetongue in Greece, Italy, Corsica (France) and the Balearic Islands (Spain). Cases also occurred in Europe in Bulgaria, Croatia, Macedonia, Kosovo and Yugoslavia. These cases have been well north and west of the disease's previous normal distribution. It appears that the virus has spread from both Turkey and North Africa.

Bluetongue serotype 8 (BTV-8) was first found in Western Europe when it was detected in the Netherlands in summer 2006, after which it spread to Belgium, Luxembourg, Western Germany and parts of North East France in the same year. In 2007, Northern Europe experienced a dramatic increase of new cases in all existing infected areas, and cases numbered into the many tens of thousands as disease steadily spread across Europe.

Uptake of vaccine has varied by region in England and Wales and over time. Sales data from the supply chain suggests that enough vaccine has been sold across the whole of England in 2008 to vaccinate around 60 per cent. of susceptible animals. However, we cannot give accurate county specific data.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cattle have been slaughtered following tuberculosis infection in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by county; what progress his Department's TB eradication group has made; and if he will make a statement. [244415]

Data are available from 2003 to 2007. There is no full county breakdown available for this year.

The TB Eradication Group for England has met twice since the Secretary of State announced the establishment of the group on 3 November. The Group has discussed its work programme and priorities; the scientific evidence provided to the Secretary of State which formed part of the basis for his decision on badger culling; and the possible content of an eradication plan (including a discussion with the European Commission). The Group has also considered proposals for a revised policy on inconclusive reactors.

The TB Eradication Group's remit includes reviewing the current TB strategy and control measures and developing a plan for reducing the incidence of bovine TB in cattle in England. It will make recommendations to the Secretary of State on the disease and its eradication.

Cereals

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the tonnage of grain for (a) human consumption and (b) animal consumption was held in the UK on (i) 1 January, (ii) 1 March, (iii) 1 May, (iv) 1 July, (v) 1 September and (vi) 1 November in the last year for which figures are available. [241478]

Jane Kennedy: Grain stocks can be held at various points of the supply chain including farm stores, at ports, various processing facilities and at merchant and distribution stores.

Data on stocks held by the main processors, flour millers and maltsters, brewers and distillers are collected and published each month and can be accessed via the following link:

https://statistics.defra.gov.uk/esg/statnot/statnot.htm.

Compost

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the evidential basis is for the Environment Agency's recommendation that a 250 metre buffer zone between a windrow composting site and the nearest residential dwelling is adequate for the protection of public health; and whether the same size of buffer zone applies where the composting process includes food waste. [244243]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The Environment Agency published a policy statement on composting and the potential health effects from bioaerosols produced as a result of the composting process in 2001. This set out its requirement for site specific bioaerosol risk assessments (for proposed composting facilities within 250 metres of dwellings or workplaces). The figure represents a precautionary measure and the point at which a site specific bio-aerosol risk assessment is required. The policy applies to all composting activities irrespective of waste type. Kitchen food waste cannot be composted in open windrows.

Since then, further work in this area has been undertaken by various parties. This has reiterated that there is insufficient information to determine the risk to human health from bioaerosols from composting. It has recommended that the trigger distance remain in place. This is a precautionary approach, based on research which has shown that bioaerosols should reduce to background levels within 250m. In 2007 the Environment Agency issued a revised policy statement which re-affirmed the need for site specific bioaerosol risk assessments to be carried out.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions the Environment Agency has had with the Health and Safety Executive on its 250 metre buffer zone between windrow composting sites and the nearest residential dwellings. [244244]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The Environment Agency continues to work closely with the Health and Safety Executive on bioaerosols from composting sites. For example, the Environment Agency has recently published a science report based on work carried out by the Health and Safety Laboratory, "Bioaerosols in waste composting: deriving source terms and characterising profiles" (HSL labs). Published December 2008 as Science report SC040021/SR2.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Environment Agency has carried out wind turbulence modelling of the dispersion of bioaerosols in formulating its recommendations on the width of the buffer zone required between a windrow composting site and the nearest residences in different topographical conditions. [244245]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: Following a further review of available research the Environment Agency maintained its precautionary approach in its policy statement published in October 2007.

This requires bioaerosol risk assessments to take place if a proposed composting site is within 250 metres of dwellings or workplaces. Wind turbulence modelling has limited value for modelling dispersion of bioaerosols and was not used to formulate the position.

However in addition to conducting its own further research with the Health and Safety Laboratory, the Environment Agency recognises the value that might be added by work carried out by others and has arranged for this work to be peer reviewed.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many composting sites have been closed in England because of the potential impact of (a) bioaerosols, (b) odours, (c) environmental factors and (d) other factors on the health of residents living nearby in each of the last three years. [244246]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: This information is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dangerous Dogs Act 1991: Prosecutions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people were prosecuted for offences under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 in 2007. [240812]

Jane Kennedy: The number of people proceeded against at magistrates courts for offences under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991, in England and Wales, during 2007 was 1,193.

Departmental Public Consultation

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much his Department has spent on the public consultations it has held in the last 24 months. [246137]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA consults on a wide range of issues which are varied in nature. The Department does not record centrally the estimated costs for each consultation it launches, therefore to attach a value would involve disproportionate cost.

Dolphins: Denmark

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the government of Denmark on the slaughter of dolphins in its territorial waters. [245885]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Under international law, it is primarily for individual countries to regulate the management and killing of small cetaceans (dolphins and porpoises) in their own waters. The British Government do, however, feel very strongly about the welfare issues raised through the hunting of small cetaceans. Furthermore, it recognises that the protection and conservation of such species is very limited, and that they continue to be hunted in many parts of the world, often at unsustainable levels.

On 10 March 2008, my predecessor my hon. Friend for Chatham and Aylesford (Jonathan Shaw), was the keynote speaker at a seminar on commercial whaling held at the Danish Parliament buildings. The aim of the event—which was co-hosted by the British embassy and the Society for the Conservation of Marine Mammals—was to raise awareness among the Danish public of the cruel and unsustainable nature of the killing of cetaceans.

DEFRA works within the International Whaling Commission (IWC) to sponsor resolutions that raise the profile of this issue, and to encourage the IWC to adopt a strong position in favour of the protection of small cetaceans.

Please be assured that we will continue to raise these issues with Denmark directly, and in the IWC, at every appropriate opportunity.

Domestic: Waste Disposal

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Beckenham of 13 October 2008, Official Report, column 923W, (Mrs. Lait) on domestic waste: waste disposal, how much funding has been given to each local authority from the Behaviour Change Local Fund; and on what date each payment was made. [245917]

Jane Kennedy: In response to a previous question from the hon. Gentleman, the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Joan Ruddock) arranged for a list of local authorities awarded funding to be placed in the House Library on 14 January 2008, as the list was quite lengthy. The position is unchanged as the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) has not made any further payments since January 2008 from the Behaviour Change Local Fund.

In respect of the timing of such payments, the requested data concerns the detailed operational activities of WRAP and is not therefore held by DEFRA. I understand that the chief executive of WRAP has offered to meet the hon. Gentleman to discuss any issues of concern to him and I would encourage him to take up that offer.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Beckenham (Mrs. Lait) of 13 October 2008, Official Report, column 923W, on domestic waste: waste disposal, whether monies from the Behaviour Change Local Fund have been used to provide information about the case for alternate weekly collections. [245918]

Jane Kennedy: No monies from the Behaviour Change Local Fund have been used for this purpose.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the answer of 22 July 2008, Official Report, column 1010W, on domestic waste: waste disposal, what the (a) title and (b) date of publication of each item of guidance issued to local authorities on the use of fixed penalty notices in relation to household waste is. [245929]

Jane Kennedy: The titles and publication dates of the items of guidance requested are as follows:

"Fixed Penalty Notices—Guidance on the Fixed Penalty Notice Provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 and other legislation" published in November 2006:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/localenv/legislation/cnea/fixedpenaltynotices.pdf

"Local environmental enforcement—Guidance on the use of fixed penalty notices" published in March 2007:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/localenv/legislation/cnea/fixed-penalty-guidance.pdf

Environment Protection

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what sites in England contaminated by activities during the second world war have yet to be cleaned up. [245603]

Jane Kennedy: Information on sites which qualify as "contaminated land" under part 2A of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 is held locally rather than nationally. This would include sites contaminated by activities during the second world war.

Responsibility for identifying and dealing with contaminated land under part 2A lies with local authorities. All local authorities are required to have strategies in place detailing how they plan to investigate their areas to identify and deal with contaminated sites.

Farmers: Transport

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will review the cross-compliance rules on permission for farmers to travel on wet land, with particular reference to recent weather conditions; and if he will make a statement. [244413]

Jane Kennedy: This summer saw unusually wet conditions and as a result DEFRA received requests from farmers for derogations to the cross compliance Good Agricultural and Environmental Condition (GAEC) standard prohibiting use of agricultural machinery on water logged soil. A derogation was granted which covered the period 10 September to 25 October 2008.

As part of a wider review of GAEC standards which is being conducted in response to the CAP Health Check, and to improve the standards where possible, we are considering how we can give greater responsibility and flexibility to farmers to manage the risks to their soil, including from the use of machinery on water logged land. We expect to consult on any proposed changes in 2009.

Farms: Local Authorities

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of Sir Don Curry's report on the future of council-owned farms. [244251]

Jane Kennedy: The Government have long made clear their support for the continuation of the county farm system. I therefore welcome the recent paper by Sir Don Curry on "The Importance of the County Farms Service to the Rural Economy" and fully support Sir Don's views and his recommendations for preserving the future of local authority estates. Local authorities should be free to manage their smallholdings estates as they see fit because they are in the best position to make decisions in their areas in the interests of the communities they serve. Nevertheless, we recognise the important role of county farms and would urge local authorities to act on Sir Don's recommendations.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which local authorities have smallholdings; what the area is of each such smallholding; and what assessment he has made of each local authority's plans for its smallholdings. [244257]

Jane Kennedy: The following table shows the distribution and size of smallholding estates held by local authorities in England as at 31 March 2007 which is the latest readily available information.

Local authorities should be free to manage their smallholdings estates as they see fit because they are in the best position to make decisions in the interests of the communities they serve. We therefore do not make assessments of each local authority's plans for its smallholdings.

Farms: Waste Disposal

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which procedures have to be followed to enable a farmer to remove waste dumped on his farmland; what the cost of those procedures to the farmer is; what estimate he has made of the average cost to farmers of applying such procedures; and if he will make a statement. [246278]

Jane Kennedy: A farmer has a range of options for removing waste dumped illegally on his farmland. If the waste is posing an immediate threat to human health or the environment, he should contact the Environment Agency for advice. If the waste is of a non-hazardous nature, he must either remove the waste himself to a registered disposal site or contract a registered waste carrier to remove it for him. In both instances he should contact his local authority who may be able to offer support and advice. The exact cost of removal would depend on the nature and volume of waste deposited.

I have recently corresponded or discussed this issue with a number of farming and other landowner organisations.

Flood Control

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans he has for the £20 million for flood defence expenditure announced in the pre-Budget report; [241498]

(2) what the evidential basis was for the statement in the pre-budget report that 27,000 homes will be protected from flooding with the help of the £20 million funding announced; and where those homes are located. [241642]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Following the Government's announcement that £20 million will be brought forward for flood defence schemes from 2010-11 to 2009-10, an estimated 27,405 households will benefit from new or improved flood risk protection a year earlier than planned.

Funding will be allocated by the Environment Agency. The exact location of households benefiting will be dependent upon schemes passing the necessary feasibility studies and planning applications, as well as final approval for projects, which will be determined in February 2009. The Environment Agency has issued a list of schemes expected to be brought forward as a result. Copies of the list have been placed in the Library of the House.

Food Supply

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of changes in (a) nitrogen prices and (b) levels of nitrogen supply on food production; and if he will make a statement. [244516]

Jane Kennedy: Agricultural production is affected by a large number of factors and no specific assessment has been made of the impact of the changes in nitrogen prices and levels of supply.

In October DEFRA published its first forecast of total income from farming for the UK for 2008. This took into account the impact on input costs of changes in nitrogen prices and usage. A revised forecast will be published at the end of January together with forecasts of farm incomes in England by farm type for 2008-09. These will also take into account the change in nitrogen prices between 2007-08 and 2008-09.

A fuller economic analysis of the agriculture industry and of commodity production and supply, reflecting the full range of factors impacting on the sector, will be published in "Agriculture in the United Kingdom" in March 2009.

Food: Contamination

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) funded into the effect of animal disease on food security in the last 12 months. [242886]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA has not commissioned/funded any work specifically into the effect of animal disease on food security. However, we continue to fund research, to the value of £1.6 million annually, on a number of major endemic diseases of livestock, including cattle, sheep, pig and poultry, which seriously affect or are a serious potential threat to livestock production and thus food security. In addition, there is a programme of research, costing in the region of £8 million annually, on exotic diseases aimed at protecting UK livestock from exotic disease incursions.

One of the ways in which we are able to minimise the effects of animal disease on UK food security is by having a supply of livestock products from a wide range of countries, including the UK, which effectively spreads the risk. Disease outbreaks in the UK or elsewhere in the world affecting our trading partners should prompt a swift response in trade flows as the market seeks to offset the impacts of any supply disruption.

Food: Labelling

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his policy is on advertisements for products produced with meat from EU countries other than Britain carrying the British tractor assured label; and what guidance he has issued to food retailers on the use of the label on foodstuffs produced elsewhere in the EU. [245707]

Jane Kennedy: The "Red Tractor" scheme is operated by Assured Food Standards, a company that is owned by representatives of the entire food chain from farmers to retailers. As a privately owned scheme it is the responsibility of Assured Food Standards to satisfy itself that it complies with food law, which makes it an offence to mislead the consumer as to the origin of food.

Game: Birds

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to reduce the level of intensive rearing and farming of game birds; and what advice he has received from the Farm Animal Welfare Council on this matter. [241708]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA is in the process of setting up a working group to draft a code of practice on the rearing of game birds for sport shooting.

The Farm Animal Welfare Council recently published its opinion on the welfare of farmed game birds containing their recommendations on certain management practices. The opinion will guide the working group in the drafting of a code of practice.

Game: Gun Sports

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his Department's policy is on gamebird shooting; and if he will make a statement. [246329]

Jane Kennedy: The Government's policies towards the game bird industry are consistent with the 2005 rural manifesto which stated that > "We will work with the relevant bodies to ensure that country sports are protected while ensuring high standards of environment protection, animal welfare and safety".

We have no plans to restrict the sport of shooting.

Horse Racing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, columns 2187-8W, on horse racing, if he will make it his policy to gather statistics on thoroughbred fatalities on British racecourses. [244578]

Jane Kennedy: We have no plans to gather such statistics.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 2188W, on horse racing, if he will make an annual assessment of the welfare issues arising from surplus breeding of race horses. [244579]

Jane Kennedy: We have no plans to make such an assessment.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 2188W, on horse racing, what assessment he has made of the levels of competence of veterinary surgeons charged with destroying injured horses on British racecourses. [246315]

Jane Kennedy: We have made no such assessment. However, any veterinary surgeon registered by the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons is obliged to follow a guide to professional conduct. This includes the requirement that they (i) keep their skills and knowledge up to date (ii) keep within their own areas of competence save for the requirement to provide emergency first aid and (iii) continue their professional education by keeping up to date with the general developments in veterinary science, particularly in their area of professional activity.

Horses: Electronic Tagging

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department has performed a cost/benefit analysis on the EU requirement for foals born after 1 July 2009 to be identified by a microchip linked to a horse passport; and what estimate he has made of the cost to the public purse of implementing such a requirement in the first 12 months of its operation. [241483]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA is currently consulting on the implementation of Commission Regulation (EC) 504/2008 of 6 June 2008. The consultation document includes a draft Impact Assessment (IA) which estimates the costs and benefits of the new legislation.

The consultation document and draft IA can be found on the DEFRA website.

Incinerators

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Local Government Association on alternatives to incineration; and what potential exists within private finance initiatives for localised waste solutions. [242909]

Jane Kennedy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no recent discussions with the Local Government Association on incineration. Private finance initiative waste infrastructure projects are initiated by the local authorities and are therefore always tailored to local circumstances.

On 26 November, I met Paul Bettison, Chairman of the LGA environment board to discuss a number of issues concerned with waste and flood management.

Joint Waste Authorities

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local authorities on average he expects to comprise each joint waste authority. [245893]

Jane Kennedy: There is no target or average for the number of local authorities expected to comprise each joint waste authority. The joint waste authority model is a voluntary option for local authorities who will need to decide whether or not such a model is appropriate for them.

Litter: Fixed Penalties

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will increase the penalties imposed for littering and fly-tipping on industrial and retail parks. [242797]

Jane Kennedy: We have no plans to increase the penalties for littering and fly-tipping on industrial and retail parks.

Livestock: Electronic Tagging

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the estimated cost to (a) farmers and (b) the public purse of electronic identification of sheep is for its first year of operation; and if he will make a statement; [244514]

(2) what assessment he has made of the likely effects of electronic identification of sheep on (a) hill farmers' incomes and (b) management of upland ecosystems; and if he will make a statement. [244515]

Jane Kennedy: A regulatory impact assessment has been produced for England, a copy of which is available on the DEFRA website. An updated version to take account of changes to Council Regulation 21/2004 that were negotiated over the summer and more detailed implementation options will accompany the consultation that is planned for the spring.

Local Authority Recycling Advisory Committee Conference

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the speeches and presentations made by representatives of the Environment Agency at the Local Authority Recycling Advisory Committee Conference in November 2008. [245900]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA does not hold a copy of the presentation made by the Environment Agency at the Local Authority Recycling Advisory Committee Conference.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects the Minister of State, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, the right hon. Member for Liverpool, Worcester (Jane Kennedy), who is responsible for Farming and the Environment to reply to the letters from the hon. Member for the Forest of Dean of 12 September and 26 November regarding surface water charges. [246573]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The matter is still under review and I will respond in full as soon as a final decision is taken.

Packaging

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to bring producers of (a) packaging, (b) chewing gum and (c) cigarettes within the remit of regulations on producer responsibility. [242799]

Jane Kennedy: There are no plans to bring producers of chewing gum and cigarettes within the remit of regulations on producer responsibility.

Pet Travel Scheme

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many pet passports have been issued in each of the last three years. [241470]

Jane Kennedy: Animal Health have issued 60,000 blank certificates to veterinary practices in each of the last three years. We do not keep records of how many passports are issued by veterinary practices.

Poultry: Exports

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect on levels of UK poultry exports of the UK's avian influenza-free status; and if he will make a statement. [243686]

Jane Kennedy: The UK was able to resume trade in live poultry and poultry products with its European Union partners on 8 July last year. Subsequently, the UK achieved official international recognition of avian influenza freedom by the World Organisation for Animal Health on 20 November. We are currently working with our industry stakeholders to identify the key third country markets which need to be reopened and the best way to take negotiations forward in each case.

Recycling

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the (a) Environment Agency, (b) Local Authority Recycling Advisory Committee and (c) Local Government Association on market conditions in the recycling sector. [242702]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA has maintained close contact with a wide range of stakeholders to discuss the situation with regards to the markets for recyclable materials.

Based on these discussions, our priorities are:

to further promote waste minimisation;

to maintain public confidence that recycling is worthwhile to ensure continuity of collection systems for recyclables; to focus on producing high quality marketable recyclables;

to ensure any storage of recyclables do not undermine the environment or public health or the recyclability of those materials;

where the traditional markets for recyclables have contracted, to encourage the most sustainable recovery and disposal options—i.e. landfill as a last resort; and to avoid actions which exacerbate the situation while markets stabilise.

Officials continue to work with the Environment Agency, the Local Authority Recycling Advisory Committee and the Local Government Association in order to monitor market developments.

On 17 December I met representatives of the packaging industry.

Recycling: Exports

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of recovered (a) ferrous metal, (b) non-ferrous metal, (c) plastic, (d) paper and cardboard, (e) glass and (f) wood was exported in 2007. [243417]

Jane Kennedy: The following table details the proportion of recovered ferrous metal, paper and board, and glass cullet that was exported from the UK in 2007. Figures for non-ferrous metal, plastic and wood are not currently available.

Exports as a proportion of recovery, UK, 2007

	Percentage
Ferrous metal	50
Paper and board	54
Glass cullet	18

Recycling: Tyres

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to promote and increase the recycling of tyres. [245436]

Jane Kennedy: The Government have fully implemented the EU landfill directive which bans the disposal of whole and shredded used tyres in landfills and is therefore an important driver for tyre recycling.

The Government working closely with industry have ensured that there is sufficient recycling and recovery capacity to handle the 48 million tyres produced annually. Recycling and recovery includes the use of baled tyres in certain construction projects and the use of tyre crumb in the manufacture of sports and safety surfaces. Used tyres are also utilised as a substitute fuel in cement kilns and pyrolysis plants.

The DEFRA-funded Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) ran a successful tyre programme from 2005 to 2008. This led to the development of two publicly available standards for tyre shred and crumb and for tyre bales and the development of markets for their use.

In addition the Department for Business Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BERR) leads a Used Tyre Working Group which focuses on the re-use, recycling and recovery of used tyres. The group has a wide-ranging membership drawn from the tyre industry, the Government and WRAP.

Rural Payments Agency: ICT

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of the Rural Payments Agency's upgrade of its IT system to the Epsilon programme. [245801]

Jane Kennedy: The Epsilon IT changes were delivered at a cost of £8.56 million. This reflects costs over a 12-month lifecycle from design through to implementation.

The core components in scope included:

mandatory policy changes to allow accurate Single Payment Scheme 2008 payments; automated management of customer land transfer details;

simplified management of customer entitlements;

providing a unique point of access for customer documents.

The cost includes design, build and delivery of a functional system but excludes wider business change costs.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the likely costs to (a) farmers and (b) abattoirs of the implementation of the EU regulations that require slaughterhouses to appoint an animal welfare officer; what assessment he has made of the effect of these regulations on the profitability of abattoirs; and if he will make a statement. [246812]

Jane Kennedy: The European Commission published proposals for a regulation on the protection of animals at the time of killing on 22 September 2008. This includes proposals to require the appointment of an Animal Welfare Officer in every abattoir over a minimum size. An EU impact assessment was published alongside the proposal and this is available on the European Commission website.

A UK impact assessment is currently being prepared. This will consider the costs and benefits of the proposed regulation including the cost to farmers and abattoirs. The impact assessment will be included with the consultation document on the proposed regulation which will be published in early 2009. This will provide an opportunity for those affected by the proposed regulation to give their views and to comment on the assumptions used to assess its impact.

Sustainable Development Commission: Public Appointments

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consideration he has given to the future chairmanship of the Sustainable Development Commission; and whether Sir Jonathan Porritt has indicated whether he would be willing to continue as chair beyond his term ending in July 2009. [241976]

Jane Kennedy: In July 2009, Sir Jonathon Porritt will complete his third term as chair of the Sustainable Development Commission (SDC). Under the Code of Practice published by the Commissioner for Public Appointments this is the maximum number of terms allowed for one individual in a body such as the SDC.

As the sponsoring department for the SDC, DEFRA has begun the process of appointment of a new chair. This process is being managed in line with the Office for the Commissioner for Public Appointments guidelines in order to have a new chair appointed before the end of July 2009.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State (Hilary Benn) and I are grateful for the service that Sir Jonathan Porritt has given to the Commission since his appointment in 2000.

Tidal Power: River Severn

Martin Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consideration he has given to how the terms of the EU Habitats Directive could be met with respect to fish stocks if a Severn barrage were to be constructed. [244317]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

The Severn Tidal Power Feasibility Study is considering a number of proposed electricity generation schemes, not barrages exclusively.

Full consideration is being given to potential impacts of a tidal power scheme on migratory and estuarine fish. A strategic environmental assessment (SEA) is being undertaken, together with a strategic level habitats regulations assessment (HRA), the preliminary stage of which has already commenced. The HRA is being conducted under the terms of the habitats regulations, the instrument by which the habitats directive is translated into UK law. These assessments include all designated migratory fish species of the Severn estuary and relevant tributaries including the rivers Usk and Wye.

Subject to internal review, preliminary studies on fish impacts and the preliminary HRA screening will be published in the new year, alongside public consultation on the scope of the strategic environmental assessment. Further studies are planned during 2009 and will be published later.

Veterinary Medicine

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will take steps to ensure that veterinary surgeons who are required to destroy injured thoroughbreds on racecourses as part of their duties (a) have sufficient training and (b) are periodically assessed to ensure that their standard of competence is maintained. [242392]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA has no plans to ensure the competence of veterinary surgeons attending racecourses. Both the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons and the British Horseracing Authority have rules in place which address this concern.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will take steps to require at least two means of humane despatch for an injured racehorse to be available immediately to the veterinary surgeon on duty at a racecourse. [242393]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA has no plans to introduce such a requirement. However, the British Horseracing Authority require that when racehorses need to be humanely destroyed, that the horse is either shot with a silenced weapon or that chemical means are used. The choice of which method should be used is a matter of professional judgment for the veterinary surgeon.

Veterinary Surgeons Act 1966

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to bring forward proposals to update the provisions of the Veterinary Surgeons Act 1966. [243696]

Jane Kennedy: There are currently no plans to update or replace the Veterinary Surgeons Act 1966 (VSA).

Waste Disposal

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to assist local authorities in the disposal of waste stored in warehouses and other storage facilities. [242796]

Jane Kennedy: With the aim of helping local authorities, DEFRA is taking the following steps:

(i) supporting the Environment Agency in relaxing the rules on storage of recyclable wastes;

(ii) encouraging the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), and other bodies to help identify alternative market outlets for recyclable wastes, both domestic and international.

Waste Disposal: Greater London

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which steps his Department has taken to evaluate the new multi-modal refuse collection vehicle for London. [244879]

Jane Kennedy: Section 45 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 places the duty to collect commercial and household waste in England on waste collection authorities. These authorities are better placed than central Government to make decisions on the best sustainable waste management strategy for their area and consequently DEFRA does not interfere in these decisions.

It would be a matter for the local authority planning to use a particular vehicle or collection methodology to assess all aspects of its suitability.

Waste Disposal: Hazardous Substances

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received calling for the introduction of incentives for the full recovery of hazardous waste oil; and if he will make a statement. [243908]

Jane Kennedy: DEFRA officials have received regular correspondence from representatives of the oil recycling sector about the issues relating to the recovery of waste oil and have also held meetings with the oil recycling sector to discuss these issues.

Waste Management

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will require the Environment Agency to provide guidance to local authorities on the most suitable type of waste management treatment facility appropriate to the geography of the area in which it is to be sited, taking account of the nearness to residents, topography and the local flora and fauna. [244247]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 18 December 2008]: While general guidance has been provided by both bodies, it is not within the remit either of the Health and Safety Executive or the Environment Agency to provide guidance to individual local authorities on what is the suitable type of waste management treatment facility for their area.

Specific guidance for local authorities through Planning Policy Statement 10 (PPS10) is also to be taken into account by waste planning authorities and forms part of the national waste management plan for the UK.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Gambling: Young People

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Solicitor-General how many people were prosecuted for the offence of inviting, causing or permitting a child or young person to gamble in each of the last five years. [240340]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The number of persons proceeded against in magistrates courts for certain offences for gambling in England and Wales, 2003 to 2007 can be viewed in the following table.

The relevant sections of the Gambling Act 2005 Sections 46, 47, 56 and 57 came into force on 1 September 2007.

Data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, is unable to separately identify Sections 46 and 47 as they are grouped together.

These data are on the principal offence basis. The figures given in the table on court proceedings relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offence for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been found guilty of two or more offences, the offence selected is the one for which the heaviest penalty is imposed. Where the same disposal is imposed for two or more offences, the offence selected is the offence for which the statutory maximum penalty is the most severe.

Court proceedings data for 2008 will be available in the autumn of 2009.

Number of persons proceeded against in magistrates courts for certain offences relating to Gambling in England and Wales, 2003 to 2007[1, 2, 3, 4]

[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts, and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.
[3] Includes the following statutes and corresponding offence descriptions:

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

British Library: Exhibitions

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which towns in England the British Library's Sacred exhibition is visiting. [245565]

Mr. Khan: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has visited the exhibition and said:

"The Sacred exhibition is a wonderful, tangible example of how to promote mutual understanding of Christianity, Judaism and Islam."

However, Communities and Local Government does not have responsibility for the British Library's 'Sacred' exhibition. Information about the touring exhibition is available on the British Library's website, which states that the exhibition will visit Manchester, Leicester, Bradford, Leeds and Liverpool.

Community Development Foundation

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff the Community Development Foundation employs; how many of these work on cohesion and integration; and what funding her Department will provide to the Foundation in (a) 2008-09 and (b) each of the following two years. [245531]

Mr. Khan: Community Development Foundation (CDF) currently employs 64 staff: 55 full-time and nine part-time across offices in England, Scotland and Wales. CDF recently aligned its resources to meet its three strategic aims of Empowered, Cohesive and Strong Communities. As a result they employ a Head of Cohesion, and a policy officer is being recruited to work on cohesion policy. In addition a significant number of other programme-funded staff are also involved in cohesion-related work to varying degrees. Details can be found in CDF's annual report at www.cdf.org.uk.

CDF is receiving up to £1,500,000 grant in aid funding in 2008-09. This represents 40 per cent. of its projected unrestricted income for the year. Subject to parliamentary approval, funding allocated for 2009-10 is £1,545,000, and for 2010-11 is £1,590,000.

Community Network For Manchester: Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer of 11 November 2008, Official Report, column 958W, on Greater Manchester, how much funding has been given to the Community Network for Manchester through (a) the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund and (b) the Working Neighbourhoods Fund. [245931]

Mr. Khan: CN4M were constituted as an organisation on 22 March 2007. They have received NRF and WNF from that date as follows:

For 2007-08, CN4M were allocated NRF of £805,000

For 2008-09, CN4M were allocated WNF of £677,300

Community Relations

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) when she expects the National Community Forum to publish research on the experience of poor white communities, referred to on page 29 of the report, The Government's Response to the Commission on Integration and Cohesion; [245546]

(2) when she expects the National Community Forum to publish a report on what works to promote interaction between neighbourhoods, as referred to on page 46 of the report, The Government's Response to the Commission on Integration and Cohesion. [245548]

Mr. Khan: The National Community Forum is an advisory non-departmental public body. It has told me that it expects to publish these reports shortly.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what further research she plans to commission to develop the Government's understanding of radicalisation and enhance its analytical powers; and what the timescale is for such research. [245555]

Mr. Khan: Our plans for further research are being developed currently. They contribute to a wider cross-government Prevent research programme and are likely to comprise a mix of classified and unclassified projects.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which are the countries with strong links to the UK referred to on page 7 of the report Preventing Violent Extremism: A Strategy for Delivery; and how these countries will implement work to support their communities overseas. [245557]

Mr. Khan: The UK, and some of the communities here, retains strong links with a number of countries due to historic migration. It is of course for the governments of such countries to decide how they maintain connections with their diaspora communities overseas, for example in order to promote commercial links.

In respect of the Prevent strategy, the Government's work to increase the resilience of communities to engage with and resist violent extremists includes work with diaspora communities in the UK. We will also work in partnership with other countries, in particular those with whom we have these strong ties, to reduce the threat from violent extremism. We will do this in various ways, including through ministerial and official meetings, sharing experience and best practice, and joint cooperation.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the cost of the national de-radicalisation programme referred to on page 29 of the report The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England is expected to be in the three years from 2008-09; how many such schemes are currently operational; and if she will make a statement. [245562]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

The Office for Security and Counter Terrorism has approved £1.37 million over the CSR period for five projects delivering interventions for individuals vulnerable to recruitment by violent extremism, which involve a de-radicalisation element.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many vulnerable individuals have been referred to the Channel Project referred to on page 28 of the report The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England. [245563]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

Between April 2007 and September 2008 around 178 referrals have been made to the Channel Project.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government who has responsibility for creating the points of referral for vulnerable individuals cited on page 27 of the report The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England; where these points of referral will be; who will refer vulnerable individuals to these points of referral; what support will be available to those individuals referred; what safeguards will exist to ensure that individuals are not referred mistakenly; what rights of appeal individuals will have against erroneous referrals; and if she will make a statement. [245564]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

The Prevent Strategy: a Guide for Local Partners in England makes it clear that local partners, including the police and local authorities need to develop local processes for referral of those vulnerable to radicalisation. A range of agencies and local organisations will refer individuals ranging from community organisations through to further and higher educational organisations and youth offending teams. Local areas should construct a programme of interventions that are appropriately tailored to an individual who has been identified as vulnerable to the pull of violent extremism. When an individual is referred they will be assessed for the level of risk they pose and suitable voluntary interventions, diversionary activity and support will be offered in response.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she plans to set up the team to analyse Prevent issues referred to on page 41 of The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England; how many people the team will comprise; and what estimate she has made of the annual cost of operating the team in the three years from 2008-09. [245595]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

The JTAC Prevent analytical team was set up in March 2008 and currently comprises of seven team members. The approximate staffing costs for the team are £224,927 per annum. In addition to the salary costs, we have invested £405,098 in IT for the team.

Community Relations: Islam

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer of 25 June 2008, Official Report, column 340W, on community relations: religion, when she expects to announce an independent review to examine with communities how to build the capacity of Islamic seminaries; who she expects to carry out the review; when she plans that it should report; what she estimates it will cost; and if she will make a statement. [245509]

Mr. Khan: The university of Gloucestershire has been contracted to undertake the independent review of training for Muslim faith leaders. The review will work with training institutions in the UK to assess current provision for training Muslim faith leaders, and will also consider best practice models in the UK and internationally. It will then make recommendations for the education and training sector and Muslim communities to take forward, and Government to facilitate where appropriate.

The estimated cost of the review is £139,000 (excluding VAT). We expect the review to report in summer 2009.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what role the Mosque and Imams National Advisory Body will play in assisting the UK Border Agency to develop pre-entry requirements for ministers of religion coming from abroad; what these requirements are likely to be; when they are likely to be implemented; and if she will make a statement. [245540]

Mr. Khan: Under the new points based system, religious workers will be able to apply to enter the UK by using either a sub-category of Tier 2 (skilled workers) or a sub-category of Tier 5 (temporary workers). Tier 2 and Tier 5 were launched on 27 November 2008.

During the development of this policy UKBA engaged with a wide number of religious stakeholders, including the Mosques and Imams National Advisory Board, and will continue to work closely with them.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer of 23 June 2008, Official Report, column 19W, on community relations: Islam, what the cost was of developing the framework of minimum standards for all imams and Muslim chaplains engaged in public service; and how much the pilots will cost in (a) 2008-09 and (b) each of the two subsequent years. [245541]

Mr. Khan: The Experience Corps were awarded £89,708 (excluding VAT) to produce a report based on assessment, collation and analysis of data to establish an evidence base on the existing provision of chaplaincy including standards and recruitment processes, and to develop a draft framework of standards and recruitment process to be used voluntarily by institutions when engaging Muslim chaplains in public service.

Following a tendering process in August 2008, Faith Matters have been contracted to carry out pilots of these draft standards and recruitment framework. The pilots are projected to cost £80,000 in 2008-09 and £30,000 in 2009-10. No money is forecast to be spent on this project in 2010-11.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government in which areas she plans to pilot a framework of recruitment standards for Muslim faith leaders in chaplaincy roles in public institutions; how the pilots will be evaluated; when this framework will be rolled out nationally; and if she will make a statement. [245542]

Mr. Khan: Following a tendering process in August 2008, the contract to pilot the draft framework of standards and recruitment framework for institutions engaging Muslim chaplains in public service has been awarded to Faith Matters. Faith Matters will carry out a number of pilots in different institutions across the country over the next six months. The evaluation of the pilots will incorporate the views of relevant officers within participating institutions, as well as wider stakeholder consultation with Imams, other faith leaders, chaplains, and officials from other Government Departments and relevant associated agencies.

Using key findings from evaluation of the pilots and stakeholder consultation, Faith Matters will produce updated versions of the standards framework and recruitment process, with accompanying notes and a report listing key actions that need to be taken when implementing the documents. These finalised documents will be promoted by Faith Matters for voluntary use in public institutions from early summer 2009.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which Muslim organisations have received funding from the Preventing Violent Extremism Community Leadership Fund since June 2007. [245549]

Mr. Khan: The list of all organisations who received funding through the Preventing Violent Extremism Community Leadership Fund in 2007-08 has been placed in the House Library.

The list of all organisations currently receiving funding through the Preventing Violent Extremism Community Leadership Fund in 2008-09 to 2010-11 is set out as follows:

Capacity building

Organisation	Project description
British Muslim Forum	BMF will develop their own capacity and sustainability by recruiting to four posts. This will enable them to work with local Muslim organisations across the country to develop their own working arrangements and governance structures.
Business in the Community (BiTC)	Mosaic Muslim Media Network for Muslims working in the media sector to build the confidence of community groups and leaders to engage the media.
GW Theatre Company	GW Theatre will build their organisational infrastructure in order to deliver a national tour of their production 'One Extreme to the Other'. Aimed at young people aged 14 to 25 and adults too, "One Extreme to the Other" offers a powerful theatrical stimulus to debate about issues relating to extremism and is accompanied by a comprehensive multi-media follow-up package to inform further discussion and lead in good practice. They aim to deliver 110 performances over the next three years.
Khayaal Theatre Company	Khayaal Theatre Company plans to build its capacity for growth and sustainability in order to deliver between 200 to 250 performances of their two plays 'Hearts and Minds' and 'Sun and Wind' in schools across the country over the next three years. Both of these plays address the issues of radicalisation and extremism as they manifest themselves in families and communities.
Muslim Youth Helpline	Capacity building for MYH to recruit a Helpline Care Manager to develop the Helpline's support services and extend the reach of its support services to support vulnerable young people at risk of radicalisation in 'hard to reach' communities, such as the Somali and Eastern European Muslim communities.
Association of Muslim Chaplains in Education (AMCED)	AMCED will build its organisational capacity to effectively deliver new services to Muslim chaplains to promote community cohesion and prevent violent extremism. This will involve recruitment and training of new staff, development and launch of their website.

Supporting youth

Organisation	Project description
Common Purpose	Common Purpose will deliver leadership training courses for younger members of the Muslim community: 'Your Turn'—a schools programme for year 9 pupils in London, Manchester, Birmingham and in West Yorkshire. 'Frontrunner'—a programme for young leaders in higher education. A customized 'Frontrunner' programme for 40 young Muslim leaders who are not in full time education or who cannot make the dates of the three open programmes. 'Navigator'—a programme in every region of the UK for first career leaders—Navigator.
Local Leagues Limited	Programme of sports coaching and local competitions as preventative and diversionary activities for Muslim young people (aged eight to 19 years) and engagement of undergraduates with policy makers and decision makers.
Karimia Institute	Develop the work of the Muslim Youth Development Partnership, funded by CLG in 2007-08 to train and support 150 volunteer Muslim Youth Leaders over three years.
Bradford Police Club for Young People	Engagement of young people through workshops and informal classroom settings to examine the relationship between peace, violence, conflict and war with a particular emphasis on questions of applied ethics involving school teachers and youth community workers as trained Educators.
Muslim Youthwork Foundation	Scholarship programme for 10 individuals to undertake a National Youth Association accredited training course to qualify as Muslim youth and community workers.
UK Race and Europe Network	Pilot of a citizenship toolkit resource to support the work of young leaders, youth workers, teachers, Imams and parents which has been developed using CLG funding in 2007-08.
One Voice Europe	Engagement of young Muslim and Jewish students in a youth leadership development training course to build and promote a consensus for a peaceful resolution to conflicts in the Middle East.
Changemakers Foundation	Continuation of 2007-08 CLG funded project to deliver a youth leadership programme to develop young leaders to become 'Changemakers' and develop and deliver projects in their own communities.

Supporting youth

Organisation	Project description
Nasiha	Youth Citizen Capacity Building Project to network young people in higher education to educate and support Key Stage 2 and 3 pupils in mosque schools.

Supporting women

Organisation	Project description
Faith Matters	UK tour of Muslim women role models from the US. Women will be drawn from careers such as TV presenters, researchers, civil servants, business entrepreneurs, civil society organisational heads.
Faith Matters	The purpose of this project is to compile a directory of the 100 leading mosques that provide the best access to women. Each mosque will be awarded a rating out of five stars based on criteria developed through women's focus groups. The ultimate aim is to incentivise mosques to improve their engagement with and inclusion of women in all aspects of their work through greater access to recognition and resources from the public sector.

Faith leaders

Organisation	Project description
Luqman Institute	Extension of the pilot Imam training programme funded in 2007-08 to develop training materials and deliver courses to 20 senior Imams over an eight month period
Psychology and Religion Research Group, University of Cambridge	Imam Training Course to equip young, newly qualified Imams to engage with British culture and humanitarian values, and to find parallel values within the Qur'an.
Demos	'Futures thinking' workshops for Muslim young people and Imams to explore the 'future' of their interaction in the mosque. The workshops will be delivered in partnership with MINAB.

Local forums against extremism and Islamophobia

Organisation	Project description
Gateshead Interfaith Forum	Gateshead Interfaith Forum will work closely with Gateshead Metropolitan Borough Council to set up a Gateshead forum against extremism and Islamophobia, which will be run as a pilot in 2008-09.
Northampton Race Equality Council	The project will establish a local forum across Northamptonshire with representation from the diversity of Muslim groups across the county.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the Government plans to set up the centre of excellence to improve understanding between Muslim communities and cultural and sporting bodies referred to on page 33 of the report The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England; what the centre's remit will be; how many people it will employ; what its annual budget will be in the three years from 2008-09; and if she will make a statement. [245561]

Mr. Khan: The reference in The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England is to work to bring together expertise across the culture and sport sectors in one central place under the leadership of the strategic delivery bodies. It does not refer to a physical "centre of excellence". This work is being taken forward by Creative Partnerships, a sector body of the Arts Council England, and began in August 2008.

The remit of this work is to improve the general understanding nationally and locally between Muslim communities and cultural and sporting bodies, and to work with a wide range of partners to help raise understanding of how cultural and sporting opportunities can be used to build resilience to violent extremism.

Two members of staff at Creative Partnerships are currently engaged on this work.

In 2008-09 CLG provided funding of £140,000 for this work. At this present time, no future funding has been allocated.

Community Relations: Religion

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what progress has been made in the development of the Continuous Professional Development Programme for Faith Leaders referred to on page 18 of the report, The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England; when this will be rolled out nationally; and how this project will be funded. [245567]

Mr. Khan: The Faith Community Development qualification is now available for higher education organisations to deliver. In addition to this, we have contracted the National Institute for Adult Continual Education (NIACE) to run a second round of pilots over the 2008/09 academic year. These pilots are being run in London, Bradford, Sheffield, Manchester, Birmingham and Leicester and will report in spring 2009.

DIUS and CLG jointly funded the development of the qualification and CLG are funding the 2008-09 pilots.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer of 13 November 2008, Official Report, column 1312W, on council tax: Wales; if she will publish details of council tax list alterations by local authority area in England in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08 on the same basis, based on data held by the Valuation Office Agency. [245896]

John Healey: This information is not currently available.

Departmental Accountancy

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Beckenham of 13 October 2008, Official Report, column 971W, on Departmental accountancy, to which firms the sum of £3.1 million for the provision of furniture and fittings in 2007-08 was paid. [245938]

Mr. Khan: The firms to which the sum of £3.1 million was paid were Como Interiors Ltd., Steria Ltd., and MITIE Managed Services Ltd.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when her Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, "Data Handling Procedures in Government" and the accompanying document "Cross Government Actions: Mandatory Minimum Measures"; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245357]

Mr. Khan: The Department already had a senior information risk owner in place at director level. The role was upgraded to board level in March 2008 and is undertaken at director general level.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the cost of running her Department's Cohesion Directorate is expected to be in (a) 2008-09 and (b) each of the following two years; and what the costs are expected to be for the (i) Cohesion and Faiths Preventing Violent Extremism, Race Equality and Diversity divisions and (ii) Gypsy and Traveller unit. [245526]

Mr. Khan: The administrative budget for the Cohesion Directorate is £5,043,606 in 2008-09.

The administrative budget for 2009-10 and 2010-11 are yet to be agreed.

The administrative budget for the Cohesion and Faiths and Preventing Violent Extremism divisions is expected to be £4,093,607 in 2008-09. The administrative budget for the Race Equality and Diversity division (which is now a part of the Empowerment Directorate) is £1,172,415.

The administrative budget for the Gypsy and Traveller Unit (which is also now a part of the Empowerment Directorate) is £417,979 in 2008-09.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funding has been agreed for each of her Department's executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies for the period 2008-09 to 2010-11. [245908]

Mr. Khan: For NDPBs, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 21 October 2008, Official Report, column 228W. The Department currently sponsors three executive agencies, as follows:

The Fire Service College

http://www.fireservicecollege.ac.uk/

The Planning Inspectorate

http://www.planning-inspectorate.gov.uk/

The Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre

http://www.qeiicc.co.uk/.

I refer the hon. Member to the agencies' websites via the links above. Available information on funding may be found in documents such as the agencies' corporate or business plans.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was spent by her Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244360]

Mr. Khan: The Department for Communities and Local Government's furniture procurement strategy is to use the Office of Government Commerce Buying Solutions' framework contracts. There is no mechanism within the framework to capture the country of origin of these goods or details about specific firms.

Departmental ICT

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many embedded communicators have been installed in her Department's information and communications systems. [246372]

Mr. Khan: The hon. Member may wish to refer to The White Book, published by COI. This is available in the Library of the House and contains a listing for members of the Department's Communications Directorate. The book is updated twice yearly.

Departmental Manpower

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff work in her Department's (a) Migration Directorate and (b) Cohesion Directorate, broken down by unit. [245527]

Mr. Khan: 81 staff work in the Department's Cohesion and Migration Directorate. The breakdown of numbers by unit is as follows:

	Staff
Director's Office	4
Cohesion Research	14
Cohesion and Faiths	19
Migration	13
Preventing Extremism	31

In addition there are twp Muslim advisers who are not civil servants.

There are also six Communities and Local Government staff in the Research, Information and Communications Unit (RICU). This is a cross-governmental strategic communications resource on counter-terrorism. It is owned jointly by Communities and Local Government, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Home Office.

Departmental Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by her Department were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) in each year from 1997 to 2008; and how many of these were upheld by the ASA in each year. [246644]

Mr. Khan: This information is held by the Advertising Standards Authority and is in the public domain. I therefore refer the hon. Member to the ASA, and to the archive of their adjudications maintained at:

www.asa.org.uk/asa/adjudications/public

For broadcast advertising complaints prior to 2004, I refer the hon. Member to the public affairs unit at Ofcom.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what expert advisers have been commissioned by her Department and its agencies since 1997; on what topic each was commissioned; and whether the advisers so appointed made a declaration of political activity in each case. [246662]

Mr. Khan: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Contractors are not asked to declare political activity as a matter of course. Contract terms and conditions task contractors with clarifying that no conflict of interest arises in connection with the services they are to deliver under contract.

Departmental Training

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Hammersmith and Fulham (Mr. Hands) of 13 November 2008, Official Report, column 1326W, on departmental training, what foreign language or languages she has undertaken training in to assist her in her ministerial capacity; and how much the training has cost. [245928]

Mr. Khan: My right hon. Friend received Spanish lessons in advance of an international ministerial conference on citizen participation in Valencia which took place in October 2007. The cost was £183.

Derelict Land

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of levels of brownfield development in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [244901]

Mr. Iain Wright: Information on development on previously-developed or brownfield land is taken from the Land Use Change Statistics, which is only available for England.

In the period 2003-06:

(a) 58 per cent. of the land changing to a developed use in England was previously-developed;

(b) 60 per cent. of the land changing to a developed use in the North East was previously-developed;

(c) 65 per cent. of the land changing to a developed use in the Tees Valley was previously-developed;

(d) 60 per cent. of the land changing to a developed use in the Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland constituency was previously-developed.

Tees Valley is defined as the Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland, Stockton-on-Tees and Darlington local authorities.

"Brown field development" has been interpreted as all development on previously-developed land, not just residential development. Information on residential development can be found on the CLG website at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/planningandbuilding/planningbuilding/planningstatistics/livetables/landusechange/

Fire Services: Airwave Service

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many Airwave handsets issued to fire and rescue services have been lost in each year since their introduction; and how many handsets issued to fire and rescue services have been disabled by the service provider following (a) loss, (b) breakages and (c) other reasons in each year since the service's introduction. [246153]

Mr. Khan: In November 2008 the Firelink project commenced the main roll-out of Airwave equipment to the Fire and Rescue Service vehicle fleet. There have been no losses of Airwave handsets delivered by Firelink and no requests have been made to disable equipment.

Fire Services: Taunton

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the cost of maintaining the regional fire control centre in Taunton was in November 2008. [246571]

Mr. Khan: The accommodation costs of the South West Regional Control Centre for November 2008 was £140,783.

The building is used for a range of purposes including the testing and development of FireControl IT systems and also technical workshops which bring together Fire and Rescue personnel. It is also used for meetings of Fire and Rescue Authority elected members who are responsible for setting up and running the new Regional Control Centres. Additionally, the Regional Project Team also works out of the South West Regional Control Centre.

Fire Services: Training

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many firefighters in England and Wales have been trained (a) at the Fire Service College and (b) in Texas in the last 36 months. [245981]

Mr. Khan: The Fire Service College has trained 17,477 firefighters in England and Wales in the last 36 months.

We do not hold centrally the information on the number of firefighters trained in Texas.

Flood Control

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which recommendations of the Pitt Review (a) her Department and (b) its agencies have implemented. [245996]

Mr. Khan: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs' statement of 17 December 2008, Official Report, columns 1098-1100. A copy of the full Government response has been placed in the Library of the House which sets out a detailed implementation plan.

Housing: Valuation

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average difference was between the estimated value of houses on which mortgages have been defaulted and the re-sale price of such houses following repossession in the last 12 months. [244948]

Mr. Iain Wright: Communities and Local Government does not collect or hold such data.

Institute of Community Cohesion

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff the Institute of Community Cohesion employs; and what funding her Department will provide to the Institute in (a) 2008-09 and (b) each of the following two years. [245330]

Mr. Khan: The Institute of Community Cohesion is independent of Government and Communities and Local Government is not responsible for its staffing. Therefore, I am not in a position to comment on the Institute's staffing levels.

In line with its policy objectives on cohesion, in 2008-09 Communities and Local Government has provided the Institute with £223,000 of funding for a range of work aimed at helping local partners build more cohesive and integrated communities.

At present the Department does not have any firm plans to commission work from the Institute in future years.

Islam and Citizenship Education Project

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the cost of the Islam and Citizenship Education project will be in (a) 2008-09 and (b) the two following years; how many staff the project employs; and if she will make a statement. [245338]

Mr. Khan: The Islam and Citizenship Education project is jointly funded by the Department for Communities and Local Government and the Department for Children, Schools and Families. The total costs of the project are as follows:

2007-08	49,850
2008-09	156,977
2009-10	63,700
2010-11	0

The School Development Support Agency lead this project and they employ a total of three members of staff.

Local Government Association: Manpower

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff the Local Government Association employs; and how many of these work on issues relating to cohesion and integration. [245523]

Mr. Khan: I do not hold the information on the number of staff the Local Government Association employs as it is a voluntary lobbying organisation acting on behalf of its members, not a government funded organisation.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local authorities have not met the 10 day invoice payment target to small and medium-sized enterprises. [246104]

John Healey: In the pre-Budget report, in order to help businesses manage their cash flow, the Government announced that it will aim to pay its suppliers as soon as possible and within 10 days. This commitment has been adopted by a number of local authorities.

However, there is no formal local government target on 10-day payments and we do not collect or maintain central records on this.

Local Government: Bank Services

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the effect of commission structures on the quality of investment advice to local authorities, with particular reference to advice to local authorities on investment in Icelandic banks. [246010]

John Healey: Financial advisers are regulated by the Financial Services Authority, and it is for the FSA to determine whether or not any particular firm is meeting its regulatory obligations. Local authorities are responsible for their own investment decisions and guidance issued by Communities and Local Government requires them to produce an annual investment strategy which is approved by the full council.

Local Government: Elections

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer of 22 July 2008, Official Report, columns 1152-53W, on the Communities in Control White Paper, what steps her Department is taking to implement the proposals on voting incentives. [245940]

Mr. Khan: We plan to publish a draft Bill for pre-legislative scrutiny in the spring which will include provisions on voting incentives.

Local Government: Reorganisation

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether retention of the status quo is a possible option for the future structure of local government in Suffolk and Norfolk. [246691]

John Healey: Under the Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act 2007 it is open to the Secretary of State to decide to take no action in relation to the unitary proposals submitted to her by Ipswich borough council and Norwich city council or any alternative unitary proposals made to her by the Boundary Committee in response to her request for advice of 6 February 2008.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make it her policy to include the status quo as an option in consultation on the future structure of Suffolk and Norfolk local government. [246692]

John Healey: Before making any decisions on any alternative unitary proposals in Norfolk and Suffolk made to her by the Boundary Committee in response to her request for advice of 6 February 2008, the Secretary of State will consider all representations received during the statutory four week period, beginning with the date—13 February 2009—by which she has requested the Committee to provide that advice.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make it her policy that local referendums be held in Suffolk and Norfolk on the reorganisation of local government; and if she will include the option of retaining the status quo in the referendum. [246693]

John Healey: We have no plans for local referendums on any proposals for unitary local government in Norfolk or Suffolk.

Non-Domestic Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what exemptions from business rates have been applied to properties damaged by the Buncefield oil storage depot explosion. [245990]

John Healey: Following the Buncefield oil storage depot explosion, 94 properties were removed from the ratings list as a result of not being capable of beneficial occupation as a result of the Buncefield explosion, and 22 had their rateable value reduced by the Valuation Officer, resulting in these properties either not being liable for rates or having a reduced liability respectively.

Non-Domestic Rates: Ports

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what arrangements are in place for (a) collection and (b) enforcement of business rates levied on ports. [246009]

John Healey: It is the task of the local billing authority to bill for rates, collect rates, and enforce payment in accordance with the relevant regulations.

I have announced that we are amending the regulations on collection and enforcement to allow back-dated rate charges to be paid over a number of years in certain circumstances, rather than being due when the bill is issued as at present.

Non-Domestic Rates: Small Businesses

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the letter sent by her Department to local authorities on the take-up of small business rate relief. [246047]

John Healey: I have placed a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Observatories

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) name and (b) address of each regional observatory is; and whether these bodies are classified as public authorities for the purposes of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [246042]

Mr. McFadden: I have been asked to reply.

The name and address of each regional observatory; and whether these bodies are classified as public authorities for the purposes of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOI Act 2000) is set out as follows:

Observatory

Region	Name	Address	Whether classified as public authorities for the purposes of the FOI Act 2000

Yorkshire and Humber	Yorkshire Futures	2 Victoria Place, Leeds, LS11 5AE	Yorkshire Futures is a part of Yorkshire Forward, which is a public authority for the purposes of the FOI Act.

Preventing Violent Extremism Community Leadership Fund

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the Preventing Violent Extremism Community Leadership Fund will distribute in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11, broken down by (i) community capacity building, (ii) supporting young people, (iii) supporting women, (iv) building the capacity of faith leaders and (v) supporting local forums against Islamophobia. [245510]

Mr. Khan: So far, the following amounts have been allocated through the first round of the Preventing Violent Extremism Community Leadership Fund for 2008-09 to 2010-11:

	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11
Capacity building	439,591	111,888	64,767
Supporting young people	494,943	80,000	80,000
Supporting women	135,125	29,775	0
Supporting faith leaders	205,630	0	0
Local Forums	24,725	0	0

Radical Middleway

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the Radical Middleway expects to announce the next phase of its programme; how many locations Radical Middleway plans to visit in 2008-09; and what funding will be allocated to the programme in the three years from 2008-09. [245543]

Mr. Khan: The Radical Middle Way programme of events for 2008-09 began in October 2008 and will continue into April 2009. All events are announced online at the Radical Middle Way website, which has a comprehensive archive of past events.

The Radical Middle Way organise tours across numerous cities and towns across the UK. They have already visited Hounslow, West London, Central London, Nottingham, Sheffield, Cambridge, Peterborough, Birmingham, Luton, Crawley and in the summer of 2008 High Wycombe. We are currently aware of events that are planned on being held in London, Derby, Milton Keynes, Blackburn, Greater Manchester, Bristol, High Wycombe, Slough, Stoke on Trent, Plymouth and other cities and towns across the North which have yet to be determined.

No decision has yet been made in respect of funding the Radical Middle Way in the years following from 2008-09.

Regional Government

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her Department's policy on earned autonomy is. [246050]

Mr. Khan: Through comprehensive performance assessment, higher performing authorities are able to earn additional freedoms from Government. New local performance arrangements, through the national indicator set, local area agreements and a targeted assessment regime take this policy forward.

Rent A Room Scheme

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of effects of the rent-a-room scheme in providing accommodation for people who have lost their homes; and if she will make a statement. [245276]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

There are no data available on the number of persons who have lost their homes who are benefiting from accommodation provided as a result of rent-a-room relief.

Rented Housing

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her Department's latest estimate is of the number of families for each London borough housed in (a) council, (b) housing association and (c) private sector tenancies allocated by local authorities; and what the equivalent figures were for (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [246951]

Mr. Iain Wright: Local authorities in England report information for numbers of local authority owned (council) dwellings as at 1 April in their annual Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix returns.

Information for the number of dwellings owned by housing associations has been collected by the Tenants Service Authority (formerly the Housing Corporation), via their annual Regulatory and Statistical Return (RSR).

Table 1 provides estimates for numbers of local authority owned dwellings in each London borough for 2007. Figures for 2008 are not yet available, but will be released on 22nd January 2009.

Sight Impaired

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidelines her Department follows in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness. [245711]

Mr. Khan: The Department follows COI Informability advice that the use of red and green together as text/background should be avoided. This includes the use of tints and solid blocks of colour.

As an additional accessibility measure, the Department's website provides Word format files for all new publications and signposts the availability of alternative formats on request.

Small Area Data Programme

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) purpose and (b) remit of her Department's Small Area Data programme is. [245980]

Mr. Khan: Communities and Local Government supports the development and use of a wide range of small area data. Its purpose is principally to provide better information at a neighbourhood level to help tackle deprivation, identify priorities at a neighbourhood level and promote better service delivery and performance management.

The Social Exclusion Unit's report 'Policy Action Team 18: Better Information' (2000)

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/media/cabinetoffice/social_exclusion_task_force/assets/publications_1997_to_2006/pat_report_18.pdf recognised the critical role of access to statistics for small areas in order for local service providers to better understand the nature and patterns of deprivation in neighbourhoods.

Between 2001 and 2006 the Neighbourhood Renewal Unit within this department (and formerly the Office for the Deputy Prime Minister) worked collaboratively with the Office for National Statistics (and in co-operation with other Departments) on the development of Neighbourhood Statistics Service (NeSS) to meet the requirements of PAT 18. The NeSS programme evaluation can be found at:

http://www.neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk/dissemination/Info.do?page=aboutneighbourhood/reportsandpolicies/ness-reports-policy-docs.htm.

CLG continues to work with closely with ONS and across Government to support the development of small area data relating to deprivation and regeneration.

The current remit of CLG's small area data programme covers socioeconomic statistics across Government relating to deprivation, regeneration and renewal. CLG's focus continues to be on enabling local and regional regeneration professionals to improve their strategic planning, monitor progress and target interventions on their most deprived neighbourhoods in support of the Regeneration Framework. The consultation document can be found at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/publications/citiesandregions/transformingplaces

This includes supporting the local management of data and the development of local information systems http://www.communities.gov.uk/publications/communities/localinformationsystems

Better availability of small area data helps local strategic partnerships monitor, performance manage and deliver against their local area agreements.

CLG also has direct responsibility for the development and production of small area statistics relating to deprivation (Indices of Multiple Deprivation)

http://www.communities.gov.uk/communities/neighbourhoodrenewal/deprivation/deprivation07/

Social Housing (National Register of Social Housing and Fires (Fire and Rescue Service Incidents published on NeSS).

Social Rented Housing: Evictions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many care leavers were evicted from social housing in 2007 as a result of rent arrears. [245275]

Mr. Iain Wright: The information requested is not held centrally.

South East Plan

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans her Department has to publish the final version of the South East Plan by the end of 2008. [245994]

Mr. Khan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Guildford (Anne Milton) on 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 1140W. This stated that the Secretary of State expects to publish the south east's regional spatial strategy in the spring of 2009.

Travelling People

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the North West Regional Assembly spent on producing its digital versatile disc entitled Gypsy and Travelling Show People. [246369]

Mr. Khan: The "Somewhere to Live" DVD was commissioned to support the on-going Partial Review of Regional Spatial Strategy (RSS) which is focussing on a number of topics including Gypsy and Traveller Pitch Provision and Travelling Showpeople Plot Provision. 4NW, formerly known as the North West Regional Assembly, spent £6,513.10 on the production of this DVD.

Young Muslim Advisory Group

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the remit of the Young Muslim Advisory Group is; what the criteria will be for selecting its members; what she expects its running costs to be; what funds have been allocated to the group for the three years from 2008-09; and if she will make a statement. [245539]

Mr. Khan: The members of the Young Muslims Advisory Group (YMAG) were announced on 7 October 2008 following a public recruitment process involving a written application, and attendance at a residential seminar.

The remit of the Young Muslims Advisory Group, as set out in the recruitment advertisement is:

To facilitate an ongoing and meaningful dialogue between Government and young people on the experience of being a young Muslim in England and the opportunity to influence government strategy and policy on issues that affect them.

To explore the causes and impact of violent extremism and underlying causes of disaffection (including anti-terror legislation, stop and search, identity issues, foreign policy, Islamaphobia, discrimination, etc.) on Muslim young people and Muslim communities.

To support and encourage young people to be active in their communities in order to tackle disaffection, increase civic engagement and respond to concerns felt by other young people.

To support young people to develop confidence and skills and in making appropriate contributions to the development of their communities.

The criteria for selecting the YMAG's final 22 members are set out as follows:

Communication skills

Articulates clearly and concisely

Able to debate, persuade and question

Looks at issues from someone else's perspective

Respects and is tolerant of other opinion.

Teamwork skills

Ability to participate and contribute to a team

Ability to exchange ideas and offer solutions

Ability to encourage and support other team members

Appreciates diversity and differences among team members.

General skills

Knowledge/understanding of Muslim and wider affairs (such as current/political/social/health)

Demonstrates a desire to make a difference

An ability to motivate others and to take a positive role in the community

Creativity and drive to take forward new ideas.

The management of the YMAG was awarded to the Office for Public Management through an open tender process. The value of this contract is £250,000 for the two years from September 2008.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan: Children

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of UK aid to Afghanistan is intended to assist children in 2008-09; what steps his Department is taking to deal with unexploded ordnance in Afghanistan, with particular reference to the protection of children; and if he will make a statement. [246541]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Department for International Development (DFID) will spend £60 million through the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund. This provides finance, among other things, for teachers' salaries directly benefiting the 6 million children now in school and health services and support to the health sector (specifically training) which reduces infant mortality.

DFID currently funds and has made a further five year commitment of up to £10 million to the HALO Trust's demining programmes in Afghanistan. The purpose of these programmes is to return high-priority mined land and suspected hazardous areas to productive use, and to providing children with safe areas to work and play.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to assist the Afghan government to uphold its commitments under the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child; and if he will make a statement. [246545]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Department for International Development (DFID) works in partnership with the Government of Afghanistan (GoA) to ensure the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child is upheld. This policy is incorporated into DFID's state-building, growth and livelihoods programmes.

DFID's contribution to the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund (ARTF) of £60 million (2008-09) is supporting Afghan children realise their right to education. The ARTF contributes to the salaries of over 100,000 teachers and six million students are now enrolled in school. In 2001 this figure stood at one million, very few of whom were girls, who were denied education under the Taliban.

In 2008 DFID contributed £11 million to the World Food programme to support the provision of wheat to 425,000 households over the winter period, ensuring fewer Afghan children are in danger of sliding further into poverty and malnutrition.

The UK, in partnership with the Afghan Government and international community, is committed to providing a safe and secure environment in which children can freely access schools, clinics and public spaces.

Afghanistan: International Assistance

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what systems are in place to co-ordinate all international aid efforts in Afghanistan. [246711]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The United Nations Assistance Mission to Afghanistan (UNAMA) is mandated with coordinating the international development effort behind the Government of Afghanistan's (GoA) National Development Strategy (ANDS). The ANDS offers renewed opportunity to align and coordinate aid behind GoA priorities. DFID is supporting its implementation with a £2.7 million (2006-09) programme of assistance to support UNAMA and establish a coordination monitoring board.

In the long term, building capacity and using government systems is the most effective way for the GoA to coordinate funding with national priorities and to ensure value for money. DFID is therefore committed to spending at least 50 per cent. of our annual budget through government channels.

Afghanistan: Overseas Aid

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department takes to ensure that aid to Afghanistan (a) is used to strengthen local and national civil society and the Afghan government and (b) reaches those most in need, particularly children; what steps his Department takes to ensure that bodies in Afghanistan receiving aid are held accountable for where the aid goes; and if he will make a statement. [246542]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Department for International Development is providing £4.5 million over the period 2006-07 to 2008-09 to the Governance and Transparency Fund to strengthen national civil society in Afghanistan. This is providing assistance—delivered through several international NGOs (including Cranfield University, Relief International and Making Integrity Work) working with a wide range of local partners including the Afghan Civil Society Forum, Integrity Watch Afghanistan, the Afghan Institute for Management Training and Enhancement of Indigenous Capacities, the Killid Group.

Delivery of aid through Government of Afghanistan (GoA) channels is the most effective way to build state capacity, ensure value for money, and co-ordinate funding with national priorities. At local level, the National Solidarity Programme (NSP) supports the creation of Community Development Councils (CDCs), which decide, on behalf of their village or community, what is most needed in their area. So far over 21,700 Community Development Councils have been established across Afghanistan with over 45,200 projects under way or completed. NSP is being implemented across the country by 28 local and international NGOs and by UN Habitat.

In addition we are providing £1.5 million in core funding for the Afghanistan Evaluation and Research Unit (AREU), an independent policy research organisation which has a programme of work aimed at measuring the effectiveness of international donor assistance (including that provided by the UK).

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to protect (a) Afghani people, (b) vulnerable populations in Afghanistan and (c) children in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [246543]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Strengthened, transparent and accountable policing and justice systems are critical to protect Afghanistan's population from insecurity and criminality. The UK is working with the US and EU to reform the Afghan police and funding a bilateral mentoring programme in Helmand province. The UK provides over 50 experts for this purpose. We are working with the Government of Afghanistan (GoA) to strengthen both the formal justice sector (through the GoA's National Justice Programme) and the informal justice system. Improving people's access to justice and dispute resolution is a critical aspect of this work, through legal aid and training in legal and rights awareness. The UK's justice adviser in Helmand has for example established a Women and Children's Justice Group, helping vulnerable groups to have their rights better protected.

Food insecurity in Afghanistan has been particularly acute in 2008-09 due to drought and to global food price increases. Around 4.5 million people are currently vulnerable to food scarcity with women, children, and the poorest disproportionately affected. In 2008 DFID provided the World Food Programme (WFP) with £11 million to respond to the food crisis. WFP deliver food on the basis of a Food Vulnerability Assessment which ranks districts in terms of food vulnerability and informs delivery priorities accordingly.

Additional suffering is caused by mines and explosive remnants of war: it is estimated that 728 km^2 still requires some form of clearance and over 4 million Afghans live in mine-affected areas. DFID funds the HALO trust (an expected £4.6 million in 2008-09) to undertake a demining programme, in order to return hazardous areas to productive use and reduce the threat to the population.

DFID Afghanistan has developed a Gender Equality Action Plan to drive awareness and focus on gender issues within our development programme. The plan covers gender-disaggregated results monitoring, explicitly mapping staff and programme resources against gender objectives, and an internal skills development programme. A significant portion of our effort will be focused on building partnerships within the GoA and with other donors—particularly multilateral institutions—to increase their contribution to addressing gender inequality. DFID will lobby UNDP, the World Bank, and the Ministry of Agriculture to strengthen their approaches to gender issues.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many non-governmental organisations are contracted by the Government to work in Helmand province; and what projects they are undertaking. [246710]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: There are five major non-governmental organisations (NGOs) implementing projects in Helmand with Department for International Development (DFID) funding. Their work in Helmand includes agricultural development with the Ministry of Agriculture, Irrigation and Livestock; microfinance; community development; and work on procuring goods locally for the international community. In addition, the UK-led Provincial Reconstruction Team works with several local non-governmental organisations to deliver stabilisation projects across Helmand.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development with how many faith-based organisations his Department has contracts to provide public services. [244838]

Mr. Michael Foster: In making contracts for the provision of public services, my Department only selects organisations that meet the proper criteria and have the most relevant expertise and experience to offer. The extent to which such organisations are faith-based is not evident in every case. An accurate total or comprehensive list could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Marketing

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much has been spent by his Department on advertising in the last 12 months. [243716]

Mr. Michael Foster: The Department for International Development (DFID) has spent £374,302 on advertising in the last 12 months.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many special advisers were employed in his Department at each pay band on 30 November 2008; and what his Department's expenditure on special advisers was in 2007-08. [243569]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Prime Minister publishes on an annual basis, a list of the numbers and cost of special advisers. Information for 2007-08 was published on 22 July 2008, Official Report, columns 99-101WS and information for 2008-09 will be published later this year.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much has been spent on (a) departmental Christmas parties and (b) staff entertainment in the last three years. [243735]

Mr. Michael Foster: No official funds have been spent on department-wide Christmas parties in the last three years.

It is not possible to provide expenditure on staff entertainment in the last three years without incurring disproportionate costs.

Eritrea: Overseas Aid

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the value has been of Government aid to Eritrea in (a) 2006-07, (b) 2007-08 and (c) 2008-09; through which relief agencies the funding has been channelled; and to what projects it has been allocated. [243937]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department for International Development's (DFID) bilateral budget for Eritrea in 2008-09 is £2.1 million. £2 million of this is for UNICEF's water and sanitation programme, the remainder for Oxfam's water and sanitation project in Debub. In the event of an humanitarian crisis we would consider making further funds available.

Details on DFID bilateral expenditure in Eritrea in 2006-07 and 2007-08 are in the following table.

International Fund for Agricultural Development

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the merits of nominating a British candidate for the position of President of the International Fund for Agricultural Development. [242362]

Mr. Thomas: The UK works to promote merit-based, transparent senior level appointments across the international system, supporting well-qualified UK and non-UK candidates. In deciding whether to lobby for a UK candidate for a particular post the Government take a view of the mandate of the organisation, the quality of the process, the likely field and our other priorities across the multilateral system.

Over the last year we have worked successfully with the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and its membership to promote greater transparency in the election for its next president. Presidency candidates at IFAD must be nominated by their Government and, if they are to stand a serious chance of success, strongly supported by their Government in their campaign. Credible candidates have been emerging for the IFAD presidency and we did not nominate a UK candidate on this occasion.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he expects the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State to reply to the letters of 21 October and 1 December from the hon. Member for the Forest of Dean on mine harvesting in Cambodia. [246572]

Mr. Michael Foster: A response to the hon. Member for the Forest of Dean's letter of 21 October was issued on 27 October.

Mental Illness

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the recommendations relevant to his Department's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capacity and Well-Being; and if he will make a statement. [244016]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department for International Development (DFID) was pleased to read the Foresight report and will be considering it with a view to taking up any relevant findings.

Part of that process will involve an assessment of what the report might mean for DFID policy and I will report on this in due course.

Somalia: Overseas Aid

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what role the Government has played in the training of the police force in Somalia; what funding has been provided from his Department; and if he will make a statement. [243947]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The UK, together with other European donors, has provided support to the United Nations Development Programme's Rule of Law and Security (ROLS) programme, which was designed to help improve safety and security for people in Somalia and promote better access to justice. The UK's support to the UNDP Rule of Law and Security Programme finished as scheduled in August 2008.

The Department for International Development (DFID) committed $3,872,108 (£2,590,827) between January and July 2008 to the law enforcement part of the ROLS programme. This has included support for civilian Police Advisory Committees in Mogadishu, the refurbishment of a police training centre in Somaliland and the training of police station commanders. It also includes the training of police, including in human rights issues, in training centres reconstructed by the international community. Police training is one aspect of the wider programme and DFID does not specify a level of expenditure for this activity.

Stabilisation Unit

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people are employed in his Department's Stabilisation Unit (a) centrally, (b) in each theatre of operation and (c) to deal with each theatre; how many have been drawn from each contributing Department; what the annual running costs of the unit are; how much the unit has spent in each theatre in which it operates in the last 12 months; and what plans there are to audit its (i) performance and (ii) efficiency. [244005]

Mr. Michael Foster: The breakdown of staff by Department and theatre is shown in the following table.

The running costs of the unit in the current financial year are £3.6 million. Total programme spend in 2008-09 is estimated at £5.4 million and spent as follows: £1.8 million in Afghanistan, £2.0 million in Sudan, £0.3 million in Iraq, £1.3 million on building future capability, £1 million in Georgia.

The stabilisation unit is subject to the Department for International Development's (DFID) audit arrangements. This includes external financial and value for money audit by the National Audit Office and periodic internal review by DFID's Internal Audit Department (IAD).

Department source	Number of staff	Of which in London	In theatre

In addition, the Unit currently has 25 civilian experts overseas on fixed-term consultancy contracts longer than three months—17 in Afghanistan, four in Sudan, two in Iraq and two elsewhere in Africa.

Zimbabwe: Cholera

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to alleviate the water shortage in Harare; and if he will make a statement. [243674]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department for International Development (DFID) has delivered £3 million altogether to UNICEF to support the distribution of safe, potable water to cholera affected areas in Zimbabwe. UNICEF leads a cluster of over 25 partners working together to ensure that water, sanitation and hygiene in the poorest areas of the country are addressed. The high density areas of Harare are among those worst affected by the cholera epidemic. Since October 2008, UNICEF and its partners have been trucking in safe water, digging boreholes, installing mechanised pumps and treating wells. These actions have helped to increase the availability of clean water in these areas.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to alleviate the effects of the cholera outbreak in Harare. [243675]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe continues to deteriorate. The cholera epidemic is the biggest in Zimbabwe's history. The United Nations (UN) is predicting that as many as 60,000 could be affected in the coming weeks. The Department for International Development (DFID) is funding a £10 million package to help fight the cholera outbreak and support life-saving health services, including in the worst affected areas such as Harare.

OLYMPICS

Departmental Advertising

Grant Shapps: To ask the Minister for the Olympics how much has been spent by (a) her Office and (b) each body for which she has responsibility on advertising in the last 12 months. [243727]

Tessa Jowell: In the period from 1 December 2007 to 30 November 2008, the amounts spent on advertising (inclusive of VAT) were as follows:

(a) Private Office of the Minister for the Olympics—Nil

(b) Government Olympic Executive—£27,113.64

Olympic Delivery Authority—£343,906.24

Olympic Lottery Distributor—£1,345.38.

All advertising expenditure by the Government Olympic Executive (GOE), the Olympic Delivery Authority and the Olympic Lottery Distributor was for recruitment purposes, except for £2,731.16 spent by GOE to promote two regional "London 2012: Ask the Team" public question-time events.

Departmental Official Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Minister for the Olympics what records her Office maintains of its expenditure on (a) official hospitality and (b) alcohol for official hospitality. [240457]

Tessa Jowell: My office keeps a log of ministerial gifts and hospitality given and received each year.

There is no departmental requirement to separately monitor expenditure on alcohol for hospitality purposes and therefore no mechanism for this information to be recorded.

All spending on official entertainment is made in accordance with the principles set out in Managing Public Money. This document is available on HM Treasury's website.

Inland Waterways

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister for the Olympics what steps she is taking to ensure that the Olympic Delivery Authority accomplishes the dredging of the canal access routes to the Olympic sites. [244989]

Tessa Jowell: The Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) has an agreed programme of waterways works. A wharf is currently being built on the Lee Navigation Canal adjacent to the on-site logistics centre at Bow East and a further wharf is scheduled for construction by Q2 2009 on the Waterworks River. The ODA has recently carried out successful trials in the use of two 100 tonne fully loaded barges to the wharf locations. A dredging scheme is currently being evaluated for dredging the river from Bow locks up to the Waterworks River wharf to facilitate 350 tonne barges with dredging scheduled for Q1 2009. The ODA will report progress on these works in its monthly and quarterly reports.

Olympic Games 2012: Construction

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Minister for the Olympics what alternative sources of funding for the athletes' village (a) she and (b) the Olympic Delivery Authority is considering; and if she will make a statement. [246120][1]

Tessa Jowell: As a consequence of recent turmoil in the global financial markets, less private sector investment is available than originally envisaged, meaning that the Olympic Village deal needs to be restructured and additional public sector investment will need to be made. The details of that restructured deal are being worked through between the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) and Lend Lease under the terms of an exclusivity agreement and it would not be appropriate to reveal the details until that deal is concluded in the spring of next year. Under the exclusivity agreement, the ODA may not negotiate with alternative development partners.

Olympic Games 2012: Economic Situation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister for the Olympics what assessment she has made of the effect of the current economic situation on the 2012 London Olympics. [245871]

Tessa Jowell: The turmoil in global financial markets and the economic developments of recent months have affected the financing of the Olympic Village and International Broadcast Centre/Main Press Centre projects.

However, the venues and infrastructure for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games, including the Olympic Village and the International Broadcasting Centre/Main Press Centre are still on track to be delivered within the £9.325 billion public sector funding package. In addition, the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games has already secured over half the funding necessary to stage the games.

The substantial progress that has been made both in the delivery of the venues and infrastructure and in the raising of funds to support the staging of the games means that, while recognising the risks, we remain in a good position to manage delivery on time and on budget.

Olympic Games 2012: Gun Sports

Mr. Malins: To ask the Minister for the Olympics whether the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games have presented their requirements for the venue of the Olympic shooting events in respect of (a) ranges and facilities, (b) security, (c) costs, (d) transport facilities, (e) accommodation and (f) legacy to the authorities at Bisley shooting ground; and if she will make a statement. [245802]

1. [Official Report, 3 February 2009, Vol. 487, c. 8MC.]

Tessa Jowell: The London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) together with the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) met British Shooting on 9 December to discuss the use of Bisley for the shooting competition at the London 2012 games. They discussed a wide-range of issues including facility requirements, the legacy benefit, safety and security issues, transport and accommodation provision, and whether the venue can be delivered efficiently and cost-effectively. The ODA has subsequently written to British Shooting requesting further clarity on a number of issues. This work on the shooting venue is ongoing and final decisions are yet to be made by the Olympic Board.

Olympic Games 2012: Lend Lease

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Minister for the Olympics pursuant to the Answer of 8 December 2008, Official Report, column 3W, for what reasons exclusivity has been granted to Lend Lease; and if she will make a statement. [243762]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 15 December 2008]: Lend Lease were appointed after a competitive tender process under the Official Journal of the European Union (OJEU) and remain a committed partner in the delivery of the Olympic Village. The exclusivity agreement has been granted in order to finalise funding arrangements and legal documentation.

Olympic Games 2012: North East

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister for the Olympics what assessment she has made of the legacy to the North East from the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. [245858]

Tessa Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 15 December 2008, Official Report, column 342W.

In addition, nine of the Olympic Delivery Authority's (ODA) suppliers are businesses registered in the North East. Over 700 businesses from the region have registered on CompeteFor, the electronic brokerage service for buyers and suppliers. In February 2009, One North East (the Regional Development Agency) will host the ODA at a 'Meet the Buyer event' at Newcastle Racecourse where a range of business support activity with be available and 2012 opportunities will be promoted to around 2,000 business organisations.

I am also delighted to say there are a number of projects in the North East that have been awarded the London 2012 Inspire Mark (the non-commercial 2012 brand available for exciting new cultural projects inspired by the Games). So far this includes:

Creative Arts, by Tyne and Wear Museums;

Dance City Afro Reggae, by Dance City;

Seconds Out, by Theatre Royal Newcastle and Darlington Council;

Border Crossing by ISIS Arts;

Juice, Newcastle Gateshead's Children and Young People's Festival, by Culture 10; People's Record and Literature and Stories by MLA.

The Personal Best programme uses Games-inspired volunteering to help people to develop their skills for work. Building on the success of London, the North East will be one of the first regions to benefit by introducing this programme.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister for the Olympics what steps are being taken to ensure that (a) the North East and (b) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency are able to meet the goals and objectives set for the London 2012 Olympics. [245860]

Tessa Jowell: The Government and the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) are working hard to ensure the benefits of 2012 reach across the UK and have established a Nations and Regions Group (NRG) to oversee this work. The North East representative is Peter Rowley, Chair of the Regional Sports Board.

At a regional level, all London 2012 games-related activity is led by One NorthEast (the regional development agency) and Sport England North East and includes a structure involving partners from across the public, voluntary and private sectors. These arrangements provide the groundwork for delivering a strong legacy in the North East and will ensure that the region contributes to the overall UK-wide legacy ambitions of 2012. Through the effective delivery of the Legacy Action Plan, we aim to maximise the social, economic and cultural opportunities across the UK.

We are already seeing great progress in a lot of these areas, for example, the North East has put in place a project called Beating Type 2 Diabetes. This project is active in Middlesbrough and aims to show how increased physical activity can help prevent type 2 diabetes. It uses 2012 as a key driver for behavioural change.

Additionally, there are also a number of groups in the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland region who work in partnership with Sport England to promote the wider benefits of the London 2012 games. This includes Tees Valley Olympic and Paralympic Games Working Group which has identified a draft action plan of activities that it intends to carry out between now and 2012. It is organising an events-based programme which aims to use the Olympics and Paralympics to encourage involvement in sport and identify talented performers. The group is also utilising Sport England funding to match strong performers with talented coaches to enable them to fulfil their potential.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Airguns: Crime

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she plans to (a) collate and (b) publish as a separate category statistics on offences committed with airsoft guns. [243421]

Jacqui Smith: Statistics for crimes involving BB guns/soft air weapons have been collected separately since April 2004 and were published for the first time in January 2006.

Latest data relate to 2006-07 and are available in table 2.03 of 'Homicides, Firearm Offences and Intimate Violence 2006-07' (HOSB 03/08), which is at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs08/hosb0308.pdf.

Alcoholic Drinks: Young People

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many retailers have been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted for the persistent sale of alcohol to a person under 18 years in each of the last five years. [244844]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the answer given on 15 December 2008, Official Report, column 504W.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress her Department has made in the replacement of animals in scientific procedures; what effect Government action to promote such replacement had on numbers of animals used in scientific procedures in the most recent year for which figures are available; what recent discussions she has had with representatives of the scientific community about this issue; and if she will make a statement. [245068]

Meg Hillier: The Government strongly support the development and use of non-animal alternatives where possible, use of animals in scientific procedures will not be licensed if alternative non-animal techniques are available. The National Centre for Replacement, Refinement and Reduction of Animals in Research (NC3Rs), which the Home Office part-funds, was established in May 2004 and acts as a focal point for research into the 3Rs. We have ongoing discussions with the NC3Rs.

The Government also continue to support the European Centre for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ECVAM), with a member of Home Office staff serving on the ESAC Scientific Advisory Committee, and through contributions to the European Union. It is ECVAM's task to monitor and co-ordinate research into alternatives and to develop the processes of validation—that is, the assessment of alternative methods to see whether they are reliable and whether they produce a level of information similar to the animal based tests they are to replace.

In addition the Home Office has established an inter-departmental group on the 3Rs to ensure other UK regulatory bodies take account of the progress with the 3Rs in their policies and practices. Home Office staff made a range of presentations on humane experimental technique at the 6th World Congress on Alternatives to Animal research in 2007. Reference is made to other relevant Home Office presentations in the 2007 Annual Report of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate.

The impact of progress on the uptake of suitable reduction and replacement alternatives can be seen in a number of classes of animal use reported in the Annual Statistical report series: for example reductions in numbers of rabbits used for pyrogen testing, the numbers of guinea pigs used for skin sensitisation testing, and the number of animals used for skin irritation studies.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment she has made of whether the threshold of moderate pain in animal experimentation is being adhered to; how her Department defines moderate pain in relation to animal experimentation; what representations she has received since January 2008 about that definition; and if she will make a statement. [245071]

Meg Hillier: The assessment of whether the threshold of moderate pain in animal experimentation is being adhered to is mainly through the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate's inspection programme and a selection of reports and published work.

The severity limits of protocols are defined in Section 5.42 of the Guidance on the Operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. Moderate protocols are defined as:

"Protocols regarded as moderate include toxicity tests (which do not involve lethal endpoints) and many surgical procedures (provided that suffering is controlled and minimised by effective post-operative analgesia and care).

Protocols that have the potential to cause greater suffering but include controls which minimise severity, or terminate the protocol before the animal shows more than moderate adverse effects, may also be classed within the moderate severity limit".

We have received no formal representations on this issue since January 2008. Judicial Review proceedings in July 2007 considered four issues relating to the implementation of the 1986 Act one of which was on the severity limits for protocols. It was argued that in certain projects the severity limits should have been set at substantial rather than moderate. In its judgment issued on 23 April 2008, the Court of Appeal overturned the High Court's earlier finding that the former Chief Inspector had erred in law in assessing severity limits in the relevant project licence. On this point, the Court found that neither the former Chief Inspector nor the Secretary of State had adopted an erroneous approach to the published Guidance on the Operation of the 1986 Act regarding the assessment of severity limits.

Furthermore, the Court of Appeal, in upholding our appeal, agreed that the severity limit is determined by the degree of suffering experienced by the animal prior to the point at which it is humanely killed.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps her Department (a) is taking and (b) plans to take in the next 12 months to reduce the number of animals used in scientific procedures; what recent representations she has received about this issue; and if she will make a statement. [245072]

Meg Hillier: Many factors influence trends in the use of animals under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, including the economic climate, global trends in scientific endeavour and strategic decisions by funding bodies. The increase in the use of genetically altered strains seen over recent years has also had an impact as advances in genetics open up new and promising avenues of medical research.

The licensing system under the 1986 Act is demand-led and we have no control over the number of project licence applications we receive. The Act limits such animal use to where there is a clear benefit to people, animals or the environment when there is no means of obtaining these benefits without animal use, or at a lesser animal welfare cost. All scientists and researchers undertaking animal research in the UK are required to take into account the '3Rs' (measures to replace, reduce, and refine animal use) when devising their programmes of research proposals.

In 2004 the Government established the National Centre for the 3Rs to provide a focal point and resources for such activities. The NC3Rs, which is part funded by the Home Office, drives advances in the 3Rs by taking a robust scientific approach, and bringing together expertise from a diverse range of areas, including academia, industry, Government and regulatory bodies.

There have been no recent formal representations about this issue.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations she has received on the Animals (Scientific Purposes) Act 1986; and if she will make a statement. [245074]

Meg Hillier: We have not received any recent formal representations on the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) statutory instruments, (b) departmental circulars and (c) other documents she (i) has issued in the last 12 months and (ii) plans to issue in the next 12 months consequent on the provisions of the Animals (Scientific Purposes) Act 1986; and if she will make a statement. [245075]

Meg Hillier: During the past 12 months we have issued no statutory instruments, departmental circulars or other documents consequential on the provisions of the Animals (Scientific Purposes) Act 1986 and currently have no plans to issue any in the next 12 months.

During 2008 we have issued a total of 10 PCD circulars and ASPD newsletters to stakeholders on a range of topical issues and these are also published on our website.

Animal Experiments: EC Law

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what her policy is on EC Directive 86/609/EEC on the protection of animals used for experimental and other scientific purposes; what recent representations she has received on this Directive; if she will publish copies of the representations she has received, together with her replies; and if she will make a statement. [245067]

Meg Hillier: The requirements of European Union directive 86/609/EEC are implemented in United Kingdom law through the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. The 1986 Act puts into effect, and in some ways exceeds, the requirements of directive 86/609/EEC and of Council of Europe Convention ETS 123.

I have received no recent formal representation.

A proposal for the revision of directive 86/609 has now been published and pending a formal public consultation to inform the Government's negotiating position my officials are undertaking a range of meetings with stakeholders including other Government Departments, users, funding bodies; and those with a special interest in alternatives, animal welfare and animal protection.

The UK Government supports the Commission's aims to harmonise the regulation of the use of animals for experimental and other scientific purposes across the European Union. In particular we support elements of the proposal that will promote high European animal welfare standards, and the development and use of alternative methods.

We believe that it is essential the regulation properly balances the protection of animals and the legitimate needs of science, industry and society, ensuring high quality scientific outputs while maintaining public confidence that animals do not suffer unnecessarily.

We will not support any unnecessary or disproportionate increase in the regulatory burden that would not further those objectives, or would damage the success, sustainability or competitiveness of the UK science base.

Animal Experiments: Licensing

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications there were for licences for animal experimentation in each year since 1997; how many licences were granted in each such year; and how many applications were rejected. [245066]

Meg Hillier: From the retained records available to us, full details for licences applied for and granted under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 are only available from 2003 and these and the current year to date are shown in the following tables.

A feature of the regulatory regime under the 1986 Act is the discussion that often takes place at an early stage between applicants (or prospective applicants) and the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate. When serious deficiencies are discovered with the proposals during these early discussions with the local inspectors, this means that proposals unlikely to meet the Act's stringent requirements are revised or withdrawn before formal refusal becomes necessary.

Furthermore, it is commonly the case that the authorities ultimately granted are not as originally set out by the applicants.

Animal Experiments: Primates

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether her Department has (a) approved and (b) inspected a breeding centre operated by Vanny Bio-Research at Prek Eng in Cambodia as an overseas primate supply and breeding facility to export primates to the UK for the purposes of scientific research; and what recent representations she has received on breeding of long-tailed macaques for research in Cambodia, with particular reference to the Vanny Bio-Research Centre. [246174]

Meg Hillier: The Home Office has no remit to approve or accredit overseas primate breeding centres. However, the use of any non-human primate under the authority of project licences issued under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 from an overseas source requires prior approval which is given only if the conditions at the breeding centre are acceptable to the Home Office at that time. The Home Office has not visited any primate supply and breeding facility in Cambodia.

We have received no formal representations on breeding of long-tailed macaques for research in Cambodia, with particular reference to the Vanny Bio-Research Centre. In my reply to your question of 17 December 2008, Official Report, column 857W, I advised you that we had previously considered the suitability of a laboratory primate breeding centre in Cambodia, and are reviewing its potential suitability in the light of additional documentation recently received. No approval for requests for the import of non-human primates will be considered until the centre in Cambodia has been visited by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have (a) been issued and (b) been breached in each of the last five years. [243324]

Jacqui Smith: Data on the number of antisocial Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) issued and breached in England and Wales are available up 31 December 2006. The available published information is shown in the following table.

Number of Antisocial Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) issued and the number proven in court to have been breached at least once at all courts in England and Wales in each year, 2000[1]-06

England and Wales	2000-02[2]	2003	2004	2005	2006
Issued	914	1,349	3,479	4,123	2,706
Breached[2]	317	565	1,410	2,163	1,801

Note:

Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when these data are used.

As reported to the Home Office by the Court Service. Prepared by OCJR Evidence and Analysis Unit.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders: Hampshire

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders were (a) issued and (b) breached in (i) Southampton, (ii) Test Valley Borough and (iii) the ceremonial county of Hampshire in (A) 2006, (B) 2007 and (C) 2008. [243916]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The number of ASBOs issued at all courts in the Hampshire Criminal Justice System (CJS) area in 2006 was 66 and number proven in court to have been breached in 2006 was 67. ASBOs became available from April 1999, the majority of the 67 ASBOs which were breached in 2006 will have been issued prior to 2006.

Centrally collected data on the number of antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) issued and the number proven in court to have been breached are available up to 31 December 2006 and are not compiled below CJS area level.

Antisocial Behaviour: Young People

Mr. Raffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many acceptable behaviour contracts have been issued to young people found drinking and behaving anti-socially in public in each of the last five years. [244191]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The information requested is not available.

Acceptable behaviour contracts (ABCs) are voluntary agreements and therefore not suitable for central data collection. However, surveys carried out by the Home Office of the Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships (CDRPs) indicated that over 30,000 ABCs have been made since October 2003. The Home Office has issued updated and comprehensive guidance for practitioners on the use of ABCs.

Asylum

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis the asylum support benefit rates are set; and whether that basis will apply to their next uprating. [244149]

Mr. Woolas: The statutory basis of asylum support is to meet the essential living needs of asylum seekers and their dependants who would otherwise be destitute. No decision has been taken on the uprating of asylum support rates for 2009.

Asylum: Children

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum-seeking children below the age of 18 years old are without parents or guardians. [243286]

Mr. Woolas: An unaccompanied asylum seeking child (UASC) is defined as a person who at the time of making an asylum application is under 18, or who, in the absence of documentary evidence establishing age, appears to be under that age; is applying for asylum in his or her own right and; is separated from both parents and is not being cared for by an adult who by law or custom has responsibility to do so.

Information is published in table 2.3 of the annual publication, which gives details of UASCs aged 17 or under, who applied for asylum by country of nationality. Annual Statistics on UASCs, 2005-07, are available in the latest annual publication Asylum Statistics United Kingdom 2007, which is held in the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration-asylum-stats.html

Asylum: Finance

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unsuccessful asylum seekers were in receipt of section 4 support on 1 November 2008. [243119]

Mr. Woolas: Information on the numbers in receipt of section 4 support is published on a quarterly basis in the Control of Immigration Quarterly statistical bulletin. The latest published information shows that as at the end of September 2008, 10,220 applicants, excluding dependants, were in receipt of Section 4 support.

Further National Statistics on asylum and immigration are available in the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration-asylum-stats.html.

Asylum: Iraq

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) Iraqi and (b) Afghan nationals have (i) applied for and (ii) been granted asylum in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [243672]

Mr. Woolas: The Home Office publishes statistics on the number of applications received for asylum, and grants of asylum at initial decision, broken down by nationality. Initial decisions do not necessarily relate to applications made in the same year.

The information is published in Table 2.1 (Applications received) and Table 3.1 (Cases granted asylum) of Asylum Statistics United Kingdom 2007 bulletin which is available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration-asylum-stats.html.

Asylum: North Korea

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people claiming to be North Korean citizens have applied for asylum in each of the last five years. [243614]

Mr. Woolas: The following table shows principal asylum applications for nationals of North Korea in each of the last five years.

Information on asylum is published annually and quarterly. Annual statistics for 2007 and quarterly statistics for 2008 are available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration-asylum-stats.html.

Bookmakers: Burglary

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many betting shop robberies there were in (a) England and Wales, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in each of the last five years. [244892]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The information requested is not collected centrally. The Home Office collects statistics on offences of robbery recorded by the police but no information is available on the type of premises robbed.

Bookmakers: Crimes of Violence

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported incidents of violence there were against (a) male and (b) female betting shop workers in (i) England and Wales, (ii) the North East, (iii) Tees Valley district and (iv) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in the last two years. [244889]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The information requested is not collected centrally. The Home Office collects statistics on offences of violence against the person recorded by the police but no information is available on the sex or occupation of the victims.

Borders: Personal Records

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment she has made of the likelihood of compliance by 2009 of charter and leisure operators which serve popular tourist destinations with requirements set under the e-Borders scheme for inbound travel documents. [243273]

Jacqui Smith: The requirements of e-Borders have been presented to all carriers operating to and from the UK. No distinction is made between 'charter and leisure operators' and scheduled carriers and indeed the majority of carriers operate a mix of both scheduled and charter services.

In some instances, carriers have stated that they are likely to be unable to discharge their full obligations for data capture and transmission to e-Borders from the planned roll out date. Consequently e-Borders has invested in the creation of a series of transitional technical solutions (valid until the end of 2009) allowing carriers to supply data in a flexible manner that satisfies the requirements of the programme.

e-Borders is confident that by continuing to work in partnership with the industry and by offering transitional technical solutions the overall compliance rate will be very high.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she expects the projected benefits to the leisure and charter industry from the e-Borders scheme to begin to flow. [243294]

Jacqui Smith: The creation of a safe and secure border is a benefit that will be felt by all of those involved in the travel industry including the travelling public.

The experience of project Semaphore has clearly demonstrated the value that advance capture and processing of passenger information adds to the safety and security of the United Kingdom by permitting the authorities to intervene in a timely and proportionate manner on those who would seek to do us harm.

The early capture of such information will be a key enabler for efficient processing of passengers and crew at the UK border and in turn benefit carriers and their passengers in maintaining smooth flow through their ports.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what deadlines have been set under the e-Borders scheme in respect of (a) outbound and (b) inbound travel document information for (i) leisure aviation, (ii) scheduled aviation, (iii) ferries, (iv) international rail, (v) boats, (vi) light aviation and (vii) other sectors. [243295]

Jacqui Smith: e-Borders does not distinguish between inbound and outbound data, but rather focuses on individual routes where all carriers operating that route are required to submit data from a specific date, inbound and outbound.

Regarding the specific modes detailed in the question I can say that the full e-Borders roll out will commence from March 2009 for scheduled aviation and thereafter will be receiving data from all other sectors from 2010. This process will be rolled out across the industry in accordance with the country based roll out plan, with 95 per cent. of the totality of inbound and outbound passengers.

Cannabis: Crime

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when warnings for cannabis possession will be recorded on the Police National Computer. [241603]

Jacqui Smith: The recording of cannabis warnings on the Police National Computer (PNC) has been considered but is not currently being pursued pending the availability of PentiP. The new PentiP 24-hour national fixed penalty database which is due to be available from 2010 will be developed to include a facility to record cannabis warnings.

The recording of cannabis warnings is currently a matter for individual police forces at a local level this will remain so until the availability of PentiP. ACPO have undertaken to ensure that all forces are fully aware of the importance of accurately recording cannabis warnings locally.

Community Relations

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at which sites the Channel Project has been rolled out to date; and at which sites she plans to roll out the project in the future. [245498]

Mr. Coaker: To date Channel Project sites are currently operational in London, Lancashire, West Yorkshire, Derbyshire, Bedfordshire and more recently in South Wales. Plans are in place to expand the project further in London, West Midlands, Lancashire, Thames Valley, South Yorkshire, Greater Manchester, Leicestershire, and Nottinghamshire.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she plans to publish the full evaluation of the Channel Project referred to on page 46 of the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise. [245499]

Mr. Coaker: An OSCT process evaluation of the Channel Project is currently underway. We will be sharing implementation lessons in spring 2009.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures she has put in place to (a) provide accountability and (b) maintain community confidence in relation to the Channel Project. [245500]

Mr. Coaker: The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England makes it clear that the police and local authorities need to take a lead in ensuring that local partnerships have been clearly tasked with driving delivery of a jointly agreed programme of action that:

Meets the specific objectives of the Prevent strategy;

Is jointly agreed and managed by the police, local authority and other partners;

Is proportionate to the level of threat in the area;

Reflects local needs; and Sets out clear and tangible milestones in tracking progress.

The guide makes it clear that local communities should be actively engaged in multi-agency partnerships and should shape the development and implementation of the jointly agreed programme of action.

Where Channel is operational it will form an important part of local areas' programmes of action.

All local authorities have to report on progress on the prevent strategy through National Indicator 35—'Building Resilience to Violent Extremism', which is replicated in the Assessments of Policing and Community Safety performance framework. The introduction of the Comprehensive Area Assessment in April 2009 will further ensure effective and efficient performance by local authorities and other local partners on Prevent.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which areas (a) have set up multi-agency partnerships focused on preventing violent extremism, referred to on page 9 of the report The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England published in June 2008, (b) have set up groups focused specifically on the Prevent Strategy and (c) are using an existing group, such as a Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership or Local Strategic Partnership. [245559]

Mr. Coaker: Government offices provide information on Prevent partnership working each quarter for the 78 areas that received preventing violent extremism funding this financial year as part of their area based grant. The last return provided in September 2008 reported that 60 of these areas had a multi-agency Prevent partnership in place. We do not specifically request information on whether the named partnership is a new group but we understand that most areas have decided that an existing partnership, such as a crime and disorder reduction partnership or local strategic partnership, should be tasked to oversee their work on Prevent at a strategic level.

Government offices continue to work with local areas to ensure that effective delivery arrangements are in place and are providing challenge and guidance to those areas that have yet to agree a multi-agency partnership to lead on Prevent.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will have overall responsibility at a local level for the regular assessment and reviews of the threat of individuals and communities becoming involved in violent extremism, referred to on page 12 of the report The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England; how often such assessments will be carried out; and if she will make a statement. [245560]

Mr. Coaker: The police are developing a new process for sharing information which will enable all BCU Commanders and Local Authority Chief Executives to see an assessment of the vulnerabilities in their areas, and will be responsible for co-ordinating this activity with a range of partners. Assessments will be reviewed at least annually, depending on the threat in a particular area.

Community Relations: Police

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which constabularies have undertaken exercises with objectives similar to Operation Nicole referred to on page 29 of The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England. [245596]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office does not collect this information centrally. The Association of Chief Police Officers (Terrorism and Allied Matters) has national responsibility for co-ordinating and overseeing police led counter-terrorism tabletop exercises.

Control Orders

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 3 April 2008 to the hon. Member for North-West Cambridgeshire, (Mr. Vara) Official Report, column 1314W, on control orders, how many individuals are currently subject to control orders; and how many of those are receiving benefits administered by the Department for Work and Pensions, broken down by type of benefit. [244725]

Mr. Coaker: In relation to the total number of individuals currently subject to control orders, I would refer the hon. Member to the latest written ministerial statement in relation to control orders which was published on 15 December 2008. This statement explains that, as of 10 December 2008, there were 15 control orders in force.

The latest information that the Home Office holds shows that eight of the individuals currently subject to control orders are in receipt of benefits that are administered by the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP). Some individuals are in receipt of more than one form of DWP administered benefit. Of these individuals: two receive incapacity benefit, five receive job seeker's allowance, one receives disability living allowance, two receive income support and two receive child tax credit.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much her Department has spent on (a) accommodation, (b) council tax, (c) utility bills, (d) telephone line rental, (e) pre-paid telephone cards and (f) any other necessary subsistence payments, for individuals subject to control orders who have been prevented from gaining employment or rendered ineligible for benefits in each year since 2005; [244726]

(2) how many individuals currently subject to control orders have been prevented from gaining employment or have been rendered ineligible for benefits due to their terms of their control order; and how many of those individuals are currently receiving subsistence payments from her Department, broken down by type of subsistence payment. [244727]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office has not spent any money on providing accommodation, council tax, utility bills, telephone line rental or pre-paid telephone cards for individuals subject to control orders due simply to their being prevented from gaining employment or rendered ineligible for benefits as a result of their control orders.

Since the commencement of the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 one individual subject to a control order was assessed as being ineligible for employment related benefits, for a short period, as a result of the terms of his control order. The individual concerned received subsistence payments totalling £240 over an eight-week period in 2006.

Although not as a result of his being made ineligible for employment related benefits, the Home Office has in 2008 also paid the following subsistence costs for this same individual:

(a) £7744 on his Home Office-provided accommodation;

(b) £429 on his council tax;

(c) £891 on utilities; and

(d) £88 on line rental.

The Home Office has not paid for this individual's accommodation, council tax, utility bills, telephone line rental, or pre-paid telephone cards in any preceding year.

Counter-Terrorism Act 2008

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which (a) statutory instruments, (b) departmental circulars and (c) other documents she plans to issue in the next 12 months consequential on the provisions of the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008; and if she will make a statement. [243695]

Mr. Coaker: The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 received Royal Assent on 26 November 2008.

Part 5 (terrorist financing and money laundering) and part 6 (financial restrictions proceedings) of the Act came into force on the day after Royal Assent. The Lord Chancellor has made two sets of Rules of Court under section 72 of the Act. They are (i) the Supreme Court of England and Wales Civil Procedure (Amendment No. 2) Rules 2008 (SI 2008/3085) and (ii) the Rules of the Supreme Court (Northern Ireland) (Amendment No.3) 2008 (S.R. (N.I.) 2008, No. 479). Both were laid before Parliament on 2 December 2008.

Sections 85-90 (costs of policing at gas sites) will come into force, by virtue of section 100(3) (commencement) on 26 January 2009, that is two months after Royal Assent. Following this the Secretary of State for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform will make an order designating the National Grid (NTS) as a gas transporter and subsequently they will issue directions to Ofgem and to the gas transporter.

Section 91 (appointment of special advocates in Northern Ireland) will come into force when section 27 of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002 (ch.26) comes into force.

The other provisions in the Act will be brought into force by commencement order.

The provisions relating to the power to remove documents (sections 1-9) and post-charge questioning (part 2 of the Act) require the PACE codes of practice to be revised when they are brought into force. Drafts of these revised PACE codes were laid in the House Library during the passage of the Act and they will be consulted upon in the normal way.

The formal consultation process is likely to be in January 2009.

In respect of section 28 (which provides UK-wide jurisdiction for terrorism offences) the Lord Advocate and the Attorney-General will set out some of the main considerations that may be relevant to decisions made under this section and this document will be made available in the House Library before the provisions are brought into force.

In relation to the provisions in Part 4 of the Act (the notification scheme for convicted terrorists) regulations will be made under section 52 (Travel outside the United Kingdom); Rules of Court will be made in relation to notification orders; a standard form for police acknowledgment of notification will be prescribed and regulations may be made prescribing further information that must be notified under the scheme.

Some of the other provisions in the Act will also require other supporting work to be in place before they may be implemented. Departmental circulars will accompany the commencement orders and other guidance will be issued where appropriate

Crime and Policing Bill

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will take steps to assess the social impact of the planned Crime and Policing Bill on those groups likely to be affected by it. [244951]

Mr. Coaker: Impact assessments have been produced for the necessary provisions within the Policing and Crime Bill and are available at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/ia-police-crime-bill-08/and also at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/consultations/closed/airportpolicing/revisedimpactassessmet.pdf

Equality impact assessments for relevant provisions in the Bill will be published before Second Reading in the House of Commons.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the Policing Green Paper of July 2008, what indicators will be used to measure her Department's performance in tackling serious crime. [243606]

Jacqui Smith: Policing performance is measured through the Assessments of Policing And Community Safety (APACS) framework, which contains key performance indicators for the police working alone or in partnership. These include performance indicators for serious violent crime, gun crime, knife crime and others. A full list of the indicators in APACS was set out in 'The Police Authorities (Best Value) Performance Indicators Order 2008' (10 March 2008).

Crime: Burglary

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what her most recent estimate is of the levels of domestic burglary in (a) England and Wales, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency, in each of the last five years. [245021]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The available information relates to recorded offences of domestic burglary and is given in the following table. The Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency comes within the Middlesbrough Basic Command Unit. Data for Tees Valley are not available.

Offences of domestic burglary recorded by the police, 2003-04 to 2007-08

Crime: Motor Vehicles

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what her most recent estimate is of the levels of vehicle-related crime in (a) England and Wales, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency, in each of the last five years. [245022]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The available information relates to recorded offences against vehicles and is given in the following table. The Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency comes within the Middlesbrough Basic Command Unit. Data for Tees Valley are not available.

Crime: Victims

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent steps the Government has taken to support victims of crime. [244561]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have placed victims and witnesses at the heart of the criminal justice system and given support services to them a high priority.

Since 2004 the Government have introduced the Code of Practice for Victims of Crime which gives victims legal rights to support and information about their case. It has also supported the development of Victim Support into a strong national organisation able to help more victims more quickly. Victim Support is an independent charity and is the main provider of services to victims and witnesses across England and Wales. Over recent years funding has increased from £11.7 million to £30 million. Victim Support has recently introduced an improved business process, with an additional £12.6 million from Government, so that victims can be contacted quickly, have their needs assessed and, if needed, be offered a wider range of practical services than was previously available.

In addition the Government fund a number of other organisations offering specialist support services through the Victims Fund. £8.2 million has been invested so far funding for services to victims of sexual violence, childhood sexual abuse, hate crime and homicide. The Poppy project supports adult women who have been trafficked into the UK for sexual exploitation and this includes provision for temporarily accommodating victims.

The Office for Criminal Justice Reform (OCJR) has provided £5.6 million since 2007 for Independent Domestic Violence Advisors (IDVAs) who provide a service to victims who are at high risk of harm. The money provides IDVAS to support victims as their cases progress through specialist domestic violence courts. The £5.6 million follows £2 million of Home Office funding in 2006-07.

The recently published Youth Crime Action Plan will be improving support services to young victims of crime. The plan has been developed jointly between the OCJR, Ministry of Justice, the Department for Children Schools and Families and the Home Office. The Action Plan will deliver results on youth justice, youth crime prevention and cross cutting themes on victimisation.

Support after Murder and Manslaughter (SAMM) receives an annual grant of £140,000 to provide advice and support to those bereaved by homicide and presents training to police forces and other statutory agencies (e.g. the Health and Safety Executive) on bereavement awareness issues.

Victims and witnesses have a voice in shaping government policy and future support services through the Victims Advisory Panel and, shortly, the appointment of a commissioner for victims and witnesses will be able to promote the views of victims and witnesses at the highest levels.

Crime: Young People

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent steps the Government have taken to reduce levels of youth crime. [244563]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Government are committed to driving down youth crime and keeping the communities, including young people themselves, safer.

The vast majority of young people are well behaved and it is a minority we need to focus on, who are responsible for half of all youth crime.

As well as the Tackling Knives Action Programme (TKAP), the Government have published (15 July) the Youth Crime Action Plan. This is a joint initiative by the Home Office, Ministry of Justice (MOJ) and Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF). The plan sets out a comprehensive cross-Government plan to tackle youth crime, with a triple track approach of enforcement and punishment where behaviour is unacceptable, non-negotiable support and challenge where it is most needed, and better and earlier prevention. It will deliver an extensive and comprehensive package of measures for children, young people and families that is backed by £100 million of funding to help prevent young people getting involved in crime.

The £100 million is being used for:

extra investment in all areas of England to support families with the most entrenched and complex problems;

an intensive programme of action for priority areas where problem of youth crime is greatest; including taking unsupervised young people off the streets at night and requiring young people to complete community service on Friday and Saturday nights; and guidance of recommended approaches to reducing youth crime for these areas that they can tailor to their local needs, achieving the right balance between enforcement action to tackle the problems on our streets and prevention measures to ensure future generations do not make the same mistakes.

There is already a great deal of work going on across Government to tackle youth crime and anti social behaviour. Positive Futures programme is a national sports based social inclusion programme which is funded by the Home Office in partnership with the Football Foundation.

The programme aims to have a positive influence on young people's lives through widening their horizons and providing access to new opportunities by using sport, art and leisure activities as a catalyst to encourage project participation and steering young people towards education, training and employment.

Crimes of Violence

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent crimes have been reported in (a) England and Wales, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency, in each of the last five years. [245023]

Mr. Alan Campbell: A number of changes have been made to recorded crime in response to suggestions in the two reviews of crime statistics. One such change is that the term 'violent crime' is no longer used in connection with the recorded crime statistics and we now provide figures for violence against the person.

The available information is given in the following table. The Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency comes within the Middlesbrough Basic Command Unit. Data for Tees Valley are not available.

Offences of violence against the person recorded by the police, 2003-04 to 2007-08

Criminal Records Bureau: Standards

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment she has made of the effect on the career prospects of individuals of having unsubstantiated allegations on their Criminal Records Bureau disclosures. [246040]

Meg Hillier: The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) does not hold criminal records or records of allegations. Rather, in processing disclosure applications, the CRB obtains information held by the police service and from lists held by the Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF) and the Department of Health (DoH).

Therefore, although the CRB does not know how many individuals are the subject of unsubstantiated allegations on their disclosures, the Bureau is aware of the impact such allegations can have on an applicant's career prospects.

It is for this reason that the CRB has issued a range of guidance, and a code of practice, to those who use the CRB service to ensure that, where conviction or non-conviction exists, it is discussed fairly and transparently.

The CRB operates a disputes procedure where disclosed data can be challenged by an applicant, although the retention or disposal of intelligence material held by the police is entirely a matter for the chief officer.

Criminal Records: EU Action

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the European Criminal Record Information system will allow the vetting of prospective employees by (a) airport authorities and (b) other sensitive employers; and what estimate she has made of the speed with which a request for information on a prospective employee's record could be answered. [243296]

Jacqui Smith: In October, the EU agreed a Council Decision on the establishment of the European Criminal Record Information System (ECRIS). This proposal is designed to provide a standardised format for the secure electronic exchange of criminal records information including the offence and the sentence.

Criminal record exchange in the EU is still currently governed by Council Decision 2005/876/JHA of 21 November 2005 on the exchange of information extracted from the criminal record. Under these arrangements, the UK Central Authority for Exchange of Criminal Records (UKCA-ECR) is automatically told by other member states of convictions of British nationals in other EU countries and can ask other member states for the previous criminal history of one of their citizens who is involved in criminal proceedings here. Responses to such requests should be provided within 10 days.

Where the UKCA-ECR receives this information, it is recorded on our police national computer. It will therefore be available to the Criminal Records Bureau and Disclosure Scotland.

When ECRIS is implemented, it will allow swifter exchange of criminal records information than is the case now.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 5 November 2008, Official Report, column 2226W, on departmental consultants, how many security passes her Department has issued to contractors providing consultancy services in the last 12 months; and if she will put in place measures to record the number of external consultants contracted to provide services for her Department. [244836]

Mr. Woolas: The Department does employ consultants for specialist areas of activity. The Department has records of passes issued to external contractors, including consultants. However, the cost involved in confirming the number of passes issued to consultants over the 12 months would incur disproportionate costs in accordance with extant guidelines.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by her Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244707]

Mr. Woolas: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

In respect of other correspondence and emails from the public, only non-individually addressed correspondence is managed centrally. The information requested cannot be obtained save at disproportionate cost as to do so would require gathering information from every official in the Department.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by her Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244348]

Mr. Woolas: The Department's accounting system does not hold the information at the requested level of detail. The information could not be provided and verified without incurring disproportionate cost.

Departmental Manpower

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff in her Department did not achieve an acceptable assessment grade in their annual report in the latest reporting year for which figures are available. [244189]

Mr. Woolas: In the 2007-08 reporting year, and from the data available, 146 members of staff across Home Office headquarters, the UK Borders Agency (UKBA) and the Identity and Passport Service (IPS) did not achieve an acceptable assessment marking in their annual reports.

The Criminal Records Bureau is able to provide this information only by reviewing individual paper records, and this would incur disproportionate cost.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much her Department spent on Ministerial hospitality in (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06, (c) 2006-07 and (d) 2007-08, expressed in current prices. [241242]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

All spending on official entertainment is made in accordance with the principles set out in Managing Public Money.

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on (a) departmental Christmas parties and (b) staff entertainment in the last three years. [243747]

Mr. Woolas: No official funds were used for Christmas parties in the last three years: any parties attended are entirely at the cost of the individual member of staff. Expenditure on staff entertainment is tightly controlled, and is only incurred as part of the Home Office policy on staff reward and recognition, and where it is shown that alternative forms of recognition (such as saying thank you, providing vouchers, or a bonus) have been considered. The Department's accounting system shows that expenditure on reward and recognition has been:

2005-06	13,687.08
2006-07	57,963.78
2007-08	203,980.11

All Home Office expenditure on rewards and recognition, including staff entertainment, conforms to the principles of regularity, propriety and value for money, and any other guidance as applicable contained within Managing Public Money.

The increase in expenditure is attributable to enhanced communication and senior management support of the reward and recognition policy, which in line with Central Government practice.

For the Department's agencies, the Criminal Records Bureau and the Identity and Passport Service's spend could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Pay

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what bonuses were paid by her Department in 2007-08; to which members of staff; and for what purposes. [240794]

Mr. Woolas: In Home Office Headquarters and the UK Border Agency staff in all grades are eligible in certain circumstances to receive two kinds of bonus: special bonuses (of up to 5 per cent. of salary but not exceeding £1,947) and end-of-year appraisal bonuses (of up to 4 per cent. of their pay scale's target rate). Special bonuses may be awarded at any time of the year for outstanding achievements by staff, including members of the senior civil service (SCS), in particularly demanding tasks or situations.

End-of-year appraisal bonuses are made to individuals in grades below the SCS who have made an exceptional contribution throughout the year. Members of the SCS can be awarded performance bonuses as set out in the Senior Salaries Review Body report number 62.

Staff in the Identity and Passport Service (IPS) receive end-of-year corporate Bonuses (up to £400), Change Agent bonuses (grades 6 and 7 only, up to 4 per cent. of salary) and special bonuses (upper limit normally £500).

Staff in the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) do not receive end-of-year bonuses, but can receive special bonuses (up to 5 per cent. of their grade's salary scale). For reasons of confidentiality, we are unable to release the names of individuals who received bonuses. Tables 1 and 2 give details of the distribution by grade of special bonuses and end-of-year appraisal bonuses respectively.

Departmental Procurement

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 21 October 2008, Official Report, column 259W, on departmental procurement, what payments the Identity and Passport Service made to Swingletree Stables in 2007-08; and for what purpose in each case. [241875]

Jacqui Smith: Two payments, totalling £300 were made to the Swingletree Stables in the 2007-08 financial year, as part of IPS's Adult Lifelong Learning (ALL) scheme.

This employee development scheme has been set up to encourage staff personal development. It provides limited financial assistance to employees to undertake a course/activity in their own time that results in improved skills/knowledge.

Deportation

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 18 November, Official Report, columns 318-9W, on deportation, how many of the 63,365 removals from the United Kingdom in 2007 were cases of (a) enforced removals, (b) persons refused entry at port and subsequently removed, including cases dealt with at juxtaposed controls, (c) persons departing voluntarily after enforcement action had been initiated against them, (d) persons leaving under assisted voluntary return programmes run by the International Organisation for Migration and (e) persons whom it has been established have left the United Kingdom without informing the immigration authorities. [243430]

Mr. Woolas: The following table shows the number of persons removed, departed voluntarily or left under assisted returns from the United Kingdom in 2007. Information on the number of enforced removals from the UK and persons departing voluntarily after enforcement action had been initiated against them are not separately identifiable. This combined category is available broken down to show the number of persons whom it has been established have left the United Kingdom without informing the Immigration Authorities. The figures are rounded to the nearest five and data for 2007 are provisional.

Published statistics on immigration and asylum are placed in the Library of the House and are available from the Home Office's Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration-asylum-stats.html.

Removals, voluntary departures and assisted returns[1], by removal type, 2007

Period	Number of removals[2] 2007[3]
Non-asylum cases refused entry at port and subsequently removed[4]	31,145
Enforced removals including voluntary departures after enforcement action had been initiated[5, 6]	28,065
of which:
left the UK without informing the Immigration Authorities	6,885
Assisted Voluntary Returns[7]	4,155
Grand Total	63,365

[2] Figures are rounded to the nearest five and may not sum to the totals shown because of independent rounding.
[3] Provisional
[4] Includes cases dealt with at juxtaposed controls, persons departing voluntarily after enforcement action had been initiated against them and removals which have been performed by Immigration Officers at ports using enforcement powers.
[5] Includes persons who it has been established have left the UK without informing the immigration authorities.
[7] Persons leaving under Assisted Voluntary Return Programmes run by the International Organisation for Migration. May include some cases where enforcement action has been initiated.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people eligible to remain in the UK under the DP5/96 concession have been deported since 2001. [244584]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the number of people deported under the DP5/96 concession is not available and could be obtained only by the detailed examination of individual records at disproportionate cost.

Deportation: Children

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many children were awaiting deportation from the UK on 1 December 2008; [243767]

(2) how many children were awaiting deportation to (a) Zimbabwe, (b) Democratic Republic of Congo, (c) Sudan, (d) Georgia and (e) Somalia on 1 December 2008. [243768]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 15 December 2008]: The UK Border Agency seeks to deport all foreign nationals who are convicted of committing serious crimes in the United Kingdom. It only deports children who are part of family groups, or, where the child is unaccompanied, where there are adequate and safe reception arrangements in place. In order to obtain the exact information requested it would be necessary to conduct checks of individual case files; this would incur a disproportionate cost.

The Home Office publishes statistics on the number of asylum seekers who were removed, departed voluntarily or left under assisted returns from the UK by country of nationality, age and sex on an annual basis.

The latest published annual information for 2007 can be found in the House Library.

Deportation: Offenders

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 20 November 2008, Official Report, column 721W, on deportation: offenders, if she will list the grounds for deportation relating to national security other than suspected involvement in terrorism. [243909]

Jacqui Smith: Any foreign national who represents a threat to the national security of the United Kingdom will be considered for deportation action.

Involvement in terrorism would be one ground for regarding an individual as a threat to our national security. Other possible grounds include involvement in espionage, sabotage, or the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, or seeking to overthrow or undermine parliamentary democracy by political, industrial or violent means.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 20 November 2008, Official Report, column 721W, on deportation: offenders, where the 19 individuals whose deportation has been discontinued are residing. [243910]

Jacqui Smith: I am unable to answer this question as some of the individuals are subject to court orders preventing any personal information regarding their cases being placed in the public domain. Additionally it would not be prudent to place such personal information onto official public records.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 20 November 2008, Official Report, column 721W, on deportation: offenders, when the six individuals deported after they were certified under Part 4 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 were deported. [243911]

Jacqui Smith: The six individuals referred to in the question who were previously certified under part 4 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 were deported between June 2006 and July 2007. They were all deported using deportation with assurances powers.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 20 November 2008, Official Report, column 721W, on deportation: offenders, where the nine individuals certified under Part 4 of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 who have not been deported are residing. [243912]

Jacqui Smith: I am unable to fully answer this question as some of the individuals are subject to court orders preventing any personal information regarding their cases being placed in the public domain. Additionally, it would not be prudent to place such personal information onto official public records, however I can confirm that one of these individuals has been extradited to France.

Detention Centres: Suicide

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have committed suicide while being held in an immigration centre in each of the last 10 years, broken down by (a) centre, (b) age and (c) sex. [243154]

Jacqui Smith: There have been seven self-inflicted deaths in immigration removal centres during this period detailed as follows. All were failed asylum seekers or other immigration offenders awaiting removal.

One in Haslar, aged 42. Two in Harmondsworth, ages were 31 and 26. One in Dungavel, aged 23. One in Colnbrook, aged 24. One in Campsfield, aged 18. One in Yarl's Wood, aged 35. All the individuals were male.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reports of causing or allowing the death of a child or vulnerable person contrary to section 5 of the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 were made to the police in (a) 2005-06, (b) 2006-07 and (c) 2007-08. [243601]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The available information relates to recorded offences of causing or allowing the death of a child or vulnerable person. There were five offences recorded in 2005-06, three recorded in 2006-07 and four recorded in 2007-08.

Drugs: Crime

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether she plans to introduce a penalty notice for disorder as a sanction for the possession of (a) any other Class B drugs besides cannabis and (c) any Class C drugs. [241602]

Jacqui Smith: No. The Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 (Amendment) Order 2009 seeks to extend the Penalty Notice for Disorder Scheme to the possession of cannabis only. There are no plans to extend the scheme to other Class B drugs or any Class C drugs.

Entry Clearances: Moldova

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will establish a visa regime applicable to categories of persons wishing to visit the UK from Moldova at the same time as the analogous EU arrangements are put in place. [243703]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 16 December 2008]: The UK has a visa regime in place for visitors from Moldova. The EU-Moldova visa facilitation agreement entered into force on 1 January 2008. It was concluded under an element of the Schengen acquis in which the UK does not participate. The agreements do, however, contain provisions recommending that the UK concludes bilateral visa-facilitation agreements. Although the UK is under no formal obligation, we intend to do so however, formal negotiations have yet to commence with Moldova.

Genetics: Databases

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) crime scene and (b) police officer DNA profiles have been removed from the national DNA database in each month of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [240864]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The number of crime scene DNA profiles removed from the National DNA Database (NDNAD) for police forces in England and Wales in each month of the last five years is given in Table 1.

The DNA profiles of police officers and staff taken for contamination elimination purposes are not held on the NDNAD, but on the Police Elimination Database (PED), which is entirely separate from the NDNAD. The number of police officer and staff DNA profiles that have been removed from the PED in each month of the last five years is given in Table 2.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate her Department has made of the number of incidents where personal information and DNA samples which (a) were to be loaded onto the national DNA database and (b) have been loaded onto the national DNA database have been lost; and if she will make a statement. [240924]

Mr. Alan Campbell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 17 December 2008, Official Report, column 859W, to the hon. Member for Cardiff, Central (Jenny Willott).

Hatton Cross Tribunals

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 2258W, on Hatton Cross Tribunals, when she plans to write to the hon. Member for Newbury; and if she will make a statement. [244010]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 15 December 2008]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 9 December 2008 in response to PQs 226752 and 239031.

Human Trafficking

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place to deal with people who are identified as having been trafficked. [242657]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Ministry of Justice and the Home Office jointly funds the Poppy project to provide specialist, high-level support to victims of human trafficking for sexual exploitation. Victims are provided with a 30 day reflection period, accommodation, advocacy support, access to counselling, interpretative services, access to immigration legal advice, resettlement support and a range of other services to meet their individual needs. The Poppy project also has outreach teams. This year the Government piloted support services for victims trafficked into domestic servitude and forced labour.

We ratified the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings on 17 December 2008 and will come into force in April 2009. This will see the introduction of a 45 day minimum reflection period and one-year temporary residence permits, both of which will be extendable in certain circumstances. We will also introduce a national support service model with an increased number of supported accommodation places.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when her Department notified the Metropolitan Police that her Department's funding of the Metropolitan Police human trafficking unit would cease; what representations she has received from the Metropolitan Police on this matter; and if she will place in the Library copies of the correspondence she has (a) sent and (b) received on the matter. [241791]

Jacqui Smith: Following discussions with the MPS we have agreed, exceptionally, to provide funding which will enable the MPS to maintain the trafficking team for 2009-10 and to ensure that this work is mainstreamed into the existing budget. The funding has been offered on the basis that the full cost of the trafficking team is met solely from the MPS budget as from 1 April 2010.

The MPS were informed by ACPO of the grant available for the current financial year in early 2008.

On one previous occasion the MPS wrote to the Home Office about this matter. It was made clear to the MPS at the time, that as core police business the funding of the trafficking team should be met from within their existing budget.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the number of people who have been trafficked who are (a) in the UK and (b) working as prostitutes in the UK. [244929]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The nature of the crime makes it difficult to provide an accurate assessment of the scale of the problem faced by the United Kingdom.

The latest estimate is that at any one time in 2003 there were up to 4,000 women in the UK who had been trafficked for the purpose of sexual exploitation.

We have no estimate of the scale of trafficking for non sexual purposes.

Human Trafficking: Children

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many children rescued from human traffickers have subsequently been put up in bed and breakfast accommodation in each of the last five years; [243308]

(2) where children rescued from human traffickers are accommodated. [243307]

Jacqui Smith: There are no central records on the type of accommodation provided for trafficked children. When a child is identified as a victim of trafficking a full assessment is made of their circumstances and needs by a designated social worker as required by section 20 of the Children Act 1989. Should there be an imminent risk of harm then child protection procedures under Section 47 of the Act should be invoked. Following these assessments it will be for the local authority to determine the exact nature of accommodation provided.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether (a) the use of safe accommodation at the Poppy Project is available for children who are victims of human trafficking and (b) there is safe accommodation providing 24-hour care for trafficked children. [243309]

Jacqui Smith: The POPPY project was established exclusively to support and accommodate adult women who have been trafficked for sexual exploitation and does not therefore accommodate child victims.

When a child is identified as a victim of trafficking, a full assessment is made of their circumstances and needs by a social worker as required by section 20 of the Children Act 1989. If on the basis of this assessment, the child is unaccompanied and there is no suitable adult to take responsibility for their care; or the child appears to be lost or abandoned, then there will be a presumption that the child will need to become a looked-after child. Where it is judged that the child would be best looked after under foster care or in a children's home, then 24-hour care will be provided.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether her Department has assessed the possibility that rescued children who are victims of human trafficking may still be under the control of traffickers while they are in local authority care. [243347]

Jacqui Smith: The Government acknowledges that some rescued trafficked children placed in local authority care may still be vulnerable to their trafficker. In December 2007 the Government published "Working Together to Safeguard Children Who May Have Been Trafficked". This multi agency guidance provides comprehensive information on how a child should be protected from their trafficker and of the risks of a child being re-trafficked.

Human Trafficking: Sentencing

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the maximum sentence is for human trafficking offences. [243302]

Jacqui Smith: The maximum sentence is 14 years imprisonment. The courts have the power to impose an additional fine on those convicted.

Human Trafficking: Victims

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what public funding is available for victims of trafficking to the UK from (a) the first group of EU accession countries, (b) the second group of EU accession countries and (c) Romania and Bulgaria who wish to return to their home countries; and what steps are taken to (i) accompany such people to the airport of departure and (ii) ensure support and advice is available to them in their home country. [243825]

Mr. Woolas: No public funding is currently available for victims of trafficking to the UK for EEA (European economic area) nationals who wish to return to their home countries.

Identity Cards: Biometrics

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long the biometric information will be retained in respect of foreign nationals issued with a biometric identity card after the individual concerned has returned permanently to their home country. [244113]

Mr. Woolas: The UK Borders Act 2007 provides for biometric information collected by the Secretary of State to be retained as long as retention of that data is necessary. The specified functions, for example, include functions under the Immigration Acts or for the prevention or detection of an offence. Where an individual leaves the UK permanently, his biometric data will only be retained in circumstances where they continue to be of use for the purposes prescribed in the regulations. Retention of biometric information will therefore enable the UK Border Agency to identify those who may seek to abuse immigration control by returning to the UK in a false identity, and help to assure the identity of those who are entitled to be here.

The biometric information collected will be destroyed if it is no longer of use for those specified purposes. It will also be destroyed if the person proves that they are a British citizen or a Commonwealth citizen with a right of abode. The exception to this is where the information is retained in accordance with, and for the purposes of, another enactment (that is, where Parliament has already approved retention of information for a particular purpose) for example under the Identity Cards Act 2006.

Identity Cards: Concessions

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reductions in the full price of an identity card she plans to offer (a) pensioners, (b) students and (c) those on income support. [244620]

Jacqui Smith: The Identity Cards Act Secondary legislation consultation paper, published on 21 November 2008, made clear that it is intended that the initial fee for an identity card issued in 2009 and 2010 should be a standard fee of £30.

In due course the Government intend to seek views on the price of identity cards or passports as part of the longer term roll out of the National Identity Scheme.

Identity Cards: ICT

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will list the electronic systems that will be used to store the (a) biometric, (b) biographical and (c) administrative information of British citizens applying for identity cards in 2009. [241657]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 9 December 2008]: For the issue of ID cards in 2009, biometric and biographic information will be stored separately on secure systems being built by the supplier providing the technology for this stage of the National identity Scheme. Administrative information will also be held separately on the biographic system.

Illegal Immigrants: Employment

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what her latest estimate of the number of foreign nationals working illegally in Northern Ireland is. [243695]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 15 December 2008]: Since the abolition of embarkation controls, which started in 1994, no government has ever been able to produce an accurate figure for the number of people who are in the country illegally and that includes those that might be working illegally.

By the end of December 2008, the majority of foreign nationals will be counted in and out of the country.

This is one part of the biggest shake up of border security and the immigration system in a generation which also includes the global roll-out of fingerprint visas, compulsory watch-list checks for all travellers from high risk countries before they land in Britain and ID cards for foreign nationals.

The UK Border Agency is committed to tackling illegal migrant working and will act on any intelligence it receives that a business is employing illegal workers. Equally, if an employer is found to be employing an illegal migrant worker and they have not ensured that the person has full entitlement to work in the UK, then they may be subject to a civil penalty of up to £10,000 or, in more serious cases, criminal prosecution. If convicted on indictment, the employer may face an unlimited fine and in some cases, imprisonment for up to two years.

Ilois: Immigration

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many former Chagossians have been granted British citizenship in the last 10 years. [245422]

Mr. Woolas: In the 10 years between 1998 and 2007, five people who were recorded as previously being residents of the British Indian Ocean Territories, formerly known as the Chagos Archipelago, applied for and were granted British citizenship in the United Kingdom. As usual this figure is rounded to five and is, at this stage, provisional.

Statistics on persons granted British citizenship are published annually in Home Office National Statistics statistical bulletins. These publications may be obtained from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs08/nosb0508.pdf.

Immigration Controls

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the cost in each of the next five years of reintroducing exit checks for all people departing the United Kingdom. [243521]

Jacqui Smith: The UK Border Agency is committed to extending exit controls in stages, based on risk, identifying who overstays, and counting everyone in and out of the UK, while avoiding delays to travellers, by 2014.

Over the next five years, the Agency will deliver the e-Borders programme, our primary mechanism for the delivery of this commitment. The cost of the programme over the next five years is set out in the following table. It is not possible to separate the costs of collecting outbound data from inbound data.

£ million

	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12	2012-13	Total cost of programme over next five years
Resource	31.5	48.6	42.2	52.6	57.9	232.9
Capital	96.5	70.2	44.9	89.7	94.2	395.6
Total	128.0	118.9	87.1	142.3	152.1	628.6

e-Borders is already receiving data for inbound and outbound services from a diverse range of carriers on some routes and has been since January 2005. This is supported by physical exit checks where operationally necessary.

Immigration: Airports

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times passengers arriving in UK airports on international flights have entered the country through the arrivals facilities for domestic flights in the last 12 months. [243615]

Jacqui Smith: The UK Border Agency is aware of 28 occasions when passengers from international flights were initially directed to a domestic arrivals area in the year since April 2008.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times arriving domestic passengers have been taken to international arrivals at each major UK airport in each of the last five years. [244175]

Jacqui Smith: The UK Border Agency does not routinely collect or store information on instances of domestic passengers being directed to international controls as this presents no risk to the security of the border.

Immigration: Appeals

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time taken following an immigration appeal tribunal hearing was to (a) notify in writing the decision to the applicant and (b) send written notification of indefinite leave to remain to successful applicants in the latest period for which figures are available. [243208]

Mr. Woolas: Information produced by the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (AIT) shows that in the period April to November 2008 the average length of time taken following an Immigration Judge hearing to notify in writing the decision to the applicant was seven working days (for all case types including bails).

For the same period, the average waiting time from hearing date to notifying the applicant of the decision in reconsideration hearings was 13 working days.

Following promulgation of the decision all in country and out of country non asylum decisions are served by the AIT. In country decisions are deemed to be received within 48 hours, and out of country decisions within 28 days. All asylum determinations are sent to UKBA to serve within 28 days in accordance with the 2005 AIT Procedure Rules. On 15 October 2008 a new process to serve initial Regional Asylum Team determinations by post on receipt from the AIT was implemented. Determinations are served on the appellant/representative within 48 hours of being received. This process saves a significant amount of time and speeds up the Asylum process.

Information on the average length of time taken following an immigration appeal tribunal hearing to send written notification of indefinite leave to remain to successful applicants is not available. This could only be obtained at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records.

Immigration: Detainees

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many detainees in the Immigration Removal Centre at (a) Oakington, (b) Yarl's Wood and (c) Dungavel have accessed legal advice since 2003. [244587]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not recorded either locally at the removal centres or centrally.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the written ministerial statement of 4 December 2008, Official Report, columns 9-11WS, on the Justice and Home Affairs Council, when the Government expects the EU to meet the United Nations Commission on Human Rights target for 10,000 Iraqi refugees to be offered protection in the EU; how many such refugees it is anticipated that (a) the UK and (b) other member states will accommodate; and whether the number that the UK plans to host is in addition to those to whom the Government has already agreed to grant humanitarian protection by virtue of their work for the armed forces. [244311]

Mr. Woolas: It was agreed at the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 27-28 November that EU member states will consider the resettlement of up to 10,000 Iraqi refugees. This target includes those already resettled or who member states have already planned to resettle under current plans. Participation is voluntary.

The UK has committed to resettling 1,000 Iraqi refugees over the course of two years. This number is already planned for by the UK and includes the 600 Iraqis that the UK Government have agreed to resettle because they worked for the British forces or Foreign and Commonwealth Office in Iraq, where they meet the established resettlement criteria. The UK will not be in a position to provide additional spaces to this.

European Union member states will be asked to make their intentions on resettlement of Iraqi refugees clear in the near future. To date, it is not known how many Iraqi refugees other member states will resettle.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she will reply to the letter to her of 20 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. Naseem Ahmed. [241691]

Jacqui Smith: I wrote to the right hon. Member on 8 December 2008.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Maidenhead of 23 October regarding her constituent Ms Ali. [244193]

Mr. Woolas: The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch, (Meg Hillier) wrote to the right hon. Member on 9 December 2008.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she plans to reply to the letter to her dated 30 October 2008 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Sehir Hussain. [246525]

Jacqui Smith: I wrote to the right hon. Member on 22 December 2008.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she plans to reply to the letter to her dated 3 November 2008 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Luis Lamb. [246526]

Jacqui Smith: I wrote to the right hon. Member on 6 January 2009.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she plans to reply to the letter to her dated 28 October 2008 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Benmeddah. [246530]

Jacqui Smith: I wrote to the right hon. Member on 5 January 2009.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she plans to reply to the letter to her dated 7 November 2008 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Hidal Ibrahim Takroori. [246531]

Jacqui Smith: I wrote to the right hon. Member on 5 January 2009.

Metropolitan Police: Motor Vehicles

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vehicles in use by the Metropolitan Police were manufactured outside the UK. [246713]

Mr. Coaker: Individual police forces make all their vehicle purchasing and leasing decisions locally, therefore, this information is not held centrally. This is a matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

National Identity Card Scheme Strategic Suppliers Group

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the companies which comprise the National Identity Card Scheme Strategic Suppliers Group have not signed the non-disclosure agreement. [243692]

Meg Hillier [holding answer 15 December 2008]: All five suppliers who comprise the strategic supplier group for the National Identity Scheme have signed a non-disclosure agreement.

National Identity Register

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the number of (a) individual records on the National Identity Register which will require amendment and (b) amendments to the National Identity Register which will be submitted in each year. [242223]

Meg Hillier: It is estimated that around 14 per cent. of the addresses on the National Identity Register will be changed each year, together with a much smaller number of other changes to update individual records on the National Identity Register. The precise number of changes each year will depend on the number of entries held on the National Identity Register which can not be determined until it is in full operation.

National Policing Improvement Agency: Airwave Service

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Airwave handsets issued to the National Policing Improvement Agency have been lost in each year since their introduction; and how many handsets issued to the Agency have been disabled by the service provider through (a) loss, (b) breakage and (c) other reasons in each such year. [246189]

Mr. Coaker: The National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) is not aware of any handsets issued to them having been lost since the NPIA legally vested in April 2007. In November 2008, two Airwave handsets were mislaid for approximately five hours. As a precautionary measure these were disabled from operating on the network.

Oakington Immigration Removal Centre

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many detainees (a) with and (b) without a criminal condition there are in Immigration Removal Centre Oakington. [244585]

Jacqui Smith: Oakington removal centre holds up to 408 detainees, foreign national ex-prisoners make up on average around one quarter of the centre's population. Local management information shows that on 14 December 2008 there were 103 foreign national ex-prisoners in Oakington.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the male detainees in Immigration Removal Centre Oakington have family members being held in another immigration removal centre. [244586]

Jacqui Smith: We do not hold the data requested centrally.

However, it is the UK Border Agency's policy to keep family members together.

Olympic Games 2012: Security

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she expects to publish her estimate of the likely security costs arising from the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. [245942]

Mr. Coaker: The then Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport my right hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich and West Norwood (Tessa Jowell) announced on 15 March 2007 that the overall budget for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games included a £600 million envelope of provision for policing and wider security. This is on top of the ODA budget for security of £354 million and the provision that LOCOG has set aside for in-venue security. An additional £238 million will be made available for contingency if required. Work is continuing to finalise the security strategy and plans within these funding estimates.

Overseas Visitors: Japan

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Japanese citizens visited the UK in (a) 2007 and (b) 2006. [245289]

Mr. Woolas: The number of Japanese nationals given leave to enter the United Kingdom as visitors in 2006 and 2007 is given in the following table. The information shown is based on landing card information and may include the same individuals more than once if they visited the United Kingdom on multiple occasions in the period.

Statistics on passengers given leave to enter the United Kingdom by purpose of journey and nationality are published annually in table 2.3 of the Home Office publications "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom" which are available in the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs08/hosb1008.pdf.

Table 2.3 gives details of other reasons that Japanese nationals entered the UK each year.

Japanese nationals given leave to enter the United Kingdom by purpose of journey, 2006 and 2007, United Kingdom

	Number of journeys
Passengers admitted, by purpose of journey	2006[1]	2007[2, 3]
Total admitted	563,000	521,000
of which:
Visitors	339,000	318,000
of which:
Ordinary	238,000	217,000
Business	102,000	101,000

[2] May understate due to some administrative records on non-EEA nationals being unavailable for statistical analysis.
Note:
Data rounded to three significant figures.

Passports: Biometrics

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of each (a) biometric passport reader and (b) identity card reader is expected to be. [243419]

Jacqui Smith: Readers for the current first generation of e-passport, incorporating facial image biometrics, are already in place at immigration posts at the United Kingdom border. Precise costs for readers for the second generation of e-passports and identity cards, incorporating fingerprint biometrics, are not yet available.

Passports: Finance

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual resource costs of providing passports to British citizens were in each of the last five years. [241861]

Jacqui Smith: The annual expenditure of providing passports services for British nationals in each of the last five financial years was:

	£ million
2007-08	367.8
2006-07	353.6
2005-06	263.9
2004-05	219.4
2003-04	171.3

The resource costs of providing passports to British nationals is recovered by the fees charged in accordance with HM Treasury guidance. Passport fee levels are reviewed annually with HM Treasury to ensure they remain at appropriate cost recovery levels.

Piracy

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people originally detained by the Royal Navy, other agencies or foreign navies who are known or suspected of being involved in piracy and other crimes in the Indian Ocean off the coast of east Africa have (a) applied for, (b) been granted asylum in the UK and (c) been allowed into the UK for an asylum claim to be considered in each of the last five years. [244115]

Mr. Woolas: Information on the number of people who have (a) applied for entry to the United Kingdom (b) been granted entry to the United Kingdom and (c) applied for asylum at a port of entry who had at some point previously been detained by the Royal Navy, other agencies or foreign navies, who are known or suspected of being involved in piracy and other crimes in the Indian Ocean off the coast of east Africa, is not collated.

Police: Bureaucracy

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been carried out of the effect on the amount of police paperwork of moving responsibility for charging decisions from police forces to the Crown Prosecution Service under the statutory charging initiative. [243859]

Jacqui Smith: Although no specific assessment has been carried out on its impact on police paperwork, a full independent evaluation of the pilot exercise identified a number of significant benefits of statutory charging for the criminal justice system at large, including the police service.

One of the main benefits of the scheme is the early dialogue between a police officer and a duty prosecutor. This consultation enables those cases that are evidentially weak, which can not be strengthened to meet the Code for Crown prosecutors, to be stopped there and then. Under previous arrangements these cases would have entered the court system. A costly and often ineffective exchange of correspondence between the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) and police would follow in an attempt to obtain evidence to support the individual case. A high percentage of these cases were then discontinued later in the process, often after several court appearances and after the police had expended additional and unnecessary effort in trying to obtain evidence.

A further benefit has been the improved relationships between police and CPS from close partnership working that has enabled them to better manage other linked initiatives including the Criminal Justice Simple, Speedy Summary (CJSSS) and the Streamlined Process that have improved case management and reduced delay in the courts.

There are several other benefits to the police. Dialogue with a Duty Prosecutor enables borderline and more complex cases to be strengthened, and police officers can be directed at that point to supply only what is really required in terms of the evidence needed to support the case. The original business case for statutory charging also points to further benefits for the police through the potential to enhance the police skills base in dealing with evidential issues as a result of early dialogue with the CPS. The business case predicted that around 238,000 cases per annum would be charged by the CPS and a further 20,000 would be stopped at the point of charge. The benefits to the police in the original business case for statutory charging were estimated to be £6.5 million based on this prediction of caseload.

In practice the benefits to the police are far greater than this. With 550,000 cases now being considered by the CPS each year, the number of cases that are stopped at the point of charge which fail to meet the code test was 160,000 during 2007-08 which provides substantially more benefit to the police than was originally estimated in the business case.

The Government take all aspects of police bureaucracy very seriously and we continue to keep the implications of the charging process, in respect of the amount of paperwork involved, under close review.

I have now appointed Jan Berry as our national independent advocate for achieving reductions in police bureaucracy. I have asked her to identify and examine a number of key policing processes and to make recommendations on how these could be reformed to reduce the amount of paperwork generated for officers. The impact of statutory charging on police paperwork is within the scope of Jan Berry's work.

Police: Complaints

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will bring forward proposals to require the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) to inform her Department of the number of complaints to the IPCC which have been (a) made and (b) upheld; if she will publish such information on receipt; and if she will make a statement. [244877]

Mr. Coaker: The Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) is required by law to collate and publish a report presenting statistics on complaints recorded by police forces in England and Wales. Along with other statistical data, the reports contain information on complaints made and upheld. The reports are prepared by the IPCC and laid before Parliament on an annual basis. Reports from 2004-05 can be found on the IPCC website at the following link:

http://www.ipcc.gov.uk/index/resources/research/stats.htm

The Home Office has no plans to issue a statement.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 17 November 2008, Official Report, columns 155-56W, on police complaints, if she will obtain this information from the Independent Police Complaints Commission and place it in the Library; and if she will make a statement. [244878]

Mr. Coaker: Issues relating to the implementation of recommendations is a matter for the Independent Police Complaints Commission.

Police: Essex

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) operational police officers per head of population there were in Essex Police on average in 2008 to date; what discussions she has had with the Chief Constable of Essex police force about this issue; and if she will make a statement. [244870]

Mr. Coaker: The available data are given in the following table.

The deployment of police officers to operational and other duties is a matter for the Chief Constable.

Police officer strength for Essex police force, as at 31 March 2008 (FTE)[1,2]

Police force	Total officers per 100,000 population	Total operational officers per 100,000 population
Essex[3]	203	196

[2] Because of rounding, there may be an apparent discrepancy between totals and the sums of the constituent items.
[3] Functional group totals do not match published figures. Data quality may be an issue with this force.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers employed by Essex Police will be made (a) voluntarily and (b) compulsorily redundant in 2008-09; at what cost; and if she will make a statement. [244871]

Mr. Coaker: Police officers cannot be made redundant as they hold the Office of Constable and are not employees of the police authority.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) civilian staff of each age group and sex were employed by Essex Police and its predecessor bodies in (i) 1979, (ii) 1989, (iii) 1999 and (iv) each year since 2001. [244873]

Mr. Coaker: The available data are given in the following tables.

Table 1: Police officer strength (FTE)[1] for Essex police force as at 31 March

As at 31 March each year	Female officers	Male officers
1979	202	2,259
1989	250	2,496
1999	477	2,414
2001	468	2,419
2002	512	2,433
2003	590	2,417
2004	669	2,451
2005	728	2,502
2006	787	2,535
2007	860	2,480
2008	906	2,479

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers of each rank have voluntarily ceased employment, other than through redundancy, in Essex Police since June 2007. [244875]

Mr. Coaker: The available data are the number of full-time equivalent police officer voluntary resignations from Essex police force during 2007-08 (1 April 2007 to 31 March 2008). The data given have been rounded to the nearest whole number.

During this time no officers in any of the chief officer, chief superintendent, superintendent or chief inspector ranks resigned.

Two inspectors, 10 sergeants, and 61 constables resigned during this time.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the average annual rate of sickness absence was in (a) Southend police and (b) Essex Police in each year since 2001; [244946]

(2) how many and what proportion of working days were lost due to (a) sickness and (b) stress, anxiety or depression in (i) Southend police and (ii) Essex police in each year since 2001. [244947]

Mr. Coaker: The available data relating to police sickness absence are for the amount of police officer and police staff working time lost to sickness, and have been centrally collected from 2002-03 onwards only. The data are published annually on the Home Office website, located at:

http://www.police.homeoffice.gov.uk/performance-and-measurement/performance-assessment/

For 2002-03 and 2003-04, the data are given in the 2003-04 Police Performance Monitoring report, in the form of police officer days lost per person (headcount) per year. For 2004-05 onwards, the data are given in the annual Police Performance Assessment reports, in the form of average number of police officer hours lost per person (headcount) per year. For 2006-07 onwards, this headcount measure was changed to a full-time equivalent measure.

Links are provided for the following years, relating to Essex police. The required data can be found under the headings "resource use" or "resources and efficiency":

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers in Essex Police of each sex took early retirement in each year since 2001; [244948]

(2) how many police officers who were facing disciplinary charges in Essex Police retired on grounds of ill health (a) before and (b) after disciplinary hearings were completed in each of the last five years. [244949]

Mr. Coaker: Under the Police Pensions Regulations 1987 police officers can retire with an ordinary pension if they have at least 25 years' service. The regulations do not provide for early retirement as such, except ill-health retirement on the ground of permanent disablement for the performance of the ordinary duties of a member of the force. The number of ill-health retirements from Essex police between 2000-01 and 2004-05 is given in the following table. HM Inspectorate of Constabulary no longer publish or collect data on numbers of ill-health retirements and figures after 2004-05 are not available.

Data on numbers of officers retiring on ill-health or other grounds in the period between having been informed that they are to appear before a disciplinary hearing and the completion of those proceedings are not held centrally.

Ill-health retirements, Essex police

	Number
2000-01	34
2001-02	32
2002-03	21
2003-04	16
2004-05	13

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average response time to calls made to the police in (a) Essex and (b) Southend was in each year since 1997; what guidance her Department has given on average response times; what steps her Department takes to monitor police force response times; and if she will make a statement. [244950]

Mr. Coaker: This information is not held centrally. This is a matter for the chief constable of Essex police.

Response times to calls, both emergency and non-emergency, is a fundamental part of the Policing Pledge introduced by the Home Secretary in the Policing Green Paper. By the end of the year all forces in England and Wales will aim to answer 999 calls within 10 seconds, deploying to emergencies immediately and giving an estimated time of arrival. All non-emergency calls should also be answered promptly and if attendance is needed an estimated time of arrival will be given.

The Policing Green Paper sets out the new relationship between the Government, police and public and the HMIC will validate the delivery of the Pledge, including response times, through their inspection process. Police authorities will also wish to be satisfied that the Pledge is being delivered for local people and the public can raise it locally with the police themselves or through their police authority if they feel that the standards within the Pledge are not being met.

Police: Finance

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate has been made of the total implementation cost of the measures in the Policing Green Paper, published on 17 July 2008. [241605]

Jacqui Smith: The estimated costs of implementing measures contained in the Policing Green Paper were set out in the nine impact assessments completed as part of the development process. Copies of the assessments are available on-line at:

http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/publications/police-reform/GP_IA/

Police: Firearms

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces do not have dedicated armed response units. [246006]

Jacqui Smith: All 43 police forces in England and Wales have dedicated armed response units. Details of the number of authorised firearms officers in England and Wales are published on an annual basis and can be found on the Home Office website at:

http://police.homeoffice.gov.uk/publications/operational-policing/police-firearms-statistics-06-1.

Police: Medals

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the Police Long Service Medal requires longer qualification service than other equivalent long service medals awarded to military or civilian personnel. [243934]

Mr. Coaker: The Police Long Service and Good Conduct Medal (PLS and GCM) was the first UK civilian emergency service long service medal introduced (Fire 1954, Ambulance 1996 and Prisons 2008) and therefore, when it was instituted, the qualification period was not at variance with any other existing civilian emergency service long service medal. It should be noted that the award criteria vary for all these medals, with some not including a good conduct element and others requiring that a considerable period of front-line duty is served, in order to qualify. Military long service medals relate to different service criteria and work patterns to civilian medals and therefore any comparisons to civilian equivalents would be inappropriate.

Police: Moldova

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if she will establish an exchange programme between the UK and Moldova police to improve co-operation to reduce serious organised crime; [243704]

(2) if she will make arrangements with her Moldovan counterpart for regular bilateral consultations to implement the provisions of the 2001 Memorandum of Understanding between the UK and Moldova. [243706]

Mr. Alan Campbell [holding answer 16 December 2008]: SOCA undertakes limited but productive bilateral co-operation with its counterparts in Moldova. This co-operation is underpinned by a Memorandum of Understanding on Co-operation in the fight against Serious Crime, Organised Crime, Illicit Drug Trafficking and In Like Matters of Mutual Interest, of 17 January 2001, signed by ACPO, HM Customs and Excise, Serious Fraud Office, the Crown Prosecution Service of England and Wales, the National Crime Squad and the National Criminal Intelligence Service. SOCA has assumed the interests and responsibilities of the last two agencies following its establishment in 2006.

SOCA welcomes any opportunity to improve its collaboration with overseas partners.

Police: Occupational Health

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what standards are in place for the provision of occupational health services for armed police officers; and what arrangements are made for the monitoring of the (a) physical and (b) mental health of such officers. [246005]

Jacqui Smith: The provision of occupational health services for police officers and police staff is the responsibility of the individual chief constable and police authority. All forces have a clearly defined duty of care to their personnel under health and safety legislation.

Police: Pay

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the Policing Green Paper of July 2008, what mechanism is in place to assess chief constables' performance and performance-related pay. [243596]

Jacqui Smith: Chief constables' performance is assessed through performance and development reviews (PDRs) which include consideration of their objectives and development plans. The Green Paper explains that we will in future give police authorities the lead role in this process. Chief constables' performance pay is based on the PDR assessment and is determined by the Police Authority in consultation with HM Inspectorate of Constabulary.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what criteria are used to determine whether police constables in Essex Police receive a bonus; and if she will make a statement; [244866]

(2) how much each police officer in Essex Police has received in bonuses in each of the last three years; and what the rank of each such officer was; [244867]

(3) what the average salary of a serving police officer of each rank in Essex police force was in each year since 2001; [244868]

(4) how much each police officer in Essex Police has received in bonuses in each of the last three financial years; and what the rank of each was. [244876]

Mr. Coaker: The criteria for bonuses for constables are set out in police regulations and are that an officer may receive a payment of between £50 and £500 at the discretion of the chief officer for a piece of work that is outstandingly demanding, unpleasant or important. Information about amounts paid to individual officers and average salaries are not collected centrally.

Police: Standards

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what information each police force must provide to meet they are meeting the levels of service to the community set out in the police pledge; [243607]

(2) how her Department plans to assess each police force in order to determine whether it is meeting the police pledge. [243608]

Jacqui Smith: The Home Office will not directly assess forces on whether they are meeting the policing pledge. The pledge is a commitment from the police to the public and sets out clear minimum standards and public entitlement to services. All 43 chief constables have committed to deliver the pledge by the end of the year.

If the public do not feel these standards are being met they can raise it locally with the police themselves or through their police authority.

The Policing Green Paper explained the new relationship between the Government, police and public. The Home Office has now adopted a more strategic role allowing for grassroots accountability and an enhanced role for HMIC in providing public assurance about the quality and standard of policing in all forces. HMIC will therefore validate the delivery of the pledge by forces through their inspection process. Police authorities will also wish to be satisfied that the pledge is being delivered for local people.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the written ministerial statement of 8 December 2008, Official Report, column 39WS, on strategic policing priorities, what indicators will be used to assess the strategic policing priorities for 2009-10. [243698]

Jacqui Smith: My strategic policing priorities (SPPs) provide a national strategic context within which police authorities set their local policing plans. The SPPs for 2009-10 emphasise the strategic context for local planning and accountability, as set out in the Policing Green Paper, so that forces tackle the issues that matter most locally in that national context and get best value for money for the public from the resources devoted to policing.

The aim is to move to a system in which the police service is held to account much more at a local level. Police authorities are already required to issue a strategic plan which identifies the force's priorities and objectives over a three year rolling cycle and which must take into account my strategic policing priorities. Local accountability will be enhanced through the introduction of the policing pledge, to be underpinned by a set of local priorities, the publication of local information on crime and police activity and through raising the capacity and influence of police authorities to hold forces to account. A strengthened HMIC will act as guarantor of the public interest in inspecting forces and authorities.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 8 December 2008, Official Report, column 39WS, on strategic policing priorities, what mechanisms are in place to measure police performance. [243701]

Jacqui Smith: Policing performance is measured through the Assessments of Policing And Community Safety (APACS) framework, which contains key performance indicators for the police working alone or in partnership. However, as set out in the Policing Green Paper: 'From the Neighbourhood to the National: Policing our Communities Together', the Home Office will in future no longer produce graded assessments against those indicators, which have been interpreted by some as de facto targets. Instead, HMIC will take the lead in making and publishing assessments of forces' overall performance, drawing on APACS performance indicators and other information.

Police: Suicide

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the number of police officers who committed suicide in each year since 2000. [246004]

Jacqui Smith: The information is not centrally collected.

Police: Telephone Services

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans she has to limit the use of 0800 non-emergency telephone numbers operated by police forces. [244864]

Mr. Coaker: It is a matter for individual police forces what number they use for non-emergency telephone contact. The Home Office has no plans to limit the use of 0800 numbers operated by police forces.

Police: Weapons

Mr. Flello: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines have been issued to police forces regarding the use by officers of batons, with particular reference to whether there is any part of the body that should not be struck. [244789]

Mr. Coaker: The Association of Chief Police Officers' (ACPO) Personal Safety Manual of Guidance, which is administered by the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) on behalf of ACPO, to support and inform operational decision making and training to improve safety during the policing of violent and potentially violent situations.

This guidance is a restricted document, as the majority of the information contained within it relates to operational policing in terms of techniques utilised by staff in the defence of themselves, their colleagues and others. The release of such information would be likely to prejudice the health and safety of officers and others in danger.

There are no 'prescriptive' guidelines that are issued to officers in relation to the use of batons, and there are no areas of the body that officers are instructed should not be struck. However, the guidance makes it clear that the implications arising from the use of force are a matter for considered judgment. The use of force should be in accordance with the Criminal Law Act 1967 Section 3 (1), which states that:

"A person may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances in the prevention of crime, or in effecting or assisting in the lawful arrest of offenders or suspected offenders or of persons unlawfully at large."

Research Information and Communications Unit

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff work in her Department's Research Information and Communication Unit; what forecast she has made of the unit's operation costs in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11; and if she will make a statement. [245581]

Mr. Coaker: The Research, Information and Communications Unit is comprised of 29 permanent members of staff: 15 members of staff from the Home Office, eight members of staff from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and six members of staff from the Department for Communities and Local Government. When fully recruited the Unit will have 33 permanent staff.

(a) Unit operational costs for 2008-09 amount £4,219,305 (made up of admin allocation £959,305 and programme allocation £3,260,000)

(b) Unit operational costs for 2009-10 amount to £6,651,646 (made up of admin allocation £951,646 and programme allocation £5,700,000)

(c) Unit operational costs for 2010-11 amount to £8,144,371 (made up of admin allocation £944,371 and programme allocation £7,200,000).

Schengen Agreement: Illegal Immigrants

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment her Department has made of the likely effect on levels of illegal immigration into the European Union as a result of Switzerland joining the Schengen area. [244114]

Mr. Woolas: Switzerland has been evaluated during the course of 2008 and was found to fulfil the conditions for the practical application of the relevant parts of the Schengen Acquis.

This is a demanding process involving the completion of an extensive questionnaire, written and oral reports and visits by expert committees. The process is designed to ensure that countries joining the Schengen system comply fully with its requirements, including the effective management of external border operations in order to prevent illegal immigration.

The process is overseen by the EU's Schengen Evaluation Working Group, attended Home Office Officials, which reports to the JHA Council. The reports are classified; therefore they are not made available to the European Parliament or to national parliaments.

Serious and Organised Crime Agency: Manpower

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people employed by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency deal with human trafficking investigations. [243315]

Jacqui Smith: SOCA deploys its resources flexibly against a range of threats, rather than allocating staff to specific subjects in line with set priorities.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of staff of the Serious and Organised Crime Agency are dedicated to human trafficking investigations. [243316]

Jacqui Smith: As indicated in the SOCA Annual Plan 2008-09 the agency intended to apportion 15 per cent. of its operational effort directly to organised immigration crime and additionally 12 per cent. to work on criminals and their business some of which will encompass organised immigration crime.

Sexual Offences: Taxis

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) licensed and (b) unlicensed taxi drivers have been charged with committing a sexual offence since 2001. [244598]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The information requested is not available.

Statistics on the number of persons charged with offences are not collected centrally.

Tablighi Jamaat

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will make an assessment of whether Tablighi Jamaat plays a role in the radicalisation of young Muslims in the United Kingdom. [243427]

Mr. Coaker: All sources and aspects of radicalisation are studied but by long established convention we do not comment on intelligence assessments.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will make an assessment of whether Tablighi Jamaat poses a security risk to the United Kingdom. [243428]

Mr. Coaker: Security risks of all kinds are regularly assessed but by long-established convention we do not comment on intelligence assessments.

Terrorism: Arrests

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made under terrorism legislation in each of the last five years; and how many of such arrests have resulted in (a) charges and (b) convictions. [246065]

Mr. Coaker: From 11 September 2001 to 31 March 2007 1,228 arrests were made:

1,165 arrests under the Terrorism Act 2000;

63 arrests under legislation other than the Terrorism Act, where the investigation was conducted as a terrorist investigation.

Of the total 1228 arrested:

132 charged with terrorism legislation offences only;

109 charged with terrorism legislation offences and other criminal offences;

195 charged under other legislation including murder, grievous bodily harm, firearms, explosives offences, fraud, false documents;

76 handed over to immigration authorities;

15 on police bail awaiting charging decisions;

1 warrant issued for arrest;

12 cautioned;

1 dealt with under youth offending procedures;

11 dealt with under mental health legislation;

4 transferred to Police Service of Northern Ireland custody;

2 remanded in custody awaiting extradition proceedings;

669 released without charge;

1 awaiting further investigation.

Of those charged:

41 were convicted under Terrorism legislation;

183 convicted under other legislation: murder and explosives offences (including conspiracies), grievous bodily harm, firearms offences, fraud, false documents offences, etc (this includes the 12 cautions detailed above);

114 at or awaiting trial.

The Home Office, Ministry of Justice and Attorney-General's Office are currently working with the National Coordinator for Terrorist Investigations to improve the quality of data relating to those arrested, charged, convicted and imprisoned under terrorist legislation and under other legislation but considered terrorist related. As soon as this is complete a Statistical Bulletin covering this information will be published by the Home Office. The bulletin will provide a breakdown of charges and convictions of terrorism related offences.

Terrorism: Detainees

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 9 December 2008, Official Report, column 37W, on terrorism: detainees, with what offences the individuals held for over 14 days and then charged were charged; and how many (a) have been convicted, (b) offences have been acquitted and (c) remain subject to trial. [243618]

Jacqui Smith: To date 11 individuals have been held over 14 days. Eight of these individuals were charged.

14-15 days

One individual charged with having information about an act of terrorism (section 38B, Terrorism Act 2000). This case was subsequently dismissed by a judge due to insufficient evidence.

18-19 days

One individual charged with conspiracy to cause explosions (section 3 (1a), the Explosives Substances Act 1883).

19-20 days

Three individuals charged with conspiracy to murder (section 1 (1), Criminal Law Act 1977) and Preparation of Terrorist Acts (section 5, Terrorism Act 2006). The latter charge has subsequently been amended by the Crown Prosecution Service for two of the individuals to a charge of conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft (section 1(1), Criminal Law Act 1977).

27-28 days

One individual charged with preparation of terrorist Acts (section 5, Terrorism Act 2006).

One individual charged with preparation of terrorist Acts (section 5, Terrorism Act 2006), possession of a prohibited weapon (section 5(1), Firearms Act 1968), possession of ammunition (section 1 (1b), Firearms Act 1968), possession of a silencer without a firearms licence (section 1 (1b), Firearms Act 1968). The charge of preparation of terrorist acts for the second individual was subsequently amended by the Crown Prosecution Service to a charge of conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft (section 1(1), Criminal Law Act 1977).

One individual charged with attending a place for instruction or training in terrorism (section 8, Terrorism Act 2006) and collection of information (section 58 (1) (a), Terrorism Act 2000).

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people (a) have been charged with criminal offences, (b) have been convicted, (c) have been acquitted and (d) remain subject to trial as a result of Operation Overt in August 2006. [243676]

Jacqui Smith: 17 individuals were charged as a result of Operation Overt.

In November 2006, two individuals who were charged with failure to disclose information had their cases dismissed by a judge who decided there was no case to answer.

One individual was convicted in September 2007.

During the trial which concluded in September 2008, three individuals were found guilty of Conspiracy to Murder Persons Unknown. These three previously pleaded guilty to Conspiracy to Cause Explosions and Conspiracy to Commit a Public Nuisance. A further four people pleaded guilty to Conspiracy to Commit a Public Nuisance. A decision is due shortly on a retrial of these seven individuals. One individual was found not guilty at this trial.

Additionally, a further six people await trial.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 9 December 2008, Official Report, column 37W, on terrorism: detainees, with what offences the individuals held for between 27 to 28 days and not released without charge were charged. [243693]

Jacqui Smith: To date 11 individuals have been held for over 14 days, three were charged on the 27-28 day.

One individual charged with preparation of terrorist acts (section 5, Terrorism Act 2006).

One individual charged with preparation of terrorist acts (section 5, Terrorism Act 2006), possession of a prohibited weapon (section 5(1), Firearms Act 1968), possession of ammunition (section 1 (1b), Firearms Act 1968), possession of a silencer without a firearms licence (section 1 (1b), Firearms Act 1968). The charge of preparation of terrorist acts for the second individual was subsequently amended by the Crown Prosecution Service to a charge of conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft (section 1(1), Criminal Law Act 1977).

One individual charged with attending a place for instruction or training in terrorism (section 8, Terrorism Act 2006) and collection of information (section 58 (1) (a), Terrorism Act 2000).

Thames Valley Police

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the crime clear-up rates for (a) violence against the person, (b) robbery, (c) burglary in a dwelling, (d) theft of a motor vehicle and (e) theft from a vehicle were in the Thames Valley police area in each of the last 10 years, broken down by basic command unit. [244372]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The available information is given in the following table. Data at Basic Command Unit level (BCU) are only available from 1999-2000 and the BCUs within the Thames Valley police force area were re-structured in 2005-06. In addition, detection rates data are subject to wide variation where small numbers are involved.

Non-sanction detections that contribute to detection rates have fallen in recent years reflecting a significant shift by many forces away from recording detections of crime where no further action is taken. For this reason overall detection rates over time are not fully comparable.

From 1 April 2007 the rules governing recording of non-sanction detections were revised to reduce the scope within which they can be claimed to a very limited set of circumstances.

[1] The National Crime Recording Standard was introduced in 2002-03. Figures before and after that date are not directly comparable.

Theft: Motor Vehicles

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent steps the Government has taken to reduce levels of car thefts. [244560]

Mr. Alan Campbell: There has been a significant and sustained reduction in vehicle crime. Since 1997 all vehicle crime is down by 57 per cent. The police recorded a 5 per cent. decrease in the number of cars stolen between 2006-07 and 2007-08. This decrease is also reflected in the British Crime Survey for 2007-08 which shows a reduction of 11 per cent. for vehicle-related thefts compared with 2006-07.

Maintaining this reduction is important, but our strategy reflects the success to date and the maturity of practice in this area. The Crime Strategy outlines our approach that Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships, Community Safety Partnerships and other local partners should focus on the issues of greatest priority in each locality through local area agreements. As part of the local area agreement process 98 of the 150 local areas have chosen serious acquisitive crime, of which vehicle crime is an important component, as one of their key priorities for improvement. Central Government are also held to account through Public Service Agreement 23 which measures the progress in tackling serious acquisitive crime.

Theft: Retail Trade

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent steps the Government have taken to reduce levels of retail theft. [244562]

Mr. Alan Campbell: In 2007, the Home Office set up the National Retail Crime Steering Group, to provide a forum for retailers to raise issues of concern with Government and devise strategies for tackling retail crime. Current issues the group is addressing include ensuring Penalty Notices for Disorder are issued appropriately and consistently, developing and disseminating good practice guidance for local retailers and crime reduction partnerships to work more effectively together, and designing a new Commercial Victimisation Survey. The introduction of neighbourhood policing teams will also ensure that retailers concerns are reflected in local policing priorities. This will be backed up by guidance from the National Police Improvement Agency, and the reforms set out in the Policing Green Paper 'From the neighbourhood to the national: policing our communities together' to give local people, including businesses, a greater say in how their neighbourhoods are policed.

UK Border Agency: Olympic Games 2012

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost implications for the UK Border Agency are of the London Olympics in 2012. [241607]

Jacqui Smith: Work is continuing to finalise the strategy and plans for the security of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. Any decisions will need to take account of operational needs, affordability within the total funding envelope and the need to secure value for money.

UK Border Agency: Prisoners

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in England and Wales were released into the custody of the UK Border Agency and its predecessors in each of the last 12 months. [244481]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 16 December 2008]: The Chief Executive of the UK Border Agency has regularly written to the Home Affairs Select Committee with all of the most robust and accurate information on the deportation of foreign criminals, including updates on the numbers of such individuals who are subject to deportation action and are detained following completion of their custodial sentence in order to facilitate their eventual deportation. In her letter of 23 July she advised the Committee that there were around 1,650 such individuals who were detained beyond their sentence under immigration powers. Copies of all of these letters are available in the Library of the House.

UK Border Agency: Working Hours

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK Border Agency (UKBA) enforcement operations have taken place on Saturdays or Sundays in each month of 2008, broken down by each UKBA region. [243117]

Mr. Woolas: The UK Border Agency adopts an intelligence-led approach to operations. The number of UK Border Agency enforcement operations that have taken place on Saturdays or Sundays in each month to end September 2008, broken down by each region of the UK Border Agency is detailed in the following table.

The data provided are management information. They may be subject to change and do not represent published national statistics.

	Saturday/Sunday operations by month, 2008

Vetting

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average waiting time to process Criminal Records Bureau checks in each police force area was in the latest period for which information is available. [246843]

Meg Hillier: Data concerning the average time taken to complete a disclosure by police force area are not a performance target and are not collated by the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB).

The CRB operates to a set of published service standards (PSS) which include to issue 90 per cent. of Standard Disclosures within 10 days and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosures within 28-days.

Average figures do not give an accurate indication of performance, since any forces' performance can be affected by a number of factors; the volume of cases sent to a force to process in any given month, the number of staff available to process the checks and the IT resources on hand to forces. With these variables, performance can fluctuate within individual forces from one month to the next.

However, you may be interested to note that comparative police force performance data can be found on the CRB website at:

www.crb.gov.uk.

Work Permits: Foreign Workers

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been granted work permits in the last 12 months, broken down by (a) country of origin and (b) duration of work permit. [244722]

Mr. Woolas: The following table shows the number of work permits granted broken down by the country of origin and the duration of the work permit:

1. Totals may not add up due to rounding.
2. Figures are rounded to nearest 5.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

The figures cover the period 1 December 2007 to 30 November 2008 and include all granted work permit applications. This excludes members of group applications, dependants and all other categories of permit.

The figures are for work permits issued, some applicants will still need to gain entry clearance and some may decide not to take up their posts.

TREASURY

Afghanistan

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which organisation has managed each project funded by his Department in Helmand province since 2005; what the budget of each was; how much has been spent in each case; what monitoring, impact assessments and evaluations have been undertaken; and if he will make a statement. [245777]

Yvette Cooper: HM Treasury has not directly funded any projects in Afghanistan. The Treasury allocates funding to other Departments including the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development.

Air Passenger Duty

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will review the proposed boundaries for new rates of air passenger duty to provide that Larnaca airport, Cyprus, falls in the same band as Paphos airport; and if he will make a statement; [245061]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect of charging different rates of air passenger duty for travel to Cyprus via Paphos and Larnaca on (a) the prevalence of air travel to those airports and (b) the Cyprus economy and tourist industry; and if he will make a statement. [245164]

Angela Eagle: All destinations in Cyprus fall within the same air passenger duty distance band (band A).

Bank Services

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the number of people over the age of 18 years who do not have a bank account; and if he will make a statement. [245432]

Ian Pearson: The Government are committed to reducing financial exclusion and increasing the number of people who can manage their money by using a bank account.

The Family Resources Survey data for 2006-07, published in June this year, show that the number of adults living without access to a bank account fell from 2.8 million in 2002-03 to 2.1 million in 2006-07.

Bank Services: Small Businesses

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the effect of the Government's policy on bank recapitalisation on the availability of credit to the small and medium-sized enterprise sector in Peterborough; and if he will make a statement. [244232]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 16 December 2008]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for West Ham (Lyn Brown) on 30 October 2008, Official Report, column 1189W.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent steps the Government have taken to aid banks in providing capital to businesses. [245467]

Ian Pearson: On 8 October 2008 the Government announced a comprehensive package of measures to support stability of the financial system, protect ordinary savers, depositors, businesses and borrowers, and to safeguard the interests of the taxpayer.

As part of their investment, the Government have agreed a range of commitments with banks accessing the recapitalisation scheme. The Government expect banks to restore and maintain the availability and active marketing of competitively priced lending to SMEs, at a level at least equivalent to that of 2007, until the end of 2011.

UK Financial Investments Limited (UKFI), which is wholly owned by the Government, will also oversee the conditions attached to subscribing to the Government's recapitalisation fund, including in relation to SME lending.

British small businesses should also be able to benefit from around £4 billion of lending from the European Investment Bank (EIB) between 2008 and 2011. As announced in the pre-Budget report in November 2008, after negotiations between UK banks and the EIB, £1 billion of EIB funds were approved by the end of last year to be available to British small firms. The Government continue to work with UK banks and the EIB on the use of EIB loans to deliver the most effective support to small firms with sound business propositions. It is a condition for banks participating in the Government's recapitalisation scheme to seek EIB Loans for SMEs.

Furthermore the Government announced a package of support to help smaller businesses at the Pre-budget report 2008. This package included the establishment of the Small Business Finance Scheme, an Export Credits Guarantee Department scheme, and the equity or quasi-equity capital fund. When combined this package will facilitate over £2 billion of extra support to SMEs experiencing short-term financial difficulties.

Banks

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what dates he held meetings with (a) HBOS, (b) Nationwide, (c) Abbey, (d) Lloyds TSB, (e) Northern Rock, (f) Barclays, (g) RBS and (h) HSBC on the Government's repossessions policy before its announcement on 3 December 2008. [245608]

Ian Pearson: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings with a wide variety of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Banks: Finance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government have taken to monitor the effects of recapitalisation of major British banks. [245471]

Ian Pearson: The Government's investment are managed on a commercial basis by UK Financial Investments Ltd (UKFI), a company which is wholly owned by the Government. Its overarching objectives will be to protect and create value for the taxpayer as a shareholder, with due regard to financial stability and acting in a way that promotes competition.

Banks: Iceland

Jo Swinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps have been taken to ensure that loans to Iceland from the European Union and International Monetary Fund are used to compensate UK depositors in Icelandic banks; and if he will make a statement. [244133]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 16 December 2008]: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Carmarthen, East and Dinefwr (Adam Price) on 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1880W.

Banks: Iran

Mr. Hague: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reports he has received on the determination by the US Administration on 17 December 2008 that Assa Corporation is created and controlled by Bank Melli; and whether he has made representations to the relevant Channel Islands authorities on the operations in Jersey of Assa Company Ltd and its subsidiaries. [246397]

Ian Pearson: HM Government are currently liaising with the US Administration on their determination that Assa Corporation is created and controlled by Bank Melli and with the relevant Jersey authorities on this issue.

The Jersey Financial Services Commission is coordinating the Jersey investigation and focusing on the part played by any Jersey Company which may have conducted business with Assa Corporation, Assa Company Ltd or Bank Melli.

Banks: Regulation

Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues on requirements on banks whose shares are in public ownership to support small businesses. [242346]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 11 December 2008]: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings and discussions with a wide variety of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings and discussions.

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will require those banks in receipt of public money to increase liquidity to include representatives of the banking trades unions on their remuneration committees. [244302]

Ian Pearson: UK Financial Investments Limited (UKFI), which is wholly owned by the Government, will oversee the conditions attached to subscribing to the Government's recapitalisation fund, including in relation to remuneration policies of banks board directors.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent steps the Government has taken to reform regulation of the financial markets. [245469]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the statement on financial markets made by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 6 October 2008, Official Report, columns 22-23, which announced that Adair Turner, the Chairman of the FSA, had been asked to make recommendations for reforms.

Banks: Taxation

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the amount of tax avoided by British banks through offshore tax regimes in the last 12 months. [244997]

Mr. Timms: No estimates have been made in the past 12 months of the tax gap attributable to offshore tax regimes. In March 2008, HMRC released details of some analysis from 2005 that attempted to derive estimates of the direct tax gap at the start of the decade—see http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/research/direct-tax-gaps.pdf.

This included a very broad-brush estimate of the tax gap associated with the use of offshore accounts.

Child Benefit

Lyn Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what percentage of claims for child benefit made by (a) EU nationals excluding A2 and A8 nationals, (b) A2 and A8 nationals and (c) those with indefinite leave to remain took longer than 36 days to be processed since April 2008; [243402]

(2) what the average processing time was for claims for child benefit by (a) EU nationals excluding A2 and A8 nationals, (b) A2 and A8 nationals and (c) those with indefinite leave to remain in each month since April 2008; [243403]

(3) what his Department's target times are for processing child benefit claims; and what percentage of cases involving (a) the transfer of a claim from one carer to another (b) non-UK EU citizens, A2 and A8 nationals and (c) those with indefinite leave to remain were processed within those target times in the latest period for which information are available; [243404]

(4) what the average processing time was for claims for child benefit by entitled (a) non-UK EU and (b) other foreign nationals in each month since April 2008; [243406]

(5) what percentage of child benefit claims were processed within (a) five days and (b) 36 days in each month since April 2008; [243407]

(6) what the average time taken to process child benefit claims where the claim was being transferred from one carer to another was in each month since April 2008; and what percentage of claims of that type took longer than 36 days to process since April 2008. [243408]

Mr. Timms: For 2008-09, HM Revenue and Customs aim to pay 69 per cent. of child benefit claims in nine working days and aim to pay all new child benefit claims in an average of 20 calendar days. This is the first year that this target has been in place. Performance outturn for 2008-09 will be published in due course.

More complex claims, including those from customers arriving from abroad, often require HMRC to make more detailed inquiries, and so HMRC are normally unable to process and pay them within the usual target times. The HMRC Helpline can provide advice about expected waiting times to customers chasing progress of their claims

Information on the number of claims processed in 36 days, since April 2008, is not available and I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 22 October 2008, Official Report, column 356W.

The other information requested relating to non-UK citizens would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Child Tax Credit

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many awards of child tax credit were made for (a) 2001-02 and (b) 2002-03; and what estimate he has made of the number of eligible claimants in each of those years. [246789]

Ian Pearson: Child and working tax credits were not introduced until April 2003.

Council Tax: Valuation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) training and (b) guidance manuals the Valuation Office Agency has produced to assist in the use of the council tax banding support tool. [245962]

Mr. Timms: The Valuation Office Agency, in conjunction with the system software provider, has produced two manuals to be used for training and guidance covering the main functions of the council tax banding support tool.

Currency

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the performance of sterling; what comparative assessment he has made of the performance of the euro; and if he will make a statement. [244780]

Ian Pearson: The Government continue to monitor the value of sterling against other currencies, but does not comment on short-term exchange rate movements since this may have undesirable effects on their stability. The Government's objective is for a stable and competitive exchange rate in the medium term.

Data Protection

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many confirmed data security breaches there have been in his Department in the last three years; and what steps were taken in response to each such occurrence. [244667]

Angela Eagle: No data security breaches have been recorded by the Treasury in the last three years.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244718]

Angela Eagle: The information is as follows:

(a) The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/peers correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated.

(b) In respect of e-mails, this could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to respond to the letters dated 10 July 2008 and 13 August 2008 from the Member of the Scottish Parliament for Banff and Buchan on fuel costs and farming industry; and what the reasons are for the time taken to reply. [245911]

Angela Eagle: It is understood that this relates to correspondence from Stewart Stevenson MSP. Receipt of the correspondence could not be traced and a copy, dated 9 June, was obtained. A reply was sent on 6 January.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of contractors and suppliers to (a) his Department and (b) its agencies has reported compliance with the Government's security standards following publication of the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government, and the accompanying document, Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action, on 25 June 2008. [245330]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is as follows:

(a) All suppliers to The Treasury that are required to handle relevant data have been contacted and made aware of the Government's security standards. All have been assessed as having policies and procedures that are compliant with those standards.

(b) The UK DMO have identified all the suppliers involved in data handling procedures. All of these suppliers (100 per cent.) have been assessed as appropriate to comply with the Government's security standards.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many contracts (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract is held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245351]

Angela Eagle: The Treasury has one supplier that stores personal data abroad. The contractor provides travel agency services under a pan-Government framework owned by OGCbuying.solutions and the data are stored in the USA under a safe harbour agreement.

The Debt Management Office holds one contract that it manages on behalf of the Treasury, which allows the storage of personal data of UK citizens overseas. This contract is for the Gilt Registration Service and states that personal data must be kept within the European Economic Area (EEA). Currently all these data are stored within the UK.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245371]

Angela Eagle: HM Treasury's senior information risk owner is a range G (equivalent to Grade 3) and has held the responsibility since December 2007.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [244603]

Angela Eagle: The Treasury is committed to improving energy efficiency of the Department's estate and reducing energy use year on year. Measures taken over the last year that have led to improvements in energy efficiency include adjustment of lighting system controls, switching to daytime cleaning, reducing the need for lighting after hours, and adjusting the temperature when heating is turned on.

Detailed information on the Treasury energy consumption by building can be found in HM Treasury annual report 2007-08.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246016]

Angela Eagle: The Treasury holds the following information on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability of its employees:

staff in post

applicants for employment, training and promotion results of performance assessment procedures grievance procedures disciplinary procedures

staff who cease employment

In September 2007 the Treasury began collecting diversity-monitoring data on sexual orientation and the religion or belief of employees.

The Treasury reports, to the Cabinet Office, on the Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its work force 2005-08 and has set new diversity targets for 2009-11.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244356]

Angela Eagle: For information on the country of origin of furniture products purchased by the Department, I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member on 18 December 2006, Official Report, column 1552W by the former Financial Secretary (Mr. Healey). A search of the Department's accounting records failed to reveal any payments having been made to Remploy since 2002-03. Information on payments prior to that date could be provided only at disproportionate costs due to the introduction of a new accounting system.

Departmental Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by his Department were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) in each year from 1997 to 2008; and how many of these were upheld by the ASA in each year. [246642]

Angela Eagle: There have been no complaints made about advertisements sponsored or funded by the Treasury in each year from 1997 to 2008.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisors

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what expert advisers have been commissioned by his Department and its agencies since 1997; on what topic each was commissioned; and whether the advisers so appointed made a declaration of political activity in each case. [246660]

Angela Eagle: Details of expert advisers appointed by the Treasury may be found where appropriate on its website. Advisers commissioned by Treasury are expected to comply with the Nolan Principles. Where appropriate, advisers have made a declaration of political activity. The Debt Management Office has appointed no expert advisers.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by (a) his Department and (b) its Executive agencies for public access to services. [246982]

Angela Eagle: HM Treasury does not use 0845 numbers.

The UK Debt Management Office has 17 0845 telephone numbers that appear on its website and are therefore generally available for use by callers. Their purpose is business continuity-related.

Departmental Work Experience

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals have worked in his Department on (a) paid and (b) unpaid work experience or internships in each of the last three years; on average how many hours a week were worked by such people in each year; what types of work each was involved in; what proportion were in full-time education; what proportion did not complete their set period of work experience; and how much those who received remuneration were paid on average per week in each year. [242123]

Angela Eagle: The number of paid work experience and internship placements offered in each of the last three years is as follows:

	Number of placements	Average weekly remuneration (£)
2006-07	37	313
2007-08	27	322
2008-09	34	335

Placement students work on average 36 hours per week and are all involved in work related to economics. It is not possible to state how many were in full-time education or how many did not complete their period of work experience.

Information on unpaid work experience is not recorded centrally and cannot therefore be provided.

Derbyshire Offshore

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps have been taken by the Financial Services Authority to safeguard depositors in the Derbyshire Building Society's Isle of Man subsidiary. [246802]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1902W.

Economic Situation: EC Countries

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is taking to establish close working practices with EU partners in order to facilitate co-operative efforts to overcome the economic downturn. [244665]

Ian Pearson: The Chancellor of the Exchequer and Treasury Ministers attend regular meetings of EU Ministers, including the Council of Economic and Finance Ministers (ECOFIN). These discussions cover a wide range of issues including discussion of co-ordination among EU member states.

Equitable Life

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons he has not responded to the Ombudsman's report on Equitable Life; and when he expects to do so. [246164]

Ian Pearson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 261W.

EU Budget

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total gross amount paid to the EU budget was by each EU member state in the last year for which figures are available. [246688]

Ian Pearson: Details of each member state's gross contributions, after taking account of the UK abatement, can be found Tables 2A (euro) and 2B (sterling) (pages 48 and 50) of the 2008 European Community Finances White Paper (Cm 7462) published on 10 September 2008.

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to reduce the level of the UK's net contribution to the EU budget until the level of UK debt is reduced to below the average of EU countries; and if he will make a statement. [246689]

Ian Pearson: The Government are committed to radical reform of the EU budget, including the common agricultural policy as set out in "Global Europe: vision for a 21st century budget" published on 19 June 2008.

EU Grants and Loans

Justine Greening: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the (a) monetary value and (b) quantity of loans funded from the European Investment Bank made to UK companies in (i) November 2008 and (ii) December 2008; and what estimate he has made of the value and quantity of such loans in (A) January 2009 and (B) February 2009. [246765]

Ian Pearson: The European Investment Bank (EIB) publishes data and status information on individual loans on its public website (www.eib.org). The status of a loan can fall into one of three stages: (1) under appraisal; (2) approved by the Board of Directors of the EIB; and (3) signed by borrower and the EIB.

Based on information that is available in the public domain:

in November 2008, the EIB signed five finance contracts with UK companies, totalling €689,570,509; and in December 2008, the EIB signed six finance contracts with UK companies, totalling €1,292,257,485.

Looking forward, based again on information that is currently publicly available:

there are 11 EIB loan applications by UK companies, totalling £1,929 million, approved by the EIB's Board of Directors and now awaiting final signature; and there are a further eight EIB loan applications by UK companies, totalling approximately £1,810 million, currently under appraisal.

The exact timing of the approval and signature stages is subject to the conclusion of confidential negotiations between the EIB and borrower.

Excise Duties: Alcoholic Drinks

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the effect on the price of (a) a pint of beer, (b) a bottle of wine and (c) a bottle of spirits of the measures announced in the pre-Budget report 2008 in each year to 2011-12; [240865]

(2) what economic (a) assumptions and (b) formula his Department uses to calculate the effects of alcohol duty on the price of a (i) pint of beer, (ii) bottle of wine and (iii) bottle of spirits. [240866]

Angela Eagle: The effect of the PBR 2008 measures on the price of a pint of beer, a 75cl bottle of wine and a 70cl bottle of spirits is estimated to be:

	Beer	Wine	Pence Spirits
2008-09	-1	+ 1	-12
2009-10[1]	-1	+2	-11
2009-10[2]	+3	+ 14	+28
2010-11	+4	+15	+29
2011-12	+4	+ 15	+31

[1] April to December. [2] January to March.

These estimates are based on HM Treasury's projections of retail price inflation and the producer prices index as well as average prices and strengths calculated using market data. They include VAT and duty measures.

The calculation of the expected effect of changes in duty rate on consumer demand for excise goods assumes that any change in duty is passed on in full to consumers. See paragraph A.2.3 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report (FSBR) 2008. Website address:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/d/bud08 completereport.pdf.

The following formulae are used to measure the effect of alcohol duty on typical items of alcohol:

(i) Pint of beer—Duty/100*0.568*4.2 (assumes that a pint is 0.568 litres and the average strength of a pint of beer is 4.2 per cent.).

(ii) 75cl Bottle of wine—Duty/100*0.75

(iii) 70cl Bottle of Spirits—Duty*0.7*0.3877 (assumes the average strength of a bottle of spirits is 38.77 per cent.).

Average strengths have been calculated using market data.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward proposals to increase the accountability to Parliament of the Financial Services Authority. [244310]

Ian Pearson: The FSA is accountable to Parliament, the Treasury, the public and industry in a number of ways including the requirement for the FSA to publish an annual report on the discharge of its functions and the extent to which its regulatory objectives have been met.

Government Departments: Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government is taking to reduce energy waste on the part of Government Departments. [244625]

Angela Eagle: The Government's Delivery Plan for "Sustainable Procurement and Operations on the Government Estate", published in August 2008, provides a full account of the initiatives that Departments are taking to reduce their energy waste. Government have committed to updating the Delivery Plan on a six monthly basis, and the first of these updates will be published on 18 December 2008.

Housing: Valuation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with reference to the Answer to the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst of 5 November 2008, Official Report, column 542W, on housing: valuation, if he will publish the multiple regression methodology which the automated valuation model uses to apply a value significance to the 10,000 localities. [245916]

Mr. Timms: Multiple regression is a statistical technique. Its use by the Valuation Office Agency within automated valuation modelling is subject to commercial confidentiality.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the effect of falling house prices on the ability of families to meet inheritance tax liabilities when they inherit a home from a deceased parent or relative. [245961]

Mr. Timms: As with the whole tax system, the Government keep the effect of falling house prices on the ability of families to meet inheritance tax liabilities under review.

The Government therefore have two measures in place to address this eventuality of falling house prices affecting the ability to meet inheritance tax liabilities:

While a house remains unsold, the inheritance tax due on it can be paid in instalments for up to 10 years.

Where a house is sold within four years of the death for less than the value on which inheritance tax was paid, the personal representatives can in most cases make a claim for inheritance tax 'loss on sale' relief. The loss on sale relief does not apply if the sale is to a beneficiary or relative of a beneficiary. This is because of the risk of avoidance.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Valuation Office Agency has targets for inheritance tax yields. [246059]

Mr. Timms: The Valuation Office Agency does not have a target to increase inheritance tax yields.

Kaupthing Singer and Friedlander

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether (a) his Department and (b) any of its agencies has had (i) correspondence and (ii) discussions with (A) Kaupthing Singer and Friedlander Ltd. and (B) another bank or intermediary relating to the withdrawal by customers of deposits in the 10 days before 8 October 2008. [245434]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 18 December 2008]: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings and discussions with a wide variety of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings and discussions.

Landsbanki: Guernsey

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he or his officials will meet representatives of depositors in Landsbanki Guernsey to discuss the means of recovering their savings. [243800]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 15 December 2008]: The Treasury has offered a meeting at officials' level to the Landsbanki Guernsey Depositors Action Group.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Landsbanki Resolution Committee on the collapse of Landsbanki Guernsey. [244324]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 16 December 2008]: In line with usual constitutional arrangements, the UK Government will represent the Crown Dependencies in their negotiations with the Icelandic authorities.

Engagement with the Landsbanki Resolution Committee on issues relating to the failure of Landsbanki Guernsey is a matter for the administrator of Landsbanki Guernsey and the Government of Guernsey.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions his Department has had with the Icelandic government on the collapse of Landsbanki Guernsey. [244325]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 16 December 2008]: In line with usual constitutional arrangements, the UK Government will represent the Crown Dependencies in their negotiations with the Icelandic authorities.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken in response to the collapse of Landsbanki Guernsey; and if he will make a statement. [244698]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 18 December 2008]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Thurrock (Andrew Mackinlay) on 6 November, Official Report, column 683W.

Loans

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans his Department has to introduce a national loan guarantee scheme. [245851]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the statement by the Prime Minister on 10 December 2008, Official Report, column 527-28.

The Government have announced a package of measures to ensure the stability of the financial system; protect ordinary savers, depositors, businesses and borrowers; and protect the interests of taxpayers. More information is available on the Treasury website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/press_105_08.htm.

The Government will take whatever steps are necessary to ensure the stability of the financial system.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with reference to the answer of 11 November 2008, Official Report, column 1084W, on borrowing: local authorities, how many local authorities have had their initial applications rejected for not meeting the lending terms in the last three years. [245897]

Angela Eagle: No local authorities have had their loan applications rejected by the Public Works Loan Board for not meeting its lending terms in the last three years.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with reference to the answer of 11 November 2008, Official Report, column 1084W, on borrowing: local authorities, if he will publish the lending terms that local authorities must meet for applications to borrow to be approved. [245898]

Angela Eagle: The Public Works Loan Board's lending arrangements are displayed on its website, www.pwlb.gov.uk.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Baron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when his Department will reply to the hon. Member for Billericay's letter of 21 October 2008 about his constituent, Mr. S Ford. [246128]

Ian Pearson: A reply has been sent to the hon. Member.

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Bournemouth, West of 13 October, 3 November and 11 December 2008 in respect of his constituent Mr Ian Wilson and deposits with Icelandic banks. [246206]

Ian Pearson: The Treasury regrets the delay in replying to the hon. Member and hopes to be in a position to do so shortly.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to reply to the letter to him dated 28 October 2008 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Ms J. Ferneyhough. [246528]

Ian Pearson: A reply has been sent to my right hon. Friend.

Minimum Wage: North West

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many fines have been issued to employers in the North West for paying employees at rates below the national minimum wage. [246069]

Mr. Timms: The national minimum wage (NMW) regime of enforcement activity does not include the use of fines for non-payment of national minimum wage. In January 2007, the DTI published the NMW penalty notice policy. In line with this, since February 2007, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs has been issuing penalty notices, for those employers who fail to comply with an enforcement notice within 28 days. The Employment Act 2008 will introduce changes, from 6 April 2009, to the NMW enforcement regime, which will see the issue, by HMRC, of financial penalties in most cases of minimum wage non-compliance.

Non-domestic Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes have been made to the tax treatment of lump sum payments made by businesses surrendering onerous leases in the last 12 months. [245978]

Mr. Timms: There have been no recent changes to the tax treatment of lump sum payments made by businesses surrendering onerous leases. Such payments are not an allowable expense in computing trading profits, unless the trade consists of the buying and selling of leases.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246338]

Angela Eagle: The Department does not keep records of the numbers of ex-offenders employed.

All candidates are subject to fair Recruitment and Selection procedures, underpinned by our Equal Opportunities policy and the provisions of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act (1974). Candidates are assessed according to suitability for the post. During normal security vetting procedures, the Head of Security will consider the nature of spent and unspent convictions and, so long as no security risk is identified, ex-offenders are not precluded from employment within HM Treasury.

OGCbuying.solutions: Small Businesses

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Chancellor will review the threshold turnover level for the Office of Government Commerce's facilities catalogue to ensure that small and medium-sized enterprises whose turnover falls below £1 million are not discriminated against in favour of large companies. [245615]

Angela Eagle: OGC guidance recommends that supplier turnover should not be the only consideration when assessing a potential new supplier. There have been no examples in the past two years of any companies being excluded from consideration solely on the basis of turnover when compared with contract value. There are therefore currently no turnover thresholds applied during the procurement process.

Pay As You Earn

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) has made of the number of people registered on the Pay As You Earn (PAYE) system who had additional undeclared sources of income in each of the last 12 months; how much uncollected tax revenue this figure represented (a) in total and (b) as a proportion of the estimated total tax owed by these people through PAYE in each of those months; and what estimate HMRC has made of the value of uncollected income tax as a proportion of the total income tax that was collected through PAYE in each of the last 12 months. [246178]

Mr. Timms: No such estimates have been made.

Personal Records: Databases

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff of each grade in his Department have access to electronic databases containing personal information relating to members of the public resident in Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland constituency. [244669]

Angela Eagle: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Moss: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many Private Finance Initiative schemes were concluded in each of the last 10 years; what their capital value was; what the repayment amount is; and over how many years this is to be repaid; [246703]

(2) how many Private Finance Initiative schemes are in the process of being completed; and what their (a) capital value and (b) repayment amount is; [246705]

(3) what proportion of Private Finance Initiative schemes are taken into account when calculating the national debt. [246706]

Angela Eagle: The full list of all signed PFI projects can be found on HM Treasury's website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/documents/public_private_partnerships/ppp_pfi_stats.cfm

For each PFI project, this list details the project name, the capital value, the constituency, the procuring authority and whether it is on or off balance sheet; as used by the ONS in calculating public sector net debt.

Public Expenditure

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money was allocated to reviving (a) coalfield communities, (b) steel communities, (c) rural communities, (d) inner-city areas and (e) seaside towns in each of the last 10 years. [244274]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

I have placed in the Library of the House the totals of resource allocations from key programmes for 1997-98 to 2007-08 where such information is available, together with the local authorities that fall within existing definitions of the categories requested. I have also asked the Homes and Communities Agency to write to my hon. Friend separately, setting out the equivalent sums from that Agency's programmes and those of its predecessor bodies over the relevant period. I will ensure a copy of this letter is placed in the Library of the House.

However, not all regeneration and renewal programmes record spend by local authorities such as Regional Development Agency programmes. Some other programmes funds are allocated to consortia of local authorities, and we do not gather information on how those funds are shared between the individual local authorities involved. In addition, Government do not classify English local authorities using all of the categories requested, so information therefore cannot be provided in relation to those categories. Information relating to Wales, Scotland or Northern Ireland should be sought from the respective Devolved Administrations.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with Ministers at the (a) Department for Transport, (b) Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform and (c) Department for Communities and Local Government on bringing forward publicly-funded capital works commissioned by these Departments. [244276]

Angela Eagle: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings with a wide variety of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

David Mundell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to lay before Parliament the factual paper on the Barnett formula. [246413]

Yvette Cooper: No date has yet been set for the publication of the factual paper on the Barnett formula.

Public Finance

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with reference to table B4 of the Pre-Budget Report, on the fiscal balances compared with Budget 2008, what the figures for the cyclically-adjusted (a) surplus on the current budget and (b) net borrowing are as a percentage of potential gross domestic product for each year. [245884]

Yvette Cooper: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided on to him on 15 December 2008, Official Report column 435-36W.

Cyclically adjusted fiscal aggregates are published as a percentage of forecast GDP not potential GDP.

Public Sector: Procurement

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy that the Office of Government Commerce ensure that the public sector procurers recognise any pre-qualification scheme that conforms to the core criteria in the Construction (Design and Management) Regulations; and whether he intends to bring forward proposals for a specific scheme. [246866]

Angela Eagle: It is already policy that Government clients involved in the procurement of built environments should ensure that their pre-qualification and tendering processes are appropriate for the project, meet legal obligations and avoid unnecessary bureaucracy and costs for suppliers. This requirement is made mandatory in the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) 'Common Minimum Standards for the procurement of built environments'.

The OGC recommends that government construction clients make use of 'Constructionline', a Government-owned pre-qualffication tool that aligns with the Construction (Design and Management) Regulations, when carrying out their pre-qualification procedures. However, clients may use an alternative mechanism if that is considered appropriate. It is not planned to restrict registration to a specific scheme.

The Construction (Design and Management) Regulations legislate the approach required to health and safety on construction sites. The Health and Safety Executive is responsible for any enforcement of those regulations.

Redundancy: Dartford

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to support employees in Dartford facing redundancy in the near future. [246094]

Mr. Timms: HM Treasury is working closely with the Department for Work and Pensions to take steps to ensure that individuals facing redundancy are helped to move swiftly into a new job. The recent pre-Budget report announced measures which build on the support Jobcentre Plus already has in place. The package included the expansion of Jobcentre Plus rapid response service to target both small and large-scale redundancies, the extension of Train to Gain to provide new training to people before they are made redundant, and the launch of a National Employment Partnership.

The PBR also announced that Jobcentre Plus Regional Ministers will work with regional development agencies to develop plans for co-ordinated responses to large-scale redundancies, as soon as they are notified. "Meeting the economic challenges in every region", published alongside the 2008 pre-Budget report, outlined the Government's response to support regions and localities, and sets out how regional partners are working together to focus on meeting the pressing challenges of their regions. More information on the actions that the South East of England Development Agency is taking to meet current economic challenges in the South East can be found at:

www.seeda.co.uk

Revenue and Customs

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how inspectors of HM Revenue and Customs are (a) incentivised, (b) appraised for promotion and (c) remunerated. [244911]

Mr. Timms: HMRC inspectors, in common with all HMRC staff below the senior civil service, are subject to a single pay and appraisal system which includes recognition bonuses for exceptional performance, top performance bonuses for those attaining the top marking as part of their annual appraisal, consolidated pay awards, and promotion on merit.

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what HM Revenue and Customs' policy is on answering enquiries from hon. Members; and if he will make a statement. [245287]

Mr. Timms: HMRC aim to reply to 80 per cent. of all correspondence within 15 working days, and 95 per cent. within 40 days. There is no separate target relating specifically to enquiries from Members of Parliament. Hon. Members can use the dedicated hotlines that HMRC have in place for specific issues, such as the 'MP hotline' for telephone queries about constituents' tax credits claims.

Revenue and Customs: Closures

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the potential for savings arising from the proposed closure of HM Revenue in each of the next five years. [242747]

Mr. Timms: Potential estates savings for the next five years for offices in Scotland which HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) plans to vacate are estimated as follows:

	£ million
2009-10	3.9
2010-11	7.5
2011-12	9.0
2012-13	9.5
2013-14	9.7

These savings are only part of the overall savings HMRC expects to achieve from the closure of these offices. The main reason for closure is that HMRC will achieve overall business efficiencies by consolidating staff in a smaller number of offices and introducing new and more efficient working practices.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been spent on refitting, repairs and general maintenance of those HM Revenue and Customs offices now earmarked for vacation or closure in each of the last five years, broken down by location. [242767]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Revenue and Customs: Correspondence

John Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the average length of time taken by Leeds HM Revenue and Customs office to reply to correspondence from hon. Members in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [245288]

Mr. Timms: HMRC does not keep data in this form.

Revenue and Customs: Southend

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to retain the HM Revenue and Customs office in Southend. [244677]

Mr. Timms: HMRC's latest staffing projections, published in December on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/local/change-programme.htm indicate that about 1,500 HMRC staff will be needed in Southend by 2011. There are therefore no plans to revisit the decision announced in July 2007 to retain the HMRC office at Alexander house, Southend, which will be able to accommodate that number of staff.

Revenue and Customs: Southend on Sea

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were employed at HM Revenue and Customs offices in Southend in each of the last five years. [243667]

Mr. Timms: The staff in post in Southend on Sea at 1 April for HMRC (and, for 2004 and 2005, the total of staff in HM Customs and Excise and the Inland Revenue) is shown in the following table.

As at 1 April:	Headcount	Full time equivalent
2004	2,491	n/a
2005	2,463	2271.4
2006	2,161	1999.83
2007	2,051	1887.9
2008	1,947	1781.76

These figures do not include staff in the offices at Basildon, Rayleigh or Shoeburyness.

Royal Bank of Scotland

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to end the offshore operations of Royal Bank of Scotland. [245313]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for the directors of the Royal Bank of Scotland (RBS).

The Government's investments in banks accessing the recapitalisation scheme will be managed on a commercial basis by an arm's length company, "UK Financial Investments Limited" (UKFI). The overarching objectives for UKFI will be to protect and create value for the taxpayer as shareholder with due regard to the maintenance of financial stability and to act in a way that promotes competition. More details can be found in the letter dated 3 November from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, which is available in the House of Common's Library.

Sight Impaired

Tom Levitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidelines his Department follows in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness. [245723]

Angela Eagle: The Treasury aims to follow the RNIB's "See it Right" guidelines in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness.

Stamp Duty Land Tax

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will increase the stamp duty holiday threshold to above £175,000; [245872]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the stamp duty holiday in stimulating the market for properties priced below £175,000. [245873]

Ian Pearson: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by the then Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Kitty Ussher) on 15 September 2008, Official Report, column 2155W. The aim of the stamp duty holiday announced on 2 September 2008 is to demonstrate Government support for homebuyers at a time of difficult conditions. Data on property transactions can be found at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/survey_of_prop/index.htm.

Tax Allowances: Redundancy

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will raise the tax-free threshold of £30,000 for redundancy payments. [246095]

Mr. Timms: The Government keeps the £30,000 tax exemption for redundancy payments under review along with all other aspects of the tax system.

Tax Allowances: Rented Housing

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he plans to raise the tax-free threshold under the rent-a-room scheme. [246534]

Mr. Timms: There are no plans to raise the tax-free threshold under the rent-a-room scheme.

Tax Avoidance

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of levels of tax evasion among white-collar workers; and what steps his Department has taken (a) to recover revenue from taxes which have been evaded and (b) to reduce levels of evasion. [245840]

Mr. Timms: There are no figures available for the levels of tax evasion by white-collar workers.

The Government are committed to ensuring that the tax system operates fairly and efficiently and clamping down on those who try to cheat the system through evading taxes continues to be a priority. HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) risk assess tax returns against their own and third party information and will open an inquiry into those cases where they believe there is a risk of tax evasion.

HMRC continues to improve its approach to tackling evasion. It has made improvements to the identification of evasion through investment in a risk capability and a single referral and escalation mechanism across the taxes. This is underpinned by the recent change in HMRC powers which extends real-time inspection of records to direct taxes as well as a new penalty regime to help deter evasion.

Tax Credit

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been awarded consolatory payments in respect of tax credits by HM Revenue and Customs in each of the last five years; what the average size of consolatory payments for tax credit errors was in each of the last five years; what the amount paid for consolatory payments in respect of tax credits was in each of the last five years; on what basis consolatory payments were awarded in that period; and if he will make a statement. [245588]

Mr. Timms: The circumstances in which HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) will make compensation payments to its customers are explained in the Department's fact sheet C/FS 'Complaints and Putting Things Right' which is available at:

www.hmrc.gov.uk/factsheets/complaints-factsheet.pdf.

The Department will pay compensation for reasonable costs incurred as a direct result of any mistakes or delays and to recognise worry and distress caused.

For the number and value of compensation payments made by Tax Credit Office up to the end of 2007-08, I refer the hon. Member to the answer my predecessor gave the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 5 June 2008, Official Report, columns 1086-87W. Data for 2008-09 will be collated in due course.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases relating to tax credits the Adjudicator's Office has handled under the process assurance procedure in each year for which figures are available; how many of these cases were subsequently referred to the Parliamentary Ombudsman; and if he will make a statement. [245589]

Mr. Timms: The Adjudicator's Office began working cases under the process assurance procedure during 2006-07. The Adjudicator's Office closed 313 PA cases in 2006-07 and 982 in 2007-08. The Adjudicator's Office ceased using this procedure for working tax credit cases in January 2008.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many cases related to tax credits and resolved since March 2008 the Adjudicator's Office has recommended that (a) an overpayment be written off and (b) a consolatory payment be made. [245590]

Mr. Timms: From 1 April 2008, 575 tax credit cases have been settled with some or all of the overpayment being written off. There have been consolatory payments in 666 of all tax credit cases seen by the Adjudicator's Office in the same period. The circumstances in which HM Revenue and Customs make compensation payment to its customers are explained in the Department's fact sheet C/FS "Complaints and Putting Things Right" which is available at www.hmrc.gov.uk/factsheets/complaints-factsheet.pdf.

The Department will pay compensation for reasonable costs incurred as a direct result of any mistakes or delays and to recognise worry and distress caused.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much in relation to tax credits cases the Adjudicator's Office has recommended that HM Revenue and Customs (a) pay in compensation to claimants, (b) forego in tax and interest and (c) write off in overpaid tax credits since March 2008. [245591]

Mr. Timms: From 1 April 2008 the Adjudicator's Office recommended that HMRC pay £108,980 in compensation relating to tax credit claims, and recommended £1,532,272 of overpayment to be written off. Interest is not generally chargeable on tax credits cases. The Adjudicator's Office has not made recommendations with regard to foregoing tax or interest in relation to a tax credit case.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases related to tax credits have been taken on by the Adjudicator's Office since March 2008; and how many of these have been settled. [245592]

Mr. Timms: From 1 April 2008 the Adjudicator's Office has taken on 1,106 tax credit cases and closed 984 tax credit cases. 220 of the tax credits cases closed were taken on this year.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff the Adjudicator's Office employed in each of the last five years; and how many of those worked on tax credit disputes. [245593]

Mr. Timms: There are currently 54 people working in the Adjudicator's Office. At the end of each year there were; 46 people for 2007-08, 45 for 2006-07, 43 for 2005-06, 43 for 2004-05 and 47 for 2003-04. All staff spend some time working on tax credits complaints as well as on other complaints.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit cases taken on by the Adjudicator's Office related to complaints where overpayments had been made due to awards based on incorrect information in each of the last five years; and in how many of those cases the complaint was upheld. [245594]

Mr. Timms: This information is not available.

Taxation: Aviation

Justine Greening: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information his Department holds for benchmarking purposes on other countries which have an aviation duty based on (a) distance-banding and (b) distance-banding where distance is calculated for capital cities. [244328]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 December 2008]: France and the Netherlands have aviation passenger taxes which are similar to the UK's air passenger duty. The Republic of Ireland will introduce a similar tax in March 2009. All of these duties make a distinction based on the final destination of the passenger.

The French have a civil aviation passenger tax and a solidarity passenger tax both of which charge on whether the passenger is flying within Europe or elsewhere. The Netherlands uses a system based on distance to destination from airport of departure and the Irish plan to use distance from Dublin airport.

Taxation: Carers

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with reference to the Answer of 26 November 2007, Official Report, column 128W, on care vouchers, if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the modelling his Department has undertaken of the scheme and (b) the work carried out on its cost effectiveness. [246406]

Ian Pearson: The Government set out their assessment of the care voucher scheme in the answer to which the hon. Member refers.

Taxation: Disclosure of Information

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will initiate a leak inquiry into the circumstances whereby details of the new taxation measures in the Pre-Budget Report being published in the national press prior to his statement to the House. [244784]

Angela Eagle: It has been the policy of successive Administrations not to comment on the initiation of, content of, or outcome of internal leak inquiries.

Taxation: Helicopters

Tom Brake: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what aviation taxes are imposed on the use of private helicopters; [246824]

(2) how much revenue has been raised by aviation taxes on the use of private helicopters in each year since 1997. [246826]

Angela Eagle: Some helicopter flights, such as those carrying more than 19 chargeable passengers, are liable to air passenger duty.

For all aircraft, including helicopters, duty is payable on aviation gasoline and on aviation turbine fuel used for private pleasure flying.

Figures for the proportion of revenue for these taxes raised from helicopters are not available. There are no other taxes specific to aviation.

Valuation Office

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what working groups there are in the Valuation Office Agency's Local Taxation and Data and Information Technology divisions. [245963]

Mr. Timms: A large range of activity is undertaken in the Agency's Local Taxation and Data and Information Technology Directorates. No single central record is kept of the various means by which the work is organised. Generally speaking, oversight is delivered through regular management meetings or project boards, rather than through working groups.

Valuation Office: Digital Mapping

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with reference to the answer of 30 October 2008, Official Report, column 1259W, on council tax: valuation, what the monetary value was of payments made to Tenet Technology by the third party representatives of the Valuation Office Agency for goods, licences and services from Tenet which the Valuation Office Agency uses. [245919]

Mr. Timms: The total payments made by the VOA's third party representatives to Tenet Technology is the subject of a contract to which the VOA is not a party.

VAT

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of changes in consumer spending behaviour attributable to the reduction in the rate of value added tax. [245842]

Mr. Timms: An assessment of the impact of the VAT rate cut on projected consumer spending behaviour can be found in paragraphs 2.40 to 2.45 in the 2008 Pre-Budget Report. No assessment has been made yet since the reduction took effect.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the extent to which the reduction in the rate of value added tax has met his objectives for the policy. [245844]

Mr. Timms: We have reduced the standard rate of value added tax to 15 per cent. from 1 December 2008 to 31 December 2009 as part of a wider fiscal stimulus. It would be premature to attempt to make an assessment now of the effect of this 13-month reduction in stabilising the economy, but we have met our objective of helping the UK's two million VAT registered businesses to make the change from 1 December, and many have been passing on the reduction to consumers through lower prices from that date.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he plans to take to encourage businesses to reduce immediately prices in line with the new rate of value added tax. [245845]

Mr. Timms: The Government have called on businesses to pass on the VAT rate reduction through lower prices to help stimulate consumer spending and ensure both businesses and consumers can benefit from this change. Many businesses have done so, and in the UK's highly competitive retail sector, consumers can choose whether or not to buy from businesses that do not pass the reduction on. But decisions on prices are for businesses rather than Government.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much revenue was raised from value added tax on sales of domestic microgeneration technology of each type in each of the last three financial years; [246284]

(2) how much revenue was raised from value added tax on domestic insulation products in each of the last three financial years. [246287]

Mr. Timms: HM Revenue and Customs does not collect data on VAT raised from individual goods and services.

VAT: Retail Trade

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations his Department has received about retailers miscalculating the reduction in the rate of value added tax. [245574]

Mr. Timms: We have received representations on a number of issues associated with the reduction in the rate of value added tax to 15 per cent. There is no indication of significant or widespread problems relating to retailers incorrectly applying the change, but Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs is committed to providing guidance and support to any businesses or consumers who are experiencing problems.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps HM Revenue and Customs is taking to ensure that the reduction in the rate of value added tax is passed on to customers. [245576]

Mr. Timms: Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs has provided detailed guidance and support to help every VAT registered business apply the new rate of VAT correctly from 1 December 2008. The Government have called on businesses to pass on the VAT rate reduction to consumers through lower prices, and many have responded, but decisions on prices are for businesses rather than Government.

VAT: Small Businesses

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects on the cash flows of small businesses of the reductions in the flat rate of value added tax simultaneously with the reduction in the standard rate to 15 per cent. [246760]

Mr. Timms: The purpose of the flat rate scheme is to simplify VAT accounting and no direct assessment of the cash flow effect of changes to the flat rates was made.

Alongside the standard VAT rate reduction, the flat rates were recalculated to ensure they reflect both the rate change and the net VAT paid by small businesses that do not use the flat rate scheme. This avoids distortion of competition between flat rate users and small businesses that opt not to use the scheme.

Welfare Tax Credits

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the (a) cost and (b) staff time of piloting face-to-face visits for tax credit customers in November and December 2008. [246575]

Mr. Timms: HMRC have started rolling out new services from December 2008 to make claiming tax credits easier and quicker. The services offered will depend upon the customer's needs and piloting face-to-face visits for tax credit customers will take place in 2009. The costs and benefits of the pilot will inform a decision on a full roll out of this service.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claims were ended as a result of relationship breakdown in each month of 2006-07; and what the size of the credit claimed was in each case. [246576]

Mr. Timms: The information requested is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. Each year around 150,000 tax credit customers experience a household break-up.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of the increase in the tax credits income disregard from £2,500 to £25,000 in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2014-15; and if he will make a statement. [246622]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Rayleigh (Mr. Francois), on 7 November 2006, Official Report column 1043-44W.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on public expenditure of removing the second taper rate of 6.67 per cent. and increasing the first taper rate to (a) 46 per cent., (b) 45 per cent., (c) 44 per cent. and (d) 43 per cent. in each of the next five years; if he will estimate the number of people who would no longer be eligible for tax credits in each case; and if he will make a statement. [246623]

Mr. Timms: The estimated saving, in 2009-10 to 2013-14, of increasing the first taper rate of tax credits to each of the rates requested, combined with increasing the second taper rate to 100 per cent. is provided in the following table. No account has been taken of possible behavioural effects.

Effect on expenditure

1st taper	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14
46 per cent.	-1,550	-1,600	-1,640	-1,750	-1,840
45 per cent.	-1,370	-1,410	-1,450	-1,540	-1,630
44 per cent.	-1,180	-1,210	-1,240	-1,330	-1,400
43 per cent.	-980	-1,010	-1,030	-1,100	-1,160

These changes would not affect the number of claimants eligible for tax credits. However, they would increase the number of claimants with awards reduced to zero.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new claims for tax credits have been made in each of the last 24 months. [246898]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Exchequer Secretary (Angela Eagle) gave her on 10 December 2008, Official Report column 198W.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to publish the Government's response to its consultation on the tax credit system. [246900]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Exchequer Secretary (Angela Eagle) gave her on 10 December 2008, Official Report: column 198W.

Welfare Tax Credits: Bexley

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many claimants in the London Borough of Bexley were overpaid tax credits in the last three years for which figures are available. [244754]

Mr. Timms: Estimates of the number of families with tax credit awards, including information on overpayments by local authority, based on final family circumstances and incomes, for the years 2004-05, 2005-06 and 2006-07 are available in the HMRC publications 'Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics. Finalised Annual Awards. Supplement on Payments. Geographical Analyses', for each relevant year. These publications are available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-geog-stats.htm.

Welfare Tax Credits: Complaints

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints about tax credits the Tax Credit Office has received in each of the last 24 months, broken down by type of communication. [246895]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary (Ian Pearson) gave her on 10 December 2008, Official Report, column 198W.

Welfare Tax Credits: Telephone Services

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the tax credit helpline call centres have caller identification technology in place. [246893]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 December 2008, Official Report column 825W.

Working Tax Credit

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the results of the research undertaken by HM Revenue and Customs on the reasons why some people without children do not claim working tax credit. [246582]

Mr. Timms: In 2007, HMRC commissioned a piece of qualitative research looking at the triggers and barriers to the take-up of Working Tax Credit among those without dependent children, in accordance with the Department's policy on publication, the research findings will be published on the HMRC website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/research/

early in 2009.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much and what proportion of working tax credit underpayments owing to (a) official error and (b) customer error was subsequently paid in each year since the scheme's introduction; and if he will make a statement; [246611]

(2) how much and what proportion of working tax credit overpayments owing to (a) official error and (b) customer error was recovered in each year since the scheme's introduction; and if he will make a statement; [246612]

(3) how much was (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid in working tax credits owing to (i) official error and (ii) customer error in each year since the scheme's introduction; what the average discrepancy per case is; and if he will make a statement; [246613]

(4) how many and what proportion of working tax credit claims were (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid owing to (i) official error and (ii) customer error in each year since the scheme's introduction; and if he will make a statement; [246614]

(5) how much and what proportion of child tax credit underpayments owing to (a) official error and (b) customer error was subsequently paid out in each year since their introduction; and if he will make a statement; [246615]

(6) how much and what proportion of tax credit overpayments owing to (a) official error and (b) customer error was recovered in each year since their introduction; and if he will make a statement; [246616]

(7) how much and what proportion of tax credit underpayments owing to (a) official error and (b) customer error was subsequently paid out in each year since their introduction; and if he will make a statement; [246617]

(8) how much and what proportion of child tax credit claims were (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid owing to (i) official error and (ii) customer error in each year since their introduction; and if he will make a statement; [246618]

(9) how much was (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid in child tax credits owing to (i) official error and (ii) customer error in each year since their introduction; what the average discrepency per case is; and if he will make a statement; [246619]

(10) how much and what proportion of child tax credit overpayments owing to (a) official error and (b) customer error was recovered in each year since their introduction; and if he will make a statement; [246620]

(11) how much has been (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid in tax credits owing to (i) official error and (ii) customer error in each year since their introduction; what the average discrepancy per case is; and if he will make a statement; [246621]

(12) how many and what proportion of tax credit claims were (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid owing to (i) official error and (ii) customer error in each year since the scheme's introduction; and if he will make a statement. [246908]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the format requested.

Accuracy in processing and calculating awards increased from just under 79 per cent. in 2003-04 to around 97 per cent. in 2007-08. In addition, in 2007-08 fewer than 5 per cent. of overpayments where the customer disputed whether they should make a repayment contained any element of official error.

Information about the level of under and overpayments of tax credits is published on the HM Revenue and Customs website at www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan and Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department takes to monitor the behaviour of individuals employed by private security companies operating in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan. [243885]

Bill Rammell: The Government do not monitor the behaviour of individuals operating on behalf of Private Military Security Companies (PMSCs), except when they are part of a contract that the Government have with a specific PMSC. HMG closely monitors contracts of PMSCs operating in Iraq and Afghanistan that are contracted by the UK Government. All HMG's PMSC contracts are subject to ongoing performance monitoring and contract management by the FCO and other Government Departments concerned, both in country on-the-ground and from the UK, in respect of all aspects of the delivery and operation of these contracts. HMG requires the highest standard of personal behaviour from staff employed by PMSCs contracted by HMG.

FCO monitors performance by a mixture of key performance indicators, regular visits by the Overseas Security Advisors to FCO posts who review and report on the PMSCs' performance, regular review meetings in London with PMSCs, and monitoring expenditure against a fully profiled budget. In addition, the FCO reviews requirements on completion of the contract and prior to re-tendering in order to highlight any improvements that could be made as a result of experience or lessons learned.

Arms Trade: Exports

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the compliance of relevant UK (a) legislation and (b) regulations with the requirements of the EU Common Position on defining common rules governing the control of exports of military technology and equipment; and if he will make a statement. [246129]

Bill Rammell: The UK has for some time been pressing for the adoption of the EU Code of Conduct as a Common Position; we welcome its adoption in December 2008, which changes the code's status from politically to legally binding on all member states. Export licence applications are currently subject to assessment by the Consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria, adopted in 2000 and announced in this House on 26 October 2000. This brought together in one place principles underpinning both UK legislation and the EU Code of Conduct, to ensure a consistent approach to export licensing. This became part of statutory guidance. As export licence applications are made under the Export Control Act 2002, this remains the same with the Common Position. We will not therefore require any significant change to UK legislation to implement the Common Position, and will be in a position to implement it without delay.

Bangladesh: Elections

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards free and fair elections in Bangladesh; and if he will make a statement. [243878]

Bill Rammell: The Chief Election Commissioner of Bangladesh has announced that the national election will take place on 29 December. The parties have now submitted their nominations for the election. International observer missions are now in Bangladesh.

The caretaker Government have announced that the state of emergency will be lifted on 17 December. The people of Bangladesh are looking forward to choosing a new Government.

Bosnia: Politics and Government

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Solana-Rehn joint report to EU Foreign Ministers on the situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement. [240822]

David Miliband: I welcome the Solana-Rehn joint report entitled 'EU's policy in Bosnia and Herzegovina: the way ahead'. The report is principally concerned with the future of the EU Special Representative's office in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH) and is a good start to an important discussion. The UK remains deeply concerned about the political situation in BiH, and will engage closely with EU partners on the issues raised in the report. We believe the EU needs to increase further its engagement in BiH.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the Solana-Rehn joint report to EU foreign ministers on the situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina. [240837]

David Miliband: We are not able to place a copy of the Solana-Rehn joint report to EU Foreign Ministers on the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina in the Library. The document is jointly owned by the Javier Solana (EU High Representative) and Olli Rehn (EU Commissioner for Enlargement) and is not in the public domain. However a summary of the report, which is in the public domain, will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the level of co-operation and consultation between the EU and NATO in Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement. [240838]

David Miliband: Both the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) and the EU remain deeply concerned about the current situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina. At a joint NATO-EU discussion of Bosnia and Herzegovina on 27 October 2008, EU High Representative Javier Solana and the NATO Secretary General Jaap De Hoop Scheffer underlined that the slowdown in reform progress and ongoing ethnic nationalist rhetoric was extremely worrying.

Both organisations continue to co-operate closely in their efforts to ensure Bosnia and Herzegovina makes progress on the reform priorities necessary for further EU-Atlantic integration. The EU Peacekeeping Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (EUFOR) continues to operate under Berlin Plus arrangements, ensuring ongoing co-ordination of NATO and EU activities. The NATO Secretary General has highlighted the excellent working relationship between NATO and EU Commanders on the ground.

British Council: Finance

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funding his Department has made available for the British Council's Reconnect Initiative for each year until 2010-11. [243036]

Caroline Flint: In the 2007 comprehensive spending review, the Treasury allocated an additional £6 million to the British Council for its Reconnect Initiative:

	£ million
2008-09	1
2009-10	2
2010-11	3

These funds are in addition to the British Council's baseline funding.

British Council: Pakistan

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when it was decided to close the Library of the British Council in Lahore, Pakistan; what assessment was made of the contribution it made to understanding of the UK and the West in Pakistan; and if he will bring forward plans to reopen the Library. [244465]

Caroline Flint: As a result of the events of 11 September 2001, and due to the deteriorating security situation, all public-access British Council premises in Pakistan were closed in 2002.

The library in Lahore was an essential part of the British Council Pakistan's offer to young people helping them to establish a relationship with the UK at a time when the internet was non-existent. The British Council has continued to engage with local customers by increasing the availability of on-line and phone services while at the same time reducing the vulnerability of its staff and customers.

The security environment in Pakistan, coupled with the British Council's emphasis on partnerships and online working mean they have no plans to reopen any libraries in Pakistan.

British Indian Ocean Territory: Angling

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was received through the sale of fishing licences in the British Indian Ocean Territory in the last five years. [245419]

Gillian Merron: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend, the then Minister of State, Geoff Hoon, gave on 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1415W for the income received in the years 2003-06 from fisheries in the British Indian Ocean Territory.

Since then, income from fisheries has been as follows:

2006-07	824,948
2007-08	1,078,649
2008-09 (to date)	730,206

Burma: Politics and Government

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment the Government have made of the political situation in Myanmar. [243683]

Bill Rammell: The military regime in Burma is determined to maintain its hold on power regardless of the cost and suffering of its people. The junta's 'Roadmap to disciplined democracy', including a new constitution and elections planned for 2010, is designed to entrench military rule behind a facade of civilian government. The process excludes the opposition and meaningful participation by the ethnic groups. Fundamental rights are consistently ignored.

Since early November, over 200 pro-democracy activists have been given sentences of up to 65 years in prison. These severe sentences are clearly designed to silence all dissent ahead of the 2010 elections. There are now over 2,200 political prisoners in detention, including opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi, and other pro-democracy leaders. Ethnic minority groups have been methodically marginalised. Against this backdrop, we will continue to do all we can to generate international pressure for a peaceful transition to democracy and respect for human rights in Burma. In particular, we will continue to give our full support to the UN Secretary General and his efforts to break the current deadlock.

Chagos Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his American counterpart on the future of the Diego Garcia airbase in the Chagos Islands in light of the expiry of the agreement for US-UK joint use of Diego Garcia for defence operations in 2016. [245421]

Gillian Merron: The UK and US consult closely and regularly on their mutual defence needs, including in the annual bilateral official talks on the British Indian Ocean Territory last held in London 18-19 September 2008. To date neither the UK nor the US has raised the possibility of terminating the agreement.

The use of the British Indian Ocean Territory is regulated by a series of bilateral agreements (Exchange of Notes) between the UK and the US. The 1966 Exchange of Notes provides that the islands of the British Indian Ocean Territory, including Diego Garcia, shall be available for defence purposes of both countries for an initial period of 50 years i.e., until 2016 and continuing thereafter for a further period of 20 years unless terminated by either Government not more than two years before the end of the initial period.

Chevening Scholarships

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Chevening scholarships have been awarded to Tibetans in each year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [245246]

Caroline Flint: Three Chevening scholarships have been awarded to ethnic Tibetans applying in China since 2001-02; one each in 2004-05, 2006-07 and 2007-08. This does not include any figures for Han Chinese or other Chinese ethnic minorities who may have been born in the Tibetan autonomous region.

Citizenship

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to include provisions in the Immigration and Citizenship Bill to give British nationals who are not British citizens entitlement to full British citizenship. [244735]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

There is provision with nationality law for the registration of those with another form of British nationality to be registered as "full" British citizens. If a person lives in the United Kingdom for a period of five years, and meets certain residence requirements, he or she can apply for registration.

The Nationality Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 also introduced a registration provision under which British overseas citizens, British subjects and British protected persons can be registered as British citizens if they do not possess another nationality. Similar provision exists under the British nationality Hong Kong Act 1997 for the registration of British nationals who would otherwise be stateless and are ordinarily resident in Hong Kong.

We have no plans to extend these provisions within the forthcoming legislation.

Colombia: Armed Forces

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with reference to the answer of 25 November 2008, Official Report, column 1196W, on Colombia: armed forces, whether the figure quoted for the number of Colombian armed forces personnel who received training from the British Army in 2007-08 includes those who received training in the field of counter-narcotics. [242760]

Gillian Merron: No.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what expenditure his Department has incurred on providing training to members of the Colombian armed forces in each year since 2000. [242765]

Gillian Merron: UK bilateral training and engagement on human rights and humanitarian demining, which is largely funded by the joint Foreign and Commonwealth Office/Department for International Development/Ministry of Defence conflict prevention pool, has cost the following approximate amounts:

2000-01	[1]3,500
2001-02	[1]49,000
2002-03	[1]34,000
2003-04	120,000
2004-05	120,000
2005-06	130,000
2006-07	190,000
2007-08	190,000
2008-09	[2]190,000

As well as bilateral projects, the UK supports projects running through several UN agencies including the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, and the UN Office of Drugs and Crime, that will provide training to more than 2000 serving men and women.

These figures do not include training given in the field of counter narcotics. We do not disclose details of this engagement, as to do so would endanger the security of the UK and Colombian personnel involved, and undermine the effectiveness of that work.

Cyprus: Armed Forces

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of reports of the Turkish navy preventing survey ships operating on behalf of the Republic of Cyprus in Cyprus's exclusive economic zone carrying out their work; what representations he has made on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [245171]

Caroline Flint: While we have made, and continue to make, our expectations and views clear to Turkey, we continue to urge restraint as further escalation at this time would be very counter-productive.

As a signatory to the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea, the Republic of Cyprus is within its rights to explore for oil and natural resources within its territorial waters and exclusive economic zone. We hope an early solution to the Cyprus problem will allow all Cypriots to benefit from Cyprus's mineral wealth, and the UK supports all efforts to that end.

I shall continue to follow all developments, and remain committed to supporting efforts to finding a solution in Cyprus.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the effects of recent changes in the higher ranks of the Turkish Army in Cyprus on the prospects for a settlement; and if he will make a statement. [245221]

Caroline Flint: We are pleased that the two leaders continue to meet on a regular basis to discuss a comprehensive settlement. We continue to work with all parties supporting the settlement process, encouraging flexibility and compromise.

Cyprus: Community Relations

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Turkish Cypriot authorities to enable refugee Maronites to reoccupy their villages and houses in the occupied north part of Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245029]

Caroline Flint: The UK Government are aware of the continued difficulties the Maronite community in Cyprus face as a result of the continued division of Cyprus. This includes difficulties in accessing their villages of origin and homes. Ultimately, the difficulties faced by the Maronite community as a result of the political situation on the island will only be fully resolved by a comprehensive settlement to reunite the island. We will continue to engage with the leaders of the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities to support progress towards a settlement, and fully support their current negotiations towards this end.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to permit Orthodox worshippers to (a) freely visit the monastery of Agios Andreas in the Kerpas peninsula and (b) ring the church bell there; and if he will make a statement. [245030]

Caroline Flint: The British high commission in Nicosia are in regular contact with the appropriate Turkish Cypriots and raise such issues with them.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Turkish Cypriot authorities with a view to obtaining the permissions and decrees necessary to restore the Agios Andreas Monastery in the Karpas peninsula; and if he will make a statement. [245057]

Caroline Flint: I regularly express the UK's support for such confidence-building measures during my contacts with Cypriot Ministers and officials, and urge both sides to look at already agreed, and new, measures and to publicise their benefits. Confidence-building measures play an important role in building trust between communities and adding momentum to discussions. It is important that these are discussed and implemented by the two communities for the benefit of all Cypriots, but they should not distract from the process.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to assist in achieving further confidence-building measures in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245059]

Caroline Flint: Confidence-building measures play an important role in building trust between communities and adding momentum to discussions. It is important that these are discussed and implemented by the two communities for the benefit of all Cypriots, but that they should not distract from the process. I regularly express the UK's support for such measures during my contacts with Cypriot Ministers and officials, and urge both sides to continue to look at already agreed, and new, measures and to publicise their benefits.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what difficulties he has identified in the restoration of the buildings at the Ledra Street crossing in Nicosia following its recent opening; what representations he is making in this regard; and if he will make a statement. [245060]

Caroline Flint: We are following this issue closely and stand ready to support the UN's efforts to achieve agreement.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the extent of building on Greek Cypriot owned land in north Cyprus by people other than that land's lawful owners; what assessment he has made of the effects of such building on prospects for a settlement in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245158]

Caroline Flint: The British Government are concerned at the continuing appropriation of, and construction on, Greek Cypriot-owned land in northern Cyprus. Our high commission in Nicosia regularly raises the issue of property development with the Turkish Cypriot leadership. We believe that the difficult and complex issue of property is only likely to be fully resolved in the context of a comprehensive settlement, and I remain committed to doing everything I can to support progress towards the settlement process. I continue to urge both sides to show the political will and flexibility to bridge the gap between words and deeds, and to engage constructively with the UN's efforts to broker a comprehensive and durable settlement.

In our contacts with the Turkish Cypriot leadership, we recognise the Turkish Cypriots' need for economic development in support of reunification. However, we urge them to ensure that any property development which does take place does so in a manner that both respects the environment and does not complicate an eventual solution.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of progress in each of the (a) technical committees and (b) working groups involved in the Cyprus negotiations; what assessment he has made of the prospects of implementing any of their recommendations in advance of a final settlement as confidence building measures; and if he will make a statement. [245161]

Caroline Flint: We are pleased that the two leaders continue to meet on a regular basis to discuss a comprehensive settlement and are assisted by technical committees and working groups. Confidence-building measures play an important role in building trust between communities and adding momentum to discussions. It is important that these are discussed and implemented by the two communities for the benefit of all Cypriots, but that they should not distract from the process.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of progress in negotiations between the Greek and Turkish Cypriot leaders towards a settlement; and if he will make a statement. [245162]

Caroline Flint: We are pleased that the two leaders continue to meet on a regular basis to discuss a comprehensive settlement. We urge both leaders and communities to seize this opportunity to reunite the island of Cyprus and to engage positively and flexibly in the process of negotiations.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the appropriate authorities on behalf of the enclaved Maronite community in the north of Cyprus (a) to enable them to visit the church of Agla Marina, (b) for permission for them (i) to ring the church bell at Asomatos village and (ii) to visit the church freely and (c) for restoration of the monastery of Prophetis Elias; and if he will make a statement. [245165]

Caroline Flint: The Government are aware of the difficulties faced by the Maronite community in Cyprus in accessing their villages of origin, including the villages of Agia Marina and Asomatos, and consequently in religious expression in those villages. We are also aware of the need for greater preservation of churches and other buildings of religious and cultural heritage in these villages, and throughout the northern part of Cyprus. We supported the Council of Europe's resolution concerning the protection of national minorities in Cyprus adopted on 9 July 2008, which called for > "additional measures to support the revitalisation and promotion of the cultural, religious and linguistic heritage of the Maronites".

We have also called for an early implementation by the leaders of both the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities of the sixteen confidence-building measures that they announced on 25 July 2008, three of which relate to the issue of cultural heritage. Ultimately, these issues occur as a result of the political situation on the island, and will only be fully resolved by a comprehensive settlement to reunite the island. We will continue to engage with the leaders of the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities to support progress towards a settlement.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made on behalf of the enclaved Greek Cypriots living in the Karpas peninsula; and if he will make a statement. [245166]

Caroline Flint: The UK regularly discusses the issues of the enclaved along with other member states in the Committee of Ministers in the European Court of Human Rights.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the (a) number and (b) average age of (i) Greek Cypriots, (ii) Turkish Cypriots and (iii) settlers from the Turkish mainland resident in the Karpas peninsula; and if he will make a statement. [245167]

Caroline Flint: There are no UK Government estimates of the (a) number and (b) average age of anyone living in the Karpas peninsula.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate his Department has made of the (a) number and (b) average age of Maronites resident in enclaves in northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245168]

Caroline Flint: There are no UK Government estimates of the (a) number and (b) average age of Maronites resident in northern Cyprus. The most recent UN Forces in Cyprus report referred to 142 Maronites living in the north.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of restrictions on Greek Cypriot enclaved residents living in the Karpas penninsula on (a) where they can live, (b) the right of former residents to return to live there, (c) to own a business, (d) to repair or modernise their homes, (e) to undertake paid employment, (f) to hunt or fish and (g) to educate their children; what representations he has made on their behalf to seek the lifting of such restrictions; and to whom he has made those representations. [245169]

Caroline Flint: We do not have any detailed information on any restrictions placed on Greek Cypriot enclaved residents living in the Karpas peninsula. The recent report by the UN Secretary General referred to the tight restrictions, applied by the Turkish Cypriot side, on UN movement in certain parts of the Karpas peninsula:

> "which continues to hamper humanitarian and monitoring operations in the area".

The report also noted that UN Forces in Cyprus:

> "continues to receive with concern reports about the demolition of Greek Cypriot houses in the Karpas, including residences of those who had indicated their desire to return to the north".

We are aware of the difficulties faced by Greek Cypriot communities living in the northern part of Cyprus who are enclaved as a result of the political situation on the island and the presence of Turkish troops in the northern part. This is an issue which will only be fully resolved by a comprehensive settlement to reunite the island. We will continue to engage with the leaders of the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities to support progress towards a settlement.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his estimate is of the number of (a) Turkish nationals and (b) Turkish settlers living in northern Cyprus, apart from members of the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [245170]

Caroline Flint: There are no UK Government estimates of the number of (a) Turkish nationals and (b) Turkish settlers living in northern Cyprus.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications of the possible opening of the proposed crossing point at Kato Pyrgos/Kokkina/Erenköy/Limnitis/Yesilirmak; what representations he has made on the subject; what assessment he has made of the obstacles to the crossing point being opened; and if he will make a statement. [245172]

Caroline Flint: Confidence-building measures play an important role in building trust between communities and adding momentum to discussions. It is important that these are discussed and implemented by the two communities for the benefit of all Cypriots but that they should not distract from the process. I regularly express the UK's support for such measures during my contacts with Cypriot Ministers and officials, and urge both sides to continue to look at already agreed, and new, measures and to publicise their benefits.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his estimate is of the level of civil society activity in northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245173]

Caroline Flint: Although I have no detailed information it is clear that the level of civil society activity in northern Cyprus is increasing. It is important that civil society underpins the settlement process.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of levels of cross-green line contacts by civil society in Cyprus (a) overall, (b) by political parties, (c) by trade unions and (d) by young people; what steps he is taking to encourage such contacts; and if he will make a statement. [245180]

Caroline Flint: We do not have detailed figures. However, such contacts are increasing and have an important role in underpinning any settlement.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of the imprisonment of two young Turkish Cypriots for allegedly insulting the Turkish Cypriot leader on a Facebook group they had set up; and if he will make a statement. [245181]

Caroline Flint: The high commission are aware of reports in the press about the arrest of a 19-year-old and a 21-year-old appearing before the courts in relation to material published on Facebook. The reports claimed they were to be held in custody for seven days.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Turkish Cypriot authorities on the efforts of north Cyprus police to locate 160 members of the Facebook group on which the Turkish Cypriot leader was allegedly insulted. [245182]

Caroline Flint: I have no plans to make representations on this matter.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Turkish nationals have become citizens of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [245191]

Caroline Flint: According to figures from the 'interior ministry' in northern Cyprus, 160 people have been naturalised since 2005 and done so by the decision of the 'Council of Ministers' in northern Cyprus. This excludes marriages.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the six chapters identified as the subjects for consideration by the leaders of the communities in Cyprus are; what process is being adopted for the consideration of each chapter; what progress is being made on consideration of each chapter; and if he will make a statement. [245193]

Caroline Flint: There are a number of issues which the negotiations could cover. Six working groups have discussed the following areas: governance and power sharing, EU matters, security and guarantees, territory, property and economic matters. The technical committees have discussed crime and criminal matters, economic and commercial matters, cultural heritage, crisis management, humanitarian and health matters and the environment. We are pleased that the two leaders continue to meet on a regular basis to discuss a comprehensive settlement. Thus far they have discussed matters of governance and power sharing.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the effectiveness of the Turkish Cypriot property commission in providing an adequate remedy; how many cases have been lodged by Greek Cypriots with the commission; how many such cases have been determined; how many of those determined cases have resulted in awards of (a) compensation and (b) restitution; whether the awards have been implemented in each of these cases; and if he will make a statement. [245195]

Caroline Flint: According to media reports in July this year, the commission from its establishment in 2006 until June 2008, has paid €8,066,307 relating to 1,783,043 metres square of Greek Cypriot property.

In 2006, €2,817,088 compensation was paid, while €3,991,614 was paid in 2007.

729 applications by Greek Cypriots have been made to date of which 41 have been finalised; 35 by compensation, 3 by restitution and 2 by exchange of property. According to information released, one of the applications will have their property returned in the event of a solution.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the consequences of the European Court of Justice Advocate General's opinion in the Orams case; and if he will make a statement. [245196]

Caroline Flint: We are considering the Advocate-General's opinion (AGO) carefully, but the AGO is not binding on the Court. As this case is ongoing it would not be appropriate for us to comment further on any implications.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the implementation by Turkey of the Arestes judgment in the European Court of Human Rights; and if he will make a statement. [245197]

Caroline Flint: On 7 December 2006, the European Court of Human Rights gave a judgment stating that Turkey must pay a just satisfaction award (damages plus legal costs and expenses) to the applicant. This has not yet been done and we urge Turkey to pay this award promptly.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the Republic of Cyprus's guardianship law in the light of the Sofi case; and if he will make a statement. [245198]

Caroline Flint: The Guardian of Turkish Properties, an authority of the government of the Republic of Cyprus, was set up as the caretaker of properties in the south belonging to Turkish Cypriots who were refugees due to the division of the island. According to the law the Guardian takes over the property until the Cyprus problem is resolved when it will be handed back to its legal owners in the state it had been received.

The European Court of Human Rights is due to examine the Sofi case. In the circumstances it would not be appropriate for the Government to comment.

Ultimately property issues are only going to be solved as part of a comprehensive settlement in Cyprus.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the consequences of the European Court of Human Rights case of Varnavas v. Turkey; and if he will make a statement. [245199]

Caroline Flint: A Chamber of the European Court of Human Rights gave judgment in Varnavas and others v. Turkey (application nos. 16064/90, 16065/90, 16066/90, 16068/90, 16069/90, 16070/90, 16071/90, 16072/90 and 16073/90) on 10 January 2008. That judgment is not final, since the case was referred to the Grand Chamber which held a hearing on 19 November 2008. The Grand Chamber has not yet delivered its judgment. In the circumstances it would not be appropriate for the Government to comment.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his estimate is of the number of people who travelled across the green line from (a) north to south and (b) south to north in Cyprus, in (i) 2008 and (ii) each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [245217]

Caroline Flint: According to the annual reports on the Green Line Regulation:

1 May 2007 to 30 April 2008: 633,163 Greek Cypriots and 1,162,739 Turkish Cypriots crossed the Green Line.

1 May 2006 to 30 April 2007: 788,823 Greek Cypriots and 1,348,215 Turkish Cypriots crossed the Green Line

1 May 2005 to 30 April 2006: 1,195,594 Greek Cypriots and 2,179,815 Turkish Cypriots crossed the Green Line.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of trends in the number of mosques being built in northern Cyprus; what assessment he has made of the consequences of those trends for the prospects of settlement in Cyprus; what assessment he has made of the sources of funding for such building; and if he will make a statement. [245218]

Caroline Flint: We do not have any information on the number of mosques being built in north Cyprus or the sources of funding for such building.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the consequences of the decisions of UK Cyprus veterans to erect a memorial in Kyrenia (a) generally and (b) on relations between the communities on the island; and if he will make a statement. [245219]

Caroline Flint: The cemetery is not on UK territory, nor is it owned by the UK Government. It would be inappropriate, therefore, for us to comment on proposals to place memorials there.

Cyprus: EC Aid

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in disbursing the 259 million euro earmarked by the European Union for expenditure in northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245049]

Caroline Flint: The European Union is providing €259 million of aid to the Turkish Cypriot community, to help bring them closer to Europe and so facilitate a settlement. As of October 2008, the projects contracted reaches a cumulative total of €60.8 million since inception, the total amount tendered reaches €119.5 million and the total paid €25.5 million. While implementation of the regulation has been slower than originally anticipated, the benefits are already being felt. The European Commission is responsible for administering the assistance. A programme team of Commission officials and contract agents was set up in 2006 to implement the programme as part of the Task Force Turkish Cypriot Community within DG Enlargement.

Ongoing projects include a successful programme of scholarships for Turkish Cypriot students and teachers to study and teach in EU universities, grant schemes for civil society and targeted support to farmers to upgrade their equipment. Full details are contained in the Commission's most recent annual report on the implementation of the financial aid package. We agree with their conclusion that the current settlement negotiations

> "will create a positive framework for facilitating the implementation and the success of this aid package" and look forward to rapid implementation of outstanding projects.

Cyprus: Economic Situation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of (a) the extent to which the Turkish Cypriot economy is subsidised by Turkey and (b) the extent to which the Turkish Republic of northern Cyprus depends on such subsidies; what his estimate is of the number and percentage of public sector workers in the north of Cyprus excluding serving military personnel; what assessment he has made of the sustainability of the economy of northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245174]

Caroline Flint: Estimates for the Turkish contribution to the 2009 Budget are 365,000,000 YTL (new Turkish lira) or 14 per cent. The estimated number of workers in the public sector is between 15,000-20,000. Approximately 39 per cent. of the budget is assigned to personnel costs. The economy is currently in recession.

Cyprus: Education

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in (a) Northern Cyprus and (b) the Republic of Cyprus on education reform, with particular reference in each case to (i) the history curriculum and (ii) the availability of language teaching in the other community's language; and if he will make a statement. [245222]

Caroline Flint: In 2003, Turkish Cypriots decided to revise their history textbooks. This September, the Republic of Cyprus Education Minister Andreas Demetriou announced the setting up of a committee of experts to review Greek Cypriot history books.

Despite commitments from both sides, the availability of language teaching in the other community's language is limited. There is currently one Greek Primary School and one Greek Secondary School in the Karpas area. There are currently a number of Turkish Cypriot students that attend a Greek Cypriot school in Limassol, where Turkish language classes are also provided.

Cyprus: Human Trafficking

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the extent of people trafficking (a) for sexual purposes and (b) other purposes in northern Cyprus in the latest period for which he has information; and if he will make a statement. [245194]

Caroline Flint: We hold no detailed information on this. However the British high commission take the issue seriously and participated in a human trafficking seminar in Cyprus earlier this year.

Cyprus: Land Mines

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the Government contributed to the removal of land mines in Cyprus; how much other countries or organisations have contributed; how much further funding is required to complete the work; if he will consider further contributions to bridge any outstanding funding gap; and if he will make a statement. [245055]

Caroline Flint: The work to remove landmines in the buffer zone has been largely funded by the EU to the sum of €9m. (The UK contributes approximately 15 per cent. to the EU budget).

However there have also been donations of $25,000 from Slovenia and $250,000 from Canada. On 17 December the UN announced a donation of €15,000 from Hungary.

The funds required to complete the clearance of landmines in the buffer zone stand at €5m (less the donation of €15,000 from Hungary).

We have not yet made a final decision as to whether or not to make further donations to bridge the outstanding funding gap.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in Cyprus on the removal of land mines in (a) the buffer zone, (b) areas under the control of the Republic of Cyprus government and (c) the Turkish occupied areas; and if he will make a statement. [245056]

Caroline Flint: To date, the UNDP "Landmine and Unexploded Ordnance Clearance Project" has released 6.5 million square meters of land, clearing 51 minefields and disposing of 9,163 landmines. The project has also played an important role in the opening of crossing points between the two communities, such as Ledra Street.

Cyprus: Peace Negotiations

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the consequences of Turkey assuming the chairmanship of the UN Security Council for the prospects of a settlement in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245224]

Caroline Flint: The UK looks forward to working with Turkey on the UN Security Council, including as council chair, in its role as an important player in the region for peace and security. This includes on the Cyprus settlement process where the international community expects all key players to play a supportive and constructive role.

Cyprus: Press

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which newspapers and periodicals published in northern Cyprus the UK and its High Commission places advertisements; if he will make it his policy not to place such advertisements in newspapers and periodicals owned by Asil Nadir; and if he will make a statement. [R] [245163]

Caroline Flint: The high commission primarily advertises in KIBRIS and Cyprus Today which are the two best selling and most widely read newspapers in the north. These are both owned by Asil Nadir. We also occasionally advertise in HALKIN SESI.

Cyprus: Trade

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the (a) volume and (b) value of trade passing (i) from north to south Cyprus, (ii) from south to north Cyprus, (iii) from north Cyprus, through Republic of Cyprus ports, to other countries, (iv) from Republic of Cyprus to Turkey and (v) from Turkey to the Republic of Cyprus for (A) the current year and (B) each of the last three years,; what assessment he has made of the obstacles to trade in each case; and if he will make a statement. [245159]

Caroline Flint: The EU publishes annual Green Line reports where this information can be found. Further details can be found at:

http://ec.europa.eu/enlargement/pdf/turkish_cypriot_community/glr_report_en.pdf.

Cyprus: Vehicles

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will put in place measures to count the number of (a) persons and (b) vehicles travelling directly to Sovereign Base Area territory from northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [245050]

Caroline Flint: There are currently no plans to put in place measures to count the number of persons and vehicles travelling directly to the Sovereign Base Area territory from northern Cyprus. However, the Sovereign Base Areas (SBAs) provide all information at their disposal on the movement of people to the Republic of Cyprus. There is practical co-operation between SBA and Republic of Cyprus officials on a daily basis, and regular meetings between the SBAs, the Republic of Cyprus and the European Commission where information on movement of persons and goods is exchanged.

Cyprus: Water Supply

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the water shortage in Cyprus and the effectiveness of policy to combat it; and if he will make a statement. [245223]

Caroline Flint: Cyprus is going through its worst water shortage for many years owing to prolonged dry seasons and lower than average rainfall year-on-year. The government of the Republic of Cyprus has looked to counteract this in several ways, including for the short term, imposing restrictions on water usage to conserve the reservoir levels and importing water from Greece. In the longer term, the Government of the Republic of Cyprus is looking at the potential of building more desalination plants to convert sea water into drinking water.

It is too early to comment on the potential effectiveness of these policies. The level of drought experienced is unprecedented and can only be remedied in the short term with rainfall.

Democratic Republic of Congo: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the additional troops for MONUC authorised by UN Security Council Resolution 1843 on 20 November to be deployed. [243155]

Gillian Merron: We aim to secure reinforcements for the United Nations mission in the Democratic Republic of Congo (MONUC) as quickly as possible, and will continue with our efforts to bring this about, including by lobbying potential troop contributing countries. An adequately-resourced UN peacekeeping mission is essential to ensure long-term humanitarian assistance and military support for political processes in eastern Democratic Republic of Congo.

Democratic Republic of Congo: Security Guards

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries have taken the lead in security sector reform in Democratic Republic of Congo; and what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of the reforms initiated. [243156]

Gillian Merron: The UK with other donors, including the UN, the EU, EU member states, the US, China and South Africa, has contributed to security sector reform in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). Progress in this area is essential to improving stability and human rights in DRC. Issues affecting security sector reform are complex, and will take time to resolve comprehensively. Much of the work is at an early stage, and it is not yet possible to judge its success. The UK is providing support in a number of areas including through the provision of an extensive security sector accountability programme and assistance to the justice sector.

The DRC authorities have demonstrated commitment to reform in a number of areas. We will continue to press for greater co-ordination of effort particularly to address deficiencies in army administration, to allow the army to function more effectively.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what use his Department is currently making of the property at 1 Carlton Gardens; whether negotiations over the lease with the Crown Estate Commissioners have now concluded; and whether the lease will be extended. [245923]

Gillian Merron: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office uses 1 Carlton Gardens for a range of events hosted by ministers and senior officials, as well as other departmental meetings. It is not being used for residential purposes. Negotiations with the Crown Estate are continuing.

Departmental Data Protection

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many civil servants in his Department have been (a) investigated, (b) suspended and (c) dismissed for (i) losing and (ii) deliberately disclosing (A) data stored on departmental equipment and (B) confidential information in each year since 1997. [242926]

Gillian Merron: Our records show that since 1997 three members of staff have been investigated, suspended and dismissed for deliberately disclosing confidential information. Our records show that no staff have been suspended or dismissed for losing any data stored on departmental equipment. One member of Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff has been investigated and disciplined for having done so.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244346]

Gillian Merron: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office do not have any record of payments made to Remploy in this period. Information about the status of suppliers can be obtained only by examining each supplier record, and it would not be possible to do this without incurring disproportionate cost.

European Union: Civil Servants

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which members of staff of the devolved administrations' EU offices have been in the UK delegation to (a) Council of Ministers meetings and (b) meetings with Commissioners; what the dates of those meetings were; and which UK Government Ministers were present at each of the Ministerial meetings. [242444]

Caroline Flint: The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Gambia

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Gambian authorities on the case of David and Fiona Fulton; and if he will make a statement. [244524]

Gillian Merron: Consular staff in the Gambia have been providing consular assistance to Mr. and Mrs. Fulton and their daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Fulton have been visited several times. They have legal representation and consular staff are in regular contact with their legal representative.

We are making further inquiries in relation to their case, in order to establish whether representations may be appropriate.

India: Pakistan

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of relations between India and Pakistan following events in Mumbai. [243681]

Gillian Merron: This is a sensitive time for the region, following the Mumbai attacks. It will be important for Pakistan and India to co-operate fully to bring those responsible to justice and ensure that this terrible act does not prevent the dialogue between these two countries moving forward. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister visited New Delhi and Islamabad on 14 December and discussed the issues with Prime Minister Singh and President Zardari. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has also spoken to Foreign Minister Qureshi and External Affairs Minister Mukherjee.

India: Terrorism

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance he is (a) providing and (b) offering to the authorities in Mumbai in respect of their efforts to identify those responsible for the recent terrorist attack. [244330]

Bill Rammell: A UK police team was deployed to Mumbai to support the UK Government's response to the incident.

We are committed to extending our already close working relationship with the Indian Government to counter the terrorist threat posed to both our countries and have offered all necessary help, including in the aftermath of the Mumbai attacks.

International Relations

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what level of voter turnout is required for elections overseas to be deemed as legitimate by his Department. [243221]

Gillian Merron: The UK participates in Electoral Observation Missions run by the EU, the OSCE and other international organisations. In assessing the validity of an election, these missions take into account a range of factors, including the degree of impartiality shown by the election management body; the degree of freedom of political parties; the fairness of access for political parties and others to the media and the conduct of the polling and counting of votes. There is no international standard on levels of voter turnout, but turnout can be an indicator of some of the factors listed above. More information about EU electoral observation missions can be found at:

http://europa.eu/eur-lex/en/com/cnc/2000/com2000_0191_en01.pdf.

Japan: British Overseas Citizenship

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British (a) citizens and (b) overseas citizens are registered as living in Japan. [245259]

Bill Rammell: According to figures supplied by the Japanese Ministry of Justice, as of 17 September 2008 there were 17,328 British registered as living in Japan. This figure includes British overseas citizens as the Japanese authorities do not hold separate figures for different types of British citizenship.

Japan: Overseas Visits

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Ministers have visited Japan in the last 12 months on official business. [245290]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is as follows:

Lord Malloch Brown, FCO (January)

Alistair Darling MP, HMT, for G7 Finance Ministers Meeting (February)

Malcolm Wicks MP, BERR (March)

Phil Woolas MP, DEFRA for the G8 Gleneagles Dialogue Meeting (March)

Gareth Thomas MP, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, DFID (April)

Digby Jones, UKTI (April)

Hilary Benn MP, DEFRA for the G8 Environment Ministers Meeting (May)

Stephen Timms MP, DWP, for G8 Labour Ministers (May)

John Hutton MP, BERR for the G8 Energy Ministers Meeting (June)

David Miliband MP, FCO for the G8 Foreign Ministers (June)

Ian Pearson MP as Science Minister for the G8 Science Ministers meeting (June)

Alistair Darling MP, HMT, for G8 Finance Ministers (June)

Gordon Brown for the G8 Summit (July)

Lord Adonis (November)

Japan: Terrorism

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his Japanese counterpart on action against terrorism. [245261]

Bill Rammell: The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed international efforts against terrorism in Afghanistan during a meeting with his Japanese counterpart, Foreign Minister Nakasone, on 26 September 2008 in New York. In this context, we welcome the recent Japanese extension of their contribution to Operation Enduring Freedom in the Indian ocean.

The UK continues to work with Japan (and other partners) within the G8 to counter international terrorism by exchanging ideas and developing best practices in areas such as law enforcement, transport security and capacity building.

Military Aid

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what human rights assessment the Government makes before granting military aid to a foreign government. [244525]

Gillian Merron: Every case is considered individually and kept under constant review. All decisions to provide a country with assistance are taken to encourage adherence to international humanitarian law, or to help address issues of concern. The UK abides by its commitments under international law, including those under international human rights law and expects all countries to comply with their international legal obligations. When providing military equipment, the Government judge all military aid against the consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria. Criterion 2 refers specifically to:

"the respect of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the country of final destination."

The UK would not undertake the export of military equipment if there was a clear risk that it would be used for human rights abuses.

Morocco: Borders

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, in light of the EU-Morocco Association Agreement, the European Union has asked Morocco to define its borders. [246317]

Bill Rammell: The European Union has not asked Morocco to define its borders in light of the EU-Morocco Association Agreement.

Morocco: EU External Relations

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the compliance of Morocco with UN Security Council resolutions calling for a referendum on self-determination was raised with Morocco in the recent meeting of the EU-Morocco sub-committee on human rights, democracy and governance. [244551]

Bill Rammell: Negotiations under UNHCR 1813 were not discussed at the 8 October EU-Morocco Human Rights Subcommittee meeting. Western Sahara was discussed at the EU Association Council meeting on 13 October.

The UK supports the negotiation process initiated in Manhasset in 2007 to achieve a political outcome to the Western Sahara question and has called on the parties to maintain their commitment to the negotiation process. The UK looks forward to the appointment by the UN Secretary General of a new Personal Envoy to take forward the next round of negotiations.

Morocco: Human Rights

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will discuss with his Moroccan counterpart the award of the 25th Annual Robert F Kennedy Human Rights Award to Aminatou Haidar. [244365]

Bill Rammell: I congratulate Aminatou Haidar on her award. FCO Officials met with her in 2007.

The UK is concerned about the humanitarian impact of the ongoing conflict in Western Sahara and continues to discuss a range of issues relating to Western Sahara with Morocco.

The British ambassador to Morocco regularly holds discussions with Moroccan officials on Western Sahara. The most recent high level discussions took place at the Euro Mediterranean conference in Marseille on 3 November, where the Foreign Secretary discussed Western Sahara and human rights, with the Moroccan Foreign Minister, Taieb Fassi Fihri.

Pakistan: Prisoners

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens were imprisoned in Pakistan in 2006; and how many such citizens received consular assistance. [245443]

Bill Rammell: The number of British nationals who were imprisoned in Pakistan in 2006 and whose detention was reported to the British high commission in Islamabad or the British deputy high commission in Karachi was 34. We have provided appropriate consular assistance to all of these individuals.

With regard to individuals of dual British/Pakistani nationality, we may only be aware that a dual national has been detained if the detaining authorities inform us of the detention, or allow the person to contact our consular staff. When we do seek access to a detained dual national in the country of their other nationality, that access, and any help we can provide, will depend on the agreement of the other state.

Rashid Rauf

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Mr. Rashid Rauf was contacted by consular officials in Pakistan during 2006. [245444]

Bill Rammell: Mr. Rashid Rauf was not contacted by consular officials in Pakistan during 2006. Rashid Rauf is a dual Pakistani/British citizen who was in custody in the country of his other nationality. We do not normally provide consular assistance in these circumstances.

Russia: BBC External Services

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of estimates by the Russian Service of the BBC World Service of the number of Russian internet users able to listen to broadcasts via a broadband internet connection to its website. [242829]

Caroline Flint: Independent research indicates that by the end of 2008 Russia will have overtaken the UK to become the second largest internet market in Europe, with 40.3 million internet users, and that there will be 7.4 million households (14 per cent.) with a broadband connection. These numbers are rising rapidly, and it is expected that in 2012 there will be 59 million internet users in Russia, and 21 million households with broadband access.

All internet users with a broadband connection should be able to listen to BBC Russian Service broadcasts via its website, as should those with dial up/narrowband connections. All audience measurement research used by BBC World Service is carried out by independent agencies.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many hours per week on average there were of (a) news-related and (b) other programming broadcast on the Russian Service of the BBC World Service in (i) the last month, (ii) 1998 and (iii) 1988. [242830]

Caroline Flint: In November 2008, the BBC Russian Service broadcast about 45 hours of live news and current affairs programming on its radio service, per week on average, as well as about 34 hours per week of features and other pre-recorded programming, of which about three hours were original production and the remaining hours repeats. Some of this programming would have incorporated themes from the news and current affairs output.

Comparable figures for 1988 and 1998 could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, since 2004, the BBC Russian Service has focused increasingly on strengthening its news and current affairs programming, particularly at key audience listening times, in line with BBC World Service objectives and in order to increase impact with audiences in Russia and the former Soviet Union.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the steps the Russian Service of the BBC World Service has taken to determine the level of support among Russian listeners for an increase in news-related programming on BBC Russia. [242831]

Caroline Flint: All audience and market research used by BBC World Service is carried out independently. Such research shows that audiences turn to BBC World Service primarily for news.

The most recent audience survey carried out in Russia for the BBC found that of all BBC output, news attracts the largest audiences, and that the weekly BBC audiences are especially heavy news consumers. Independently-produced internet audience figures show that the number of users of the BBC Russian Service's website increased by over a million in August 2008, at the height of the conflict between Russia and Georgia, to 2.4 million.

Thailand: Politics and Government

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of UK citizens who were caught up in the recent blockade of Bangkok's two main airports; and if he will make a statement. [240327]

Bill Rammell: At this time of year approximately 1,000 British nationals are estimated to fly in to Thailand each day. During the blockade approximately 1,250 stranded British nationals registered with us using our online registration service, LOCATE. By 4 December the information available from the major airlines flying to/from Thailand suggested there were a maximum of 2,000 British nationals in Thailand who remained unable to leave as a result of the disruption. However, many were able to get seats on flights on 5 December, Suvarnabhumi International Airport's first day back at full operation, and over the subsequent weekend.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the political situation in Thailand. [243682]

Bill Rammell: The political situation in Thailand remains uncertain. The Thai Constitutional Court ruled on 2 December to dissolve three government coalition parties, including the People's Power Party, and banned executive members of the parties, including Prime Minister Somchai, from politics for five years. The leader of the Democrat Party, Abhisit Vejjavija, was elected Prime Minister on 15 December and is in the process of forming a new government. However, we cannot rule out the possibility of further demonstrations and violent unrest. We continue to urge all parties to resolve their differences peacefully, respecting the rule of law and Thailand's democratic institutions.

Tibet

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has persuaded the Chinese government to take in respect of Tibet since his announcement on the change of position on the status of Tibet. [243953]

Bill Rammell: I issued a public statement on 24 November following the conclusion of the Tibetan exiles' meeting in Dharamsala, in which I again urged the Chinese government to engage in substantive discussion with the Dalai Lama's representatives, on the proposals put forward by the Tibetan side.

In addition, both I and Simon McDonald, the Prime Minister's Foreign Policy adviser met with Zhu Weiqun the Assistant Minister from the United Front Work Department on 14 November. We made clear the Government's wish for the Chinese government to address the human rights situation in Tibet, through a meaningful system of autonomy.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received of the outcomes of the eighth round of talks between the representatives of the Chinese government and the Tibetan government-in-exile; and if he will make a statement. [243954]

Bill Rammell: The first session of the special general meeting took place in Dharamsala 17-22 November 2008. In total 560 participants from 19 different countries attended. The meeting agreed a number of recommendations, a summary of these is available at:

http://www.tibet.net/en/index.php?id=546&articletype=flash&rmenuid=morenews

I issued a statement on the conclusion of the talks on 24 November. I welcomed the renewed commitment from the Tibetan exile movement to pursue a sustainable solution to the underlying issues in Tibet through dialogue with China and non-violent means. I also said that I believed that some of the proposals put forward by the Tibetan side prior to the last round of dialogue should provide a basis for substantive discussions, focussed initially on identifying points of agreement.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what date has been set for the next round of the UK-China human rights dialogue. [243956]

Bill Rammell: The next round of the UK-China human rights dialogue has been set for 12-13 January 2009.

Turkey: EU Accession

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospects of Turkey meeting the obligations under the Ankara Protocol before the assessment in 2009 of Turkey's EU accession prospects; and if he will make a statement. [245046]

Caroline Flint: The UK notes that Turkey has not implemented its obligations under the Ankara agreement protocol. Turkey needs to meet all its obligations under the accession process, including on the Ankara protocol, and we regularly urge them to do so as soon as possible. The UK continues to be a strong supporter of Turkey's EU accession process.

UN Cyprus Committee on Missing Persons

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the annual budgetary requirement of the UN Cyprus Committee on Missing Persons is; how many sets of human remains of (a) Greek Cypriots and (b) Turkish Cypriots the Committee has (i) recovered, (ii) identified and (iii) returned to relatives; how many sites the Committee has (A) investigated and (B) excavated; how many sites remain to be investigated; how much the Government has provided for the work of the Committee in each of the last four years; which other countries and organisations have provided for in each of the last four years, and how much in each case; if he will consider making further funds available to meet the Committee's budgetary requirements; and if he will make a statement. [245054]

Caroline Flint: The annual budget requirement for 2009 is $3m. So far 466 bodies have been exhumed of which 352 are Greek Cypriot, 104 Turkish Cypriot and 10 sets of remains whose details have yet to be determined.

Of the exhumed bodies, 110 have been identified and returned of which 78 are Greek Cypriot and 32 Turkish Cypriot.

The Committee have excavated more than 200 grave sites, out of which less than half yielded remains. There are no figures for the number of sites which are still to be investigated - mapping out the grave sites is an ongoing task carried out by both the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot members of the Committee of Missing Persons (CMP).

The level of UK donations over the last four years has been:

We have not yet made a final decision as to whether or not to make further donations to meet the Committee's budgetary requirements.

Western Sahara

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with reference to the answer of 25 November 2008, Official Report, column 1214W, on Western Sahara: politics and government, whether he has discussed with the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights the Government's position on human rights monitoring in the Western Sahara. [244262]

Bill Rammell: I have had no recent discussions on human rights monitoring in Western Sahara with the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights.

The UK strongly supports UNHCR's activities in Western Sahara as elsewhere. The UK continues to believe that the resolution of humanitarian questions should not await the conclusion of a political settlement. The UK, along with EU partners, has called on Morocco and the Polisario to deal with outstanding human rights issues and implement measures that will increase people's confidence.

I understand the High Commissioner will visit the region early next year and I wish her a successful visit.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations on Morocco's continued occupation of Western Sahara to the Moroccan ambassador to the UK. [244263]

Gillian Merron: The UK supports the negotiation process initiated in Manhasset in 2007 to achieve a political outcome to the Western Sahara question. We hope a further round of talks will take place soon. UNSCR 1813 adopted on 30 April 2008 called on the parties to continue to show political will and to work in an atmosphere propitious for dialogue in order to enter into a more intensive and substantive phase of negotiation. The UK has reiterated the words of the UNSG, calling on the parties to work with a spirit of realism and compromise towards a mutually acceptable political solution that will provide for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara.

My officials regularly discuss the issue of Western Sahara with their Moroccan counterparts including the Moroccan ambassador to the UK. I discussed Western Sahara with the Moroccan Foreign Minister at the Euromed Conference in Marseille on 3 November.

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has discussed with his Moroccan counterpart the movement of Moroccan settlers to occupied Western Sahara and the application of the Geneva Convention to such settlements; and if he will make a statement. [244367]

Bill Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did discuss Western Sahara, and specifically human rights, with the Moroccan Foreign Minister Fassi Fihri in November, at the Union for the Mediterranean Ministerial meeting in Marseille. Neither my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary nor I have discussed the issue of migration between Morocco and Western Sahara with our Moroccan counterparts.

The UK continues to believe that progress towards a negotiated solution to the dispute in Western Sahara providing for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, is best achieved under the auspices of the United Nations. To this end and in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution (1813) of 30 April, the UK fully supports the efforts of the UN in this respect and looks forward to the appointment of a new UN Secretary General Personal Envoy to the Western Sahara, and the resumption of the Manhasset negotiations.

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the killing of two Saharawi students on 1 December 2008; and what action the ambassador in Rabat has taken. [244369]

Bill Rammell: Two Saharawi students were crushed by a bus on 1 December 2008 in the coach station of Agadir. The coach station was busier than normal with a high number of passengers seeking to travel to their home cities to celebrate the festival of Eid Al Adha with their families. Local media reports claim that a coach company declined to accept students in possession of vouchers for free transport and some of those students attempted to prevent the coach from leaving the station. Unfortunately two students were fatally injured during the ensuing commotion.

The Attorney-General in Morocco directed the police to conduct a probe into the incident and the coach driver has been placed in police custody. Following the incident there were demonstrations at university campuses at which some students were arrested but subsequently released.

The British embassy in Morocco has been monitoring the situation in region.

Western Sahara: Fisheries

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to press for the exclusion of Western Saharan waters from any new agreement to replace the current EU-Morocco Fisheries Agreement on its expiry. [244921]

Bill Rammell: As with previous fisheries agreements, the EU-Morocco Fisheries Agreement applies to

> "the Moroccan fisheries zone under the sovereignty or jurisdiction of the Kingdom of Morocco".

The fisheries agreement does not in any way prejudice the issue of the status of Western Sahara. The UK continues to believe that progress towards a negotiated solution to the dispute in Western Sahara providing for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, is best achieved under the auspices of the United Nations. To this end and in accordance with UN Security Council Resolution (1813) of 30 April, the UK fully supports the efforts of the UN Secretary-General and his staff, and the negotiation process currently underway.

Western Sahara: Politics and Government

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with reference to the answer of 6 October 2008, Official Report, column 240, on Western Sahara: politics and government, what progress has been made by the UN in its negotiations with the Moroccan government on compliance with UN Security Council Resolution 1813. [243806]

Bill Rammell: The UN Security Council adopted UN Security Council Resolution 1813 on 30 April. It called on the parties to show greater political will and to enter into more intensive and substantive negotiations towards a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara. Since then the contract appointing Peter Van Walsum as the United Nations Personal Envoy to Western Sahara has expired. The UK hopes that the UN Secretary General will appoint a new personal envoy shortly and that a further round of negotiations under the Manhasset process will take place soon. The UK fully supports the efforts of the UN Secretary-General and his staff, and the negotiation process currently underway and has called on the parties to maintain their commitment to the process.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last (a) assessed the political situation in the Western Sahara and (b) considered the different options in the UN Security Council. [245757]

Bill Rammell: UK officials at our embassies in Rabat and in Algiers continue to assess the situation in Western Sahara and in the Tindouf camps closely. Officials based at the British embassy in Rabat visited Western Sahara in October 2008, calling on government officials, local NGOs and the UN peacekeeping mission, MINURSO. I anticipate further such visits in the future, as well as visits by UK officials to the camps in Tindouf.

We and other members of the UN Security Council considered the situation and the options available to the Council prior to the adoption of UN Security Council resolution 1813, on 30 April 2008. In line with UNSC resolution 1813, we continue to support the efforts of the UN Secretary-General and his staff to assist the parties in achieving a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution, which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara.

Zimbabwe: Cholera

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the cholera outbreak in Zimbabwe since October 2008; what discussions he has had with governments in the region on the matter; what assistance his Department has given to people affected by the outbreak; and if he will make a statement. [245081]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

The United Nations (UN) in Zimbabwe issues daily and weekly updates on the cholera outbreak, which we are following closely. We are also monitoring the regional impact of the outbreak and the Department for International Development (DFID) offices in the region are in regular touch with Ministries of Health in the affected countries.

DFID is funding a £10 million package to help fight the cholera outbreak and support life-saving health services. DFID's support includes vital medicines, clean water supplies, purification tablets and rehydration fluids to treat those affected.

Zimbabwe: Politics and Government

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the political situation in Zimbabwe. [243680]

Gillian Merron: The appalling humanitarian crisis in Zimbabwe is a symptom of the wider political failure. Robert Mugabe's regime is unwilling to respond to the needs of Zimbabwe's people, who voted overwhelmingly for change last March. We continue to press for action to resolve the crisis via the EU and UN Security Council and with countries in the region and across Africa.

TRANSPORT

A303

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review the Highways Agency's plans to close the A303 in Somerset and Wiltshire for 14 weeks from February 2009; and if he will make a statement. [246132]

Paul Clark: Following the Highways Agency's Public Information Days and Stakeholder Consultation, the agency has decided that a 14-week closure of the A303 is not the best way to effect the essential maintenance works required on the A303 Willoughby Hedge to Mere. The agency is currently undertaking a full review of the scheme, which will include the construction programme, the extent and type of works, and the need to reduce the impact and inconvenience of this work to road users and the general public.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons the proposed works to the A303 are not to be carried out in a manner that leaves one direction open to traffic; and if he will review the proposed working arrangements. [246152]

Paul Clark: Maintenance work on the single carriageway section of the A303 between Willoughby Hedge and Mere is essential because of the increasing number of road defects requiring immediate attention, together with the poor condition of existing drainage systems.

Single-lane working was considered by the Highways Agency but was not pursued because of concerns about road worker safety, duration of the works and likely traffic delays.

Following the agency's public information days and stakeholder consultation, the agency has decided that a 14 week closure of the A303 is not the best way to effect the essential maintenance works required on the A303 Willoughby Hedge to Mere. The agency is currently undertaking a full review of the scheme, which will include the construction programme, the extent and type of works and the need to reduce the impact and inconvenience of this work to road users and the general public.

Advertising: Complaints

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by his Department were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) in each year from 1997 to 2008; and how many of these were upheld by the ASA in each year. [246655]

Mr. Hoon: Since the Department for Transport formed in 2002, 264 complaints had been made about 142 Department and executive agency advertisements or marketing initiatives. No complaints to date have been upheld by the ASA.

To break down the number of complaints by fiscal year would incur disproportionate costs.

Airwave Service: British Transport Police

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Airwave handsets issued to the British Transport Police (BTP) have been lost in each year since their introduction; and how many handsets issued to the BTP have been disabled by the service provider through (a) loss, (b) breakage and (c) other reasons in each such year. [246185]

Paul Clark: The information is not held in the form requested. However, the British Transport Police inform me that the force introduced Airwave progressively over a five-year period starting in late 2002. Since 2002, 34 sets have been lost and another 94 have been withdrawn from service having been damaged beyond economic repair.

Airwave Service: Highways Agency

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Airwave handsets issued to the Highways Agency have been lost in each year since their introduction; and how many handsets issued to the Agency have been disabled by the service provider through (a) loss, (b) breakage and (c) other reasons in each such year. [246187]

Paul Clark: The number of radio handsets lost is as follows:

	Pieces
2008	6
2007	4
2006	3
2005	[1]2

Note:
The Traffic Officer Service was not fully operational this year.

All of the aforementioned radio handsets were disabled by the service provider. The standard procedure in the event of loss is to contact the service provider (Airwave Solutions Ltd) and either 'stun' or 'kill' the radio, according to the circumstances of the loss.

No radio handsets have been disabled by the service provider because they were "broken". Such a radio would have the hardware replaced by the manufacturer, and re-registered with its new identity by the service provider. The 'International Short Subscriber Identity' (ISSI) remains unchanged.

No radio handsets have been disabled by the service provider "for other reasons".

Aviation: Exhaust Emissions

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport with reference to the answer of 19 November 2008, Official Report, columns 480-81W, on aviation: exhaust emissions, (1) whether his forecast was based on an assumption that the growth of aviation after 2030 will be limited by capacity constraints; [246322]

(2) what capacity constraints are likely to limit the growth of aviation in the UK after 2030; [246324]

(3) what the figures would be if it were assumed that between 2030 and 2050 aviation were to continue to grow at the same rate as forecast up to 2030. [246323]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department for Transport's "UK Air Passenger Demand and CO_2 Forecasts 2007" report explains that forecast growth in air passenger demand will be limited by UK airport capacity constraints (page 11), and by the maturing of the air travel market (page 19).

The same report, on page 36, shows the terminal and capacity assumptions used in the forecasts. By 2050, it is forecast that all modelled airports in the South East and some others elsewhere in the UK will become capacity constrained.

The 2003 Air Transport White Paper supported the building of two new runways in the South East. On this basis, assuming that the pre-2030 growth rate continued to 2050 would not present a feasible view of the world post-2030, and therefore the Department for Transport does not have a CO_2 emissions forecast based on these assumptions.

Bus Lanes: Cambridgeshire

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) original and (b) latest estimated cost is of (i) the Cambridgeshire guided busway and (ii) the Luton-Dunstable busway. [246330]

Paul Clark: The original 2003 cost estimate submitted for Department for Transport (DFT) approval for the Cambridge Guided Busway was £73.8 million. When final approval for the scheme was provided in 2006, the revised cost was £116.2 million, which remains the current overall scheme cost estimated by Cambridgeshire county council.

The Luton-Dunstable Busway had an original cost of £84.39 million in 2003. That cost remains unchanged and is subject to scrutiny before final DFT approval currently expected in 2009.

Bus Services: Concessions

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he expects the provisions of the Local Transport Act 2008 to make to the abilities of local authorities to subsidise local bus services for their community when brought into force; and what timetable he has set for the commencement of the Act's provisions. [245973]

Paul Clark: The Local Transport Act 2008 ("the 2008 Act") contains provisions to enhance the powers of local transport authorities in England and Wales to secure improvements to local bus services in their areas. Options for these authorities include through voluntary partnership agreements, quality partnership schemes and quality contracts (bus franchising) schemes.

Voluntary partnership agreements and quality partnership schemes offer the potential for local authorities to secure improvements to the standard of local bus services, alongside local authority investment in new or improved facilities for bus services and passengers. Quality contracts may provide for the payment of subsidy for the operation of local services under those contracts, and the 2008 Act includes provisions to make quality contracts schemes a more realistic option for local authorities.

Local transport authorities already have the power to enter into subsidised service agreements with bus operators, by virtue of section 9A of the Transport Act 1968 (for Passenger Transport Authorities) and section 63 of the Transport Act 1985 (for other local transport authorities). The 2008 Act amends these powers to allow subsidy agreements to be entered into, not only where services would not be provided at all in the absence of subsidy (as at present), but also where they would not be provided to a particular standard. Provisions in the 2008 Act also increase the maximum permitted duration for subsidised service agreements from five to eight years.

Except where specific provision is made in section 134 of the 2008 Act, the provisions of that Act are to be brought into force by commencement order made by the Secretary of State (or in some cases by the Welsh Ministers, in so far as provisions apply in Wales). The first commencement order is expected to be made early in 2009.

Bus Services: Schools

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what his Department's policy is on the placement of bus stops for school transport alongside dual carriageways; and if he will make a statement; [244829]

(2) what guidance his Department provides to local authorities on the road safety aspects of the placement of bus stops for school transport; and if he will make a statement. [244826]

Paul Clark: The Department for Transport provides general guidance on bus stop provision, including road safety considerations, in chapter 8 of "Local Transport Note 1/97: Keeping Buses Moving". This is available on the Department for Transport website at www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/roads/tpm/ltnotes/.

The guidance does not provide specific advice on the placement of bus stops for school transport.

Decisions on placement of bus stops are a matter for the local highway authority in consultation with bus operators and other interested parties such as the police.

Cycling

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has issued guidance to those local authorities involved in the cycling demonstration towns initiative on measuring changes in the use of cycling as a means of transport. [245882]

Paul Clark: The Department for Transport awarded a contract in February 2006 to Sustrans Research and Monitoring Unit together with the Institute for Transport Studies at the University of Leeds and the University of Bolton to undertake monitoring of cycle levels in the Cycling Demonstration Towns (CDTs). A part of that contract is to work closely with each local authority in establishing an effective monitoring regime.

The Department also contracted a specialist cycling advice team to give free advice to local authorities, including the CDTs, on a range of infrastructure issues. The advice team has provided guidance on the monitoring and evaluation of cycling activities, which is available on Cycling England, our advisory body's website at:

http://www.cyclingengland.co.uk/site/wp-content/uploads/2008/10/c05_monitoring.pdf

The CDT programme was expanded in June 2008 to 18 cities and towns. The department awarded a further contract in November 2008 to Sustrans to monitor cycle levels in the expanded programme and expect to shortly award a contract to evaluate the impact that increased cycle levels has on a range of issues such as health, congestion and road safety in these places.

Dartford-Thurrock Crossing: Road Traffic

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has assessed the effects upon traffic congestion of the increase in tolls at the Dartford River Crossing; and if he will make a statement. [245883]

Paul Clark: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 212W.

Departmental Air Travel

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many journeys (a) he and his predecessors and (b) his officials made by aeroplane in the course of their duties in each of the last five years. [246668]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244717]

Mr. Hoon: The information is as follows.

(a) The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House. When responding to all correspondence Departments should abide by the guidance as set out in "Handling correspondence from MPs, Lords, MEPs and Members of Devolved Assemblies" which was published by the Cabinet office in July 2005.

(b) In respect of e-mails, the Department for Transport will not be able to provide the information within the disproportionate cost limit (£750) as to do so would require gathering information from every official in the Department.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of contractors and suppliers to (a) his Department and (b) its agencies has reported compliance with the Government's security standards following publication of the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government, and the accompanying document, Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action, on 25 June 2008. [245329]

Mr. Hoon: The information is not held in the form of a percentage as requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department's Senior Information Risk Owner (SIRO) wrote to the Department's major IT suppliers who handle personal data on the subject of data handling on 23 June 2008. All 12 have responded, assuring the SIRO of compliance with the measures in the Data Handling Procedures in Government report.

Those suppliers and all others involved in collecting, handling or storing the Department's information assets are required to provide assurance to the DfT SIRO and board on a quarterly basis, through the Department's Information Asset Owners, that they have implemented the appropriate measures.

For new contracts with contractors and suppliers, the Department is implementing the appropriate OGC guidance including new contract clauses.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245370]

Mr. Hoon: The Department for Transport appointed a Senior Information Risk Owner (SIRO) in 2004 as part of the Government's approach to dealing with risks and threats to information systems, lead by the Central Sponsor for Information Assurance (CSIA). The appointment was a board member at director general level, grade SCSPB3.

The responsibilities of the SIRO were revised to take account of the mandatory minimum actions from the Data Handling Procedures in Government report, published in June 2008.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the IT systems in (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245392]

Mr. Hoon: The percentage of IT systems in the central Department that are currently fully accredited to HMG standards is 67 per cent. The remainder are currently in the process of being brought into accreditation.

The percentage of IT systems in the Department's seven executive agencies and its shared service centre that are currently fully accredited to HMG standards is 71 per cent. A further 26 per cent. are in the process of being brought into accreditation. The remaining IT systems are under review for accreditation or to be decommissioned.

The accreditation of the Department's IT systems is a continuous process, as new systems are brought into service and existing systems are required to be periodically re-accredited, or in response to changes in services, technology or the security threats.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [244602]

Mr. Hoon: The Government's Delivery Plan for 'Sustainable Procurement and Operations on the Government Estate', published in August 2008, provides a full account of the initiatives Departments are taking to reduce their energy waste. The Government have committed to updating the delivery plan on a six monthly basis, and the first of these updates was published on 18 December 2008.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246020]

Mr. Hoon: The Department for Transport holds information on the gender, ethnic origin, age and disability of the majority of its staff. Information is also recorded on sexual orientation and religion and belief although a significant proportion of staff have chosen to withhold this information.

This information, and information on the Department's performance against its targets, are published in the Department's annual report. The report is available online at:

www.dft.gov.uk/about/publications/apr/ar2008.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244355]

Mr. Hoon: The Department for Transport was formed in May 2002. The Department has spent £45,787,332 on furniture with British based firms, £31,250 with Remploy and £257,204 with overseas firms since 2002. The breakdown is as follows:

	Sector	Spend (£)
2002-03	British Firms	4,064,176
	Remploy	0
	Overseas Firms	0
2003-04	British Firms	11,511,281
	Remploy	27,222
	Overseas Firms	0
2004-05	British Firms	13,539,857
	Remploy	4,028
	Overseas Firms	0
2005-06	British Firms	5,935,787
	Remploy	0
	Overseas Firms	257,204
2006-07	British Firms	5,976,967
	Remploy	0
	Overseas Firms	0
2007-08	British Firms	4,759,264
	Overseas Firms	0

The Department for Transport utilises the Office of Government Commerce Buying Solutions office furniture contract for the vast majority of its furniture purchases. All companies on that contract are British based or have British operating arms.

Departmental Manpower

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many civil servants in his Department work on his Department's policy on (a) walking, (b) cycling, (c) motoring, (d) aviation and (e) rail. [243052]

Mr. Hoon: As the Department takes an integrated, cross-modal approach to transport policy, civil servants will often work on several modes. Accordingly a percentage breakdown of the amount of time civil servants work on each of the different modes could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Recruitment

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of DfT(C)'s staff recorded as being (a) from an ethnic minority and (b) white (i) applied for and (ii) obtained posts within DfT(C) on promotion in each year since DfT(C)'s formation. [244455]

Mr. Hoon: The Department for Transport (Central) recorded the following percentage of (ii) obtained posts on promotion for staff from an (a) ethnic minority and (b) white origin:

Financial year	Ethnicity	Percentage of staff promoted within ethnic group
2002-03	Ethnic minority	4.25
	White	4.60
2003-04	Ethnic minority	6.61
	White	8.47
2004-05	Ethnic minority	5.34
	White	6.56
2005-06	Ethnic minority	10.75
	White	7.10
2006-07	Ethnic minority	6.30
	White	8.04
2007-08	Ethnic minority	10.51
	White	7.07

Details of (i) applications for such positions can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff of each grade recorded as being (a) from an ethnic minority, (b) white and (c) of unknown or undeclared ethnicity transferred into DfT(C) from other parts of his Department or other Government Departments in the last two years. [244456]

Mr. Hoon: 154 people have transferred in to the Department for Transport (Central) from other parts of his Department or other Government Departments during the last two financial years (2006-07 and 2007-08) as shown in the following table:

Grade	Ethnicity	Number directly recruited from other Government Departments
PB1	Ethnic minority	0

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff of each grade recorded as being (a) from an ethnic minority, (b) white and (c) of unknown or undeclared ethnicity were directly recruited into DfT(C) from outside the Civil Service in the last two years. [244457]

Mr. Hoon: The Department for Transport (Central) has recruited 175 staff from outside the civil service during the last two financial years (2006-07 and 2007-08), as shown in the following table:

Grade	Ethnicity	Number directly recruited from outside the civil service
PB1	Ethnic Minority	0

Departmental Reviews

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) reviews, (b) consultation and (c) taskforces his Department is (i) responsible for and (ii) planning to undertake or establish; on what date each such initiative that is in progress (A) started and (B) is expected to be completed; and what the purpose is of each. [246309]

Mr. Hoon: Details of the Department for Transport's current consultations, reviews and taskforces have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies for public access to services. [246983]

Mr. Hoon: The Department for Transport has one 0845 number, the Executive Agencies have three.

Driving: Bexley

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many residents of (a) Bexleyheath and Crayford constituency and (b) the London Borough of Bexley had driving licences suspended in each of the last three years. [245459]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency does not readily hold this information in the requested format.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new (a) provisional and (b) full driving licences were issued to residents of (i) Bexleyheath and Crayford constituency and (ii) the London Borough of Bexley in each of the last three years. [245460]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency does not readily hold this information in the requested format.

First Great Western: Manpower

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals there are to change staffing levels at stations operated by First Great Western on the line from London to Swindon and Bristol Parkway; and if he will make a statement. [246395]

Paul Clark: The Secretary of State has not been informed of any proposals to change staffing levels at stations operated by First Great Western between London and Bristol Parkway.

Gatwick Airport

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the 1979 agreement between BAA and West Sussex County Council would continue to bind any new owner of Gatwick Airport and prevent them from building a new runway before 2019. [246411]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Government take the view that the 1979 agreement binds British Aviation Authority (BAA) and would bind any new owner of the airport. If any new owner of the airport wished to overturn the agreement, the first step for it would be to approach West Sussex county council and seek their agreement. In the absence of agreement, it would be possible for the new owner to ask the Lands Tribunal to overturn the agreement.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has taken part in discussions with BAA on proposals to build a second runway at Gatwick Airport once the Gatwick Agreement runs out in 2019. [246412]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No such discussions have taken place.

Heathrow Airport

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people attended the air quality technical meeting on 28 September 2007 regarding the project for the Sustainable Development of Heathrow; which organisations those individuals were representing; and if he will make a statement. [246774]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The air quality technical group, which met for the last time on 28 September 2007, comprised representatives from consultants CERC, AEA Technology and Atkins along with representatives from British Aviation Authority (BAA) and officials from the Department for Transport.

Helicopters: Greater London

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many private helicopter movements there were in the air space above Greater London in each year since 1997. [246825]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department for Transport does not hold such information on private helicopter movements. However in response to the London Assembly Environment Committee's report—'London in a Spin; a Review of Helicopter Noise' in October 2006, the Department agreed with the Civil Aviation Authority that NATS would provide data on helicopter movements over London. This information is now published at regular intervals on the CAA website at the following link:

www.caa.co.uk.

The tables published by CAA show data for helicopter movements within the London (Heathrow) and London City control zones (CTRs) from January 2007 to date.

As regards information prior to January 2007, the London Assembly report included a year-by-year total for the period 1997 to 2006 for commercial and non-commercial helicopter movements at Metro London Heliport at Battersea.

Humber Bridge: Tolls

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the findings of the Humber Bridge Tolls Impact Assessment; and if he will make a statement. [244776]

Paul Clark: The study will be included in the evidence presented to the Inspector as part of the public inquiry on the application by the Humber Bridge Board to revise tolls at the Humber bridge. In these circumstances it would be inappropriate for me to comment on the study and its findings.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the public inquiry into the proposed increase in the cost of the Humber Bridge Tolls to be held; and if he will make a statement. [244777]

Paul Clark: The Humber Bridge Board will shortly issue a public notice giving the date and location for the public inquiry.

Mental Illness

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the recommendations relevant to his Department's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capacity and Well-Being; and if he will make a statement. [244025]

Paul Clark: We are pleased to see the report of this project. While it makes no specific recommendations relating to the Department for Transport's policy responsibilities, we will work with the lead Departments and others as necessary to help give effect to the recommendations. The findings will inform and assist the Department in developing policies to meet the travel needs of particular groups such as older or disabled people.

Motor Vehicles: Insurance

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the accuracy of information held on the Motor Insurance Database. [245914]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The provision of data to the Motor Insurance Database is the responsibility of the insurance industry. The Department for Transport data submission requirements for the insurance industry are for 95 per cent. of new records to be on the database within seven days. The industry estimates that nearly 99 per cent. of all appropriate records are now placed on the database within seven days.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246339]

Mr. Hoon: The Department for Transport Centre and its agencies do not maintain a record of the number of former prisoners that are employed.

Recruitment to the Department for Transport follows the requirements of the Civil Service Management Code. There are character checks and security vetting, and a criminal record does not automatically disqualify an individual from appointment or vetting clearance.

Parking: Fines

Mr. Goodwill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his most recent estimate is of the number of outstanding parking adjudication cases in London; and what the equivalent figures were (a) 12 and (b) 24 months previously. [245835]

Paul Clark: The Government do not hold this information. The Parking and Traffic Adjudication Service (PATAS) is responsible for making adjudication decisions in London. London councils provides the administrative and hearing centre service for PATAS.

Railway Stations: South West

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to (a) reopen closed rail stations and (b) open new rail stations in the South West; and if he will make a statement. [245001]

Paul Clark: The Department for Transport has no plans to reopen closed stations or open new stations in the South West. It is for local transport authorities to promote the opening of new stations if they believe this is the best way of meeting local transport needs.

Railways: Construction

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration his Department has given to the introduction of Maglev technology in the British rail network. [245000]

Paul Clark: The July 2007 Rail White Paper, "Delivering a Sustainable Railway", set out the Government's strategy to improve the quality of inter-urban rail services, and to make the best use of existing networks by lengthening existing trains, increasing service frequencies and tackling key congestion pinch points.

The White Paper proposals are measured against the key tests of capacity, quality of service, value for money and environment. Increasing capacity is key, particularly in those services experiencing crowding.

The White Paper was clear that Maglev would offer less flexibility than a conventional railway to adapt to future changing patterns of demand. For example, it would be unable to accommodate other rail services. While Maglev currently operates on a relatively short point-to-point basis, scaling the technology up to a national network is unproven.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to promote high speed rail links to the North East. [245012]

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent discussions his Department has had with rail operators in (a) the UK and (b) other European countries to discuss the potential for high speed rail in the UK; [244998]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to promote and implement a trans-European high speed rail network; [244999]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the potential economic effects of a north-south high speed rail line in the UK. [245136]

Paul Clark: The Government's immediate priority is increasing capacity on the existing rail network and £10 billion will be invested from 2009 to 2014 on measures to bring this about.

In March 2008, the Secretary of State for Transport invited Network Rail to examine options for supporting further growth in the longer term, which might include new lines. The National Networks Strategy Group, chaired by Lord Adonis and outlined in the written ministerial statement laid by the Secretary of State on 29 October 2008, is available at:

www.dft.gov.uk/press/speechesstatements/statements/wmsnationalnetworks will build on Network Rail's work as part of the group's focus on longer term solutions for strategic transport corridors.

Railways: Electrification

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration has been given by his Department to the electrification of the Barking to Gospel Oak London overground railway line; and if he will make a statement. [246937]

Paul Clark: A rail industry working group led by Network Rail is examining the business case for electrifying a range of routes such as Gospel Oak to Barking. The group is expected to publish its conclusions by the end of March 2009.

Railways: Freight

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to improve rail freight facilities in Nottinghamshire. [243957]

Paul Clark: We are investing in developing a Strategic Freight Network to meet the industry's growth forecasts of 30 per cent. over the next decade, as set out in the 2007 Rail White Paper. Network Rail is leading an industry working group to identify specific enhancement projects and will publish details in their Strategic Business Plan in March 2009.

Railways: Greater London

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reason the planned work to upgrade the Barking to Gospel Oak railway line has been delayed until 2013-14. [246420]

Paul Clark: This project has not been delayed to 2013-14.

The Government have provided a grant of £18.5 million from the Productivity Transport Innovation Fund and asked Network Rail to deliver capability and capacity improvements on the Barking to Gospel Oak line.

Railways: Lancashire

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will invite the British Rail Residual Property Board to sell for a notional sum to Lancashire County Council the rail track bed between Colne and Foulridge; and if he will make a statement. [244163]

Paul Clark: It is for Lancashire county council and BRB (Residuary) Ltd. to reach an agreement on the commercial terms for the sale of the track bed between Colne and Foulridge to the council. Terms were quoted by BRB (Residuary) Ltd.'s agent, Lambert Smith Hampton, on 31 July 2008 and the county have six months from that date to reach an agreement. I urge the council to enter into negotiations with BRB (Residuary) Ltd.'s agents for the acquisition of the land.

Railways: Marketing

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on publicity for rail services in each year since 1997. [245476]

Mr. Hoon: Figures are only available since the Department for Transport (DFT) was formed in 2002-03.

Up until 2006, responsibility for publicity on rail services rested with the Strategic Rail Authority who spent the following on advertising:

2002-03	95
2003-04	505
2004-05	25

Aside from statutory advertising, we have not incurred advertising expenditure promoting rail services since the amalgamation of the SRA into DFT.

Railways: Standards

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that Network Rail meets its targets for renewal efficiency. [245437]

Paul Clark: It falls to the independent Office of Rail Regulation (ORR) to determine and monitor delivery of the targets to improve Network Rail's renewals efficiency, which the ORR sets for each five-year control period.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what targets he has set for passenger satisfaction on each rail franchise; and how train operating companies performed against these targets in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [245439]

Paul Clark: All train operating companies are required through their franchise agreements to participate in the National Passenger Survey which measures passenger satisfaction. Passenger Focus publish the results on their website:

http://www.passengerfocus.org.uk/research/nps/content.asp.

National Passenger Survey targets are set for the following franchises: Arriva Trains Wales; Chiltern Railways; Southern and TransPennine Express. These train operating companies are required to produce and implement action plans related to their National Passenger Survey results as required. The National Passenger Survey targets are found in the franchise agreements for each of these train operating companies; available on the DfT website:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/rail/passenger/publicregister/current.

National Passenger Survey targets are not set for other train operating companies. Other train operating companies (except for c2c) measure the inputs to passenger satisfaction in a service quality management system. They may still be required to produce and implement action plans related to their National Passenger Survey results as required.

c2c have targets, and are required to produce action plans as required, based on their own Customer Satisfaction Survey (not National Passenger Survey). The targets are in the c2c franchise agreement which is available on the DfT website:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/rail/passenger/publicregister/current

Performance against the targets is shown in the following tables.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent estimate he has made of trends in the possession disruption indices for (a) passenger and (b) rail freight services over the next five years. [245702]

Paul Clark: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made no estimate of trends in the possession disruption indices for passenger and rail freight services over the next five years.

However, the independent Office of Rail Regulation (ORR) has set performance trajectories for Network Rail in its document, published on 30 October 2008, "Periodic review 2008: Determination of Network Rail's outputs and funding for 2009-14". The effect is to require a progressive reduction in disruption to passengers so that by the end of Control Period 4 (2014) there is 37 per cent. less disruption to passengers than in 2007-08, and, at the same time, no increase in the level of disruption experienced by freight operators. Further details can be found on page 53 onwards of the document which is available on the ORR's website at:

http://www.rail-reg.gov.uk/upload/pdf/383.pdf.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the loss to the economy caused by delays to rail services in the first six months of the 2008-09 financial year. [246403]

Paul Clark: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not estimated the economic cost of rail service delays in the first six months of the 2008-09 financial year.

However, at the end of the first six periods of 2008-09 the industry's annual reliability and punctuality performance measured by the public performance measure (PPM) had reached 90.4 per cent. in England and Wales, a 1.8 per cent. improvement on the previous year. The Government's high level output specification requires the industry to achieve public performance measure of 92.6 per cent. by 2014.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will bring forward proposals to introduce the Swiss model of re-railing. [246404]

Paul Clark: The Department for Transport does not manage the detailed approach to track maintenance including re-railing.

This is an operational matter for Network Rail as the owner and operator of the national rail network. The hon. Member should contact Network Rail's chief executive at the following address for a response to his questions:

Iain Coucher

Roads: Accidents

Mrs. Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport with reference to the answer of 17 November 2008, Official Report, column 38W, on roads: accidents, how many and what proportion of (a) men and (b) women between 15 and 24 years old were killed in a road traffic accident in each local authority area in England in each of the last 10 years. [246214]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Tables showing the numbers and proportion of (a) men and (b) women between 15 and 24-years-old that were killed in a reported personal injury road traffic accident in each local authority area in England in each of the last 10 years have been deposited in the Libraries of the House.

Rolling Stock

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many modern operable train units are currently in storage. [245435]

Paul Clark: This is a question which should be directed at the train leasing companies who are the owners of rolling stock vehicles. However, it is our belief that the number of modern operable units off lease is very small.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new carriages each train operating company has requested following his Department's announcement in January 2008 of its intention to increase rolling stock by 1,300 units. [245438]

Paul Clark: The Department for Transport published a Rolling Stock Plan in January 2008, and issued an update in July 2008, setting out indicative numbers of vehicles to be allocated to each train operating company. These numbers are subject to change in negotiation with each company, but changes to numbers will not be announced unless and until commercial agreement is reached with each company. Discussions are now in progress with the train operating companies.

Shipping: Sea Rescue

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many tugs are on standby in UK ports to assist vessels in distress around the coast. [246096]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) has four dedicated emergency towing vessels on stand-by all year round to respond to shipping incidents. These are based in the Northern Isles, the Minches, the south-west approaches and the Dover Straits.

In addition to these dedicated resources the MCA can use the Coastguard Agreement on Salvage and Towage (CAST) to call upon the services of 92 tugs in ports and harbours throughout the UK.

Sight Impaired

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines his Department follows in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness. [245722]

Mr. Hoon: The general publishing policy guidance for the Department for Transport staff producing printed material for people with visual disorders highlight the need to avoid light typefaces, use of 14 pt type and maximising contrast of colours as much as possible.

Specific guidance related to red/green colour blindness include using where possible; dark colours on light background; increased contrast between colours and type;

use of stripes, hatching etc in place of colours;
avoidance of red/green adjacent to each other.

South West Trains: Railway Stations

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will reject the proposals of South West Trains to reduce opening hours at over 100 of its stations. [246113]

Paul Clark: A formal application to review ticket office hours has been received from South West Trains and will be subject to consideration by the Secretary of State under normal industry processes.

Speed Limits: Cameras

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which elected representatives (a) scrutinise the actions of safety camera partnerships and (b) determine their (i) policies and (ii) expenditure. [245974]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Local safety partnerships, including safety camera partnerships, generally include representatives of local authorities and the police, both of whom are accountable to locally elected representatives. They may employ whatever arrangements for scrutiny and management that they see fit.

Tolls: Greater Manchester

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the cost to the public purse of exploring the option of a Manchester congestion charge. [245876]

Paul Clark: From 2005-06 to 2007-08 10 areas shared £18 million funding to consider options for the Transport Innovation Fund and to develop proposals, of which the Greater Manchester authorities were awarded £4.7 million. In addition, in awarding Programme Entry to the Greater Manchester proposals on 9 June 2008 we made available an additional £20 million for 2008-09 to support further development costs.

Tonnage Tax

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider strengthening the training requirement associated with the tonnage tax. [244740]

Jim Fitzpatrick: We have currently no plans to increase the number of officers companies are required to train under the tonnage tax commitment.

We are however looking into the practicalities of the joint proposals for increased support for training and employment received from our social partners.

Transport: North East

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the Government plans to take to alleviate congestion on (a) roads and (b) railways in the North East. [244890]

Paul Clark: We are investing significantly across the North East to improve transport and alleviate congestion. Total expenditure on transport in the North East has increased by 30 per cent. in the five years to 2007-08—from £481 million in 2002-03 to £623 million in 2007-08.

On the roads, local authorities take decisions on local measures and investment needed to alleviate congestion on their roads. In addition to this, North East schemes in the current regional funding allocation being progressed by the Highways Agency include the A69 Haydon bridge bypass, which is in construction and improvements to four A19 junctions through Tyneside. The Highways Agency is also looking at options for addressing congestion problems on the A1 Newcastle Gateshead and Western bypass, but any scheme is likely to be complex and take time to deliver, and must be developed in parallel with the Tyne and Wear authorities' proposals for addressing local traffic problems. In addition we expect, subject to satisfactory business cases, to invest over £70 million over the next five years in major bus priority infrastructure schemes in Tyne and Wear, Tees Valley and Durham. These are aimed at attracting more people to public transport by improving the journey time and reliability of buses.

On rail, the Rail White Paper committed to introducing additional rail capacity to meet peak demand in the Northern cities, including Newcastle. The DfT Rolling Stock Plan published in January 2008 showed that around 42 additional carriages would be available for TransPennine Express and around 182 additional carriages for the Northern franchise. Both these franchises serve the North East. We will also be investing over £290 million on the renewal of the Tyne and Wear Metro system between 2010 and 2019.

West Coast Railway Line

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with Virgin Trains on passenger capacity on their West Coast Main Line services; what (a) legislative provisions and (b) guidance issued by his Department govern the number of persons who may be accommodated in one unit of passenger rolling stock, with particular reference to health and safety requirements; what sanctions apply to train operating companies which operate services on which such limits are exceeded; and if he will make a statement. [245090]

Paul Clark: The Secretary of State met with Sir Richard Branson (Virgin Trains) and Mr. Brian Souter (Stagecoach) on 19 November to discuss the upgrade of the West Coast Main Line. This upgrade of the infrastructure has allowed the new timetable, which started on 14 December 2008, to increase capacity on many of the West Coast Main Line services, most notably a 50 per cent. increase of services between London and Birmingham/Manchester and a 70 per cent. increase for these services on the weekends.

There are no legislative provisions regarding crowding on trains. The Office of the Rail Regulator states that there is no legal limit on the number of passengers that can travel in any given train coach. In this, trains differ from other modes of transport—most notably buses and aeroplanes. The heavy engineering involved means that trains are designed to operate effectively and safely even when they are fully loaded to maximum capacity. The number of passengers on board does not affect a train's operating performance or structural integrity.

Some train operators have a capacity benchmark regime. This does not apply to Virgin Trains.

West Coast Railway Line: Repairs and Maintenance

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department has taken to ensure that there is minimal disruption over the Christmas period from improvements works to the West Coast Main Line. [246165]

Paul Clark: The Department for Transport has had regular meetings with both Network Rail and the train operators as they have made their preparations for the introduction of the new West Coast Main Line timetables. This preparation included a special commissioning timetable which covers the Christmas period.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Arts Council of England: Finance

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much grant in aid Arts Council England received in each year since 1980. [246417]

Barbara Follett: Arts Council England has received the following grant in aid funding since their creation in 1994.

Betting Shops

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans his Department has to give local authorities powers in relation to the siting of betting shops. [245144]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 18 December 2008]: Following public concern about the clustering of betting shops in certain areas and the potential risks this might pose for vulnerable people, the Government outlined plans for DCMS to look into the scope and extent of this issue in "Fair Rules for Strong Communities" which was published on 2 December 2008. DCMS will work with DCLG to investigate the issues and ensure that the licensing and planning systems are thoroughly examined.

Under the Gambling Act 2005, licensing authorities have the power to reject premises licence applications or to attach conditions to licences to reflect local circumstances. They can also review licences to ensure that premises are adhering to their licence conditions and other provisions of the Act, including the three licensing objectives. In addition, betting shops require relevant planning permission from their local authority.

Big Lottery Fund: Recruitment

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the Big Lottery Fund has spent on recruitment agency services in each year since its inception; and which companies provided these services. [242396]

Barbara Follett: The Big Lottery Fund has advised that the following table sets out their expenditure on the services of recruitment agencies. It does not include the costs of advertising on behalf of the Big Lottery Fund or the costs of temporary staff provided by agencies.

Financial year	Description	£

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of contractors and suppliers to (a) his Department and (b) its agencies has reported compliance with the Government's security standards following publication of the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government, and the accompanying document, Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action, on 25 June 2008. [245320]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My Department has adopted the OGC guidelines as set out in the Procurement Policy Note, Information note 13/08—26 November 2008. All suppliers have been informed of the changes. We have not separately asked for confirmation of compliance.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many contracts (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract are held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245341]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My Department has no such contracts.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245358]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My Department is currently replacing its senior information risk owner following the departure of the previous incumbent who was Director-General level and who took over the role following the publication of the Data Handling report.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of the IT systems in (a) his Department and (b) its agencies is fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245383]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 5 January 2009]: All my Department's IT systems are fully and independently accredited.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246024]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department holds information on its Workforce database for all seven equality strands: gender, gender id, ethnicity, age, disability, sexual orientation and religion and belief. As part of the Cross Government 10-point plan for gender, ethnicity and disability, all departments were set targets at Senior Civil Service level. As a Department we also track data across all other grades to check progress. At SCS level we met all of our targets for 2008. For the tracking grades, we made good progress on gender and ethnicity but fell short of our targets for disability. As part of the new Cross Government Strategy, Promoting Equality, Valuing Diversity we have again set challenging targets for the next three years which we will review regularly.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244342]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department spent the following amounts on furniture in each year since 2005. The Department does not have information prior to 2005.

	2005	2006	2007	2008
British Firms	0	122,200	115,683	7,882

Departmental ICT

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport with reference to the answer of 27 October 2008, Official Report, columns 726-27W, on departmental ICT, what the (a) expected completion date and (b) estimated cost of each of the projects was at their outset. [242179]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport IT Programme that provides electronic document and record management, electronic content management and secure collaboration was originally expected to be completed by 31 March 2009 and was estimated to cost £1.5 million. The most recent estimate and completion date of each project in tranche 1 of the Royal Parks Agency ICT Change Programme is as follows:

The 'Projected final cost' shown for the intranet/collaboration and mobile working projects is the projected final cost of project spend within tranche 1 of the ICT programme. The full cost will be re-estimated as part of the tranche 2 works in 2009-10.

Departmental Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by his Department were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) in each year from 1997 to 2008; and how many of these were upheld by the ASA in each year. [246647]

Andy Burnham: No complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) in this period (1997 to 2008).

Departmental Official Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what records his Department maintains of its expenditure on (a) official hospitality and (b) alcohol for official hospitality. [240475]

Barbara Follett: The Department records information on its expenditure on hospitality, including the associated staff costs, in such a way as it states the costs of official functions, internal working lunches and other hospitality separately.

The Department's accounting system does not record information on alcohol separately, and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

All expenditure on official hospitality is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on gifts and hospitality, based on the principles of "Managing Public Money" and the Treasury handbook on "Regularity and Propriety".

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies for public access to services. [246988]

Andy Burnham: Neither the Department nor The Royal Parks use 0845 numbers.

Exercise

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what percentage of people aged 16 years and over (a) from black and ethnic minority groups, (b) with a limiting disability, (c) from lower socio-economic groups, (d) who were female and (e) from the total population, (i) did and (ii) did not regularly engage in at least 30 minutes of moderate intensity level sport on at least three days a week in each of the last three years, broken down by region; and what assessment he has made of his Department's progress towards its Public Service Agreement targets in this area. [244956]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The 'Taking Part' survey is a continuous household survey providing national data on participation in culture, leisure and sport by adults aged 16 and over.

Tables 1 to 4 show the number and percentage of adults who engaged in moderate intensity level sport for at least 30 minutes on at least three separate occasions during the past week. The data relate to the four sub-groups of the population referred to in the question, by region, for each of the last three years. Data are also provided for the total population in Table 5. The percentage of adults who did not participate can be deduced from the data given.

Due to small sample sizes, differences between regions or years may not be statistically significant.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what percentage of people aged 16 years and over (a) from black and ethnic minority groups, (b) with a limiting disability, (c) from lower socio-economic groups, (d) who were female and (e) from the total population, (i) did and (ii) did not (A) participate in two arts activities and (B) attend two arts events in each 12 months in each of the last three years, broken down by region; and what assessment he has made of his Department's progress towards its public service agreement targets in this area. [244958]

Barbara Follett [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The 'Taking Part' survey is a continuous household survey providing national data on participation in culture, leisure and sport by adults aged 16 and over.

Tables 1 to 4, as follows, show the number and percentage of adults who attended two or more arts events in the past 12 months. The data relate to the four sub-groups of the population referred to in the question, by region, for each of the last three years. Data are also provided for the total population in Table 5.

Tables 6 to 10 provide similar data for adults who participated in two or more arts activities in the past 12 months. The percentage of adults who did not engage in the arts can be deduced from the data given.

Due to small sample sizes, differences between regions or years may not be statistically significant.

A final assessment of progress against the Department's SR04 PSA3 target was published on 11 December 2008. Full details can be found at:

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what percentage of people aged 16 years and over (a) from black and ethnic minority groups, (b) with a limiting disability, (c) from lower socio-economic groups, (d) who were female and (e) from the total population, (i) did and (ii) did not access at least one museum or gallery in each 12 months in each of the last three years, broken down by region; and what assessment he has made of his Department's progress towards its Public Service Agreement targets in this area. [244959]

Barbara Follett [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The "Taking Part" survey is a continuous household survey providing national data on participation in culture, leisure and sport by adults aged 16 and over.

Tables 1 to 4, as follows, show the number and percentage of adults who visited at least one museum or gallery in the past 12 months. The data relate to the four sub-groups of the population referred to in the question, by region, for each of the last three years. Data are also provided for the total population in Table 5. The percentage of adults who did not attend can be deduced from the data given.

Due to small sample sizes, differences between regions or years may not be statistically significant.

Football: World Cup

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for what reasons the 2018 World Cup bid team has had no contact with Opposition parties. [246868]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Further to my answer of 17 December 2008, Official Report column 766W, England 2018 Ltd. is in the process of recruiting a director of government liaison, whose key responsibilities include one to, "Ensure all relevant Party Leaders ... are regularly briefed on the progress of the Bid."

Horserace Totalisator Board: EC Action

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on what grounds his Department's plans to sell the Tote met objection from the EU; what response he has made to such objections; and if he will make a statement. [244678]

Mr. Sutcliffe: On 1 June 2005 the European Commission initiated a formal investigation under the state aid provisions of the Treaty of Rome into the then proposed terms of the sale of the Tote, which involved a sale at less than the market price. The Government's view was that the investigation was likely to conclude that such a sale would constitute unlawful state aid, and accordingly notified the Commission on 3 May 2006 that it did not intend to proceed with a sale on those terms and was looking at alternative models.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246349]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are no former prisoners employed in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. A criminal record is not an automatic bar disqualifying an individual from appointment.

Olympic Games 2012

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment his Department has made of the follow-up reports from the (a) Athens and (b) Sydney Olympics; and what steps he plans to take to ensure that the 2012 London Olympics has no detrimental effect on sporting participation in the UK. [246952]

Mr. Sutcliffe: DCMS officials have looked closely at what happened in previous Olympic and Paralympic games to support preparation for London 2012, which will be the first Olympic and Paralympic games to feature a planned national legacy.

The Olympics represents a once in a generation opportunity to drive up activity and performance in all levels of sport. This is reflected in the creation of Sport England's new strategy, with the Olympics providing a focal point for the development of a world-leading community sport system. The strategy will deliver one million more people playing sport in contribution to the Legacy Action Plan's commitment to getting two million people more active by 2012.

Sight Impaired

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidelines his Department follows in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness. [245712]

Mr. Sutcliffe: DCMS printed materials and forms are available in alternative formats upon request, to meet specific requirements of people with disabilities.

Standish Hospital

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the outcome was of the application to list Block C of the Standish Hospital site; on what basis the decision was taken; for what reasons the hon. Member for Stroud was not informed of the decision; and if he will make a statement. [244332]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 17 December 2008]: After careful consideration of all the evidence, including taking account of advice from English Heritage, and representations by others, I have decided that Block C (former Women's Ward), Standish Hospital is not of sufficient architectural or historic interest to merit listing. The decision was taken on 29 October 2008. My hon. Friend should have been informed of this decision by letter and I regret that this did not happen.

Swimming

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how his Department plans to monitor the effectiveness of the free swimming programme. [246764]

Andy Burnham: My Department will monitor and evaluate the Free Swimming Programme to determine future funding and delivery arrangements. As part of this, we will require regular data returns from local authorities. Further details on these requests will be sent to local authorities in due course.

Swimming Advisory Group

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) who the members of the Swimming Advisory Group are; what work they have undertaken to date; and if he will make a statement; [245727]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that all children under 14 are educated about water safety. [245728]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: I have been asked to reply.

The Swimming Advisory Group has ceased to exist since early 2002, when it submitted its final report on swimming to the then Department for Education and Skills, which was considered by Ministers in April of that year. Its membership was made up of the Department for Education and Skills (DfES); the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS); the Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted); the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA); the Youth Sport Trust (YST); Sport England; the Amateur Swimming Association (asa); the Institute for Sport and Recreation Management (ISRM); the English Schools Swimming Association (ESSA); the Royal Life-Saving Society (RLSS); the Physical Education Association of the United Kingdom (PEAUK); and the British Association of Advisers and Lecturers in Physical Education (BAALPE).

Swimming activities and water safety are a compulsory part of the physical education curriculum for all primary pupils.

Swimming: Elderly

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which organisations his Department consulted on the initiative to give free access to swimming for over 60s in the 12 months prior to announcing this programme. [245725]

Andy Burnham: My Department designed the Free Swimming Programme in close consultation with a range of stakeholders including the Local Government Association, the Chief Cultural and Leisure Officers' Association, the Amateur Swimming Association and Sport England.

Television and Film

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support the Government plans to provide to ensure that British production of television drama and film will not be disadvantaged in the current economic climate. [245806]

Barbara Follett: The Government continue to support British film through the funding schemes provided by the UK Film Council and the Regional Screen agencies, as well as the Film Tax Relief. For example, the UK Film Council's Premiere Fund is £8 million a year and on average the Fund invests in eight to nine films per annum. Also, the Skills Investment Fund raises close to £1 million per annum and is used, alongside Film Council lottery funding, by Skillset to provide film skills training.

The six-year funding settlement for the BBC announced in January 2007 provides for an annual increase in the TV licence fee which is either above or in line with the Treasury's inflation forecast at that time for each year of the settlement (with the exception of the increase in year six, which will depend on a further review nearer the time). Within the framework of the Charter and Agreement, it is for the BBC to decide the allocation of the funding to drama and film.

Investment in content is a core workstream of the Digital Britain project, with the aim of maintaining and enhancing the funding of high quality, professional UK audiovisual and interactive content.

Television: Licensing

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the campaign to boycott the BBC licence fee on BBC revenues. [245200]

Andy Burnham: No assessment has been made. Under the Communications Act, however, it is a criminal offence for a person who uses or installs a television receiver not to have a television licence.

Theatre: Finance

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much National Lottery funding Arts Council England has distributed for use on theatre projects in each year since its inception. [245909]

Barbara Follett: Arts Council England has advised that since its establishment in 1994 the following National Lottery funding has been distributed for use on theatre projects:

National lottery funding to theatre projects

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much revenue funding there was for theatre in England in each year since 1980. [246418]

Barbara Follett: The information requested has been received from Arts Council England and is set out in the table. Prior to 2002-03, the Regional Arts Boards were independent bodies and maintained records according to their own systems and requirements. Consequently, compatible figures for the regularly funded organisations portfolio are not available for earlier years.

Tourism

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which holiday destinations in England were most frequently visited by domestic tourists in each of the last 10 years, calculated according to the number of visitors per 10,000 of local population. [244862]

Barbara Follett: The way in which VisitBritain captured tourist statistics changed in 2005 and as such comparable information on the most frequently visited holiday destinations is only available for 2006 and 2007.

Whole Sports Plans

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport within the Sports Governing Body Whole Sports Plans, by what standard means the baselines of participants have been determined. [246763]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The baselines for the NGB Whole Sport Plans are provided by Active People Survey 2. This surveyed 191,000 adults (over the age of 16) across England between mid October 2007 and mid October 2008. The Active People Survey is carried out continuously through the year and uses computer assisted telephone interviews to survey a random sample of adults across every local authority in England. A 'participant' is defined as someone who takes part in the sport on at least one occasion a week for at least 30 minutes, and to at least a moderate intensity.

BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

Arms Trade: Eritrea

Mr. Moore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform if he will list the approved export licences to Eritrea in 2007; how many applications for licences to export to Eritrea were refused during (a) 2007 and (b) 2008; in respect of what types of goods and services such applications were refused; and what the grounds were for refusal. [243936]

Ian Pearson: The Government publish detailed information on export licences issued, refused and revoked, by destination, including a summary of the items covered by these licences, and where appropriate the criterion against which the licence has been refused, in their Annual and Quarterly Reports on Strategic Export Controls.

The Government's Annual Reports, published since 1997, and Quarterly Reports, published since 2004, are available from the House of Commons Library and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) website at http://www.fco.gov.uk/en/about-the-fco/publications/publications/annual-reports/export-controls1.

The most recent annual report published covers 2007 and the latest quarterly report covers the first quarter of 2008.

Arms Trade: Statistics

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform on what basis defence export statistics will be compiled in the future. [243257]

Ian Pearson: UK Trade and Investment Defence and Security Organisation will continue to produce estimates of UK defence export orders based on information provided in confidence by UK defence and security companies. Aggregated information will appear in UK Defence Statistics which is published annually by the Ministry of Defence. The information will relate to the value of new orders recorded by defence and security companies in a particular calendar year.

Billing

Margaret Moran: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what steps he is taking to encourage the Government's prime contractors to pay sub-contractors within 10 days. [245248]

Mr. McFadden: BERR are in discussion with our leading suppliers to encourage them to pass on our 10-day payment terms and will be working with them to reduce payment times along the entire supply chain. We are also encouraging other Government Departments to take similar action. In addition, we have asked all of our delivery partners to ensure payments to suppliers are made within 10 days of receiving a correctly rendered invoice and to also encourage their suppliers to pass on these payment terms.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what assessment he has made of the performance of public bodies in making payments to suppliers within 10 days of receiving an invoice; and if he will make a statement. [244582]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 17 December 2008]: BERR is currently collecting data from other Government Departments and from its own delivery partners on performance in making payments to suppliers within 10 days of receiving a correctly rendered invoice. Although complete figures are not yet available, Government Departments and public bodies have embraced payment within 10 days and are working to implement this across their own organisation and to encourage suppliers to pass on these terms.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many organisations his Department has contacted to ask that suppliers be paid within 10 days of an invoice being received in the last three months. [244595]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 17 December 2008]: BERR has asked all of its delivery partners to ensure payments to suppliers are made within 10 days of receiving a correctly rendered invoice. We have also published prompt payment guidance for public sector organisations on BERR's website. In addition, we are encouraging our leading suppliers to pass on our 10 day payment terms and will be working with them to reduce payment times along the entire supply chain.

Business for New Europe

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what recent representations he has received from Business for New Europe in connection with the proposals for a third runway at Heathrow. [243107]

Mr. McFadden: My noble Friend, the Secretary of State, has received no representations from Business for New Europe in connection with proposals on a third runway at Heathrow.

Business: Complaints

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what estimate his Department has made of the average cost to business of compliance with investigations into super complaints. [242595]

Mr. Thomas: No estimate has been made by the Department since the regime came into force. However, the overarching regulatory impact assessment prepared for the Enterprise Act 2002 estimated that all consumer measures introduced by the Act would impose no significant costs to business.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what consumer benefit studies have been conducted into the use of super complaints. [242034]

Mr. Thomas [holding answer 9 December 2008]: None have been conducted by this Department.

Business: Ethics

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what steps the Government has taken to ensure that private companies are socially responsible in their actions. [245865]

Ian Pearson: The Government are a strong supporter of responsible business behaviour and promote a business-led, voluntary approach to promote corporate responsibility as mainstream business practice. There is now a statutory statement of directors' duties in the Companies Act 2006, which includes the duty to promote the success of the company for the benefit of its members. The UK also promotes adherence to the OECD Guidelines for Multi-national Enterprises, which set recommendations for good corporate behaviour.

Business: Loans

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what the eligibility criteria are for applications for loans from the new transition fund. [241377]

Mr. McFadden: The loans will be available to SMEs within the European Union definition; eligible companies will be able to apply for new loans for a period of up to six months from the inception of the fund. The repayment period will be three years or as agreed with the company within this time frame. In order to qualify applicants must be able to demonstrate that the absence of such funding is exposing the business to the risk of significant short-term contraction or endangering its existence. Loans from the fund will normally only be made where the existing financiers (including bankers) are, at the time of application to the fund, willing to maintain some borrowing facilities on agreed terms. Applicants, through their business plans, should be able to demonstrate a positive impact on jobs, either through job creation or job retention. The fund will be run on a fully commercial basis and will provide individual loans of up to £250,000. Loans from the fund cannot be used to pay down existing borrowings and business assets could be taken as security at the fund manager's discretion although this would not generally extend to personal guarantees or charges over individuals' private residences. If security is not taken, this fact will be reflected in assessing the "commercial" rate of interest to be applied.

The fund will cover most SMEs but there are exceptions and companies falling within the definition of a "business in financial difficulty" under the 'Community Guidelines on State Aid for Rescuing and Restructuring firms in difficulty' (2004/C 244/02 issued on 1 October 2004); retail businesses and those in commercial property investment will be ineligible.

Business: Postal Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what estimate he has made of the cost to the public purse of bulk mail deliveries undertaken by private companies in the last period for which figures are available. [245822]

Mr. McFadden: None.

All central and local Government Departments and agencies use the most appropriate and cost-effective postal operator and service to meet their general and respective specific business needs. It is the responsibility of each Government Department to ensure the best value for money when procuring goods or services, and this includes postal services which have been the subject of a report by the National Audit Office in 2006.

Cement

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what assessment he has made of the effect on the long-term supply of cement and concrete to the construction industry of domestic cement manufacturers ceasing to produce cement in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [244498]

Ian Pearson: BERR monitors both cement production and the import of both cement and clinker to the UK. These statistics are published both annually in the "Construction Statistics Annual" and through the monthly "Statistics of Building Materials and Components". Currently around 10 per cent. of UK cement is imported, and an almost similar proportion of clinker for cement production. The sector is reporting that there is currently world over-capacity for cement production. Historically, the sector has varied the level of imports to suit their market, commercial and operational decisions. We would expect this to continue.

Cement: EU Emissions Trading Scheme

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what assessment he has made of the effect on domestic cement manufacture of carbon dioxide emissions allowance auctioning proposals under Phase III of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme should (a) no border adjustment mechanism be introduced for non-carbon constrained countries and (b) no free allowances be granted; and if he will make a statement. [244497]

Joan Ruddock: I have been asked to reply.

Government believe that sectors at risk of carbon leakage should be identified on the basis of robust evidence and we will continue to consider the available evidence. A number of studies have been carried out to examine the impacts of the introduction of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme on the competitiveness of those sectors covered by the scheme. To date the two most significant pieces of UK research are those which were carried out by Climate Strategies and Oxford Economics, both of which were published in 2007 and were funded by DEFRA and/or BERR. Each report considered the effects of the EU ETS on a number of key sectors, including cement.

The results of the modelling study undertaken by Oxford Economics suggested that the impact of the EU ETS on industrial production would be small. The results suggested that, if industry were required to purchase all of their allowances, at a carbon price of €25/tCO_2 and assuming no equivalent action by non-EU countries, then less than 0.1 per cent. of domestic production in the non-metallic minerals sector (which contains cement) would be lost to countries outside of the EU.

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what estimate he has made of the carbon dioxide price at which domestic cement manufacturing may begin to reduce in the UK should no equalisation measures be placed on cement exporters outside the EU at the start of Phase III of the Emissions Trading Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [244499]

Joan Ruddock: I have been asked to reply.

The Government commissioned Oxford Economics to undertake a research project to examine the impact that the EU ETS could have on production decisions in UK industrial sectors. While the study did not identify a specific tipping point at which domestic cement production will begin to reduce, the results of the study did suggest that the impact on domestic production would be small. For example, the modelling results suggest that, if the industry were required to purchase all of their allowances, at a carbon price of €25/tCO_2 and assuming no equivalent action by non-EU countries, less than 0.1 per cent. of production in the non-metallic minerals sector, which contains cement, is likely to be lost to countries outside the EU.

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform if he will estimate the percentage of domestic cement manufacture which may move to countries outside the ambit of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme (ETS) at a price per tonne of carbon dioxide of (a) 20 euros, (b) 25 euros, (c) 30 euros, (d) 35 euros and (e) 40 euros (i) should free allowances be granted to cement manufacturers at each percentage point between 80 and 100 per cent. of their total allowances under Phase III of the ETS and (ii) should no equalisation measures be placed on exporters outside the EU at the start of Phase III; and if he will make a statement. [244500]

Joan Ruddock: I have been asked to reply.

The available evidence suggests that, if the non-metallic minerals sector (which includes the cement industry) is allocated 100 per cent. of their allowances for free, assuming a carbon price of €25/tCO_2 and no equivalent action by non-EU countries, less than 0.1 per cent. of domestic production would be lost to countries outside of the EU. The percentage reduction in domestic production is not available for all carbon prices. However, we would expect the impact to be larger at higher carbon prices.

The assessment of which sectors are at risk of carbon leakage as a result of the costs of complying with the EU ETS will nevertheless be decided on the basis of EU data. The allocation of free allowances will therefore be dependent on the cost increase and trade intensity data for the cement industry across all EU member states rather than just the UK.

Climate Change

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what assessment his Department has made of its capacity to adapt to climate change; and what plans he has to publish a climate change adaptation strategy. [241182]

Ian Pearson: In July 2008, the cross-Government Adapting to Climate Change Programme published Adapting to climate change in England—a framework for action which set out the Government's strategy for adaptation and the work-plan for the cross-Government Programme for the next three years. This programme increases Government's capacity to adapt by ensuring a coordinated approach across all Departments and the public sector, and overall responsibility for it rests with Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA). Information about the Programme and its work can be found at www.defra.gov.uk/adaptation.

This includes taking forward work flowing from the Climate Change Act—including a national Climate Change Risk Assessment and cost benefit analysis which will inform future priorities for the statutory adaptation programme that will then begin in 2012.

The Government's longer term strategy on adapting to a changing climate will be set out in this statutory National Adaptation Programme, which will be reviewed and updated on a five year rolling basis in response to updated risk assessments, and report to Parliament.

In addition, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BERR) is encouraging industry sectors to consider and review their resilience arrangements and is working towards embedding adaptation into its own operations.

Company Law: Billing

Justine Greening: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what estimate he has made of the proportion of publicly-listed companies which complied with the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 to submit their payment terms to Companies House in the latest period for which figures are available. [246766]

Ian Pearson: All public companies are required to disclose their payment terms in their accounts. It is the responsibility of the companies to ensure that their accounts meet all the requirements of the Companies Acts.

Construction: Public Appointments

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform when he expects to make an announcement on the new role of the Chief Construction Officer. [243822]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 15 December 2008]: A discussion paper will be issued shortly. As announced in BERR's press notice of 2 October 2008, full details of the potential terms and scope of the role will be confirmed as part of the operational efficiency programme. The results of this work will be announced in the Budget.

Constructionline

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what the functions are of Constructionline in reducing the administrative, financial and compliance burden on small and medium-sized enterprises of multiple health and safety pre-qualification schemes in the public sector; and what account it takes of work already completed by the construction industry on health and safety. [246097]

Ian Pearson: The purpose of Constructionline is specifically to reduce duplication of effort by allowing tenderers to answer the key prequalification questions once. After that, tendering organisations only need to ask the project-specific questions of tenderers. This significantly lowers the financial and administrative burdens on SMEs, which make up the vast majority of the construction industry. Constructionline's questions are drawn from HSE's requirements for contractors in respect of health and safety. Constructionline works closely with other industry organisations and Government on health and safety matters, and will be a member of the 'Safety Schemes in Procurement Competence Forum (SSIP)' when it is formally launched in April 2009.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what contracts his Department awarded to (a) KPMG, (b) PricewaterhouseCoopers, (c) Ernst and Young, (d) McKinsey, (e) Deloitte and (f) other consultancy firms in each of the last 12 months; and what the (i) purpose and (ii) monetary value of each of those contracts was. [242225]

Mr. McFadden: Central records indicate that in each of the last 12 months the providers listed received the following payments for services. Where a supplier is not listed there has been no expenditure for that month. The Department has not made any payments to McKinsey during this period.

Departmental Data Protection

Paul Holmes: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many civil servants in his Department have been (a) investigated, (b) suspended and (c) dismissed for (i) losing and (ii) deliberately disclosing (A) data stored on departmental equipment and (B) confidential information in each year since its inception. [242914]

Mr. Thomas: We are unable to answer the question as to do so would breach the confidentiality of individual/s concerned.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245354]

Mr. McFadden: This Department had a Senior Information Risk Owner in place before publication of the report Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action. The current BERR Senior Information Risk Owner is a Grade 2.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [244604]

Mr. McFadden: The Government's delivery plan for 'Sustainable Procurement and Operations on the Government Estate', published in August 2008, provides a full account of the initiatives Departments are taking to reduce their energy waste. The Government have committed to updating the delivery plan on a six monthly basis, and the first of these updates was published on 18 December 2008.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244363]

Mr. McFadden: This Department's published 'Annual Report and Accounts' contains information on its tangible fixed assets, which includes an additions category entitled 'furniture, fixtures and fittings'.

These accounts can be found on the BERR website at the following address:

www.berr.gov.uk

The following years accounts are on the website:

BERR Annual Report and Accounts 2007-2008 (HC 757)—Chapter 5—Note 14

DTI Annual Report and Accounts 2006-2007 (HC 584)—Chapter 5—Note 14

DTI Annual Report and Accounts 2004-2005 (HC 612)—Note 13

DTI Annual Report and Accounts 2003-2004 (HC 26)—Note 14

Published accounts for 2001-02 and 2002-03 are available from the Stationery Office. All furniture purchased during this period was from British firms, apart from one German company which we no longer use. No furniture was purchased from Remploy.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how much his Department spent on employing staff to assist special advisers in each of the last three years. [240384]

Mr. McFadden: Salary costs were £63,370 in 2006; £70,820 in 2007 and £84,300 in 2008.

Departmental Public Consultation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform on which occasions his Department and its predecessor has convened a citizens' jury or randomly-drawn panel of people to aid the Department's policy-making since 2000; whether the participants were paid in each case; and if he will make a statement. [243041]

Ian Pearson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 22 October, Official Report, column reference 347W, to the right hon. member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May). There have been no citizens' juries since July 2007 and to check the position back to 2000 could only be done at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what recent consideration he has given to bringing forward publicly-funded capital works commissioned by his Department; and what discussions he has had with Treasury ministers on the financing of these projects. [244278]

Mr. McFadden: HMG assessed a number of options for bringing forward capital spending as part of a fiscal stimulus. The £3 billion package announced in the 2008 pre-Budget report was based on the principles that it should be timely (focused on those projects that could be brought forward in the time available), targeted (focused on capital spending that would support the UK economy) and temporary (bringing forward spending—protecting the fiscal position in the medium term).

Capital spending was brought forward in a range of areas, including investing in energy efficiency measures and increasing capacity in the motorway network. The Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BERR) has no substantial capital spending programmes following the transfer of the Nuclear Decommissioning Agency (NDA) to the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC). BERR is therefore not forming part of the Capital Expenditure Acceleration Programme.

BERR is already taking steps to assist business through the economic downturn through new schemes on small business finance, including a capital fund of £50 million announced in the pre-Budget report and funded from the existing Mezzanine Fund, Enterprise Capital Funds and a £10 million regional development agencies (RDA) contribution. This fund will provide capital support to overleveraged small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). This is in addition to the capital expenditure schemes that the Department currently funds.

Departmental Training

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform which external companies and organisations have been used by his Department to provide training for fast stream civil service staff in his Department in the last three years; and how many staff participated in such training. [246590]

Mr. McFadden: The Department uses our preferred training providers Personnel Training Services Consortium (PTSC) and National School of Government (NSG) for fast stream training. For language training, the Department uses the preferred supplier Communicaid.

52 fast streamers participated in training with PTSC and NSG between 2006 and 2008.

Based on business demand, 12 fast streamers undertook language training between 2006 and 2008.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how much his Department spent on digital media training courses provided by the Internet Advertising Bureau in 2008; how many such training sessions have been held in 2008; and how many staff members in his Department attended at least one such training course. [246593]

Mr. McFadden: The Department has no record of using the services of the Internet Advertising Bureau in 2008.

Departmental Temporary Employment

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform with reference to the answer of 10 November 2008, Official Report, columns 906-07W, on departmental temporary employment, how many staff were recruited through each company in each year; and for how long on average staff recruited through these companies worked for the Department in each year. [242104]

Mr. McFadden: With reference to the answer of 10 November 2008, Official Report, columns 906-07W, on departmental temporary employment, information on the number of staff recruited through each company in each year and how long on average staff recruited through these companies worked for the Department in each year could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Employment Agency Standards Inspectorate

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what budget the Employment Agency Standards Inspectorate has to publicise its activities; and what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the agency's promotional activities. [244032]

Mr. McFadden: During the 2008-09 financial year, the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform is running a £1.25 million campaign to raise awareness of employment rights among vulnerable agency workers, including raising the profile of the Employment Agency Standards (EAS) Inspectorate.

The EAS promotional activities include publication and launch of the 'Know Your Rights' leaflet last month, and we will monitor the effectiveness of our awareness raising campaign towards the end of the financial year.

Finsbury Ltd. and Roland Rudd

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform on what dates since 1 January 2007 (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have had discussions with (i) Finsbury Ltd. and (ii) Roland Rudd. [243128]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 15 December 2008]: The information requested is as follows.

Finsbury Ltd.

Since 1 January 2007, Ministers have not had discussions with Finsbury Ltd. No meetings with officials have been reported either.

Roland Rudd

Since 1 January 2007, discussions have been held which Roland Rudd attended on the following dates:

A Secretary of State has had discussions with Roland Rudd on:

11 September 2007—Secretary of State had an introductory meeting with BNE Members;

19 December 2007—Secretary of State attended a BNE breakfast event on Europe and to discuss 17 January 2008 Global Europe Conference;

7 January 2008—Telephone conversation to catch-up on preparations for the Global Europe Conference on 14 January 2008;

14 January 2008—The BERR/FCO 'Business Priorities for a Global Europe' Conference was organised in co-operation with BNE, with Roland Rudd chairing the event and BERR Secretary of State John Hutton was one of the speakers;

17 June 2008—Secretary of State attended a dinner with BNE members;

17 October 2008—Secretary of State met with Roland Rudd;

10 December 2008—Lord Mandelson had a breakfast meeting with Roland Rudd and several BNE company members to discuss EU economic reform issues;

17 December 2008—Lord Mandelson had a second breakfast meeting with Roland Rudd and several other BNE company members to discuss EU economic reform issues.

Ministers have had discussions with Roland Rudd on:

2 October 2008—BERR Minister of State Shriti Vadera attended a breakfast meeting with BNE (Roland Rudd attended);

7 March 2008—Dinner attended by BERR Minister of State Shriti Vadera, Roland Rudd, and other guests;

7 May 2008—BERR Minister of State Shriti Vadera spoke at BNE Enlargement Seminar;

8 December 2008—The Global Europe Business Summit was attended by BERR Minister of State Shriti Vadera and Roland Rudd was one of the business participants (representing BNE).

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what recent representations he has received from Finsbury Ltd. in connection with the proposal for a third runway at Heathrow. [243129]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 15 December 2008]: My noble Friend, the Secretary of State, has received no representations from Finsbury Ltd. in connection with proposals on a third runway at Heathrow.

Keep your Future Afloat Campaign

Mr. Maude: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform with reference to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Rochford and Southend East (James Duddridge) of 27 October 2008, Official Report, column 722W, on the Keep your Future Afloat campaign, for what reason the North West Regional Development Agency provided funding to the campaign; and what expenditure the campaign undertook as a result of the funding provided. [242039]

Mr. McFadden: NWDA funding has been used over a number of years to enable KOFAC Co-ordinating Committee to continue delivering a targeted lobbying campaign to sustain a significant number of jobs in the naval shipbuilding industrial base of north-west England. Targets of the more recent campaign have been future aircraft carriers, Astute and replacement Vanguard class submarines, MARS supply ships, civil nuclear and other diversification opportunities.

Funding goes towards project management, essential research, preparation of customised lobby material and arrangement of attendance at national conferences and other events.

Automotive Industry

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what representations he has received from (a) the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders and (b) Ford on (i) financial support from the taxpayers and (ii) Ford's plans to move production of the Transit Van from Southampton to Turkey; and if he will make a statement. [243076]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 15 December 2008]: We have wide-ranging contact at all levels with the automotive industry and its representatives (including the SMMT). My noble Friend, the Minister of State for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform and I met with automotive manufacturers, suppliers and retailers on 27 November and we continue to have close dialogue. Ford confirmed in November that it will manufacture its new Eco Boost engine family, which is 20 per cent. more fuel efficient and emits 15 per cent. less carbon dioxide, for global use at its Bridgend factory. Ford's investment was secured with £13.4 million in support from taxpayers via the Welsh Assembly Government. This will increase jobs at the Bridgend factory, the third largest employer in Wales, to more than 2,000. It is intended the current Transit model will be produced at Southampton until 2011. We strongly welcome Ford's commitment to seeing production of the chassis cab variant of the next model Transit at their Southampton site in the future.

Derek Twigg: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what steps he is taking to support the car manufacturing industry in Cheshire and Merseyside. [243148]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 17 December 2008]: We are closely engaged with the automotive and other sectors in the UK, including those companies in the Cheshire and Merseyside area, acting both at a European level (for example through the European Investment Bank's €8 billion automotive support fund), and at a national and regional level. This includes the package of support for SMEs announced in the PBR and the Northwest Regional Development Agency's transitional loan fund for SMEs announced on 8 December. We have also written to all major vehicle manufacturers in the UK asking them to forward on to their suppliers a note about support available.

Overseas Market Introduction Service

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform whether there have been any changes in Overseas Market Introduction Service fees in the last 12 months. [241923]

Mr. Thomas: Prices for the five service levels of UK trade and Investment's Overseas Market Introduction Service (OMIS) were increased in April 2008. OMIS prices are advertised gross, inclusive of VAT. The prices were lowered on 1 December 2008 to take account of the Government's decision to reduce VAT to 15 per cent. from that date.

Overseas Trade

Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform in which countries there are no official services delivered on behalf of UK Trade and Investment through the British Embassy, High Commission or Consulate General in that country. [240831]

Mr. Thomas: UK Trade and Investment has no dedicated resource in the following countries: Afghanistan, Albania, Andorra, Anguilla, Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Ascension, Bahamas, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bermuda, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, British Virgin Islands, British Indian Ocean Territories, Burkina Fasso, Burma, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Cayman Islands, Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros Congo, Congo (Democratic Republic), Cote d'Ivoire, Djibouti, Dominica, East Timor, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Eritrea, Falkland Islands, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Gibraltar, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Grenada, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Kiribati, Kosovo, Kyrgyzstan, Laos, Lesotho, Liberia, Macedonia, Madagascar, Maldives, Malawi, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Moldova, Monaco, Mongolia, Montenegro, Montserrat, Namibia, Nauru, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, North Korea, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Pitcairn, Rwanda, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Solomon Islands, Somalia, St. Helena, St. Kitts, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Grenadines, Surinam, Swaziland, Tajikistan, Togo, Tonga, Tristan da Cunha, Turkmenistan, Turks and Caicos Islands, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vatican, Vanuatu, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

While UK Trade and Investment does not have specific resource in the markets listed, political support from the ambassador or high commissioner, in respect of a particular contract or to support a UK business with interests in that market, remains available. UK Trade and Investment also provide basic information on these markets via the UK Trade and Investment website.

UK Trade and Investment is represented in the following 99 markets, which account for over 98 per cent. of global GDP: Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium/Luxembourg, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Brunei, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Hong Kong, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Latvia, Lebanon, Libya, Lithuania, Malaysia, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Occupied Palestinian Territories, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Russia, Saudi Arabia, Serbia, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, South Korea, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland/Liechtenstein, Syria, Taiwan, Tanzania, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United States of America, Venezuela, Vietnam, Yemen.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what steps UK Trade and Investment takes to ensure that overseas regional trade missions are properly co-ordinated and that the funding is equitable for similar companies. [241529]

Mr. Thomas: UK Trade and Investment makes funding available to its regional teams for Market Visit Support (MVS) by small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs).

MVS enables companies to be supported individually or in groups in the form of a trade mission. Companies from one region can participate in visits organised by another region. All regions work to the same set of guidance. Where MVS funding is to support a visit to market, it is based on a specific subsidy for each overseas market.

Overseas Trade: Advisory Services

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform when the guidance relating to offering companies free advice without an Overseas Market Introduction Service fee was last changed; and what the content was of that change. [241532]

Mr. Thomas: Guidance on offering free advice to companies dates from April 2004, when the Overseas Market Introduction Service was introduced across UK Trade and Investment's global network. This guidance has been re-emphasised on a number of occasions since 2004. UKTI's trade officers may spend around an hour of their time exploring a company's needs and explaining what can be done for them. They may also provide a limited amount of 'off-the-shelf' information. However, the guidance is that companies should be charged for substantive help from UKTI trade officers in overseas embassies, high commissions and consulates.

Parental Leave

Susan Kramer: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many and what proportion of new fathers have taken paternal leave in each year since 2001, broken down by local authority; and if he will make a statement. [244790]

Mr. McFadden: Information on the number and proportion of new fathers taking paternity leave in each year from 2001, broken down by local authority is not available. However, since 2002, three surveys on Maternity and Paternity Rights have been produced by my Department and the Department for Work and Pensions. These publications include a survey on the proportion of new fathers taking paternity leave, and can be found at:

1. Maternity rights and mothers' employment decisions

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd5/rports2007-2008/rrep496.pdf

2. Maternity and Paternity Rights and Benefits: Survey of Parents 2005

http://www.berr.gov.uk/files/file27446.pdf

3. Maternity and Paternity Rights in Britain 2002: survey of parents

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd5/ih2003-2004/IH131.pdf

The Maternity and Paternity Rights and Benefits: Survey of Parents 2005 shows that 93 per cent. of fathers take time off around the time of their child's birth. Of the fathers who took time off, 79 per cent. took at least some paid statutory paternity leave. The Maternity Rights and Mother's Employment Decisions paper, which carried out a survey in 2007 shows that 91 per cent. of fathers' took some time off when the baby was born. However, this figure does not differentiate between paternity leave and other types of leave (e.g. annual leave).

Post Office: Pay

Tim Loughton: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what bonus payments were made to directors of the Post Office in each of the last five years. [245237]

Mr. McFadden: The level of directors' bonus payments is a matter for Royal Mail's remuneration committee. I have asked the company secretary of Royal Mail to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what the salary and pension package of each director of the Post Office was in each of the last three years. [245241]

Mr. McFadden: The level of directors' salary and pension packages is a matter for Royal Mail's remuneration committee. I have asked the company secretary of Royal Mail to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Post Offices

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what plans he has to increase the work of post offices and to expand the financial services they offer; and whether he intends to continue the Post Office closure programme. [243890]

Mr. McFadden: Post Office Ltd. continues to explore and develop opportunities to expand the range of financial and other services offered through post offices. The recently announced Savings Gateway scheme will be available through the post office network and the Government will continue to explore the scope for introducing additional work. In addition, the Select Committee for Business and Enterprise has agreed to undertake an inquiry to identify new services to help secure the long term viability of the post office network.

The Network Change programme is now drawing to a close and there are no plans for a further closure programme.

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many post offices scheduled to shut under the Network Change programme remain open; and what the date of the latest scheduled closure is. [243891]

Mr. McFadden: Around 15 per cent. of the initial Network Change proposals were changed during the pre-consultation phase and, to date, 87 closures and four outreach proposals have been withdrawn in the light of responses to the local public consultations. I understand from Post Office Ltd. that only a small number of closures have yet to take place. Most of these relate to offices which are to be replaced by an outreach service.

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what assessment he has made of the economic effect of local post offices on small and medium-sized businesses in that area. [243892]

Mr. McFadden: The Government fully recognise the social and economic value of post offices to the communities they serve. Accordingly in implementing its Network Change Programme, Post Office Ltd. was required by Government to work within the framework of national minimum access criteria to ensure continuing reasonable access and to consider the impact of proposed closures and other changes in service provision on local economies.

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform when the first meeting of the new cross-departmental Post Office group is to be held. [243893]

Mr. McFadden: The Cabinet Committee on the Post Office Network meets as required and officials across Government continue to explore the scope for making new services available at post offices.

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what plans he has to increase the proportion of Post Office business from the Government. [243894]

Mr. McFadden: The Government will continue to explore the scope for increasing the range of services which can be provided by Post Office Ltd. In addition, the Business and Enterprise Committee has been asked to review and identify potential new services which could be offered through the post office network.

Postal Services

Joan Walley: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what assessment he has made of Postcomm's direction in respect of Royal Mail's request for exemption from the pre-notification requirements for changes to its local collect service; and if he will make a statement. [244401]

Mr. McFadden: After careful consideration of Royal Mail's application and following a consultation with stakeholders, Postcomm, the independent industry regulator, decided to exempt Royal Mail from the three-month notification period required by condition 7 of its licence to waive the 50p redelivery local collect charge for the course of December 2008 only.

Postcomm acknowledged that Royal Mail's compliance processes had not operated correctly in this instance and expects Royal Mail to anticipate the need for condition 7 to be adhered to in the future unless a prior exemption has been sought. Postcomm accepted that this appeared to be a genuine error on this occasion.

More information on Postcomm's direction can be found on its website at:

www.psc.gov.uk

Postcodes

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform if he will investigate the pricing structure operated by the Post Office in respect of access to its postcode address file; what rates for access are payable by (a) voluntary and non-profit organisations and (b) commercial organisations; and if he will make a statement. [244242]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 17 December 2008]: The Postcode Address File (PAF) is owned and managed by Royal Mail. As specified under the Postal Services Act 2000 and as a condition of its licence, the company is obliged to maintain the postcode address file (the PAF) and to make it available to any person who wishes to use it on terms that are reasonable. Prices for accessing the PAF are published on Royal Mail's website www.royalmail.com.

If any PAF user or any stakeholder feels that Royal Mail is not complying with the terms of section 116 of the PSA 2000 or Condition 22 of its licence, Postcomm, the industry regulator, will consider the merits of any such complaints in the light of its statutory duties.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what representations he has received on making access to the Post Office's postcode address file (a) cheaper and (b) free. [244333]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 17 December 2008]: None. Postcomm, the industry regulator, in accordance with its statutory responsibilities, carried out a consultation on the management of and access to the postal address file (PAF) in 2006 and published a decision document in April 2007 which laid down new safeguards for the future management of the PAF. The consultation asked all PAF users for comments on a series of proposals designed to make sure that the database is managed and made available to other organisations wishing to use it on fair and reasonable terms. Following the consultation, Postcomm held discussions with Royal Mail, which agreed to implement all the recommendations outlined in the report. These included the setting up of an independent PAF Advisory Board to give independent advice to the Address Management Unit of Royal Mail on behalf of PAF users. More information on Postcomm's consultation and decision can be found on its website www.psc.gov.uk.

Postcomm will consider any complaints over access to the postcode address file.

Postwatch: Expenditure

Tim Loughton: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (1) what the cost of Postwatch was in the last 12 months; [245238]

(2) how much was spent on salaries of members of Postwatch, including bonuses, in the last 12 months. [245239]

Mr. McFadden: Details of Postwatch's expenditure and the salaries which includes bonuses, awarded to its members for the period ending 31 March 2008 can be found in its annual report. This information can also be accessed through the Postwatch archived website at:

http://collections.europarchive.org/tna/20080402233556/http://www.postwatch.co.uk/images/stories/pdfs/annual_reports/Postwatch_AR_2007-08_WEB-2.pdf

Postwatch's final annual report and accounts to cover the remaining six-month period of its operation prior to its merger with Consumer Focus, is due to be published in January 2009. My officials will make the appropriate arrangements to place copies of this document in the Libraries of the House.

Postwatch: Publications

Tim Loughton: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what the cost of producing the Postwatch publication Post, present and future was. [245240]

Mr. McFadden: The cost of producing the hardback report, "Post, present and future", published by Postwatch is given as follows:

Production costs: £29,010

Public Houses

Mr. Price: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what estimate his Department has made of the number of public houses in England in (a) hamlets and isolated dwellings, (b) villages, (c) towns and fringe settlements and (d) settlements of more than 10,000 inhabitants in each year since 1997. [243172]

Kevin Brennan: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning what estimate has been made of the number of public houses in England in (a) hamlets and isolated dwellings, (b) villages, (c) town and fringe settlements and (d) settlements of more than 10,000 inhabitants in each year since 1997. (243172)

Estimates for the urban-rural geography are only available from 2005. The table below contains counts of local units classified to public houses using the Standard Industrial Classification (SIC), version 2003, taken from the Interdepartmental Business Register (IDBR).

Counts of Local Units for Public Houses and Bars, excluding licensed clubs (SIC 5540 excluding 55401): England

	Urban >10,000 population	Town and Fringe	Village	Hamlet and Isolated Dwelling	Total
2005	30,050	4,560	6,565	2,580	43,955
2006	29,600	4,540	6,520	2,740	43,400
2007	29,740	4,590	6,540	2,705	43,575
2008	28,995	4,485	6,440	2,795	42,715

Note:
Annual estimates are extracted from the IDBR at March each year

Redundancy

Justine Greening: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many of his Department's staff who left under (a) an involuntary and (b) a voluntary exit scheme in each year since 2005-06 received a severance package of (i) up to £25,000, (ii) £25,001 to £50,000, (iii) £50,001 to £75,000, (iv) £75,001 to £100,000 and (v) over £100,000; and if he will make a statement. [243257]

Mr. McFadden: The numbers of staff who received payments in the requested bands are as follows:

	Up to £25,000	£25,001 to £50,000	£50,001 to £75,000	£75,001 to £100,000	Over £100,000	Total
Voluntary
2005-06	65	29	21	9	12	136
2006-07	35	39	46	22	35	177
2007-08	31	41	46	17	17	152
Involuntary
2005-06	7	5	7	1	3	23
2006-07	0	0	0	0	0	0
2007-08	5	8	4	3	0	20

Payments include pension lump sums as well as compensation awards.

The Department will always try to deal with staff surpluses by means other than redundancy. If redundancies become unavoidable, the Department will endeavour to reduce staff by voluntary rather than involuntary means wherever possible.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (1) how much each regional development agency plans to spend on cohesion and integration work in (a) 2008-09 and (b) each of the two subsequent years; [245522]

(2) how many staff in each regional development agency work on cohesion and integration; and what the cost of employing these staff is expected to be in (a) 2008-09 and (b) each of the two subsequent years. [245521]

Mr. McFadden: While regional development agencies (RDAs) take account of cohesion and integration issues, RDAs do not record expenditure according to cohesion and integration as a category of corporate spending. Furthermore, to separate out those data would incur disproportionate cost.

Regional Development Agencies: Cost Effectiveness

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what assessment his Department has made of the value for money provided by regional development agencies. [245971]

Mr. McFadden: The Government have commissioned PricewaterhouseCoopers to conduct an independent evaluation of the economic impact of RDAs. Their report has just been completed and I will be presenting it to the House shortly.

Regional Economic Council

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform with reference to the answer of 18 November 2008, Official Report, column 425W, on the Regional Economic Council, where on his Department's website the notes following each regional economic council are located. [243805]

Mr. McFadden: The minutes can be found on the BERR website:

www.berr.gov.uk

under the 'What we do' heading and 'Regional Economic Development' section. A link to the Regional Economic Council will be found on this page.

http://www.berr.gov.uk/whatwedo/regional/index.html

Retail Trade: Reading

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many independent retailers were operating in the Reading Borough Council area in each of the last 10 years. [244438]

Kevin Brennan: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning how many independent retailers were operating in the Reading Borough Council area in each of the last 10 years. (244438)

The Office for National Statistics publishes estimates of the number of enterprises by-UK Standard Industrial Classification (version 2003). Using this classification, it is not possible to separately identify independent retailers. The table covers independent retailers, any chain with its headquarters in Reading and retailers operating franchises. Shops belonging to retail chains are not included in these figures. Please see Annex A for further detail.

Between 2007 and 2008 there was a change of definition, which means that it is not possible to make a direct comparison using the published data. Prior to 2008 only VAT registered enterprises were included in the publication. In 2008 the publication was widened to include enterprises with only a PAYE record, as well as VAT registered enterprises.

The 2008 figure based on the old VAT only definition is 380.

Enterprises classified to SIC 52 Retail Trade in Reading Unitary Authority

	Number of retail enterprises
1999	415
2000	400
2001	400
2002	380
2003	355
2004	350
2005	350
2006	360
2007	360
2008[1]	[1]420

Annex A

The data are taken from the Interdepartmental Business Register, and are available in an on-line publication called UK business: activity, size and location.

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=933

The Standard Industrial Classification does not enable independent retailers to be separately identified. The IDBR comprises of enterprises and local units. The shops belonging to retail chains will be categorised as local units. Local Unit tables are also available in UK business: activity size and location. The enterprise data will contain independent retailers, any chain with its headquarters in Reading and also retailers operating franchises.

The data are for Reading Unitary Authority.

Royal Mail

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what estimate he has made of the cost of necessary Royal Mail plant modernisation. [245820]

Mr. McFadden: This is an operational matter for Royal Mail. I have therefore asked the chief executive of Royal Mail, Adam Crozier, to reply direct to my hon. Friend.

Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what plans he has to negotiate access for Royal Mail to the (a) Dutch, (b) German and (c) French postal systems. [246058]

Mr. McFadden: A new postal directive was adopted at the end of January 2008 confirming that most member states, including the Dutch, German and French postal sectors, will be opened up to full access and competition by 1 January 2011.

The Government will continue to promote an open, transparent, cost-based, and non-discriminatory market for both domestic and international mail within the framework of the WTO GATS, Universal Postal Union (UPU) and EU obligations.

Royal Mail: Christmas

Ms Angela C. Smith: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what the cost to Royal Mail was of (a) producing and (b) delivering the Christmas cards it recently sent to every household in the UK. [246157]

Mr. McFadden: This is an operational matter for Royal Mail. I have therefore asked the chief executive of Royal Mail, Adam Crozier, to reply direct to my hon. Friend.

Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Royal Mail: Manpower

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what assessment he has made of the effect of part privatisation of Royal Mail on the number of jobs in the organisation; and if he will make a statement. [246804]

Mr. McFadden: The Government are taking forward the proposal for Royal Mail to enter into a strategic minority partnership with a postal operator with a proven record in transforming its business, working closely with the workforce. Royal Mail will remain publicly owned.

Any impact on jobs associated with the modernisation of Royal Mail is an operational matter for the management of the company.

Royal Mail: Pay

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what the remuneration package of the chief executive of Royal Mail is; and what proportion of his remuneration is paid from public funds. [245697]

Mr. McFadden: The level of the chief executive's remuneration package is a matter for Royal Mail's remuneration committee. I have therefore asked the company secretary of Royal Mail to reply direct to the hon. Member.

All of Adam Crozier's remuneration is paid from Royal Mail funds.

Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Small Businesses: North West

Mark Hunter: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many small and medium-sized enterprises operating in (a) the North West, (b) Stockport Metropolitan Borough Council area and (c) Cheadle constituency have been declared bankrupt in each year since 1997. [244813]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 18 December 2008]: There is insufficient detailed information held centrally and in a readily available format to provide an answer to this question. This is because:

corporate insolvency statistics are not currently available at a sub-national level; and the administrative systems that record corporate insolvencies do not record the size of the businesses concerned.

Tata Steel

Mr. Dai Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what recent discussions he has had with Tata Industries on the long-term future of the steel industry in the UK. [245676]

Ian Pearson: The Department enjoys an excellent relationship with Corus, which has been a subsidiary of Tata Steel since April 2007, and there is regular contact between BERR and Corus on a number of issues of interest to the company and the UK steel industry more widely.

Trade Unions: Elections

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform if he will seek to amend section 14 of the Employment Act 1988 to allow seafaring union members to participate in votes via the internet when absent at sea. [244741]

Mr. McFadden: Section 54 of the Employment Relations Act 2004 provides an order-making power for the Secretary of State to widen the methods of voting which can be used in statutory ballots and elections under trade union law. The Government have no plans at present to use that power.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform if he will consider seeking to amend section 14 of the Employment Act 1988 to take account of the position of seafarers who are frequently absent from home. [244742]

Mr. McFadden: We have no current plans to amend the law on the political fund ballots.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Admiralty House

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster with reference to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Robert Neill) of 22 July 2008, Official Report, column 1255W, on Admiralty House, what catering services were provided by the Cabinet Office's provider on a re-charge basis. [245887]

Kevin Brennan: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that was given to him on 9 June 2008, Official Report, column 94W.

Average Earnings

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the mean gross weekly full-time earnings were for (a) male employees, (b) female employees and (c) all employees according to the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings for people aged (i) under 18, (ii) 18 to 20, (iii) 21 to 24, (iv) 25 to 29, (v) 30 to 39, (vi) 40 to 49, (vii) 50 to 59, (viii) 60 to 64 and (ix) 65 and over in each year between 1997 and 2007. [243711]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated December 2008:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the mean gross weekly full-time earnings were for (a) male employees, (b) female employees and (c) all employees according to the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings for people aged (i) under 18, (ii) 18 to 20, (iii) 21 to 24, (iv) 25 to 29, (v) 30 to 39, (vi) 40 to 49, (vii) 50 to 59, (viii) 60 to 64 and (ix) 65 and over in each year between 1997 and 2007. (243711)

Average levels of earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for all employees on adult rates of pay whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence.

I attach a table showing the mean gross weekly earnings for the specified age groupings for all years since 1997.

Guide to quality:
The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of a figure, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality. The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV—for example, for an average of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent., we would expect the population average to be within the range 180 to 220.

Key:
CV<= 5%
* CV> 5% and <= 10%

Bowel Cancer

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) men and (b) women were diagnosed with bowel cancer in each parliamentary constituency in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [242581]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 17 December 2008:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many (a) men and (b) women were diagnosed with bowel cancer in each UK parliamentary constituency in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [242581]

The latest available figures for newly diagnosed cases of cancer (incidence) are for the year 2006 for England and Wales, and the year 2005 for Scotland and Northern Ireland. Table 1 showing the numbers of newly diagnosed cases of bowel cancer for (a) men, and Table 2 for (b) women, in each UK parliamentary constituency for the years 2001 to 2005, and in each parliamentary constituency in England and Wales for 2006, have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Census

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the timetable for the Census rehearsal is. [246060]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated December 2008:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the timetable for the Census rehearsal is.[246060]

The rehearsal for the Census in England and Wales will take place on 11 October 2009 in some 61,000 households in Lancaster, 40,000 in Newham and 34,000 in the Isle of Anglesey.

The aims of the rehearsal are to rehearse the field operations and processing activities for a defined set of addresses; to pilot and evaluate all aspects of the 2011 Census design; to identify aspects for improvement and to develop effective ways of working with local authorities, community groups and other stakeholders.

We are already working closely with the local authorities in these areas to establish effective ways of working together in preparation for 2011 and are currently developing form-tracking and operational systems. Address checking in rehearsal areas begins in February and will continue until the end of April. The award of the contract for recruitment, payment and training of field staff is expected at the end of March. Publicity in rehearsal areas will be launched in April. In June the rehearsal questionnaires will be printed and field staff training will begin. Delivery of questionnaires, primarily by post-out but by hand in some areas and to communal establishments will start in September. Also in September the on line facility and contact centre will be available. Although the rehearsal is voluntary, some of the follow-up procedures will be rehearsed and this will begin soon after 11 October.

The questionnaires to be used in the 2009 rehearsal have recently been released and are available on the website at http://www.ons.gov.uk/census/2011-census/2011-census-questionnaire-content/2009-rehearsal-questionnaire/index.html

Charities: Economic Situation

Christopher Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment his Department has made of the effect on charitable bodies of the economic downturn. [246145]

Kevin Brennan: On 24 November, the Minister for the third sector co-chaired a summit on the impact of the downturn on the third sector, including charitable bodies, at which a number of the key third sector representative bodies provided information. A summary of this discussion is available on the Office of the Third Sector website http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/media/101516/summit_summary.pdf.

Christopher Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps the Government is taking to support charities in the economic downturn. [246147]

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps the Government is taking to support charities during the economic downturn. [246535]

Kevin Brennan: On 24 November, the Minister for the third sector co-chaired a summit with NCVO (National Council for Voluntary Organisations) on the impact of the downturn on the third sector. At the summit, the Minister announced plans to publish a Government action plan in the new year. The action plan will embed a response to the downturn across the OTS' existing activities and work across Government to develop responses to remaining unmet needs.

Charities: Finance

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps his Department is taking to ensure that charities receive money donated through street fundraisers. [245035]

Kevin Brennan: Effective public fundraising is important for the charity sector. Professional fundraisers are required to make a statement indicating that they are paid, when fundraising from members of the public. The Charities Act 2006 has strengthened this requirement, and professional fundraisers must now also state the amount of remuneration they receive in connection with an appeal. It also provides for a new licensing regime for public charitable collections and the Office of the Third Sector has announced plans to undertake independent research into the costs and benefits of implementing this regime.

Civil Service: Pensions

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what procedures will be applied to overpayments of pensions to former civil servants. [246275]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement I made to the House on 16 December.

My statement explained that the Government would not be seeking to recover any pension overpayments, arising from the incorrect indexation of Guaranteed Minimum Pensions, made to former civil servants or other public service pensioners. It also set out the Government's intention to correct pensions in April, when pensions increase is applied to civil service and other public service pensions.

Commission for the Compact

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what role the Commission for the Compact has in relation to local government. [245925]

Kevin Brennan: The Commission for the Compact is responsible for overseeing the operation of the Compact at both national and local levels. It works with all stakeholders, including local government, promoting partnership working through the Compact. All top tier local authority areas have a Local Compact in place. The Commission's role is to increase awareness, share good practice and carry out research, looking at key themes that affect the relationship between the statutory and voluntary sector.

The Office of the Third Sector is taking forward the recommendations from the recent debate on the future of the Compact. As well as a refresh of the Compact, and putting the Commission on a statutory footing, the Commission's board will be enlarged so that it is more representative. This will include local government representation.

Death: Carbon Monoxide

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many people died as a result of carbon monoxide poisoning in (a) the UK and (b) Portsmouth in the last 10 years. [244508]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, 16 December 2008:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many people died as a result of carbon monoxide poisoning in (a) the UK and (b) Portsmouth in the last 10 years. (244508)

The attached table provides the number of deaths where the toxic effect of carbon monoxide was the cause of death for people in (a) the UK and (b) Portsmouth, from 1998 to 2007 (the latest year available).

Table 1: Number of deaths with a cause of carbon monoxide poisoning[1,2] and Portsmouth[3] 1998 to 2007[4]

		Deaths (persons)
	UK	Portsmouth
1999	800	5

[1] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) code 986 for the years 1997 to 2000, and Tenth Revision (ICD-10) code T58 for 2001 onwards, for England, Wales and Northern Ireland, and ICD-9 for the years 1997 to 1999 and ICD-10 for the years 2000 to 2006 for Scotland.
[2] Figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland have been provided by the Registrars General for these countries.

Death: Weather

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many excess deaths from cold weather there were in each parliamentary constituency in England in each year since 1996-97. [240532]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated December 2008:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many excess deaths from cold weather there were in England in each constituency in each year since 1996-97. (240532)

Estimates of excess winter deaths are based on the difference between the number of deaths during the four winter months (December to March) and the average number of deaths during the preceding four months (August to November) and the following four months (April to July). It is not possible to say whether these deaths were related to cold weather. The table provides the number of excess winter deaths in each parliamentary constituency in England, 1996/97 to 2005/06 (the latest available). A copy has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Steve Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on what date statistical data will next be published on excess winter deaths; and if he will make a statement. [246098]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated December 2008:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking on what date statistical data will next be published on excess winter deaths. (246098)

Currently, ONS publishes excess winter mortality figures in November each year. The most recent excess winter mortality figures for England and Wales were published on 27th November, which included final figures for winter 2006/07 and provisional figures for winter 2007/08.[1] The date for next year's publication has still to be fixed.

ONS also publishes weekly estimates of the numbers of deaths registered in England and Wales. These can be found on the National Statistics website at:

www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=9684

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster with how many faith-based organisations his Department has contracts to provide public services. [244842]

Kevin Brennan: In making contracts for the provision of public services, my Department selects those organisations that meet the proper criteria and have the most relevant expertise and experience to offer. The extent to which such organisations are faith-based is not evident in every case. An accurate total or comprehensive list could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how much was spent by the Prime Minister's Office on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000; [244353]

(2) how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244362]

Kevin Brennan: The Prime Minister's Office forms an integral part of the Cabinet Office.

The information requested is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Gifts

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many staff members in his Department have received gifts valued at £100 or higher in the course of their duties in each of the last three years; what these gifts were; and from whom they were received. [241800]

Kevin Brennan: The rules and guidance on receipt of gifts by civil servants are set out in the Civil Service Management Code, and in departmental staff handbooks.

The information requested is not held centrally in my Department and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Official Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what records his Department maintains of its expenditure on (a) official hospitality and (b) alcohol for official hospitality. [240478]

Kevin Brennan: Expenditure on official hospitality including alcohol is recorded on the Cabinet Office Resource Accounting System.

All Cabinet Office expenditure on official hospitality is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Managing Public Money and the Treasury handbook on "Regularity and Propriety".

Any proposal to purchase alcohol for hospitality purposes requires the prior approval of the Cabinet Office Finance Director.

Departmental Official Residences

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what arrangements are in place for the procurement of services for official Ministerial residences in Downing Street; and if he will make a statement. [242263]

Kevin Brennan: The procurement of facilities services across the Cabinet Office estate is provided by the total facilities management provider for the Cabinet Office. Some cleaning services are provided by Cabinet Office staff.

Departmental Work Experience

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many individuals have worked in his Department on (a) paid and (b) unpaid work experience or internships in each of the past three years; on average how many hours a week were worked by such people in each year; what types of work each was involved in; what proportion were in full-time education; what proportion did not complete their set period of work experience; and how much those who received remuneration were paid on average per week in each year. [242120]

Mr. Watson: The Cabinet Office encourages managers to support applications from students, postgraduates and others in the wider community wishing to undertake work experience. The Cabinet Office does not keep any central records of individuals undertaking work experience and the information could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Disclosure of Information

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on how many occasions in each of the last four years the Government has sought the assistance of the police to investigate unauthorised disclosures of information under (a) the Official Secrets Act and (b) the offence of misconduct in a public office; and how many of those investigations resulted in (i) dismissals, (ii) other disciplinary measures, (iii) prosecutions and (iv) convictions. [244237]

Mr. Byrne: Departments will seek the assistance of the police where they consider a criminal offence may have been committed. It is for the police, not Departments, to determine whether an investigation is carried out and what the potential criminal offence justifying an investigation is. The procedures when police get involved were set out by the Cabinet Secretary in his note to PASC, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

It would not be appropriate to provide information about investigations that are still open. It is however a matter of public record that there have been three successful prosecutions under the Official Secrets Act: David Keogh (2007); Richard Jackson (2008); and, Corporal Daniel James (2008). Corporal James was also successfully prosecuted for Misconduct in Public Office.

Employment

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) UK nationals, (b) UK-born people, (c) foreign nationals, (d) non-UK EU nationals and (e) non-EU nationals of working age were in employment in each workforce sector in (i) each of the last four quarters and (ii) each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will also express such numbers as a proportion of the workforce in each sector in each period. [246179]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking how many (a) UK nationals, (b) UK-born people, (c) foreign nationals, (d) non-UK EU nationals and (e) non-EU nationals of working age were in employment in each workforce sector in (i) each of the last four quarters and (ii) each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will also express such numbers as a proportion of the workforce in each sector in each period. (246179)

The requested information is shown in the attached tables.

Workforce Jobs estimates compiled from employer surveys are the preferred source for breakdowns of employment by industrial sector. However, in order to provide the nationality and country of birth breakdown requested, the Labour Force Survey (LFS) has been used.

The industry definitions used to answer this question should not be compared with the public/private breakdown given in your parliamentary question 246180.

As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

The figures in the table are derived from the LFS microdata, which are weighted using the official population estimates published in autumn 2007. Consequently, the estimates from Q3 2006 are not entirely consistent with the figures published in the monthly Labour Market Statistics First Release, or the migrant worker figures published every quarter, which are weighted using more up-to-date population estimates.

* The estimates have been suppressed as they are deemed unreliable for practical purposes.

[1] The percentages show the associated levels expressed as a proportion of the total number of working-age people (including those who did not state their nationality or country of birth) working in each workforce sector.

[3] The industry sector Agriculture and Fishing has been grouped with Energy and Water due to small sample sizes.

[5] The A8 (Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Slovakia and Slovenia) joined the EU on 1 May 2004 and are included from 2004 Q3 onwards. Bulgaria and Romania joined the EU on 1 January 2007 and are included from 2007 Q1 onwards.

[6] Coefficients of Variation have been calculated for the latest period as an indication of the quality of the estimates, as described as follows:

Guide to Quality:

The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of an estimate, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality. The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV—for example, for an estimate of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent. we would expect the population total to be within the range 180 to 220

Key Coefficient of Variation (CV) (%) Statistical robustness

* 0 = CV <5 Estimates are considered precise.

 5 = CV <10 Estimates are considered reasonably precise.

 10 = CV < 20 Estimates are considered acceptable.

* CV = 20 Estimates are considered too unreliable for practical purposes.

Note:

It should be noted that the aforementioned estimates exclude people in most types of communal establishment (e.g. hotels, boarding houses, hostels, mobile home sites etc.).

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) UK nationals, (b) UK-born people, (c) foreign nationals, (d) non-UK EU nationals and (e) non-EU nationals of working age were in employment in (i) the public sector and (ii) the private sector in each of (A) the last four quarters and (B) the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will also express such numbers as a proportion of each sector in each case. [246180]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking how many (a) UK nationals, (b) UK-born people, (c) foreign nationals, (d) non-UK EU nationals and (e) non-EU nationals of working age were in employment in (i) the public sector and (ii) the private sector in each of (A) the last four quarters and (B) the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will also express such numbers as a proportion of each sector in each case. (246180)

The requested information is shown in the attached tables.

The estimates are derived from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) in order to provide the breakdowns by nationality and country of birth. These estimates are based on the respondents' views about the organisation for which they work. They do not correspond to official Public Sector Employment estimates, which come directly from surveys of employers and are based on National Accounts definitions.

The public sector definition used to answer this question should not be compared with the industry sector breakdown given in your parliamentary question 246179.

As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

The figures in the table are derived from the LFS microdata, which are weighted using the official population estimates published in autumn 2007. Consequently, the estimates from Q3 2006 are not entirely consistent with the figures published in the monthly Labour Market Statistics First Release, or the migrant worker figures published every quarter, which are weighted using more up-to-date population estimates.

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking what the (a) employment and (b) unemployment rate for (i) women, (ii) men and (iii) men and women aged (A) 16 to 24, (B) 25 to 34, (C) 35 to 49 and (D) 50 to 60 years educated to degree level was in each month of the last 10 years. (246577)

The attached tables provide estimated employment and unemployment rates for the age categories requested based on those educated to at least degree level or equivalent, for each quarter since 1998. Monthly data are not available.

The estimates are derived from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

The figures have been derived from the LFS microdata which are weighted using the official population estimates published in autumn 2007. Consequently, the figures from quarter 3 2006 are not entirely consistent with the figures published in the monthly Labour Market Statistics First Release which are weighted using more up-to-date population estimates.

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking how many (a) males, (b) females, (c) foreign nationals and (d) individuals have been in (i) public sector employment, (ii) private sector employment and (iii) employment in each year since 1978. (246806)

The available information requested is provided in the attached table. Comparable estimates prior to 1995 are not available.

The estimates are derived from the Labour Force Survey (LFS). These estimates are based on the respondents' views about the organisation for which they work. They do not correspond to official Public Sector Employment estimates, which come directly from employers and are based on National Accounts definitions.

As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

The figures have been derived from the LFS microdata which are weighted using the official population estimates published in autumn 2007. Consequently the estimates from Q3 2006 onwards are not entirely consistent with the figures published in the monthly Labour Market Statistics First Release, or the migrant worker figures published every quarter, which are weighted using more up-to-date population estimates.

[4] EU A8 comprises Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Slovakia and Slovenia.
[5] Coefficients of Variation have been calculated for the latest period as an indication of the quality of the estimates, as described below:
Guide to Quality:
The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of an estimate, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality. The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV—for example, for an estimate of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent. we would expect the population total to be within the range 180-220.
Key Coefficient of Variation (CV) (%) Statistical robustness
* 0 = CV <5 Estimates are considered precise.
 5 = CV <10 Estimates are considered reasonably precise.
 10 = CV <20 Estimates are considered acceptable.
* CV = 20 Estimates are considered too unreliable for practical purposes.
Note:
It should be noted that the above estimates exclude people in most types of communal establishment (e.g. hotels, boarding houses, hostels, mobile home sites etc.)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) of 19 October 2007, Official Report, column 1353-5W, on migrant workers, what his most recent estimate of the number of migrant workers in the UK between 1997 and 2012 is. [246719]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking what the most recent estimate of the number of migrant workers in the UK between 1997 and 2012 is, with reference to the Answer to the hon. Member for Yeovil of 19 October 2007, Official Report, column 1353-5 W. (246719)

The attached table gives the number of people in employment in the UK of working age, who were either United Kingdom or foreign born, for the three month period ending September, for each year from 1997 to 2008. Projections of migrant workers to 2012 are not available from either the Labour Force Survey (LFS) or the National Population Projections.

When interpreting the figures in the table, it is important to bear in mind the points made in my 19 October 2007 letter about the LFS sampling frame, definitions, coverage and how the survey results are weighted.

The figures in the table differ from those given previously as follows: the survey results are weighted to Autumn 2007 population estimates instead of 2003 population estimates; estimates are provided for 1998 and 2000 as a result of this re-weighting, whereas these estimates were previously unavailable; the three months ending in September have been supplied, as opposed to the three months ending in June, because this gives the most up to date estimate in 2008.

The estimates from Q3 2006 onwards are not entirely consistent with the figures published in the monthly Labour Market Statistics First Release, or the migrant worker figures published every quarter, which are weighted using more up-to-date population estimates.

As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

It should be noted that the country of birth question in the LFS:
excludes those who have not been resident in the UK excludes students in halls who do not have a UK resident parent excludes people in most other types of communal establishment (e.g. Hotels, boarding houses, hostels, mobile home sites etc) is grossed to population estimates that only include migrants staying for twelve months or more microdata are grossed to population estimates consistent with those published in Autumn 2007, meaning estimates are not entirely consistent with the figures published in the monthly Labour Market Statistics First Release.

Home Information Packs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster with reference to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Bromley and Chislehurst

(Robert Neill) of 22 July 2008, Official Report, column 1258W, on departmental property, how many home information packs his Department has purchased to date; and how many of these included home condition reports. [245888]

Kevin Brennan: The Cabinet Office has not purchased any home information packs.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many people had been claiming jobseeker's allowance for a period of (a) less than one month, (b) less than three months, (c) between three and six months, (d) between six and nine months, (e) between nine and 12 months, (f) between 12 and 18 months, (g) between 18 and 24 months and (h) more than 24 months in each month of each of the last four years to date; and if he will make a statement. [246627]

Kevin Brennan: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

(246627)

Table 1, attached, shows the number of computerised claims of Jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for people, aged 16 or over resident in the United Kingdom during each month from December 2005 to November 2008, broken down by the duration of the claim.

Data published for JSA by duration of claim in the Labour Market Statistics First Release are seasonally adjusted. The data provided in Table 1 are not seasonally adjusted because seasonally adjusted series are not available for all of the categories requested. The data will therefore differ to that published.

The latest JSA figures, along with other current and historical labour market indicators for the United Kingdom are available on the Nomis Website, www.nomisweb.co.uk

Mental Illness

Jo Swinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the recommendations relevant to his Department's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capacity and Well-Being; and if he will make a statement. [244018]

Kevin Brennan: The Government are committed to supporting people with mental health problems. Indeed, health and wellbeing is one of the Cabinet Secretary's corporate priorities. The Cabinet Office is working with other Government Departments to improve wellbeing at work to achieve some of the associated benefits such as a reduction in absenteeism.

Additionally, the Social Exclusion Task Force in the Cabinet Office is working closely with other Government Departments to deliver the socially excluded adults public service agreement (PSA 16). PSA 16 aims increase the proportion of four client groups into accommodation and education, employment or training work. These groups are:

People receiving secondary mental health services

People with moderate to severe learning disabilities

Young people who have experienced care

Offenders under probation supervision

Migration

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the Office of National Statistics' most recent estimate is of the number of (a) EU nationals living in the UK and (b) UK nationals living in other EU member states. [246245]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to respond to your questions concerning what the Office for National Statistics' most recent estimate is of the number of (a) EU nationals living in the UK and (b) UK nationals living in other EU member states (246245).

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) collects data on nationality on the Annual Population Survey which covers residents of the UK. The ONS does not routinely collect information regarding UK nationals resident outside the UK.

Estimates from the Annual Population Survey for the time period April 2007 March 2008 show that 1.65 million EU nationals were resident in the UK. This estimate has a margin of error of +/- 53 thousand.

Migration: Australia

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what recent estimate he has made of the number of Australian nationals who were born in the UK; [244048]

(2) what recent estimate he has made of the number of UK nationals who were born in Australia. [244049]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 16 December 2008:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to respond to your questions concerning (a) the number of Australian nationals who were born in the UK (244048) and (b) the number of UK nationals who were born in Australia (244049).

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) collects data on country of birth and nationality on the Annual Population Survey (APS) which is a household survey of UK residents. The APS covers only those people who are resident in the UK at the time of the survey. The estimates provided therefore exclude all Australian nationals who were born in the UK but were not living in the UK at the time of the survey and all UK nationals who were resident elsewhere at that time.

Estimates from the APS for the time period April 2007 - March 2008 show that there were:

10 thousand Australian nationals resident in the UK who were born in the UK. This estimate has a margin of error of +/- 4 thousand.

40 thousand resident UK nationals who were born in Australia. This estimate has a margin of error of +/- 8 thousand.

Minimum Wage and Benefits

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many married couples without children are unemployed and in receipt of jobseeker's allowance and are (a) local authority tenants and (b) private tenants (i) in total and (ii) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [246632]

(2) how many married couple families without children have the head of the family working up to (a) 16 hours a week and (b) 30 hours a week on no more than the national minimum wage, broken down by those that are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [246633]

(3) how many married couple families with (a) one child and (b) two children are unemployed and in receipt of jobseeker's allowance and are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [246634]

(4) how many lone parents with (a) one child and (b) two children are working up to (i) 16 hours a week and (ii) 30 hours a week on no more than the national minimum wage, broken down by those that are (A) local authority tenants and (B) private tenants (1) in total and (2) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [246637]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions.

To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many married couples without children are unemployed and in receipt of jobseeker's allowance and are (a) local authority tenants and (b) private tenants (i) in total and (ii) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. (246632)

To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many married couple families without children have the head of the family working up to (a) 16 hours a week and (b) 30 hours a week on no more than the national minimum wage, broken down by those that are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. (246633)

To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many married couple families with (a) one child and (b) two children are unemployed and in receipt of jobseeker's allowance and are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. (246634)

To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many lone parents with (a) one child and (b) two children are working up to (i) 16 hours a week and (ii) 30 hours a week on no more than the national minimum wage, broken down by those that are (A) local authority tenants and (B) private tenants (1) in total and (2) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. (246637)

The number of people claiming Job Seekers Allowance (JSA) are taken from the Jobcentre Plus administrative system. This system does not collect the family characteristics of claimants nor does it collect information on whether the family is in private or local authority rented accommodation. It is therefore not possible to use this source to provide estimates for the groups requested. The Labour Force Survey (LFS) collects information on individuals claiming JSA but reliable estimates for the groups requested are not available.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) is the principal source of statistics of the earnings of low paid employees. However, the ASHE does not collect information about family characteristics therefore can not provide estimates of the number of families on the national minimum wage.

The LFS can provide estimates of the characteristics of low paid workers but reliable estimates of the number of families on the minimum wage by housing tenure are not available.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many single people aged 25 or over are unemployed and in receipt of jobseeker's allowance and are (a) local authority tenants and (b) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [246813]

(2) how many single people aged 25 or over are working an average of (a) 16 hours a week and (b) 30 hours a week on the national minimum wage, broken down by those that are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [246814]

(3) how many married couple families with (a) one child and (b) two children have the head of the family working (i) 16 hours a week and (ii) 30 hours a week on no more than the national minimum wage, broken down by those that are (A) local authority tenants and (B) private tenants (1) in total and (2) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [246635]

(4) how many lone parents with (a) one child and (b) two children are unemployed and in receipt of jobseeker's allowance and are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [246636]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated January 2009:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions.

To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many married couple families with (a) one child and (b) two children have the head of the family working (i) 16 hours a week and (ii) 30 hours a week on the national minimum wage, broken down by those that are (A) local authority tenants and (B) private tenants (1) in total and (2) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. (246635)

To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many lone parents with (a) one child and (b) two children are unemployed and in receipt of jobseeker's allowance and are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. (246636)

To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many single people aged 25 or over are unemployed and in receipt of jobseeker's allowance and are (a) local authority tenants and (b) private tenants (A) in total and (B) broken down by the smallest geographical area for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. (246813)

To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many single people aged 25 or over are working an average of (a) 16 hours a week and (b) 30 hours a week on the national minimum wage, broken down by those that are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants in total and broken down by the smallest geographical are for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. (246814)

The number of people claiming Job Seekers Allowance (JSA) is taken from the Jobcentre Plus administrative system. This system does not collect the family characteristics of claimants nor does it collect information on whether the family is in private or local authority rented accommodation. It is therefore not possible to use this source to provide estimates for the groups requested. The Labour Force Survey (LFS) collects information on individuals claiming JSA but reliable estimates for the groups requested are not available.

The Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE) is the principle source of statistics of the earnings of low paid employees. However, the ASHE does not collect information about family characteristics and therefore can not provide estimates of the number of families on the national minimum wage.

The LFS can provide estimates of the characteristics of low paid workers but reliable estimates of the number of families on the minimum wage by housing tenure are not available.

Productivity

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the productivity level per worker was in each region in the latest period for which figures are available. [244215]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 16 December 2008:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question on what productivity level per worker was in each region in the latest period for which figures are available. (244215)

The Office for National Statistics does not produce output per worker estimates at a regional level. Output per worker productivity estimates are only available at the UK level with base year 2003=100. Annual productivity statistics at Government Office Region are available for GVA per hour, GVA per job and GVA per head. These are produced with the base being UK=100.

Table 1 attached provides estimates of the index value with UK=100 of GVA per filled job at Government Office Region level for 2006.

Table 1

Region	GVA per filled job
United Kingdom	100.0

Public Consultation

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what guidance he has issued to Departments on the minimum length of consultations outside an election period; and if he will make a statement. [243557]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 15 December 2008]: I have been asked to reply.

The Department is responsible for the Government's Code of Practice on Consultation. This Code sets out how central Government Departments should run their formal, written consultation exercises. Criterion 2 of the Code states that:

"Consultations should normally last for at least 12 weeks with consideration given to longer timescales where feasible and sensible".

Unemployed

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how many and what proportion of people aged over 50 years old were unemployed in (a) each year since 1997 and (b) each of the last eight quarters for which figures are available; [244313]

(2) how many and what proportion of people aged 16 to 24 were unemployed in (a) each year since 1997 and (b) each of the last eight quarters for which figures are available. [244314]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, 17 December 2008:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions asking how many and what proportion of people aged over 50 years old were unemployed in (a) each year since 1997 and (b) each of the last eight quarters for which figures are available. (244313); and how many and what proportion of people aged 16 to 24 were unemployed in (a) each year since 1997 and (b) each of the last eight quarters for which figures are available. (244314)

The requested information is shown in the attached table. The estimates are derived from the Labour Force Survey. As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

The figures in the table are derived from the LFS microdata which are weighted using the official population estimates published in autumn 2007. Consequently the estimates from Q3 2006 are not entirely consistent with the figures published in the monthly Labour Market Statistics First Release, which are weighted using more up-to-date population estimates.

[1] Coefficients of Variation have been calculated for the latest period as an indication of the quality of the estimates, as described as follows:

Guide to Quality:

The Coefficient of Variation (CV) indicates the quality of an estimate, the smaller the CV value the higher the quality. The true value is likely to lie within +/- twice the CV—for example, for an estimate of 200 with a CV of 5 per cent. we would expect the population total to be within the range 180-220.

Key Coefficient of Variation (CV) (%) Statistical robustness

* 0 = CV <5 Estimates are considered precise.

 5 = CV <10 Estimates are considered reasonably precise.

 10 = CV <20 Estimates are considered acceptable.

* CV = 20 Estimates are considered too unreliable for practical purposes.

Note:

It should be noted that the above estimates exclude people in most types of communal establishment (e.g. hotels, boarding houses, hostels, mobile home sites etc.)

Unemployed: Essex

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many unemployed persons in Essex were previously employed in the (a) financial services, (b) hospitality and (c) construction sectors. [243811]

Kevin Brennan: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 16 December 2008:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking how many unemployed persons in Essex were previously employed in the (a) financial services, (b) hospitality industry and (c) construction sectors. (243811)

Reliable estimates at this level of detail are not available.

JUSTICE

Bronzefield Prison

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many women are being held at Bronzefield Prison, Ashford, Middlesex; and how many of them are (a) on remand, (b) serving sentences of less than six months, (c) serving sentences of between six and 12 months, (d) serving sentences of between 12 months and five years, (e) serving time-limited sentences of more than five years, (f) serving life sentences and (g) foreign nationals. [245674]

Mr. Hanson: In response to part (a) of the question, there were 201 female prisoners on remand at Bronzefield on 30 September 2008. The information in response to parts (b) to (f) can be found in the following table, which gives figures for the numbers of female prisoners at Bronzefield Prison at the end of September 2008:

	Determinate sentences
	Less than or equal to 6 months sentence	Greater than 6 months and less than 12 months	12 months and up to and including 5 years	Over 5 years	Indeterminate	Total
Sentenced population	74	28	83	10	6	201

In response to (g), there were 103 foreign national female prisoners at Bronzefield Prison at the end of September 2008. The information on the numbers of foreign national prisoners in Bronzefield can be found at Table 4 of the September issue at the following website:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/populationincustody.htm.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Community Orders: North West

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many community orders were issued in (a) Stockport Metropolitan Borough, (b) Greater Manchester and (c) the North West in each of the last five years. [246076]

Mr. Hanson: The available data for community sentences, including community orders made under the Criminal Justice Act 2003, is contained in the following table.

Data held by the Ministry of Justice is available by Police Force Area (PFA) and the table shows the figures for Greater Manchester PFA, and the North West (comprising Cumbria, Lancashire, Merseyside, Greater Manchester and Cheshire PFAs). Those data are not made available for smaller areas because detailed checks on sentencing data are not carried out at court level.

These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Community Sentences

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether his Department intends to consult on the merits of having people undertaking community service wearing high-visibility jackets. [246166]

Mr. Hanson: The use of distinctive clothing by offenders sentenced to community payback was announced on 1 December. This announcement followed a period of consultation with probation boards, probation trusts and unions. Implementation of this policy by probation areas is being monitored and at this stage no further consultation is planned.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) whether he plans to record incidents of violence or threats made against people on unpaid work projects following the implementation of the visible vests policy; [246743]

(2) how many reported incidents of violence there were against people undertaking unpaid work projects in (a) 2006-07, (b) 2007-08 and (c) 2008-09. [246744]

Mr. Hanson: All incidents and accidents which take place in probation areas are monitored and are identifiable by the level of severity of the accident or incident. It is not currently possible to specifically identify incidents of violence against offenders undertaking unpaid work. Plans to separately monitor incidents relating to unpaid work projects are being developed.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what steps he plans to take to ensure that individuals placed on unpaid work who are known to be involved in gangs are protected from members of rival gangs. [246746]

Mr. Hanson: It is the responsibility of probation areas to ensure the safety of offenders who are undertaking unpaid work, the staff responsible for supervising their work and members of the public. All offenders are subject to risk assessment before being placed. The operation of unpaid work must be responsive to local concerns and probation areas are best placed to identify these concerns. For example London and West Midlands Probation Areas operate unpaid work in areas in which gangs operate. Both areas have established arrangements with the police and other agencies to determine if offenders known to be involved in gangs are likely to be at risk if required to work in certain localities. If concerns are identified, the offender would undertake work at an alternate location.

Sentences: Offensive Weapons

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) how many people have been sentenced to custody in the 10 knife action programme areas for knife-related crimes; [246748]

(2) how many people have been given community supervision orders in the 10 knife action programme areas for knife-related crimes. [246749]

Mr. Straw: Finalised data for sentencing for knife and offensive weapon possession in the 10 Tackling Knives Action Programme (TKAP) areas in 2008 will not be available until 'Sentencing Statistics 2008' is published in November 2009. However, as part of TKAP, provisional data from management information systems are being gathered. These data will be subject to continual revision. The provisional figures available from the Police National Computer indicate that between June and October 2008 in the TKAP areas, 2,036 community penalties, 1,356 immediate custodial sentences and 669 suspended sentence orders were given for offences relating to the possession of a knife or offensive weapon in a public place or on school premises. These figures include adult and juvenile offenders.

The figures quoted in this answer have been taken from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Crime: Treason

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice if he will bring forward amendments to legislation governing offences of treason so that such offences are defined as crimes against the state. [244672]

Maria Eagle: We have no plans at present to reform this area of law. However the Law Commission identified this area as one they might tackle under their simplification of criminal law project in their 10th programme of work (Law Com 311 HC 605).

Data Protection: Internet

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice with reference to the written ministerial statement of 4 December 2008, Official Report, columns 9-11WS, on the Justice and Home Affairs Council, what assurance the Government sought that member states operating the e-justice programme will have in place sufficiently high data security standards to meet UK standards; what assessment his Department has made of the potential for increased fraud as a result of implementation of the e-justice programme; and if he will make further representations on the matter at EU level. [244757]

Mr. Straw: Work on e-Justice is at an early stage and has the objective to improve access to justice for citizens and cooperation between the authorities in each member state. Projects so far have concentrated on the creation of a portal which will allow access through this one site to databases and registers already available to the public. Such databases are already subject to national and European data protection legislation. For future projects, transfers of data to and from the UK must comply with the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1998.

As e-Justice work is still at an early stage of development there have been no specific assessments of the potential for increased fraud but security standards and the associated considerations of identification, authentication and authorisation to use systems are the subject of ongoing discussion. We believe that it is essential that such work must provide sufficient safeguards to minimise the risk of fraud or unauthorised access to data. These are matters which we will continue to press at both official level and at relevant Justice and Home Affairs Councils.

Departmental Aviation

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many journeys (a) he and his predecessors and (b) his officials made by aeroplane in the course of their duties in each of the last five years. [246669]

Mr. Straw: My predecessors, officials and I have undertaken a number of flights over the last five years, the details of which are not possible to provide within the disproportionate cost limit. The Ministry of Justice has no historic record of flights undertaken by the Secretary of State or Ministry of Justice officials. Since April 2007 a record of flights I and my predecessor Lord Falconer have undertaken and the number of officials accompanying us on these flights has been kept by my office. This record indicates that from April 2007 to April 2008 my predecessor undertook one return international flight with two accompanying officials; I undertook one domestic flight with two accompanying officials and three return international flights with four accompanying officials on each journey. Between May 2008 to present I have undertaken one domestic flight with one accompanying official; one return international flight with another Minister and three accompanying officials; one return international flight with three accompanying officials and one multi-stop international visit involving five flights, with four accompanying officials. Travel by Ministers and civil servants is undertaken in accordance with the 'Ministerial Code' and the 'Civil Service Management Code' respectively.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244710]

Mr. Straw: The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to correspondence from Members and Peers. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report column 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House. When responding to all correspondence Departments should abide by the guidance as set out in 'Handling correspondence from MPs, Lords, MEPs and Members of Devolved Assemblies' which was published by the Cabinet office in July 2005 and may be read at:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/propriety and ethics/handling_members_correspondence.aspx.

As at 22 December (the nearest date for which I have records), 81 letters from MPs were outstanding and had not received a response within target.

In respect of emails and correspondence from the public, it is not possible to provide the information within the £750 disproportionate cost limit.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what percentage of correspondence from hon. and right hon. Members he (a) personally answered, (b) passed to ministerial colleagues and (c) asked officials to answer in the last 12 months. [244910]

Mr. Straw: During 2008 I received 4,113 letters from hon. and right hon. Members that raised issues that fell within my Department's remit. I responded to 946 (23 per cent.) of those letters and, except for a small number answered by officials, my ministerial colleagues responded to the remainder.

In addition, I received 649 letters in 2008 that raised issues outside my Department's remit. These were transferred to the relevant Department for answer.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many contracts (a) his Department and (b) its agencies have which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract are held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245348]

Mr. Straw: The Ministry of Justice and its agencies, has one contract for an online training facility which is provided from the United States of America. The application holds the names and payroll references for approximately 4,000 staff who have completed an e-learning package. The company is a member of the United States Safe Harbor agreement, which ensures a similar level of data protection to that required by UK data protection law. All data transfers are required to comply with the Data Protection Act 1998.

The contract expires in April 2009. Options for the future are being considered with a view to ensuring the data will be stored in the UK after that date.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; when the appointment was made; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245367]

Mr. Straw: The Ministry of Justice's senior information risk owner (SIRO) is the Director General of the Democracy, Constitution and Law Group who took over this responsibility in spring 2008, in advance of the Data Handling Review's publication. Prior to her taking over the role, the Ministry of Justice's SIRO was the Director General of Strategy.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [244600]

Mr. Wills: The Government's delivery plan for "Sustainable Procurement and Operations on the Government Estate" update published 18 December 2008 outlines what actions the Ministry of Justice is taking to reduce its energy waste.

Progress will be made through behavioural change: encouraging staff to switch off lights and electrical and electronic equipment when not needed; and as a result of energy audits looking at increasing energy efficiency of the existing estate through initiatives such as: upgrading lighting, installing voltage optimisation kit, optimising time settings for boiler and chiller systems.

Departmental Freedom of Information

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many requests for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 were made to his Department since 2005; how many requests were (a) agreed to and (b) refused in each of those years; how many refusals were subject to appeal to the Information Commissioner in each of those years; how many appeals were successful; if he will place in the Library copies of the material subsequently provided in each case; how much was spent by his Department opposing each appeal; which (i) consultants and (ii) law firms were employed by his Department in connection with each appeal; and if he will make a statement. [244831]

Mr. Wills: The Ministry of Justice has published annual reports containing statistical information on Freedom of Information requests received by monitored bodies (including central Government Departments) in 2005, 2006 and 2007. Statistics on requests received in the first three quarters of 2008 have also been published.

These reports include statistics on the number of non-routine requests received by this Department and the initial outcomes of these requests. They also contain the number of complaints to the Information Commissioner of which we have been notified, and the outcomes of these complaints.

The reports can be found at the following address:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/freedomofinformationquarterly.htm

In addition, copies of each report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Providing copies of material subsequently provided in each case, and identifying any costs relating to consultants or law firms incurred in handling them would incur disproportionate cost. However, in most cases under investigation, Ministry of Justice officials use departmental lawyers or the Central Clearing House, also based here, for specialist advice where necessary. As such, no external cost is incurred.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how much his Department spent on Ministerial hospitality in (a) 2004-05, (b) 2005-06, (c) 2006-07 and (d) 2007-08, expressed in current prices. [241241]

Mr. Straw: The Ministry of Justice has offered various forms of ministerial hospitality over the last four years, the cost of which is not possible to provide within the disproportionate cost limit. Since April 2007 a record of the cost of receptions and formal dinners hosted by me as Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice has been kept by my office. This record indicates that in the financial year 2007-08 spending in these matters was £42,452. The total spending to date in 2008-09 financial year is £68,331. The bulk of this spending is for the Lord Chancellor's Breakfast, hosted for the judiciary and foreign dignitaries on the occasion of the Opening of the Legal Year. All spending on official entertainment is made in accordance with the principles set out in 'Managing Public Money'.

Departmental Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice if he will make it his policy to ensure that those temporary and permanent employees at the same grade in his Department who are paid at an hourly rate are paid at the same rate. [244388]

Mr. Wills: All staff employed directly by the core Ministry of Justice and the National Offender Management Service are subject to the same arrangements for pay irrespective of whether they are temporary (i.e. fixed term) employees or permanent staff.

Where they exist, differences in hourly pay rates for individuals within the same grade are for reasons other than whether the member of staff is fixed term or permanent. Such differences may be the position within the pay band or location. Following machinery of Government changes, there are a small number of staff within the Ministry employed on their former employers' terms and conditions and who opted to retain their legacy pay arrangements. These staff therefore have an hourly salaries determined by those legacy terms.

Hourly rates paid to the staff engaged through temporary Staffing Agencies are determined between the Agency and the individual. When Parliament has decided the implementation date of the Agency Workers Directive, guidance on the terms will be reviewed with suppliers.

Disclosure of Information: Identity Cards

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the status is of the Information Tribunal's consideration of the Appeal by the Office of Government Commerce against the decision notices issued by the Information Commissioner on the disclosure of gateway review documents relating to the Home Office's Identity Cards Programme. [243034]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Information Tribunal first made a decision on this appeal in May 2007, upholding the decision notices of the Information Commissioner requiring the disclosure of the OGC gateway review documents relating to the Home Office's Identity Cards Programme.

In March 2008, this decision was quashed by a High Court ruling, the judge ordering that the appeal should return to a remitted, newly constituted Information Tribunal.

The remitted tribunal sat between the 29 to the 31 October 2008 and heard closing arguments on 10 December 2008, with further written submissions invited from both parties, to be submitted by the 19 December 2008.

The tribunal has indicated that it is likely to release a decision in late January or early February 2009.

Drugs: Rehabilitation

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the average cost was of keeping a person in residential drug rehabilitation for (a) one week and (b) one year in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [243285]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The National Treatment Agency for Substance Misuse (NTA) supports an online directory of residential drug and alcohol treatment services, which is available via the NTA website at:

http://www.nta.nhs.uk/about_treatment/treatment_directories/residential/resdirectory_f.aspx

This directory contains a range of information, including cost, self-reported by approximately 75 per cent. of residential rehabilitation services in England and Wales, and as such it does not represent a comprehensive or necessarily robust picture. Of the providers in the directory, the average (median) cost, as at the end of November 2008, of a week in a residential rehabilitation service is around £500. A residential programme typically runs for three to six months. Information about the cost of residential drug rehabilitation programmes which last for a year is not separately identified.

Elections: Greater London

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what timetable has been set for the completion of the cost-benefit assessment of e-counting in the 2008 London elections; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the assessment once it is completed. [245976]

Mr. Wills: London Elects, as the body responsible for running the London Mayoral and Assembly elections, is conducting a cost-benefit analysis of e-counting in the 2008 London elections. The Ministry of Justice is not involved. I will nevertheless ask London Elects if they will write to the hon. Member with details.

Electoral Commission: Powers of Entry

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether he has consulted the Electoral Commission on whether the proposed new powers of entry for the Electoral Commission in the Political Parties and Elections Bill will potentially allow entry into the homes of (a) trades union staff and (b) trades union members who donate to a political party through paying a political levy, in trades unions that affiliate to a political party; and if he will make a statement. [246726]

Mr. Wills: The Political Parties and Elections Bill currently provides for two specific, constrained, powers of entry. The provisions were discussed with the Electoral Commission during their development.

The first is a restatement of the existing power under section 146(3) of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000, which allows the Commission to enter premises and take copies of information relating to income and expenditure from a registered political party, a recognised third party and a permitted participant in a referendum. This power can be exercised by the Commission for the purposes of carrying out its functions but does not authorise the use of force to enter premises. However, it is a criminal offence to intentionally obstruct the Commission from entering premises.

This power is replicated in clause 1(5) of schedule 19A (to be inserted into the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 by schedule 1 to the Bill). It is, however, extended in its scope to encompass candidates (other than candidates in Scottish local government elections), election agents, regulated donees (including MPs) and regulated participants.

In addition, the Political Parties and Elections Bill seeks to provide new powers for use by the Commission when it undertakes an investigation in circumstances where it has reasonable grounds for suspecting that a breach of PPERA has taken place: specifically, the Bill provides the Commission with new powers to request information, to put questions and to apply for a warrant to enable it to enter premises when carrying out an investigation into a suspected offence or other contravention of the 2000 Act; each of these new powers is subject to a series of safeguards. These powers and the associated safeguards are set out in schedule 1 of the Bill, which proposes to insert a new schedule 19A into the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000.

In relation to the new power to enter premises, under paragraph 3 of schedule 19A the Commission will need to apply for a warrant: there is no automatic right of entry. For a warrant to be issued, the Commission must demonstrate on oath to a justice of the peace that it has reasonable grounds for believing that an offence has been committed (or other contravention of PPERA has occurred). The Commission must also satisfy a justice of the peace that documents are on any premises that were withheld following an earlier request made under paragraph 2(2) of the schedule or that are otherwise relevant to the investigation. When entering the premises that a warrant authorises entry into, any Commission staff must be accompanied at all times by a constable.

A warrant issued under paragraph 3 is capable of applying to any person or organisation that the tests in the paragraph above are met. On that basis it is capable of applying to trade unions and their members in the same way that it may apply to any other person or organisation.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether he plans to table an amendment to the Political Parties and Elections Bill to restrict the Electoral Commission's powers of entry into regulated donees in respect of (a) the offices of hon. Members within Parliament, (b) the offices of noble Lords within Parliament and (c) the parliamentary offices located at 4 Millbank. [246728]

Mr. Wills: As I indicated at Committee stage of the Political Parties and Elections Bill, we have heard the force of opinion in the House on the issue of the Commission's powers and will consider what can be done to address it.

We are considering how best to do so while delivering the objective of empowering the Commission to investigate more effectively, together with ensuring that its powers are subject to appropriate safeguards.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what his proposed definition is of reasonable cause for a magistrate to give permission for the Electoral Commission to use its new suggested powers of entry. [246738]

Mr. Wills: The Political Parties and Elections Bill proposes that the Electoral Commission may apply to a justice of the peace for a search warrant to authorise the entry of premises.

In order to issue a warrant a justice of the peace must be satisfied, having had regard to information given on oath by the Commission, that there are reasonable grounds for believing that an offence or other breach of PPERA has been committed or has taken place. In addition the justice of the peace must also be satisfied that there are on the premises for which the warrant was sought documents that that have previously been required to be produced or which are otherwise relevant to the Commission's investigation. Further detail about the proposed power of entry and search by warrant is set out in paragraph 3 of schedule 1. It would ultimately be for a court, taking all relevant factors into consideration, to decide whether the above requirements were met and whether issuing a warrant was appropriate as a result.

Electoral Register: Databases

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what effect the planned reductions in his Department's spending will have on (a) progress on the proposed CORE electoral database and (b) numbers of staff in his Department's electoral law and regulation division. [246727]

Mr. Wills: The Co-ordinated Online Record of Electors (CORE) project is funded from a ring fenced capital allocation. Funds are released for expenditure subject to an annual bidding process. We do not anticipate that this position will change as a result of the Ministry of Justice's Performance and Efficiency Programme.

Staffing requirements in Elections and Democracy Division are reviewed based on its work load and the skills required and this will continue.

Freedom of Information

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the average length of time is for (a) the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) and (b) the ICO Freedom of Information Operation Team 5—Local Government (South) to allocate a freedom of information case to a caseworker. [244169]

Mr. Wills: Figures available relate to Freedom of Information cases closed by the ICO between April 2007 and September 2008.

Of the cases closed by the ICO between April 2007 and March 2008, the average number of days from receipt by the ICO to allocation to a case officer was 69. Between April and September 2008, the average time taken for allocation following receipt by the ICO was 64 days.

Of the cases closed by FOI Operation Team 5—Local Government (South) between April 2007 and March 2008, the average number of days from receipt by Team 5 to allocation to a complaints officer was 117. Between April and September 2008, the average time taken for allocation following receipt by Team 5 was 130 days.

This information has been provided by the ICO.

HM Courts Service: Finance

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 865W, on HM Courts Service: finance, upon what assumptions on changes to the volume of cases the estimate of additional income was based; and what assessment he has made of the accuracy of such assumptions. [241156]

Mr. Straw: The estimation of the additional income of £28 million from family court fees was calculated by taking prior year volumes of new care cases issued, and adjusting that volume to take into account an initial drop as a result of the introduction of the new Public Law Outline in April 2008. In addition, the estimation also included volumes from existing cases that had been issued prior to the introduction of the new fee charge, and that would incur the new fee charges after 1 May 2008.

The assessment of the accuracy of the assumptions was based on an understanding of the low volatility and identifiable trend of those application volumes in recent years.

Human Trafficking: Refuges

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what referral criteria are put in place for the Poppy Project; and whether the Government has recently considered amending such criteria. [243312]

Maria Eagle: To qualify for safe accommodation under the Government-funded Poppy project individuals must be over 18 years old, trafficked into the United Kingdom and sexually exploited in England and Wales. Priority for accommodation is given to individuals that have experienced exploitation in the immediate three months prior to referral. This year we also piloted support provisions for victims of trafficking for forced labour and domestic servitude.

We ratified the Council of Europe convention on action against trafficking in human beings on 17 December 2008. This will require us to have minimum levels of support for all identified victims of human trafficking by spring 2009. We are currently tendering for a national support model for victims of human trafficking for sexual exploitation and domestic servitude, as they share similar high-level support needs. We are also working with the United Kingdom Human Trafficking Centre to develop support services for victims trafficked into forced labour.

Human Trafficking: Victims

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what services his Department provides to people who are identified as having been trafficked. [241134]

Maria Eagle: The Ministry of Justice and the Home Office jointly funds the Poppy project to provide specialist, high-level support to victims of human trafficking for sexual exploitation. Victims are provided with a 30 day reflection period, accommodation, advocacy support, access to counselling, interpretative services, access to immigration legal advice, resettlement support and a range of other services to meet their individual needs. The Poppy project also has outreach team. This year the Government piloted support services for victims trafficked into domestic servitude and forced labour.

We ratified the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings on 17 December 2008 and will come into force in April 2009. This will see the introduction of a 45-day minimum reflection period and one-year temporary residence permits, both of which will be extendable in certain circumstances. We will also introduce a national support service model with an increased number of supported accommodation places.

Monarchy: Succession

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what plans he has to bring forward legislative proposals to amend those provisions of the Act of Settlement relating to the Royal Succession; and what recent representations he has received on the matter. [244129]

Mr. Straw: The Government have always stood firmly against discrimination in all its forms, including against Roman Catholics, and we will continue to do so. To bring about changes to the law on succession would be a complex undertaking involving amendment or repeal of a number of items of related legislation, as well as requiring the consent of legislatures of member nations of the Commonwealth. We are examining this complex area although there are no immediate plans to legislate.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice if he will publish (a) the Offender Management Strategy 2008 and (b) the evidence base on which it draws. [246930]

Mr. Hanson: The publication 'Punishment and reform: our approach to managing offenders' was published on 17 December 2008 and is available on the Ministry of Justice website and a copy will be placed in the Libraries of the House. It explains how the principles of punishment and reform underpin our approach to offender management.

A strategic review of offender management took place in 2007. A summary report was made available to probation services in January 2008. I am arranging for a copy of the summary to be placed in the Library of both Houses. The purpose of the Offender Management Strategic Review was to set the direction for the implementation of future phases of offender management within the National Offender Management Service. The review drew on an extensive programme of consultation with practitioners and other interested parties including the findings from Offender Management Inspection reports by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Probation which are public documents.

National Offender Management Service: Manpower

Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) what staff resources the National Offender Management Service proposes to allocate to directors of offender management; [246138]

(2) what salary the National Offender Management Service proposes to pay its directors of offender management; [246139]

(3) what the (a) job description and (b) person specification for the post of director of offender management is; [246140]

(4) what estimate he has made of the cost savings from the change from regional offender managers to directors of offender management in the National Offender Management Service. [246141]

Mr. Hanson: Directors of Offender Management will be the single point of accountability in English regions and in Wales. They will lead the total system incorporating probation services, public sector prisons, contracted prisons and partnerships for the provision of offender management. Director appointments will be finalised early in 2009 and NOMS management are currently designing the regional structures and finalising staff numbers. Final staff numbers will be available in March 2009.

The director of offender management role has been evaluated, in all cases, to be senior civil servant (SCS) pay band 2. The salaries paid will be commensurate with this pay band and are expected to be in the region of £80,000 to £120,000. The exact salaries of the directors will be different because the roles vary in scale and this will be recognised accordingly.

It is expected that the savings generated from the regional restructuring in the National Offender Management Service, which includes the creation and appointment of directors of Offender Management will be in the order of £5 million to £10 million.

The job description and person specification have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Open Prisons: Prisoner Escapes

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to his answer of 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 300-1W, on open prisons: prisoner escapes, what plans he has to reduce the number of absconds from open prisons. [245207]

Mr. Hanson: Levels of abscond have fallen over the last decade and are still declining. They are now 54 per cent. lower than in 1996-97. Prisoners undergo a risk assessment process before been considered for open conditions and those considered to be at risk of absconding are not allocated to the open estate. Open prisons take a variety of actions to reduce absconding including effective screening of prisoners when they arrive at the prison coupled with intelligence work within the prison to identify potential absconders and send them back to closed conditions. Work is also being undertaken with the police and CPS to ensure that wherever possible absconders are prosecuted as a deterrent to others. Despite excellent progress in this area we are far from complacent and in the coming year the National Offender Management Service will be building on these achievements to ensure that the downward trend in absconds continues and that best practice is spread across all areas of the country.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 11 December 2008, Official Report, columns 300-01W, on open prisons: prisoner escapes, what each of the 125 offences committed by prisoners while unlawfully at large in each of the last 24 months was. [246289]

Mr. Hanson: Data in the following table show the main categories of further offences that prisoners have been charged with committing while unlawfully at large from open prisons in England and Wales between December 2006 and November 2008.

Further offences with which prisoners were charged while unlawfully at large from open prisons during the period 1 December 2006 to 30 November 2008

Political Parties and Elections Bill

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether he intends that the Political Parties and Elections Bill will be enacted before the June 2009 European and local elections. [246732]

Mr. Wills: The timing of Royal Assent of the Political Parties and Elections Bill, which the Justice Secretary introduced to this House on 17 July, and the commencement of its provisions will depend on its progress through Parliament. However, as I said in response to the question of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1684-85W) and during the Committee Stage of the Political Parties and Elections Bill on 18 November 2008, Official Report, column 281, even if the Bill receives Royal Assent before the European Parliamentary elections on 4 June 2009, we do not plan to commence the provisions in clause 16 of the Bill before that date.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) of 15 September 2008, Official Report, column 2028W, on the Political Parties and Elections Bill 2007-08, in what ways the proposed new trigger rules, prior to the publication of guidance, will remedy the difficulties with the old trigger rules referred to (a) in the case of Fiona Jones and R v. Desmond Whicher [1999] EWCA Crim 1094 and (b) the Fifth Report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life; and if he will make a statement. [246733]

Mr. Wills: Clause 11 of the Political Parties and Elections Bill would reintroduce the long-standing principle which existed prior to the passage of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 that all spending used by candidates for the purposes of their election campaign should count towards the candidate spending limit (often referred to as "triggering").

The legislation defining candidate spending has been updated since the previous system of triggering was in place and clause 11 does not propose a return to the precise wording that existed prior to 2000. Section 76 of the Representation of the People Act 1983 ("the 1983 Act") described candidate expenses as those "on account of or in respect of the conduct or management of the election". This wording was removed from section 76 of the 1983 Act by section 132 of the 2000 Act. Section 27 of the Electoral Administration Act 2006 ("the 2006 Act") inserted new section 90ZA into the 1983 Act, which clarifies that "election expenses" in relation to a candidate at an election means any expenses incurred at any time in respect of any matter specified in Part 1 of Schedule 4A of the 1983 Act (also inserted by section 27 of the 2006 Act) which is used for the purposes of the candidate's election after the date when he becomes a candidate at the election. A person is defined as a 'candidate' according to section 118A of the 1983 Act.

Clause 11 of the Bill would not restore the previous wording of the 1983 Act. Rather it amends section 90ZA such that the definition of election expenses is capable of including those expenses incurred and used by a person before that person formally becomes a 'candidate' by virtue of section 118 A.

The Fifth Report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life (the Neill Report), published in 1998, identified problems with the legislation on candidate expenditure as it stood at the time. The key problems which the Neill Report identified were around which items of expenditure should count towards election expenses and which should not; and when a constituency campaign is to be deemed to have begun. These problems were identified again in the judgement of the England and Wales Court of Appeal (Criminal Division) in the case of Fiona Jones Desmond Whicher, R v. [1999], which quoted from the Neill Report. The then Lord Chief Justice of England and Wales, Lord Bingham of Cornhill, noted that there was no simple and decisive test to determine whether an expense was or was not to be regarded as en election expense within the meaning of the Act at the time.

In the case of which items should count towards election expenses, Neill specifically criticised Schedule 3 of the 1983 Act. That Schedule provided a form of return for candidates to complete their declaration as to election expenses. As Neill noted, however, the form largely reproduced the equivalent Schedule in the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Act of 1883 and was therefore considerably out of date. Neill recommended that the Schedule should be revised such that it contained a full and up to date list of items of expenditure (recommendation 46). The 2000 Act accordingly repealed Schedule 3 of the 1983 Act. The 2006 Act inserted new Schedule 4A into the 1983 Act. This Schedule lists in detail the matters which are, and are not, to be regarded as election expenses, providing far greater clarity for candidates than under the previous system of triggering that existed before 2000.

In the case of determining when a constituency campaign is deemed to have begun, Neill noted the considerable doubt on this point for candidates and political parties, as the 1983 Act made no attempt to define the period of the election or the election campaign. However, Neill concluded "despite the difficulties, it is possible for parties, nationally as well as locally, to distinguish in most situations between election and non-election spending".

Neill therefore recommended that the precedent established by the 1983 Act should continue to be followed, and that expenditure limits should continue to be set in terms of the purpose for which expenditure is incurred rather than in terms of any specified time period (recommendation 51). It is this principle, specifically endorsed by the Neill Report, which clause 11 of the Bill seeks to restore with regard to the candidate spending limit.

As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Justice and Lord Chancellor said during the first evidence session of the Public Bill Committee, the trigger arrangements are not "perfect, but they did act as a dampener". The Government believe that the changes made to the legislation since the passage of the 2000 Act are significant steps in addressing the points made in the Neill Report and the Fiona Jones judgement relating to determining the purpose of expenditure.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) of 15 September 2008, Official Report, column 2028W, on the Political Parties and Elections Bill 2007-08, if he will issue guidance on whether the proof of two elements (a) that the expenditure should be closely related to the machinery of an election and (b) that the expenses should be primarily or principally incurred for the promotion of the interests of the candidate will again apply in defining local candidate expenditure under the reintroduced trigger rules. [246734]

Mr. Wills: The Ministry of Justice has no plans to issue guidance on these points. Clause 12 of the Bill provides that the Electoral Commission may issue guidance, supplementing the definition in section 90ZA(3) of the Representation of the People Act 1983, as to the case or circumstances in which expenses are, or are not, to be regarded as incurred for the purposes of a candidate's election.

Political Parties: Finance

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) of 15 September 2008, Official Report, column 2028W, on political parties: finance, what assumptions were made in preparing the impact assessments for the Bill of the consequences of the Electoral Commission guidance on trigger rules being issued after the rules have been commenced at Royal Assent. [246731]

Mr. Wills: Clause 12 of the Political Parties and Elections Bill amends an existing power granted to the Electoral Commission to issue a code of practice giving guidance on the list of regulated matters for candidate spending (set out in part 1 of schedule 4A of the Representation of the People Act 1983, as inserted by the Electoral Administration Act 2006). Clause 12 of the Bill provides that the Commission may also include in any code of practice guidance, supplementing the definition in section 90ZA(3) of the 1983 Act, on when expenditure will be regarded as for election purposes.

Clause 11 of the Bill would alter the regulation of candidate expenditure such that all expenditure used for the purposes of an individual's election will be regulated by the candidate spending limit, regardless of when that expenditure is incurred.

In preparing the impact assessment for clause 11, no assumption was made about the length of time between the commencement of clause 11 of the Bill and the production of a code, of practice or other guidance by the Electoral Commission.

As stated in the answer provided on 15 September, a code of practice is not a prerequisite to clause 11 of the Bill coming into force. Nevertheless, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Justice and Lord Chancellor clearly stated during the first public evidence session of the Bill's Committee stages on 4 November, it is our intention that guidance from the Commission should be in place before the commencement of clause 11.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether he plans to raise the de minimis level for recording donations to political parties from £200 to reflect inflation since the limit was first introduced. [246736]

Mr. Wills: As I said during Committee stage debates on the Bill, the Government are keen to secure broad consensus to the package of reforms in the Political Parties and Elections Bill. With that in mind, the Government will consider whether it is appropriate to raise the £200 threshold for recording donations contained in the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 (PPERA). We are open to representations on this point.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 6 November 2008, Official Report, column 752W, on political parties: finance, if he will make it his policy for statutory guidance which is approved by the Secretary of State and which originates from government-sponsored legislation to be compliant with the Government's Code of Practice on Guidance on Regulation, with specific reference to the time for consultation on and compliance with regulation. [246737]

Mr. Wills: We have no current plans to do so.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr. Maude) of 17 September 2008, Official Report, columns 2291-2W, on political parties: finance, whether hon. Members who are deemed to have breached the rules of the Communications Allowance by the House, by virtue of promoting themselves in a partisan manner, will be deemed to have triggered their local candidates' election expenses under the proposed new trigger rules. [246742]

Mr. Wills: As I wrote in a letter sent to Members of Public Bill Committee on the Political Parties and Elections Bill on 19 November 2008, a copy of which I have placed in the Library of the House, depending on the circumstances of the case, and depending on the nature of the expenditure that led to a complaint, if an MP was found guilty of abusing the Communications Allowance then the follow-on effect might well be that the expenditure would have triggered that MP's candidate expenditure limit. That would be the case where the Communications Allowance is used to fund expenditure on a matter listed in schedule 4A for the purposes of promoting his or her election as a candidate at a general election. However, being found guilty of breaching the rules regarding use of the allowance would not automatically lead to a triggering of an MP's election expenses.

Prison Sentences

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many prisoners currently serving prison sentences have served beyond their original or adjusted tariff. [244197]

Mr. Hanson: On 15 December 2008 there were 3,900 indeterminate sentenced prisoners in custody recorded as being beyond their original or adjusted tariff.

This figure is taken from the Public Protection Unit Database (PPUD) within the National Offender Management Service. As with any large scale recording system, it is subject to possible errors arising from either data entry or processing.

It remains for the Parole Board to determine whether the risk presented by any lifer or IPP offender is such that it may be safely managed in the community.

Prisoner Escapes

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many prisoners have escaped from police, Prison Service or contracted agents' custody whilst in transit or otherwise whilst under escort outside the secure custodial estate in each of the last 10 years. [245155]

Mr. Hanson: Levels of escapes are currently at their lowest levels since central recording of this data began in 1995. Data in the following table show the number of prisoners who have escaped from escort between April 1998 and March 2008 broken down by (a) Prison Service escorts (b) contractor escorts. Data on numbers of escapes from police escorts is not collated centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by contacting every police force in the country.

Number of Prisoners who have escaped from escort

	HMPS Escorts	Contractor Escorts[1]	Total
1998-99	7	55	62
1999-2000	8	59	67
2000-01	8	58	66
2001-02	11	40	51
2002-03	12	33	45
2003-04	6	33	39
2004-05	8	28	36
2005-06	8	17	25
2006-07	6	19	25
2007-08	2	16	18

[1]. Data on escapes from contractor escorts includes escorts from police station to court as these are carried out by National Offender Management Service contractors. These figures do not include other police-related escort escapes such as escapes whilst been transported from point of arrest to police station or transport between police stations.

Notes:

1. All figures shown are for KPI Escapes recorded as part of the NOMS performance management system.
2. These figures have been drawn from administrative data systems. Although care is taken when processing and analysing the returns, the detail collected is subject to the inaccuracies inherent in any large scale recording system.

Prisoners

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the average population of (a) the open prison estate and (b) the entire prison estate in England and Wales was in each of the last five years. [245154]

Mr. Hanson: Figures relating to the total numbers of prisoners detained in both (a) all open prison establishments in England and Wales, and (b) the entire prison estate in England and Wales as at 30 June 2004 to 2008 can be found in the following table:

Open and total prison population as at 30 June 2004 to 2008 (England and Wales)

	Total open[1] prisons	Total prison population
2004	4,439	74,488
2005	4,410	76,190
2006	3,831	77,982
2007	4,252	79,734
2008	5,857	83,194

[1] Excludes those prison establishments which are not wholly open

The information regarding the total prison population can be found at the following website:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/populationincustody.htm

Information regarding the status of individual prisons can be found at the following website:

http://www.hmprisonservice.gov.uk/prisoninformation/locateaprison/

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Mr. Timpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what estimate he has made of the effect on trends in the prison population of implementing section 12 of the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004. [245477]

Mr. Hanson: Many changes in legislation and policy with a definite timetable for implementation are incorporated into the published prison population projections.

The most significant factors which the Department deems relevant to and incorporates into the projections are:

Trends in sentencing behaviour, such as sentence lengths and custody rates.

Trends in crime, incorporated through the Criminal Justice System model.

Legislative impacts, such as the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008.

Procedural impacts, such as the Simple, Speedy, Summary Justice (CJSSS) scheme, and measures to increase offences brought to justice contributing to PSA24.

Factors that do not have an agreed timetable for implementation, such as the implementation of S12 of the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004, cannot be incorporated in the projections. However, analysis of options for implementation of S12 and their effects on the prison population will be made in preparation for commencement of that measure.

More details on the prison projections may be found in the latest published bulletin, 'Prison Population Projections 2008-2015' Ministry of Justice Statistics Bulletin, 18 September 2008. This is available at the following webpage:

Prisoners Release

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what steps the Government is taking to reduce the length of time between a prisoner's release and receipt of financial assistance. [245578]

Mr. Hanson: Officials from National Offender Management Service (NOMS) and the Department for Work and Pensions are working in partnership to ensure offenders receive financial assistance and benefits without unnecessary delay once released. Where there is a delay in receiving benefit claimed for, this is normally due to incorrectly completed benefit application forms or lack of formal identification. NOMS is now assisting offenders in gaining formal identification as part of normal resettlement processes and works closely with visiting Jobcentre Plus officials to ensure timely and accurate applications are made wherever possible. NOMS has also embarked on a number of other initiatives to assist in this process such as; exploring the benefits of arranging bank accounts, providing money management advice, financial capability training and assistance with setting up a Freshstart interview with Jobcentre Plus on release.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how long on average it takes for an ex-prisoner to receive his discharge grant. [246066]

Mr. Hanson: All eligible prisoners are paid the discharge grant at the point of release from custody.

Prisoners Release: Foreigners

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) how many foreign national prisoners released from prison and subject to offender management programmes have breached the conditions and obligations of such programmes in each of the last five years; [245787]

(2) how many foreign national prisoners released from prison and subject to offender management programmes and residency requirements (a) who have breached those residency requirements and (b) have whereabouts unknown to the National Offender Management Service there were in each of the last three years; [245788]

(3) how many foreign national prisoners released on licence have failed to report to their offender manager in each of the last five years. [245790]

Mr. Hanson: While information is collected by probation areas and trusts that list breaches of licence condition, it does not record offender's nationality.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice on how many occasions offender managers in cases involving foreign national prisoners whose cases fall within the scope of the victim contact scheme have not informed victim liaison officers of a prisoner's release into the community from custodial or immigration detention in each of the last three years. [245789]

Mr. Hanson: This information is not collated centrally by the National Offender Management Service. To attempt to obtain the information requested would require manual checking of case files and interviews with members of staff and would incur disproportionate cost.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many foreign national prisoners granted immigration bail by Asylum and Immigration Tribunals have subsequently reoffended in each of the last five years. [245791]

Mr. Hanson: Information relating to the numbers of foreign national prisoners subject to deportation action who have completed their custodial sentence and been released on bail is not centrally collated at present. Similarly, reoffending data do not specifically identify the number of foreign national prisoners who reoffend. In order to provide the information requested it would be necessary to examine individual case files at disproportionate cost.

When a foreign criminal who is subject to deportation action is granted bail by the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal and it is believed that the individual presents a risk of harm to the public, the UK Border Agency will always request that the most robust restrictions are imposed upon the individual in order to minimise the likelihood that they will reoffend. The agency will continue to pursue deportation action against such individuals and is on track to not only meet but exceed its target of deportation or removing 5,000 foreign criminals in 2008. Good progress has also been made overall in reducing reoffending; the latest figures show that between 2000 and 2006 the number of reoffences committed by offenders released from custody has fallen 15.1 per cent.

Prisoners: Armed Forces

Sir Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many (a) male and (b) female former members of the (i) Royal Navy, (ii) Army, (iii) and Royal Air Force are in prison; and what studies his Department has (A) commissioned and (B) evaluated in links between service in the armed forces and subsequent behaviour leading to detention. [245189]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is not available. Although data from nationally representative surveys of some 2,000 sentenced prisoners near release conducted in 2001, 2003 and 2004 showed that the proportion of prisoners who had previously served in the armed forces in those years as 6 per cent., 4 per cent, and 5 per cent, respectively, no research was done on the particular problems raised in the question.

We are currently exploring with the Ministry of Defence ways to better identify the number of veterans currently serving prison sentences as well as the factors associated with their offending. A number of options are currently being assessed.

Prisoners: Custody

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) how many adult prisoners serving indeterminate sentences for public protection were in custody on 15 December 2008 beyond their minimum tariff; [245156]

(2) how many adults were serving indeterminate sentences for public protection on 15 December 2008. [245157]

Mr. Hanson: On 15 December 2008 there were 1,224 indeterminate sentence for public protection prisoners aged over 18, in custody, recorded as being beyond their original or adjusted tariff.

As of 15 December 2008, there were 4,581 offenders, aged over 18 years old recorded as serving indeterminate sentences for public protection.

These figures are taken from the Public Protection Unit Database within the National Offender Management Service. As with any large scale recording system, it is subject to possible errors arising from either data entry or processing.

It is for the independent Parole Board to determine whether the risk presented by an offender serving an indeterminate sentence of imprisonment for public protection is such that it may be safely managed in the community.

Prisoners: Foreign Nationality

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many (a) Swedish and (b) Danish nationals are serving sentences in prisons in England and Wales. [245263]

Mr. Hanson: At the end of September 2008 there were (a) 15 Swedish and (b) eight Danish prisoners serving sentences in prison establishments in England and Wales.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Prisoners: Islam

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many Muslim prisoners there were in each prison in October (a) 2003, (b) 2004, (c) 2005, (d) 2006, (e) 2007 and (f) 2008; and what proportion of prisoners this represented in each prison. [245583]

Mr. Hanson: Figures showing the numbers and percentages of Muslim prisoners in each prison establishment in England and Wales on 30 June each year can be found in the following tables.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing, and prisons with fewer than 50 Muslim prisoners have been excluded.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what estimate he has made of the number of prisoners in each prison who have converted to Islam while in prison in (a) 2008 and (b) each of the previous five years. [246533]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is not collected in the form required, and could be obtained only at significant disproportionate cost. When a prisoner changes religion this is recorded locally by the chaplaincy team on the prisoner's record. There is no current requirement for this information to be collated centrally.

Prisons

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many prisoners were unable to attend workshops, courses or other rehabilitative sessions due to wing refurbishment or other building works in each prison in England and Wales in the last year for which figures are available; for how many days prisoners were made to attend such courses in that period; and if he will make a statement. [245152]

Mr. Hanson: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) do not hold information on the number of prisoners that were unable to attend workshops, courses or other rehabilitative sessions due to wing refurbishment or other buildings works in prisons in England and Wales.

Building works and refurbishments are essential to enable the Prison Service to ensure that the existing facilities are maintained and additionally to provide the number of prisoner places required to meet the needs of an increasing prison population. Since April 2007 the capacity programme has delivered 4,162 essential additional prisoner places.

Every effort is made to prevent disruption to prison regimes and each prison endeavours to continue to provide a range of purposeful activities. NOMS measures the amount of purposeful activity recorded on average by every prisoner, the outturn for 2007-08 was 25.3 hours per prisoner per week.

The following table provides details of the workshop, education and rehabilitation hours completed by prisoners in all prisons in England and Wales during the period 2007-08.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many prisons are at more than 150 per cent. of in use certified normal accommodation. [245153]

Mr. Hanson: On 31 October 2008 (latest available), there were 13 out of 140 prison establishments in England and Wales with more than 150 per cent of in use certified normal accommodation.

This information has been taken from the Ministry of Justice publication "Population in Custody Monthly Brief" which can be found at the following website:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/populationincustody.htm

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what procedures must be followed to consult the governor of a prison on proposals to downgrade that prison. [245458]

Mr. Hanson: Prison performance ratings are determined by Criminal Justice Strategy Group using a range of performance data. The proposed ratings are reviewed by the chief operating officer, National Offender Management Service (NOMS), who provides the opportunity for area managers to consult governors and propose moderation. Following consultation the chief operating officer may choose to submit a request to amend a rating to the moderation panel chaired by the director general of the Criminal Justice Strategy Group. Moderated ratings were published on the NOMS intranet on Friday 12 December 2008.

Prisons: Mental Health Services

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what account is taken of the security categorisation of prisoners when making decisions about moving prisoners to secure hospitals. [246207]

Mr. Hanson: The prime concern when considering the suitability of a prisoner for transfer to a mental health hospital is to guard against danger to the public that may ensue should a patient escape from, or be improperly allowed out of, that hospital.

While the prisoner's security category is an element of the consideration, account is taken of more far-reaching factors when making this decision. These include, but are not limited to:

- the type and nature of the offence
- length of sentence
- notoriety
- victim issues
- previous convictions
- behaviour in prison
- any previous absconds
- prisoner's security category
- views expressed by the court
- the medical practitioners' recommendations
- the prisoner's past and current presenting symptoms (e.g. actively suicidal or assaultative) clinical need

Prisons: Visits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice at which prisons it is the practice to (a) photograph and (b) take fingerprint impressions from official visitors; and what action is taken in respect of such records following a visit. [245673]

Mr. Hanson: There is no requirement for establishments to provide data to headquarters about how they use and operate their systems and there is no central record of numbers of these systems in place across the country.

The information requested is not collated centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by contacting each prison individually.

Probation Service for England and Wales

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the size of the Probation Service's caseload in England and Wales is for (a) community supervision, (b) licence and (c) through care. [246750]

Mr. Hanson: At 30 June 2008, the number of offenders supervised by the Probation Service in England and Wales under community supervision was 147,786; the number supervised on post release licence was 31,583; and the number supervised pre-release was 68,407.

These figures are taken from the Probation Statistics Quarterly Brief, April to June 2008, which can be found at the following website:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/probationquarterly.htm.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Royal Family: Wills

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what discussions his Department and its predecessors have had with (a) Buckingham Palace and (b) lawyers acting for the Royal Family on the publication practice on Royal wills in the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [242080]

Mr. Straw: An application to seal a royal will is made to the Principal Registry of the Family Division and is decided by the President of the Family Division. In the last 10 years there have been two such applications; namely those in respect of Her Royal Highness Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon and Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother. So far as I am aware, there have not been any discussions between my Department and its predecessors with Buckingham Palace or lawyers acting for the Royal Family in relation to the policy or practice on the publication of royal wills.

Sexual Offences: Drugs

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice with reference to his answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, columns 1691-2W, on sexual offences: drugs, how many of the 11 convicted sex offenders referred for initial assessment have been given anti-libidinal drug treatment. [246325]

Mr. Hanson: This information is not recorded centrally. Due to the small numbers involved the information could not be obtained and reported without breaching medical confidentiality.

Sight Impaired

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what guidelines his Department follows in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness. [245721]

Mr. Wills: The Department is committed to accessibility, and in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible, follows guidance which is consistent with the Royal National Institute for the Blind guidance and Central Office of Information Informability for making information accessible.

The Department's standard approach is to produce information materials in black text on white background, which provides a good contrast for people with sight impairment, including red/green colour blindness. The Department also endeavours to provide alternative formats to meet specific needs, if required.

Young Offenders: Mental Health Services

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what meetings have taken place between the (a) National Offender Management Service and (b) Youth Justice Board and the Welsh Assembly Government to discuss the mental health needs of young offenders

(i) in custody in Wales and (ii) in young offender institutions in England who have been assessed as requiring mental health services on release in each month of 2008; and if he will make a statement. [245810]

Mr. Hanson: There is a joint Welsh Assembly Government and Youth Justice Board Youth Justice Committee for Wales that includes NOMS representation, which has responsibility for overseeing youth justice matters in Wales. This would include devolved areas of responsibility such as mental health matters for young people. The Committee meets on a quarterly basis and during 2008 met on;

30 January 2008

8 April 2008

23 July 2008

22 October 2008

Outside the Committee there is ongoing dialogue with the Welsh Assembly Government about the provision of mental health services for people in the justice system.

Bridgend Prison Health Partnership Board has recently forwarded a draft business case to the Welsh assembly Government for provision of Tier 2/3 Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAHMS). That is now under consideration.

For young offender institutes in England, there is a high level programme board the Health and Social Care Policy Development Programme Board, which meets quarterly. The board oversees a programme of cross government work for this group of vulnerable children. There is also a 'Health and Social Care Management Group' who meet monthly. Both of these meetings have representation from Ministry of Justice, Department of Health, Department for Children, Schools and Families and the Youth Justice Board.

During 2008, the Health and Social Care Policy Development Programme Board met on;

11 March 2008

29 September 2008

15 December 2008

During 2008, the Health and Social Care Management Group met on;

24 January 2008

21 February 2008

24 April 2008

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Cuba

9. Mr. Devine: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the state of UK-Cuba relations; and if he will make a statement. [246483]

Gillian Merron: UK-Cuba relations continue to improve. Our policy, based on mutual respect, aims to encourage a move to a pluralist democracy and full respect for human rights. These are objectives we share with our EU partners.

Chevening Scholarships

10. Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Chevening scholarships have been awarded to Tibetans in the last 10 years. [246484]

Caroline Flint: Four Chevening scholarships have been awarded to ethnic Tibetans applying in China in the last 10 years; two in 2004-05, and one each in 2006-07 and 2007-08.

Israeli Settlements

11. Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his Israeli counterpart on the expropriation of 23 square miles of Palestinian land to the east of Jerusalem to build homes for settlers. [246485]

Bill Rammell: We have long made it clear to the Israeli Government that any Israeli settlement activity is not only illegal under international law, it is also in contravention of Israel's obligations under the road map and detrimental to the peace process. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary voiced strong opposition to illegal Israeli settlements during his visit to the region on 16-19 November 2008. I also raised the issue during my visit to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian territories on 21-23 December 2008.

Zimbabwe

12. James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of recent political developments in Zimbabwe; and if he will make a statement. [246486]

14. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of political developments in Zimbabwe; and if he will make a statement. [246488]

Gillian Merron: The continuing political impasse is a direct result of Robert Mugabe's abuse of power. We believe that power sharing can work but that Mr. Mugabe is an obstacle to it. My right hon. Friends the Prime Minster and the Foreign Secretary and my noble Friend Lord Malloch-Brown have been clear on this point. But ultimately it is for Zimbabweans, not the UK, to decide what can constitute a durable and sustainable government in Zimbabwe. We will continue with our intense diplomatic activity and our humanitarian commitment continues.

Cyprus

13. David Lepper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely outcome of negotiations in Cyprus on the future governance of the island. [246487]

Caroline Flint: The current negotiations represent the best opportunity Cypriots have ever had to reach a settlement. We fully support the efforts of the two leaders and the UN Special Envoy to Cyprus, Alexander Downer. Progress has been made but it is important that the momentum of the talks is increased. We hope the current process will deliver a settlement all Cypriots can support.

Seditious Libel and Criminal Defamation

15. Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his international counterparts on the effects of laws of seditious libel and criminal defamation in foreign countries. [246489]

Gillian Merron: We urge all countries to fulfil their obligations under international law, including under UN human rights conventions. We work to safeguard the international framework which protects and extends the right to freedom of expression and to support change on the ground, along with international, regional and local partners.

International Terrorism

17. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent to which international terrorist activity is linked to extremist activity in Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [246491]

Bill Rammell: Those who suffer most from violent extremism in Pakistan are ordinary Pakistanis. However, violent extremism in Pakistan, particularly from global terrorist groups such as al-Qaeda that take haven in the tribal areas, is also a threat to the UK and others. Pakistan is a key ally in defeating these groups.

Climate Change

18. Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of his Department's performance in persuading other countries to subscribe to action to address climate change. [246492]

Gillian Merron: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and its network of posts are working to create the political conditions for a global deal at Copenhagen to avoid dangerous climate change.

We are working beyond traditional government-to-government diplomacy to mobilise civil society, business leaders and others.

We assess posts' progress twice a year, as part of the FCO's business planning cycle. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bexhill and Battle (Gregory Barker) on 20 November 2008, Official Report, column 744W, giving examples of progress.

Since then FCO posts have contributed to the major agreement reached at the December European Council on the EU's ambitious package of climate change and energy legislation, including a 20 per cent. cut in the EU's greenhouse gas emissions (to be increased to 30 per cent. as part of the right international agreement).

Gaza

19. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the political situation in Gaza. [246493]

Bill Rammell: The Government are extremely concerned with the current violence in Gaza. We are in close contact with all the key players and at the centre of efforts to reach a ceasefire and secure urgent humanitarian assistance. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary was instrumental in gaining UN Security Council agreement around a British text, which became Resolution 1860. This now needs to be reflected in reality on the ground. For any ceasefire to be sustainable it must include action to stop illegal arms trafficking into Gaza and to open the crossings into Gaza.

Guinea-Bissau

20 Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of the arms-clearing project in Guinea-Bissau supported by his Department. [246494]

Gillian Merron: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has part funded an Explosive Remnants of War Removal Project by Cleared Ground Demining (a non-governmental organisation) in Guinea Bissau.

This project has removed 1.5 tonnes of munitions and held seminars which reached over 1,100 people to warn local populations on how to handle explosive remnants.

The UK has also contributed to other mine clearance projects through the Conflict Prevention Pool.

US Secretary of State

21. Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to meet the incoming US Secretary of State to discuss UK-US relations. [246495]

Bill Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary looks forward to a close working relationship with the incoming US Secretary of State following the President's inauguration, which will of course involve face-to-face meetings in the US, UK and elsewhere. He has already spoken to her by telephone.

EU: Czech Presidency

22. John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Czech Presidency's EU agenda. [246496]

Caroline Flint: The Czech presidency of the EU began on 1 January and ends on 30 June 2009. It has a full agenda focussing on energy, external and economic issues. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office produces a Command Paper on each EU presidency every six months and this will be laid before the House before the end of January. It will also be placed in the Library of the House and on the FCO website at www.fco.gov.uk. The Government have worked very closely with the Czech Government following Prime Minister Topolanek's visit in December of last year.

Pakistan-India

23. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his most recent assessment is of the state of relations between Pakistan and India; and if he will make a statement. [246497]

Bill Rammell: This has been a sensitive time for the region following the Mumbai attacks. My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary are in contact with their counterparts in India and Pakistan to press the importance of Pakistan and India cooperating fully to bring those responsible to justice, and ensuring this terrible act does not undermine earlier progress towards the normalisation of relations and prevent further constructive dialogue between the two countries.

Iran

24. Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Iran's level of co-operation with the International Atomic Energy Agency. [246498]

Bill Rammell: We assess that Iran's level of cooperation with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) has been inadequate in a number of critical areas. The IAEA Director General's report of 19 November 2008 highlighted Iran's failure to implement transparency measures including the Additional Protocol; provide substantive information on their alleged studies with a possible military dimension; provide access to the heavy water reactor at Arak on 26 October 2008.

Belarus

25. Mr. Goodwill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the state of relations between Belarus and the UK; and if he will make a statement. [246499]

Caroline Flint: Following the release of three remaining political prisoners in August 2008, the UK supported the EU decision in October to suspend the visa ban for six months to encourage further reforms.

We have seen some small improvements—two opposition newspapers are now on sale in small quantities, and an opposition party has been allowed to register with the authorities. However, we continue to encourage the Belarusian Government to take further progress on human rights.

Kashmir

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Indian Government on Kashmir. [246490]

Bill Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Kashmir with Indian External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee on 2 September and 24 October 2008. The UK continues to urge both India and Pakistan to seek a lasting resolution to the issue of Kashmir, which takes into account the wishes of the Kashmiri people.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will visit India on 13 and 14 January and will discuss India-Pakistan relations with the Indian Prime Minister, Home Minister and External Affairs Minister.

British Council

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Daventry of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1048-49W, on exchange rates, whether the British Council plans to reduce any programmes in consequence of the reduction in purchasing power of its core grant. [242283]

David Miliband: The British Council recognises that the significant weakening of Sterling over the last few months, particularly against US dollar linked currencies, has undermined its purchasing power. In the current year they expect the absolute impact to be equivalent to a £10 million cut in spending capacity or around 8 per cent. of their grant in aid programme spend. In response they will try to preserve as much programme spend as possible, by short term cost savings and, where necessary, by deferring programme spend into the 2009-10 financial year.

Cyprus: Economic Situation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his assessment is of the prospects for the Turkish Cypriot economy; and if he will make a statement. [245190]

Caroline Flint: The economy is currently in recession. Settlement of the Cyprus problem is likely to bring very substantial economic benefits to both Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots. The recent International Peace Research Institute, Oslo (PRIO) report estimated that the benefit for each Cypriot household would be 5,500 euros in average per year during the first seven years after a solution. The full report can be found at:

http://www.prio.no/files/manual-import/cyprus/dayafter/Report-The%20day%20after.pdf

Diplomatic Service: Recruitment

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people participated in his Department's work placement scheme; in which regions they resided; what proportion attended (a) state and (b) independent schools; and what proportion attended (i) Oxford and Cambridge and (ii) other universities in each of the last 10 years. [244272]

Gillian Merron: The following table provides information on those attending work placements at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) in 2006, 2007 and 2008.

	Region	Number	School	Number	Universities	Number

From 1999 to 2008, FCO Services, a Trading Fund of the FCO, participated in the Equal Choices Schools Initiative programme. They take 16 children annually, from ethnic minority backgrounds, who spend two days gaining an insight into their work.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer of 27 November 2006 Official Report, column 487W for information on the regional backgrounds and numbers of students undertaking work experience at the FCO, before 2006.

The school background of work placement students is not requested as a matter of course at the application stage and has therefore only been provided when held.

Drugs: Smuggling

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to prevent illegal drugs reaching the UK from abroad. [243684]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 15 December 2008]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) remains engaged on drugs and crime work, even though the policy lead passed to Home Office as from 1 April 2008. In London, we give policy advice to operational agencies such as the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) and UK Border Agency (UKBA) and task our global network to help deliver the Government's objectives. Our Posts overseas continue to provide political reporting and lobbying support where necessary.

Our focus is now at strategic level, where the FCO can best add value (foreign policy expertise, building relationships with partner countries, creating effective multipliers through the EU and other multi-lateral bodies). This involves close co-operation with Home Office, SOCA, UKBA, Metropolitan Police Service, Crown Prosecution Service and HM Revenue and Customs to define the threat from drugs and crime to the UK and decide how/where best to tackle it overseas.

Through the FCO's Drugs and Crime programme we are helping to build capacity amongst local law enforcement agencies and judiciaries, with the provision of training and equipment. We work closely with other partners including the EU and US, to maximise joint effort.

We are tackling the problem of the trade in opium from Afghanistan through a multi-pronged strategy, which aims to reduce opium production there over time by offering farmers alternative livelihoods, building better governance, promoting the rule of law, rooting out corruption, interdicting the trade, eradicating opium poppy where possible, and breaking the link between the trade and the insurgency. This work is funded by the Afghan counter-narcotics programme.

Libya: Terrorism

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Prime Minister's meeting with the hon. Member for Belfast North and others on 10 December, whether he plans to press the Government of Libya to reopen the question of compensation to victims of terrorism in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [244967]

Bill Rammell: The meeting between the PM and the hon. Member for Belfast North and others on 10 December provided an opportunity for discussion on this issue. The PM is acutely aware of the sensitivities and frustrations of this issue, as he expressed during this meeting. I would emphasise that the Government does not condone in any way Libya's past actions and the victims of IRA atrocities have our whole hearted sympathy. We have tested the Libyan position on IRA compensation on a number of occasions and the US raised it on our behalf in August this year. Each time the Libyans have reiterated that they consider the matter closed. As the PM stated on 10 December, we will not therefore seek to negotiate a bilateral settlement on this issue with Libya. However, we will monitor the position of Libya in relation to this issue. The Government have already openly responded to queries on compensation for victims of IRA terrorism and will continue to do so.

Rashid Rauf

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the United Kingdom intelligence services had knowledge of Mr Rashid Rauf's whereabouts on the night of the US air strike of 21 November 2008 in North Waziristan, Pakistan. [243425]

Bill Rammell: It is the long standing policy of the Government not to comment on operational intelligence matters.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) the Government of Pakistan and (b) the US Administration have made representations to the UK Government about the US air strike of 21 November in North Waziristan, Pakistan. [243429]

Bill Rammell: We have frequent discussions with both the US and Pakistan about how to deal with the problem of violent extremism in Pakistan. The subject of US missile strikes in Pakistan is a matter for the US and Pakistani Governments. We have asked the Government of Pakistan whether they can confirm the press reports that a dual Pakistani-British national was killed in the attack of 21 November.

Russia: Broadcasting

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had on the restriction of Russian broadcasters to the UK since 1990. [245878]

Caroline Flint: Since 1990, the FCO has had no discussions on restricting Russian broadcasters to the UK.

Russia: Detainees

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of (a) the legal system in Russia and (b) the Russian Federation's compliance with its commitments under the European Convention on Human Rights, with regard to the treatment of (i) Mikhail Khodorkovsky and (ii) Platon Lebedev; [246835]

(2) what discussions (a) he, (b) members of his Department and (c) UK representatives overseas have had with (i) members and (ii) representatives of the government of the Russian Federation on the ongoing imprisonment of Mikhail Khodorkovsky and Platon Lebedev; [246837]

(3) if he will make a statement on (a) the ongoing imprisonment of Mikhail Khodorkovsky and Platon Lebedev and other individuals affected by the Yukos affair and the recent refusal of parole to them and (b) the role played by the Russian government and its agencies in their ongoing imprisonment; [246838]

(4) what arrangements the British Embassy in Moscow is making to monitor the forthcoming new trial of Mikhail Khodorkovsky and Platon Lebedev (a) unilaterally and (b) in co-operation with other EU embassies; [246839]

(5) if his Department will make representations to the Russian government on (a) the ongoing imprisonment of Mikhail Khodorkovsky and Platon Lebedev and (b) the recent decision by the Russian courts to limit the defendants' access to materials pertinent to their case. [246840]

Caroline Flint: Promoting the rule of law, including the independence of the judiciary, is a key element of the UK's and EU's engagement with Russia. We are concerned that judicial reform in Russia is not progressing as rapidly as is needed. The UK and the EU will also continue to encourage Russia to fulfil all the international commitments it has signed up to, including those under the European convention on human rights.

We have raised and continue to raise regularly our concerns about the arbitrary application of the rule of law in Russia, both bilaterally and through the EU, including the cases of both Mikhail Khodorkovsky and Platon Lebedev. We also have concerns about the due process and fair treatment of others who have been arrested or prosecuted in the Yukos Affair. These include concerns about access to lawyers and medical care, conditions of detention and the alleged harassment of defence teams and witnesses. While we welcome the recent release on bail of Vasily Aleksanyan, we remain concerned about the delay in the early release hearing for Svetlana Bakhmina. We will continue to monitor developments in these cases, co-ordinating trial monitoring with EU partners in line with EU guidelines on protection of human rights defenders.

We will raise these issues at the UK/Russia bilateral human rights talks on 16 January 2009.

Sudan: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the Government of Sudan to facilitate clearance of UN-AM Mission in Darfur equipment through a single point of entry at Port Sudan following its agreement earlier this year; and what discussions the Special Envoy to Sudan has had with the Government of Sudan on this matter. [242832]

Gillian Merron: As part of a tripartite agreement reached on 7 October 2008 with the UN and the African Union, the Government of Sudan undertook to facilitate clearance of UN/AM Mission in Darfur equipment through a single point of entry at Port Sudan. This clearance has subsequently been granted.

We have underlined the importance of implementation of the tripartite agreement with the Government of Sudan, including through the UK Special Representative for Sudan, as well as in the UN Security Council, and will continue to monitor progress.

Western Sahara

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has discussed with his Moroccan counterpart the delay in appointing a new personal envoy of the UN Secretary-General for Western Sahara. [244264]

Bill Rammell: The appointment of Personal Envoys and Special Representatives is a matter for the Secretary-General and we respect his independence in making such appointments. The UK hopes that the UN Secretary-General will appoint a new Personal Envoy shortly and that a further round of negotiations will take place soon. We have called on the parties to maintain their commitment to the negotiation process.

Western Sahara: Fisheries

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether UK-registered trawlers are fishing in waters off occupied Western Sahara. [244922]

Huw Irranca-Davies: I have been asked to reply.

Two UK-registered fishing vessels have fished in the waters off Western Sahara during 2008 under the EU-Morocco Fisheries Agreement. They are not operating currently in these waters.

The EU-Morocco Fisheries Agreement was agreed in 2006 and sets out the terms for which UK and other European fishing vessels may fish in the waters off the coast of Western Sahara. The agreement does not prejudice the issue of the status of Western Sahara, which the UK regards as undetermined pending UN efforts to find a resolution. Nor does the agreement represent recognition of Morocco's sovereignty over the maritime waters off Western Sahara.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Parliament: Security

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission which office is responsible for the security of materials kept in the places of work assigned to hon. Members on the Parliamentary Estate. [247040]

Nick Harvey: Executive responsibility for the security of the Parliamentary Estate rests with the office of the Serjeant at Arms. Every individual who works in the House of Commons is responsible for care of personal property and official property in their place of work. Advice on office security is available through the Serjeant at Arms from the police crime prevention officer.

More detailed procedures for handling sensitive personal data and material are outlined in the publication "Data Protection Act 1988: Advice for Members' Offices":

TRANSPORT

Humber Bridge Toll: VAT

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what effect the reduction in the rate of value added tax will have on the level of the Humber Bridge toll in 2009; and if he will make a statement. [247320]

Paul Clark: The Humber bridge was built under local authority-promoted legislation and is managed by a board made up of local authorities. It is, therefore, exempt from VAT.

Transport: Crime

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many crimes were reported to British Transport Police in (a) England, (b) London, (c) each London borough and (d) each London (i) underground, (ii) mainline and (iii) interchange station of (A) violence against the person, (B) sexual offences, (C) theft of passenger property and (D) robbery in each of the last five years, broken down by sex of the victim; and whether the crime was reported by a member of (1) the public and (2) rail staff in each case. [247148]

Paul Clark: This information is not held by the Department for Transport, but by the British Transport police who can be contacted at:

British Transport Police,
25 Camden Road,
London NW1 9LN.
E-mail: parliament@btp.pnn.police.uk

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Telephone Services

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what use (a) his Department and (b) service providers under contract to his Department make of (i) 0844 and 0845 telephone numbers and (ii) revenue-sharing telephone numbers for calls from members of the public; for which services such numbers are used; what prefixes are used for revenue-sharing numbers; how much revenue has accrued from revenue-sharing numbers in each of the last five years; what consideration his Department has given to introducing 03-prefixed telephone numbers for calls to all such services; and if he will make a statement. [247338]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My Department does not operate any public service 0844/0845 numbers.

Radio Frequencies

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on (a) the UK's obligations arising from membership of the International Telecommunication Union and (b) the provisions of its regulations relating to harmful radio interference; and if he will make a statement. [242440]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 15 December 2008]: I have been asked to reply.

BERR have received one representation on the UK's membership of the International Telecommunications Union and the provisions of the Radio Regulations relating to harmful radio interference, which was received from the hon. Member for South Staffordshire (Sir Patrick Cormack) on a constituents complaint regarding interference issues relating to power-line adaptors.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will take steps, in accordance with the International Telecommunications Union regulations on harmful radio interference, to ensure that the operation of electrical apparatus or installations, including power and telecommunications distribution networks, does not cause harmful interference to any radio communications service, with particular reference to international shortwave broadcasting and amateur radio; and if he will make a statement. [242441]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 17 December 2008]: I have been asked to reply.

The International Telecommunications Union (ITU) is a specialised agency of the United Nations with responsibility for information and communication technologies. The ITU Constitution is one of the basic texts of the organisation and this describes its function in relation to interference. The Constitution defines the role of the ITU in the prevention of harmful interference between radio stations of different countries. This is achieved through a process of management of radio frequencies, and orbital positions and characteristics of satellites. In rare cases where interference does occur, the ITU coordinates efforts to eliminate harmful interference between radio stations of different countries.

The Radio Regulations determine the level of protection from harmful interference which one country may claim from another through a process of allocating frequency bands to radio communication services. The ITU maintains a system of registration of frequency use and the rights to protection of a given service are determined by a combination of compliance with the allocation table, registration with the ITU, and the sharing arrangements between services allocated in the same band.

Due to the nature of short wave broadcasting and amateur radio, received signals are often weak and susceptible to local interference—in particular, from the wide range of modern electronic equipment to be found in the typical domestic environment.

Rescue Services: Telecommunications

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made of the (a) effect and (b) cost of introducing administered incentive pricing for radio frequencies on the Royal National Lifeboat Institute service. [245185]

Mr. McFadden: I have been asked to reply.

As part of their consultation on proposals to introduce administered incentive pricing for maritime and aeronautical radio, Ofcom have stated that they expect RNLI's licence fees to fall compared to the current level.

As such, the effect on RNLI is likely to be a reduction in their licensing costs.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

British Energy: EDF Energy

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 2133W, on

British Energy: EDF, if he will place in the Library a copy of the agreements made with EDF requiring it to release any British Energy sites. [242554]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have put a copy of the agreements made by HMG and the NDA with EDF relating to the disposal of British Energy sites in the Libraries of the House.

British Energy: Invesco

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 2133W, on British Energy: EDF, if he will place in the Library a copy of the (a) agenda and (b) minutes of the meeting held with Invesco. [242553]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: No. I can say that the meeting with Invesco was held at the request of Invesco, the second largest shareholder in British Energy after HMG. There was no agenda, nor was a formal minute taken. Invesco and HMG expressed their respective views about a possible takeover offer for British Energy by EDF. The details of what was discussed are commercially confidential.

Energy: Disadvantaged

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change if he will bring forward proposals to require energy companies to inform customers about assistance available to vulnerable groups in their social tariff schemes; and if he will make a statement. [245070]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Suppliers agreed at the Fuel Poverty Summit organised by Ofgem in April to provide greater visibility of their offers. Following this Ofgem have worked with the suppliers to ensure that information about their social tariffs and programmes and a contact phone number for consumers to check their eligibility, is available on all the suppliers' websites.

Energy suppliers have committed to collectively spend £100 million this year, rising to £125 million next year and £150 million by 2011 on social assistance. In order to meet this commitment to Government suppliers need to inform their customers about the assistance available to vulnerable groups through their social tariff scheme.

Expenditure on suppliers' social assistance is monitored by Ofgem and early indications from suppliers to them is that since this time last year the numbers of customer accounts on social tariffs have at least doubled and will exceed the 600,000 customer accounts originally suppliers estimated that would benefit this winter which is a good indication of the level of awareness of the assistance suppliers offer.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what recent discussions he has had with energy suppliers on the introduction of social tariffs for (a) domestic fuel oil and (b) liquid petroleum gas. [241471]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Suppliers of domestic oil and liquid petroleum gas serve a small but important market and are significantly more numerous than those supplying mains gas and electricity. The Government have not held discussions about social programmes with these companies.

The big six gas and electricity suppliers offer energy efficiency measures as part of their statutory obligations under the Carbon Emissions Reduction Target (CERT) scheme. Customers who use domestic oil or liquid petroleum gas to heat their homes can benefit from these programmes offered by their electricity suppliers.

In addition, mains gas continues to be cheaper and more convenient than other heating fuels. The Government have encouraged the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (Ofgem) to incentivise the large gas distribution networks to provide connections to households in deprived communities. Under the 2008-13 Gas Distribution Price Control, Ofgem has introduced incentivisation measures that should provide at least 20,000 connections in 400 communities.

Nuclear Power: Insurance

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change with reference to his statement of 19 November 2008, Official Report, column 125WH, on nuclear industry finance, what consultations his Department conducted on the insurance arrangements for the management of Sellafield. [244590]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: None. Like insurance arrangements for the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority's 18 other sites, those for Sellafield are a matter for the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority and the site licence company.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Advertising

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent by his Department on advertising in the last 12 months. [243712]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office's advertising expenditure in the 2007-08 financial year, excluding agencies and executive NDPBs, was £454,075. The main advertising campaigns funded included public information campaigns concerning fireworks safety, vehicle theft and unknown callers.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, "Data Handling Procedures in Government" and the accompanying document "Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action"; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245368]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office has had a senior information risk owner (SIRO) appointed at director level and a member of the departmental board since 2003.

Departmental Marketing

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 12 November 2008, Official Report, column 1209W, on departmental marketing, how much his Department's (a) agencies and (b) executive non-departmental public bodies have spent on advertising in the last 12 months. [243543]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office (NIO) spent £454,075 on advertising during the 2007-08 financial year. The NIO's agencies recorded total expenditure of £213,518 on advertising during this period. The main advertising campaigns funded included public information campaigns concerning fireworks safety, vehicle theft and unknown callers.

Information for the NIO's executive non-departmental bodies is an operational matter for each of the bodies, who operate independently of Government. I would encourage the hon. Member to write to the respective chief executives.

Details of the NIO's non-departmental public bodies can be found in the NIO 2008 departmental report:

http://www.nio.gov.uk/northern_ireland_office_departmental_report_2008.pdf

All expenditure has to be incurred in accordance with the principles of Managing Public Money and the Treasury handbook on Regularity and Propriety.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 12 November 2008, Official Report, column 1209W, on departmental marketing, what advertisements were funded during 2007-08. [243544]

Mr. Woodward: The high volume of transactions within the Department's advertising expenditure codes means that details of all the advertisements funded during 2007-08 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, the main advertising campaigns funded included fireworks safety, vehicle theft and unknown callers.

Departmental Television

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, columns 885-6W, on television, from where the televisions were purchased; how many of the televisions (a) had (i) built-in freeview receivers (ii) digital receivers and (b) were widescreen, (c) were LCD and (d) were high definition. [243453]

Mr. Woodward: Five televisions were purchased from approved contracts for electrical supplies. All five of these are widescreen and LCD, and three of the five have built in freeview digital receivers and are also HD ready.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, columns 885-6W, on television, which channels his Department pays for. [243455]

Mr. Woodward: In addition to BBC channels, paid for through license fees, the Department also subscribes to Sky and Setanta packages.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, columns 885-6W, on television, how much his Department's (a) agencies and (b) executive non-departmental public bodies have spent on (i) televisions and (ii) receiving digital television in the last 12 months. [244056]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office's Agencies spent £5,452 on purchasing televisions and £300 on receiving digital television in the 2007-08 financial year.

Information for the Northern Ireland Office's executive non-departmental bodies is an operational matter for each of the bodies, who operate independently of Government. I would encourage the hon. Member to write to the respective chief executives.

Details of the NIO's non-departmental public bodies can be found in the NIO 2008 departmental report:

http://www.nio.gov.uk/northern_ireland_office_departmental_report_2008.pdf.

All expenditure has to be incurred in accordance with the principles of Managing Public Money and the Treasury handbook on Regularity and Propriety.

Electronic Equipment

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with reference to the answer of 12 November 2008, Official Report, column 1211W, on electronic equipment, how much his Department and its agencies and non-departmental public bodies spent on electronic equipment in the last 12 months. [243436]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office (NIO) spent £24,603 on electronic equipment during the 2007-08 financial year. This figure only includes non-capital items as electronic equipment costing more than £1,000 could be captured only at disproportionate cost.

The NIO's Agencies recorded total expenditure of £433,511 on electronic equipment during this period, this figure is made up as follows:

Agency	Expenditure (£)
Northern Ireland Prison Service[1]	405,996
Forensic Science Agency Northern Ireland	4,679
Compensation Agency[1]	20,286
Youth Justice Agency	2,550

[1] These agencies are able to produce capital items within their figures and include electronic goods such as X-ray scanners, telecommunications and radio equipment.

Information for the NIO's executive non-departmental bodies is an operational matter for each of the bodies, who operate independently of Government. I would encourage the hon. Member to write to the respective chief executives.

Details of the NIO's non-departmental public bodies can be found in the NIO 2008 departmental report:

http://www.nio.gov.uk/northern_ireland_office_departmental_report_2008.pdf.

All expenditure has to be incurred in accordance with the principles of managing public money and the Treasury handbook on regularity and propriety.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan: Defence Equipment

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the issue of mercury-tipped ammunition to regular British troops serving in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [246604]

Mr. Quentin Davies: In accordance with The Hague convention of 1899 (Declaration III), ratified by the UK on 30 August 1907, the MOD does not procure or use mercury-tipped ammunition.

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's estimate was in 2006 of the duration of the incursion of British troops into Helmand province; and what his current estimate is. [245485]

Mr. Hutton: When the then Defence Secretary announced our deployment to Helmand on 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 1532, it was described as a three-year deployment.

However, we have always made clear that we would keep the commitment of UK forces under review.

As the Prime Minister said in his 12 December 2007 statement, and has been made clear subsequently, the UK's strategy for Afghanistan is long-term and based on a comprehensive approach to security, political, social and economic development. We are therefore planning to maintain forces in Afghanistan for the foreseeable future.

Armed Forces: Bereavement

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps his Department takes to assist those who have lost an immediate relative in the armed forces to claim bereavement entitlement; [246891]

(2) what the bereavement entitlement for families of service personnel is. [246892]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The next of kin of all those who die in military service are allocated a services visiting officer who will provide long-term support and act as a focal point for the family in obtaining specialist advice and assistance from various service organisations and civilian agencies. The Service Personnel and Veterans Agency (SPVA) Veterans Welfare Service works closely with the visiting officer to make immediate contact with the next of kin and to ensure information on entitlement is made available promptly. Where there is a spouse or partner, a welfare officer from the SPVA will visit him/her with the visiting officer within 15 days to provide help and advice in completing claims, where appropriate, for an armed forces pension or a claim under the armed forces compensation scheme, as well as to offer general advice on state benefits and welfare matters. Where there is no spouse or partner, the SPVA writes to the next of kin or any other individual known to be dependant on the deceased, through the families visiting officer within a week of the death, providing them with a guidance booklet on what to do after death which includes advice on state benefits. However the services of SPVA Welfare are not only restricted to immediate dependants, such as a widow, as they will also visit other family members, e.g., parents, if requested and this is normally arranged through the visiting officer.

Armed Forces: Recruitment

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed services recruitment centres there were in (a) 1997 and (b) 2008, broken down by service. [245116]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Both in 1997 and 2008 there were 39 tri-service armed forces careers offices (AFCOs): six of which were/are sponsored by the Royal Navy, 22 by the Army, and 11 sponsored by the Royal Air Force. These AFCOs are supplemented by 94 satellite recruiting offices, the majority of which are Army owned, and a handful operated on a bi-service basis.

Armed Forces: United States

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many British nationals have been injured by unmanned drones operated by US forces since January 2002; [246303]

(2) how many (a) British citizens and (b) UK residents have been killed by unmanned drones operated by US forces since January 2002. [245445]

Mr. Hutton: We cannot confirm whether any British citizens or UK residents have been killed in any such incidents.

Defence: Procurement

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the effect on the defence procurement budget of the reduction in the value of sterling in the last six months. [243254]

Mr. Hutton: Fluctuations in the value of sterling have had a significant effect over the last six months on a range of defence equipment acquisition projects, though the precise aggregate financial impact of these changes over that period could be provided only at disproportionate cost, given that foreign exchange is only one of a number of factors leading to cost variations in projects. Across 2008-09 as a whole, however, the Defence Equipment and Support organisation estimates a pressure of some £130 million from foreign exchange movements. The Department's in-year financial management process takes into account overall cost changes, including within equipment acquisition, to ensure that the defence programme remains within available resources.

Departmental Consultants

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department intends to spend on the purchase of consultancy services, with reference to Standard Chart of Account code 51401400, in financial years 2008-09 to 2010-11. [245088]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The Department's current 2008-09 forecast for expenditure on the purchase of consultancy services against the Standard Chart of Account code 51401400 which includes management consultancy of business performance, financial and accountancy services, corporate governance and audit is £104 million.

The Department's plans for future consultancy services are currently being examined in the Planning Round 2009.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, "Data Handling Procedures in Government" and the accompanying document "Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action;" and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245359]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: The director general information (a two star/senior civil servant pay band 2) was discharging the role of senior information risk owner (SIRO) by late 2003 and formally acquired the role and title, as directed by the permanent under secretary, in response to the February 2004 request from the Cabinet Secretary for all Departments to make such an appointment. The DG information post has since been re-titled chief information officer (CIO). Following the publication of the Data Handling Procedures in Government report the CIO was reconfirmed in the role of SIRO. The SIRO leads on information risk issues at the Defence Operating Board and is called to the Defence Board as and when required.

Departmental Finance

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what monetary value his Department assigns to one life in its economic appraisals of (a) troop safety measures and (b) defence equipment; and if he will make a statement. [245680]

Mr. Quentin Davies: Since the main benefits of Departmental investment in the form of defence capability are not capable of being expressed in monetary terms, the overwhelming majority of MOD investment appraisals use a cost effectiveness approach. This involves a comparison of the whole life costs of alternative options to deliver the same stated defence benefit, without recourse to specific monetary values of life. There have been no economic appraisals supporting business cases of expenditure proposals subject to the Department's central approval processes where monetary values have been applied to life. However, should it be necessary to directly evaluate the costs and benefits of safety measures the Department's approach to applying monetary values to life and safety is set out in Joint Services Publication (JSP) 507 "MOD Guide to Investment Appraisal and Evaluation". This is available at http://www.mod.uk/defenceinternet/aboutdefence/corporatepublications/policystrategyandplanning/jsp507modguidetoinvestmentappraisalandevaluation.htm.

The approach follows HM Treasury guidance and is the same as that used by other Government Departments, in particular the Department for Transport and the Health and Safety Executive.

Departmental Public Expenditure

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence with reference to box 6.4 of the pre-Budget report (CM 7484), if he will place in the Library a copy of the terms of reference of the reviews he intends to undertake of the (a) Met Office, (b) Oil and Pipeline Agency and (c) Defence Storage and Distribution Agency. [245201]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The terms of reference of the reviews on the Met Office, the Oil and Pipeline Agency and the Defence Storage and Distribution Agency have not yet been finalised. The scope of the study which will form the basis for the terms of reference was announced in the pre-Budget report. This indicated that the studies would consider the potential for alternative business models, commercialisation, new market opportunities and, where appropriate, alternatives to public ownership. Gerry Grimstone is working with MOD and shareholder Executive to take forward this work, and progress will be reported in Budget 2009.

Once the terms of reference have been approved, a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Iraq: Peacekeeping Operations

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Harrier aircraft were operating in Iraq at the latest date for which figures are available. [242823]

Mr. Hutton: The last eight RAF Harrier aircraft to deploy on Operation Telic were withdrawn on 6 May 2003.

Military Aircraft: Warships

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans are in place to ensure that the armed forces will have a continuing aircraft carrier capability during the transition between the withdrawal of service of the CVS carriers and the entry into service of the CVF carriers. [245103]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The transition from the existing to future aircraft carriers will be managed coherently and we are currently assessing the modalities for achieving this.

Nuclear Weapons: Testing

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long the 2005 decontamination exercise on Kiritimati took; and how much the exercise cost, broken down by category of expenditure. [246875]

Mr. Kevan Jones: The contract works on the island commenced during January 2005 and the last package of waste left the Island in May 2008, although most of the scrap metal had been removed by November 2006.

The costs of removing the waste (not necessarily decontamination) currently amount to £7 million broken down as follows (figures are rounded):

	£ million
General items (insurance, mobilisation, provision of compound)	3.0
Whole island tasks (removal of asbestos, radiological survey and known radium luminised dials)	0.5
Waste removal (vehicles and plant, tanks, boilers drums and bitumen spills, asphalt plant, coral crushing plant, and bunkers)	2.5
Shipping and disposal	1.0

Rescue Services: Helicopters

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent plans his Department has made to change numbers of (a) helicopters and (b) search and rescue crew personnel at search and rescue centres. [246931]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: We have made no recent plans to change the number of helicopters available for search and rescue. It is currently planned that RAF search and rescue crews will reduce by four over the next two years.

Rescue Services: Private Sector

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress the Government has made on plans to invite private companies to bid to operate search and rescue services. [246909]

Mr. Quentin Davies: The competition to bring together the Search and Rescue capability currently provided by the Ministry of Defence and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency into one harmonised service continues, with two industrial consortia (AirKnight and Soteria) actively engaged.

The main investment decision will be made following further development of the bids through evaluation and dialogue to ensure that the consortia are able to provide the required capability and service levels through life.

Sight Impaired

Tom Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidelines his Department follows in respect of making printed materials and forms accessible to people suffering red/green colour blindness. [245713]

Mr. Kevan Jones: It is MOD policy and a legal requirement to supply materials in alternative formats if requested. The MOD consults with the Royal National Institute of the Blind (RNIB) and works closely with the Employers Forum on Disability and the EHRC to ensure it meets the accessibility needs of disabled people. The Departmental Equality and Diversity Scheme 2008-11 contains an undertaking to ensure that all disabled employees and members of the public are able to access our publications in a way that meets their needs.

Weapons: Theft

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many weapons of each type have (a) been stolen and (b) gone missing from armed forces bases in each of the last five years; [246124]

(2) how many weapons of each type have (a) gone missing and (b) been stolen from the Army in each of the last five years. [246125]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 12 January 2009]: The following table sets out details of Ministry of Defence firearms recorded as lost/stolen for the last five calendar years, 2004-08 and include bases both home and abroad. The figures represent the latest available from the Service Police Crime Bureau.

Weapon statistics 2004-08

	2004		2005		2006		2007		2008
Weapon type	Stolen	Lost	Stolen	Lost	Stolen	Lost	Stolen	Lost	Stolen	Lost
Pistol	10	10	5	3	8	10	11	16	20	9
Rifle	15	3	9	7	14	19	14	8	14	16
Machine guns	0	0	0	0	0	6	0	0	3	0
Totals	25	13	14	10	22	35	25	24	37	25

Figures by individual service could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedures are in place to prevent weapons used by British servicemen and women abroad being stolen and returned to the UK to be used illegally; and whether he has plans to improve those procedures. [246126]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 12 January 2009]: MOD takes every reasonable precaution to ensure all weapons are controlled and stored securely. Comprehensive records are maintained to enable accurate accounting and are subject to both regular and spot checks. We also have specific operations designed to deter those personnel from all three services who may be tempted to illegally import items and also to identify those who transgress. This includes a combined information campaign and a physical search of all equipment including personal baggage, comfy boxes etc. returning to peacetime locations. All security measures are subject to continuous review, security surveys and audits.

BUSINESS, ENTERPRISE AND REGULATORY REFORM

Bankruptcy: Devon

Nick Harvey: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many people were declared bankrupt in North Devon in each year since 1997. [246698]

Mr. McFadden: The following table shows the number of bankruptcies in north Devon in each year from 2000 to 2007, derived from postcodes provided by bankrupt individuals[1, 2]. Earlier years figures are not available.

[1] Classifying bankrupts into administrative geographies is done using the postcode that the bankrupt individual provides. The use of this in assigning an individual to a borough is thus only as reliable as the postcode information provided.

[2] In particular, inaccurate or missing postcodes mean that the numbers in the above table will be subject to an element of missing data. Nationally, this proportion has been decreasing from about 12 per cent. in 2000 to less than 4 per cent. in 2007.

	Bankruptcies in north Devon
2000	43
2001	49
2002	61
2003	85
2004	135
2005	171
2006	160
2007	160

Bankruptcy: Self-Employed

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many bankruptcy orders for self-employed individuals he estimates have occurred in 2008-09. [246171]

Mr. McFadden: For 2008-09 the latest available number of self-employed individuals going bankrupt is for the period April to June 2008. In this period there were 1,828 self-employed bankrupts.

Self-employed figures for this period and earlier years can also be found on the internet here:

http://www.insolvency.gov.uk/otherinformation//statistics/200811/table2a.htm

Business: Postal Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform if he will seek to increase the cost charge for private companies on bulk mail deliveries. [245819]

Mr. McFadden: The price that other postal operators are charged to access Royal Mail's delivery network is a matter for negotiation between those postal operators and Royal Mail.

If agreement cannot be reached through negotiation, it is the responsibility of Postcomm, the independent postal regulator, to determine an appropriate access price.

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how much his Department spent on works and refurbishment to offices allocated to Ministers in departmental buildings in the last 12 months. [246592]

Mr. McFadden: During the calendar year 1 January to 31 December 2008 a total of £391,000 (inc. VAT) was spent on works and refurbishment to offices allocated to BERR Ministers.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Grant Shapps: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many special advisers were employed in his Department at each pay band on 30 November 2008; and what his Department's expenditure on special advisers was in 2007-08. [243581]

Mr. McFadden: The Government are committed to publishing an annual list detailing the number and costs of special advisers. Information for 2007-08 was published by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 July 2008, Official Report, columns 99-102WS.

Departmental Procurement

Alan Duncan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what proportion of invoices for goods and services procured from small and medium-sized businesses were paid within 10 days of receipt by (a) his Department and (b) the agencies for which his Department is responsible in (i) 2006-07 and (ii) 2007-08; and if he will make a statement. [243492]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 16 December 2008]: BERR is currently collecting data from other Government Departments and from its own delivery partners on performance in making payments to suppliers within 10 days of receiving a correctly rendered invoice. Although complete figures are not yet available, Government Departments and public bodies have embraced payment within 10 days and are working to implement this across their own organisation and to encourage suppliers to pass on these terms.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies for public access to services. [246991]

Mr. McFadden: From the central records available there are seven 0845 telephone numbers services administered by the Department for public use.

I have asked the chief executives of the Department's agencies to respond directly to the hon. Member.

Letter from Gareth Jones, dated 13 January 2009:

I am responding on behalf of Companies House to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Minister of State for Business Enterprise and Regulatory Reform.

Companies House has one 0845 number, (0845 757 3991), used as first-line support for customers using the Companies House Direct search service.

Letter from Stephen Speed, dated 13 January 2009:

The Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform has asked me to reply to your question (2008/446), how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies for public access to services.

The Insolvency Service has three 0845 lines. These are; The Insolvency Service Enquiry Line, The Redundancy Payments Helpline and The Enforcement Hotline.

Insolvency

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many businesses he estimates have been the subject of liquidation or other insolvency procedures during 2008-09. [246170]

Mr. McFadden: For 2008-09 the latest available number of companies in liquidation is for the period April to September 2008. In this period there were 7,748 liquidations.

Liquidation figures for this period and earlier years can also be found on the internet here:

http://www.insolvency.gov.uk/otherinformation/statistics/200811/tablel.htm

Internet

Mark Hunter: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what recent meetings his Department has had with internet service providers on websites which advocate anorexic or bulimic practices. [246755]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 12 January 2009]: The Department meets with Internet Service Providers on a regular basis to discuss matters of mutual interest. I am not aware that the subject of websites that advocate anorexic or bulimic practices has arisen in recent meetings.

The new UK Council for Child Internet Safety (UKCCIS) will unite over 100 organisations from the public and private sector working with Government to deliver recommendations from Dr. Tanya Byron's report: 'Safer Children in a Digital World'.

Reporting directly to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, the Council will help to improve the regulation and education around internet use, tackling problems around online bullying, safer search features, and violent video games. This unprecedented coalition of experts and organisations will ensure that parents and young people have a voice in the development of a Child Internet Safety Strategy, to be delivered in 2009.

The strategy will:

establish a comprehensive public information and awareness and child internet safety campaign across Government and industry including a 'one-stop shop' on child internet safety;

provide specific measures to support vulnerable children and young people, such as taking down illegal internet sites that promote harmful behaviour;

promote responsible advertising to children online; and establish voluntary codes of practice for user-generated content sites, making such sites commit to take down inappropriate content within a given time.

Mark Hunter: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what steps his Department has taken to encourage internet service providers to practise regulation of websites which advocate anorexic or bulimic practices. [246757]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 12 January 2009]: The new UK Council for Child Internet Safety (UKCCIS) will unite over 100 organisations from the public and private sector working with Government to deliver recommendations from Dr. Tanya Byron's report: 'Safer Children in a Digital World'.

The Council will be a powerful union of some of our key players giving support to parents and guidance to children as they come more and more accustomed to the virtual world—it will also give families, teachers and most importantly children and young people the ability to input experiences and concerns. The UK is a world leader on internet safety for children and I look forward to others adopting this partnership approach.

Reporting directly to the Prime Minister, the Council will help to improve the regulation and education around internet use. This unprecedented coalition of experts and organisations will ensure that parents and young people have a voice in the development of a Child Internet Safety Strategy, to be delivered in 2009.

The strategy will:

establish a comprehensive public information and awareness and child internet safety campaign across Government and industry including a 'one-stop shop' on child internet safety;

provide specific measures to support vulnerable children and young people, such as taking down illegal internet sites that promote harmful behaviour;

promote responsible advertising to children online; and establish voluntary codes of practice for user-generated content sites, making such sites commit to take down inappropriate content within a given time.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Evans: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (1) what representations he has received from (a) Ofcom, (b) mobile telephone operators and (c) other parties on the original timetable outlined by Ofcom to ensure the time taken to move a telephone number between mobile telephone operators is reduced from two days to two hours for UK consumers by September 2009; [244972]

(2) what assessment he has made of the recent Competition Appeals Tribunal ruling on mobile number portability and the consequent delay in the move to faster and more efficient mobile telephone portability for consumers; [244973]

(3) what assessment he has made of the likely effects on mobile telephone users of Ofcom's original deadline of September 2009 for two hour recipient-led mobile number portability not being met; [244974]

(4) what recent discussions he has had with Ofcom on ease of transfer for consumers from one mobile telephone operator to another. [244975]

Mr. McFadden [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The Department has regular discussions with Ofcom, mobile telephone operators and other parties on a range of telecommunications issues including on mobile portability.

The Department has made no assessments of the recent Competition Appeals Tribunal ruling on this issue or of the impact of this on UK mobile consumers. These are matters for Ofcom which, following the ruling, has initiated an internal policy review to identify what, if any, changes should be made to ensure that number portability arrangements meet the needs of UK consumers, in terms of facilitating consumer choice and effective competition. The review is intended to undertake as thorough a stock-take of porting in the UK as possible, and will continue into 2009. Ofcom is committed to ensuring that consumers can switch in a competitive communications market with ease. The ability for consumers to be able to keep their telephone numbers if they so choose, and to do this quickly, easily and with confidence is a key part of this goal.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246352]

Mr. McFadden: The Department does not keep a central record of the number of former prisoners it employs. To provide the information requested would involve disproportionate cost.

The Department's policy on employing former prisoners is that a criminal record is not an automatic bar to disqualify an individual from appointment. While recognising the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act, and taking into account the individual circumstances of the case, the Department will decide whether any criminal record will disqualify an individual from appointment.

Regional Planning and Development: Coastal Areas

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform what work has been undertaken by the regional development agency coastal towns network in the last 12 months. [244400]

Mr. McFadden: The RDA-led Coastal Towns Network aims to improve coordination between central, regional and local government in the development of policy and delivery, at a regional level, of interventions in coastal towns, providing a focus on good practice dissemination, and identification of barriers to policy implementation. It brings together representatives from all the RDAs except AWM, and includes central government departments, agencies and local authorities with an interest in the costal towns' agenda. It was formed earlier this year.

RDAs have also been working in co-operation with DCMS and CABE to coordinate engagement with the Sea Change programme (DCMS capital investment fund for seaside resorts to improve the arts, public space, cultural assets and heritage projects). The RDAs in partnership with local authorities are identifying suitable transformational projects to be taken forward by each region either individually or by matching with other funding streams, such as Single Programme, ERDF or Heritage Lottery Funding.

Set out in the list are examples of activities and interventions by RDAs designed to support coastal towns in their regions. More detailed activities, by region, can be found on relevant RDA Website or the RDA National Secretariat website.

NWDA

In the North West, NWDA produced a North West coastal strategy "A New Vision for North West Coastal Resorts" in 2003 which provides the framework for agency support for coastal towns in the region. Specific activity in the last 12 months includes:

In Southport, Completion of the Lord Street Area improvement initiative where the RDA contributed £2.6 million in total; ongoing support for the refurbishment of Southport Floral Hall and Theatre to be completed in March 2009 with a total RDA contribution of £4.4 million; and support for the acquisition of Pleasureland amusement park by Sefton Metropolitan borough council with a total RDA contribution of £2.7 million.

In Morecambe, NWDA has signed a Resort Action Plan with the local authority to provide the framework for Morecambe's regeneration including contributing funding to the restoration of the Midland Hotel, feasibility work for the refurbishment of Morecambe Winter Gardens and is in discussion with Lancaster city council about further plans for the continued regeneration of Morecambe.

In Blackpool, NWDA has been providing ongoing support for ReBlackpool, the Urban Regeneration Company and the main delivery mechanism for Blackpool's regeneration.

One North East

In Blyth, the RDA has invested significantly in an internationally recognised centre of new and renewable energy research (NaREC) and has stimulated a cluster of innovative manufacturing around this critical new economic sector.

In other areas, such as Seaham, a former colliery town with significant economic challenges, the RDA has invested in place based regeneration and supported the attraction of businesses through business accommodation projects and public realm investment.

SEEDA

SEEDA, with partners, produced a Coastal South East Framework in 2008 that is reflected within both the Regional Economic Strategy and Corporate Plan of the agency. This identifies a number of actions to support regional and local action including:

Identifying a number of the regions coastal areas as priority places for investment and growth: Hastings, Margate and Dover for major regeneration, whilst Portsmouth and Urban South Hampshire is one of the initial MAAs and a Diamond for Investment and Growth.

Brighton and Hove, West and East Sussex and Thames Gateway Kent are identified as a Diamond and a potential MAA.

Supporting new university campuses in Hastings, Folkestone and Bognor Regis; and major infrastructure projects in Hastings, Southampton and Chatham Maritime. Pam Alexander, the CE, Chairs the Margate Renewal Partnership, and the agency has restructured, strengthening the Area Teams, to support work in priority places.

SWRDA

In the south-west the RDA is:

Investing £6.6 million into a £11.3 million programme of public realm work improvements along Weymouth seafront. The intention is to target the key gateways onto the seafront, create new high quality spaces and routes along the seafront and replace/upgrade existing buildings. Weymouth and Portland is the Olympic sailing venue host and the improvements will upgrade the image of the resort in time for the Olympics and provide a legacy for the town post 2012.

Yorkshire Forward

The refurbishment of the Bridlington Spa Complex was completed early 2008 and discussions are continuing with regard to the redevelopment of the Marina.

Cleethorpes Renaissance Programme: work has been completed on the Lakeside Arena and is in the process of commissioning a strategic development framework for the whole of Cleethorpes.

Hornsea has been prioritised as part of the Rural Enterprise Programme and the RDA is working with East Riding of Yorkshire Council and Hornsea Town Council to develop an area specific investment plan.

EEDA

Contributed £6 million in Kings Lynn to a £23 million programme to support the comprehensive redevelopment of 50ha of Brownfield land for a mixed use development scheme. Project involves the construction of new link road, associated infrastructure, new homes and integration with the town.

In Great Yarmouth, ongoing support for construction of breakwaters and associated maritime access works to form a new outer harbour for Great Yarmouth providing roll-on/roll-off facilities for freight and passenger services and general cargo handling;

In Lowestoft, 1st East provided core funding for regeneration plans for the waterfront areas of the town;

Ipswich Waterfront supporting a scheme to upgrade and bring back into fuller public use the dockside roadways which lie within the conservation area and are not part of the public highway.

In Southend, supporting the Renaissance Southend programme by co-funding the town centre Area Action Plan (AAP) and the seafront AAP as part of the Local Development Framework process.

EMDA

Allocated £2 million, under the LEADER approach element of the Rural Development Programme for England (RDPE), to the East Lindsay coastal action zone and is working with Boston Borough and South Holland District Councils to develop their RDPE programme;

Provided capital funding to public realm work in Mablethorpe; and Working with the owners of Fantasy Island theme park at Skegness on their continued development plans.

Royal National Lifeboat Institution

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform if he will make it his policy to exempt the Royal National Lifeboat Institution from payment of radio licence fees; and if he will make a statement. [240291]

Mr. McFadden: RNLI pay Ofcom an annual licence fee for their use of VHF radios. As RNLI is a charity whose object is the safety of human life in an emergency, it currently receives a 50 per cent. reduction to its licence fee and there are no plans to remove or reduce this discount.

The Government commissioned Professor Martin Cave to conduct an independent audit of radio spectrum holdings. All the recommendations were accepted by the Government including the agreed Government policy that users should pay market rates to use spectrum, to incentivise more efficient use of spectrum that is an increasingly scarce resource.

Ofcom is now implementing this policy and is considering the response received to their consultation document "Applying spectrum pricing to the Maritime and Aeronautical sectors". This allowed those affected the opportunity to give their views to Ofcom on the proposals and any additional cost burdens.

During the consultation, concerns were expressed about the potential impact of the proposals on the licence fees to be paid by RNLI . As clarification, Ofcom have stated that under their proposals it is possible that RNLI's spectrum fees may actually fall compared to the current level.

Ofcom are now considering all the responses received to their consultation and undertaking an impact assessment about the effects of the proposals. This should include the impact on charities such as RNLI. Ofcom have said they will carry out a further consultation before any changes to VHF licence fees are introduced.

Unfair Practices: Credit

John Battle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform how many cases of unfair credit relationships have been brought in county courts since the implementation of the Consumer Credit Act 2006; and if he will make a statement. [245429]

Bridget Prentice: I have been asked to reply.

Her Majesty's Courts Service does not collect data on actions commenced under particular Acts. Instead data are collected on the basis of the type of remedy sought, for example, specified/unspecified money claims or possession. Therefore I am unable to provide the information requested.

The Consumer Credit Act 2006 amends the Consumer Credit Act 1974. The 1974 Act set out the framework for regulating consumer credit supply and the hire of goods in the United Kingdom. In addition, the Act regulates the supply of credit and hiring of goods to individuals where the credit provided or payments for hire do not exceed a specified limit (currently £25,000). The Act further imposes a system of trading controls through regulation of both general business activities of traders that constitute the consumer credit and hire industry and controlling methods of seeking business. Control over agreements is done through the regulation of individual consumer credit or consumer hire agreements.

The aim of the Government's reform of the 1974 Act was to give further protection to consumers in addition to creating a fairer and more competitive credit market.

TREASURY

Christmas Bonus: Children

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with reference to the one-off payment of £70 for children with disabilities, announced in the Pre-Budget Statement of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 503, what estimate he has made of the number of disabled children eligible for the payment; and what estimate he has made of the total cost to the Treasury of these payments. [243884]

Jonathan Shaw: I have been asked to reply.

Around 300,000 disabled children are expected to be eligible for the Christmas bonus this financial year. We expect the total cost of the payments to this group, including the £60 extra payment on top of the regular £10 Christmas bonus, to be around £20 million.

Derbyshire Offshore: Kaupthing Singer and Friedlander

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether the Financial Services Authority insisted that the Derbyshire Building Society consult its depositors in respect of the sale of its Isle of Man subsidiary to Landsbanki; [246800]

(2) whether the Financial Services Authority insisted that existing depositors should have the right to withdraw their deposits as a condition of the sale of the Derbyshire Building Society's Isle of Man subsidiary to Kaupthing Singer and Friedlander. [246801]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 1902W.

Economic Situation: EU Action

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the cost to the public purse of the EU Economic Recovery Plan agreed on 12 December 2008; and if he will make a statement. [245915]

Ian Pearson: The Government welcomes the Commission's European Economic Recovery Plan.

Part of the Plan is to increase the overall EC budget by €5 billion in 2010 and 2011. The UK's current pre-abatement financing share of the EC budget is 15.8 per cent.

Peacekeeping Operations: Afghanistan

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost has been of the British operations in Afghanistan in each year since 2001; and what the anticipated costs are for each of the next five years. [245404]

Yvette Cooper: Details of the costs of military operations, including in Afghanistan, are published annually in the Ministry of Defence's annual report and accounts and in the Department's parliamentary supply estimates.

Forecasts of operational costs in future years are not published

Portman Building Society: Landsbanki

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether the Financial Services Authority insisted that the Portman Building Society consult its depositors in respect of the sale of its Guernsey subsidiary to Landsbanki; [246796]

(2) whether the Financial Services Authority insisted that existing depositors should have the right to withdraw their deposits as a condition of the sale of the Portman Building Society's Guernsey subsidiary to Landsbanki; [246797]

(3) what measures the Financial Services Authority took to safeguard depositors in the Portman Building Society's Guernsey subsidiary. [246798]

Ian Pearson: Portman Building Society ("Portman") did not sell its Guernsey deposit taking subsidiary (Portman Channel Islands Ltd.) to Landsbanki.

Portman sold this subsidiary in April 2007 to the Scarborough Building Society which renamed the company Scarborough Channel Islands Ltd. Scarborough Building Society continues to own this subsidiary.

Public Sector: Pensions

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on the affordability of public sector pension schemes; and if he will make a statement. [245817]

Yvette Cooper: The Treasury receives a wide range of representations from various sources on different aspects of public sector pension schemes. The latest Government projections, published in the Long Term Public Finance Report (LTPFR) alongside the March 08 Budget, show that expenditure on public service pensions should remain a relatively small and sustainable fraction of GDP.

Tax Havens: Research

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what recent estimate he has made of the likely cost of the research to explore customer experiences of the Offshore Disclosure Facility; [245836]

(2) what recent estimate he has made of the likely cost of each consultant interview under the research to explore customer experiences of the Offshore Disclosure Facility; [245837]

(3) how many customers are to be interviewed as part of the research to explore customer experiences of the Offshore Disclosure Facility; [245838]

(4) what the purpose of the research to explore customer experiences of the Offshore Disclosure Facility is; and if he will make a statement. [245839]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 12 January 2009]: HMRC are not proceeding with this research study. A review of the proposed study has suggested that it is unlikely to meet its aims.

The Offshore Disclosure Facility in 2007 led to the collection of £400 million.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Carers' Benefits

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many (a) carers and (b) carers providing more than (i) 20 hours and (ii) 35 hours per week of care are receiving incapacity benefit; and if he will make a statement; [246752]

(2) how many (a) carers and (b) carers providing more than (i) 20 hours and (ii) 35 hours per week of care who are receiving incapacity benefit also have underlying entitlement to carer's allowance; and if he will make a statement; [246753]

Jonathan Shaw: It is estimated that the number of adult carers in receipt of incapacity benefit is 200,000. Of these it is estimated that 100,000 provide more than 20 hours of care per week.

Sample sizes are too small to yield reliable results for the number of adult carers in receipt of incapacity benefit providing more than 35 hours of care per week.

The information required to determine underlying entitlement for carer's allowance is not collected.

Notes:

1. The Family Resources Survey is a nationally representative sample of approximately 26,000 households.

2. Data for 2006-07 were collected between April 2006 and March 2007.

3. In the Family Resources Survey carers are defined as 'people involved in the provision of any regular service or help to someone in or outside their household who is sick, disabled or elderly'.

4. 35 hours is the minimum hours of care that need to be supplied for a single individual to qualify for Carer's Allowance.

5. The figures are based on a sample of households which have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which align the Family Resources Survey to Government Office Region populations by age and sex. Estimates are subject to sampling error and remaining non-response error.

6. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 100,000.

Crimes of Violence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many reported assaults there were on staff of (a) his Department and (b) each of his Department's agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [245452]

Jonathan Shaw: DWP takes the safety of its staff seriously. In 2006 we undertook a review of our unacceptable customer behaviour procedures and introduced a "zero tolerance" approach, encouraging staff to report all incidents however minor.

The Department serves over 20 million customers. Every working day we interview over 45,000 customers as we help them prepare for work, we visit 3,000 people in their own home and answer over 300,000 telephone calls to our help lines.

The following table provides the information requested for DWP reported assaults broken down to show each of the Department's Agencies. Traditionally, DWP collect and report assault data by financial year rather than calendar year. The information is broken down into three distinct types of assault: actual, attempted and verbal (abuse and threats).

April 2005 to March 2006

DWP by business	Actual	Attempted	Verbal	Total

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will ensure that his Department does not enter into contracts with faith-based organisations which have policies and procedures which do not comply with equalities legislation; [244673]

(2) what his Department's policy is on whether contracts may be awarded to faith-based organisations which engage the exemptions for religious organisations provided for by the (a) Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003 and (b) Employment Equality (Sexual Orientation) Regulations 2003; [243887]

(3) what measures are in place to ensure religious organisations working under contract with his Department do not discriminate in their employment practices on grounds of (a) religious belief or (b) sexual orientation. [243850]

Jonathan Shaw: The Department has a separate contract with an independent external organisation to check that providers have appropriate diversity and equality policies in place; these checks are made before contracts are awarded, and repeated annually thereafter.

Contracts are awarded in accordance with existing EU and UK law including those relevant to equality including faith and sexual orientation. Successful suppliers to the Department are required to act lawfully and in accordance with relevant legislation including any provisions regarding unlawful discrimination, and exceptions regarding genuine occupational requirements and proportionality. A potential supplier failing to agree to the terms of contract would not be successful at contract award.

The compliance of external providers with standards of diversity and equality is regularly monitored by my Department's contract management staff. Contracts can be terminated in the event of a serious breach of these standards.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244721]

Jonathan Shaw: In dealing with correspondence, the Department does not differentiate between letters and emails. However, no central record is held of the vast number of letters and e-mails the Department for Work and Pensions and its agencies receives and deals with; this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members' and peers' correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what encryption controls his Department has in respect of (a) portable data storage devices and (b) key databases. [240293]

Jonathan Shaw: The Department has adopted appropriate industry best practice security controls, including encryption, in respect of its portable data storage devices and key databases. It is not in the public interest to describe those controls. I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 17 December 2008, Official Report, column 826W, which sets out the Department's approach to data and information security.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when his Department's customer information system was accredited to Government security standards in accordance with measures set out in the report Data Handling Procedures in Government: final Report and the document Cross Government Actions: Mandatory Minimum Measures. [245257]

Jonathan Shaw: The requirements for accreditation set out in the Data Handling Procedures in Government: Final Report, relate to new systems introduced after 1 July 2008. The Customer Information System was first accredited for compliance with the Department's Information System Security Standards in 2005 and is currently undergoing re-accreditation.

Departmental Fraud

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of internal fraud there have been in (a) each section of his Department and (b) each of his Department's agencies in each of the last five years. [245253]

Jonathan Shaw: Information is not available in the exact format requested. I refer the hon. Member to the answers given on 3 June 2008, Official Report, columns 804-05W. We are able to provide the breakdown of staff in each agency in 2003-04 and 2004-05 as set out in the following table. From 2005-06 onwards HM Treasury reporting requires details at departmental level only. This analysis is consistent with the way in which the Department reports to HM Treasury on internal fraud.

Business	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07	2007-08

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) staff and (b) contractors with (i) each section of his Department and (ii) each of his Department's agencies have been disciplined for fraudulent activity in each of the last five years. [245254]

Jonathan Shaw: Information on the numbers of (a) staff and (b) contractors with (i) each section of the Department for Work and Pensions and (ii) each of the Department's agencies that have been disciplined for fraudulent activity in each of the last five years is not available in the format requested.

The Department introduced a new personnel computer system incrementally from November 2006, being fully implemented by April 2007. Information is not available from this system prior to April 2007.

The Department for Work and Pensions records the numbers of staff disciplined for fraudulent activity under the general heading of "Fraud, Theft and Loss of DWP funds". No additional information has been recorded to break down this information further. To extract more detailed information from individual records under the category requested would be at disproportionate cost. The information provided in the following table shows the number of staff disciplined under the category "Fraud, Theft and Loss to DWP funds" since April 2007 by departmental agency.

The Department does not collect statistical data on employees working for the Department's contracted providers because they are not employees of the Department and disciplinary action is a matter for the contracting organisation as an employer. The Department does take action to recover any inappropriately claimed funding as a result of actions by contractors' staff, although no central records of this are kept.

Departmental ICT

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which of his Department's computer systems use (a) real time and (b) batch interfaces for the transfer of data between departmental computer systems. [241308]

Jonathan Shaw: Most of the Department's IT Systems use both real time and batch interfaces for the transfer of data between its and other departments' computer systems.

It would not be in the public interest to disclose details of the applications and arrangements that govern data transfer. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 17 December 2008, Official Report column 826W, which sets out the Department's approach to data and information security.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) system maps, (b) user guides, (c) project initiation documents from the time of implementation, (d) system notes and (e) interface details/charts for financial and non-financial IT systems in place within (i) his Department and (ii) its agencies. [241416]

Jonathan Shaw [holding answer 11 December 2008]: The Department has 149 major application systems, the documentation for which often contains information which may be prejudicial to the security of those systems and its disclosure would not be in the public interest. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 17 December 2008, Official Report column 826W, which sets out the Department's approach to data and information security.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many special advisers were employed in his Department at each pay band on 30 November 2008; and what his Department's total expenditure on special advisers was in 2007-08. [243559]

Jonathan Shaw: The Government are committed to publishing an annual list detailing the number and costs of special advisers. Information for 2007-08 was published by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 July 2008, Official Report, columns 99-102WS.

Departmental Sick Leave

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many days staff took as sick leave in (a) his Department and (b) its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available; what the average number of days of sick leave per member of staff was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [245661]

Jonathan Shaw: Information held for the current and previous two years is contained in the following tables.

2008-09

Business	Working days lost	Average working days lost per staff year
Jobcentre Plus	643,445	9.7
Disability and Carers Service	52,429	9.6
The Pension Service	100,445	9.4

The Pension Service	112,953	9.7
Child Support Agency	126,607	12.4
Other, including central directorates	79,930	8.1
DWP	1,052,557	10.1

2006-07

Business	Working days lost	Average working days lost per staff year
Jobcentre Plus	803,900	11.1
Disability and Carers Service	68,841	12.1
The Pension Service	124,943	10.0
Child Support Agency	152,268	13.9
Other, including central directorates	106,265	9.8
DWP	1,256,157	11.1

Notes:
1. DWP is unable to report precise part year data for the current financial year because its computer system is configured to calculate sickness absence levels using a rolling 12 months' data. The figures for 2008-09 are therefore based on data from December 2007 (rather than April 2008) to November 2008 inclusive. November 2008 is the latest month for which figures are available.
2. Up to 2006-07, average absence levels per staff year were reported annually by the Cabinet Office. The average figures for 2006-07 derive from the report "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service 2006-07". All other data in the tables, including those for working days lost, reflects information currently held on DWP's internal personnel computer system.
3. The averages shown are the average per full-time staff year, rather than per employee, to take account of part-time workers.
4. Any difference between the sum of the agency figures and the total for DWP is due to rounding.

Industrial Health and Safety

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the rate of under-reporting of workplace health and safety incidents in Scotland in the last five years. [244492]

Jonathan Shaw: In relation to the under reporting of workplace health and safety incidents in Scotland:

there is near 100 per cent. reporting of incidents resulting in fatalities;

the estimated proportion of reportable non-fatal injuries to employees in Scotland which were actually reported to HSE or to local authorities in the period 2003-04 to 2007-08 was 45 per cent. (95 per cent. confidence interval: 40 per cent. to 52 per cent.).

In addition to formal RIDDOR reports HSE receives information on incidents from a variety of other soufces.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Health and Safety Commission prosecutions there were against directors and managers of companies alleged to have committed health and safety breaches in each of the last five years, broken down by sector; and if he will make a statement. [245278]

Jonathan Shaw: The Government recognise the need for robust enforcement of health and safety law, and prosecution of offenders where there is the supporting evidence and it is in the public interest to do so. Prosecution is one aspect of the current arrangements, involving a mix of legislation, enforcement and voluntary guidance, which serve to focus directors' and senior managers' attention on their responsibilities for health and safety, and to influence their behaviour.

Health and Safety Executive prosecutions in each of the last five years against individual directors and other officers and members of corporate bodies, via s.37 of the Health and Safety at Work Act, is given in the following table.

	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07	2007-08
Guilty	13	6	8	17	8
Not guilty	2	2	3	0	0
Adjourned/ not concluded	0	0	0	5	2

	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07	2007-08
Withdrawn/ not taken	2	4	1	0	3
Total	17	12	12	22	13

A sector break-down is not readily available and its provision would involve a disproportionate cost.

Jobcentre Plus: Expenditure

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much expenditure his Department has incurred in providing Jobcentre Plus services in each of the last 10 years, broken down by district. [241456]

Jonathan Shaw: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the acting chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Mel Groves. I have asked him to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how much expenditure his Department has incurred in providing Jobcentre Plus services in each of the last 10 years, broken down by district. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The inception of Jobcentre Plus dates back to 2002 and so figures can only be provided from this date.

The costs of providing Jobcentre Plus services cannot be broken down by district. This is because a large proportion of our operating costs are not recorded at a district or regional level.

The net operating costs for Jobcentre Plus can be obtained from the Jobcentre Plus annual report and accounts for each year. They are also shown in the attached table at annex A.

Annex A

£ billion

	Net administration costs	Net programme costs	Net operating costs
2002-03	2.95	0.90	3.85
2003-04	3.04	1.01	4.05
2004-05	3.15	1.09	4.24
2005-06	3.46	1.08	4.54
2006-07	3.54	0.95	4.49
2007-08	3.36	—	3.36

Notes:
1 Source of the above information is the Jobcentre Plus annual report and accounts for each year from 2002-3 to 2007-8.
2 Information is shown for each complete financial year since Jobcentre Plus started in 2002.
3 Figures are quoted in nominal terms only.
4 From April 2007, accounting responsibility for employment programmes moved to Welfare Work Equality Group (WWEG) within DWP.

Jobcentre Plus: Resignations

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff have left their posts in Jobcentre Plus after a period of sick leave in each month in each of the last five years. [241450]

Jonathan Shaw: The information is not available.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have claimed jobseeker's allowance (JSA) in each quarter since 1997; and what proportion in each quarter had been claiming JSA for (a) between 0 and 13 weeks, (b) between 13 and 26 weeks, (c) between 26 and 39 weeks, (d) between 39 and 52 weeks, (e) over 52 weeks and (f) over 104 weeks. [243468]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 December 2008]: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246340]

Jonathan Shaw: I am unable to answer how many former prisoners the Department employs as we do not collect or record this information. We would be unable to gather the information as paperwork relating to appointment is destroyed in line with the Data Protection Act.

Current policy position

Our policy on the recruitment of ex-offenders is to employ individuals with unspent convictions wherever it is appropriate to do so. A risk assessment is made on each individual case taking into account the nature of the offence and the appropriateness of recruiting the individual concerned into the specific post on offer. Occasionally it is necessary to refuse employment to ex-offenders but this decision is not taken lightly. The Department is fully compliant with the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act and with Cabinet Office guidelines.

Pension Credit

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will review the way in which income from savings is taken into account in calculating entitlement to pension credit following the reduction in the Bank rate to two per cent.; and if he will make a statement. [242666]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 11 December 2008]: Pension credit disregards savings up to £6,000 (£10,000 for those in a care home). The vast majority of pensioners (around 80 per cent.) who are eligible for pension credit have savings of £6,000 or less and do not have tariff income applied.

Pension credit rules assume a notional rate of income at a rate of £1 for every £500 (or part of £500) savings held above the £6,000 threshold. This is half the rate assumed for working age benefits and is significantly more generous than those of the previous minimum income guarantee.

The formula is not intended to represent any rate of return that could be obtained from investing capital. It provides a simple method of calculating the weekly contribution that people with capital in excess of £6,000 (or £10,000 if in a care home) are expected to make from those resources to help meet their normal living expenses.

Pension credit, through the savings credit, is designed to specifically reward pensioners with low or modest second pensions or savings. Deemed income from capital is also qualifying income for the savings credit.

Pensions: Sheffield

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many pensioners in Sheffield receive their pensions by direct credit to their bank or building society account; [244102]

(2) how many pensioners in Sheffield collect their pensions from their local post office. [244103]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested.

Information available at April 2008 shows that in Sheffield around 62,000 pensioners were being paid their state pension by direct credit to their bank or building society accounts and around 18,500 were being paid into a Post Office card account.

Many of the 62,000 pensioners paid into a bank account may still choose to collect their cash from the Post Office using one of the 25 or so bank and building society accounts that can be accessed over the counter at Post Office branches.

Queen's Diamond Jubilee

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans his Department has to mark the Queen's Diamond Jubilee in 2012. [243975]

Jonathan Shaw: My Department has not, at this stage, developed plans on how to mark the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen in 2012.

The Department for Culture, Media and Sport is in discussions with the Royal Household about how to mark the Diamond Jubilee.

Social Security Benefits: Reform

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effects of his recently-announced proposals for welfare reform on severely mentally and physically disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [245848]

Jonathan Shaw: The impact on disabled people of all the proposals in our White Paper, Raising expectations and increasing support—reforming welfare for the future, was assessed as part of the wider impact assessment. The measures that have the most direct impact on disabled people are those to do with employment and support allowance and incapacity benefit.

The impact assessment can be found on the internet at:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/welfarereform/raisingexpectations/impact-assessment.pdf

Sunbeds: Safety

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Health and Safety Executive will publish a response to the guidance on controlling the health risks associated with working with UV tanning equipment consultation. [246211]

Jonathan Shaw: The Health and Safety Executive expects to publish the revised guidance leaflet (INDG209) and a summary of the responses to consultation on the draft version early in 2009.

Vertex Data Science

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what contracts his Department has with Vertex Data Science. [243882]

Jonathan Shaw: The Department currently has two contracts with Vertex Data Science Ltd., the Management of Clerical Cases Contract for the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission and the National Benefit Fraud Help line Contract for Jobcentre Plus. Vertex is also one of a panel of seven providers to support the recovery of child maintenance arrears, however, the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission has yet to transfer any debt management cases to Vertex under this Framework Agreement.

Vertex is also being considered for a contract to provide other departmental work. This is currently subject to competitive tender.

Winter Fuel Payments

John Mason: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the (a) cost and (b) administrative expenditure which would be incurred by paying winter fuel payments on a pro-rata basis to those who attain the qualifying age after the qualifying period (i) as a transitional measure in the year 2008-09 and (ii) on average per year from 2008-09. [246063]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 12 January 2009]: Entitlement to winter fuel payments is based upon people's circumstances in the qualifying week (set in legislation as 3rd Monday in September). Using the September qualifying week means that the payments can be made before Christmas in time for when winter fuel bills arrive.

The additional costs incurred by paying winter fuel payments on a pro-rata basis to those who reach the qualifying age during the period after the qualifying week but before the end of the financial year are approximately £40 million in 2008-09.

As population projections vary considerably in the future, it is not possible to give an average per year figure for the costs.

No information is collected which would enable the estimation of the administrative expenditure incurred in making payments to persons who attain the qualifying age after the qualifying period.

Note:

Figures are based on 2008 ONS population projections. Costs for any given year will vary with population fluctuations.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

10 Downing Street

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster with reference to the answer from the Prime Minister of 10 November 2008, Official Report, column 821W, on 10 Downing Street, for what reason the Cabinet Office has declined to place in the Library a list of the merchandise available in the Downing Street gift shop. [241774]

Kevin Brennan: A list of gifts is publicly available and has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether prices in the Downing Street gift shop have been reduced to reflect the reduction in value added tax to 15 per cent. [244941]

Kevin Brennan: Merchandise prices reflect the VAT rate charged by suppliers at the time of purchase. These gifts are unsubsidised and sold on a not-for-profit basis.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what expert advisers have been commissioned by his Department and its agencies since 1997; on what topic each was commissioned; and whether the advisers so appointed made a declaration of political activity in each case. [246663]

Kevin Brennan: The detailed information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Cabinet Office sponsors a number of advisory non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) which provide independent expert advice on a number of issues. Appointments to NDPBs are governed by the principles set out in the Commissioner for Public Appointments' code of practice. Summary information is published in "Public Bodies" which can be accessed online at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/about/public/bodies.asp or copies are available in the Libraries of the House.

Summary information on the political activity of individuals appointed to posts regulated by the Commissioner for Public Appointments' code of practice is published each year in the commissioner's annual report.

In addition, the Government publish on an annual basis the names and numbers of special advisers in each pay band. For the most recent information, I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 July 2008, Official Report, columns 99-102WS.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Grant Shapps: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much has been spent on (a) departmental Christmas parties and (b) staff entertainment in the last three years. [243746]

Kevin Brennan: The Cabinet Office does not pay for Christmas parties for its staff. The Department's accounting system does not recognise the expenditure category of staff entertainment.

Non-profit Making Associations

Christopher Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of Government policies to build capacity in the third sector. [246143]

Kevin Brennan: The NAO has been investigating the effectiveness, impact and value for money of Government investment in building the capacity of the third sector, and plans to report in early February. Both Capacitybuilders and Futurebuilders have commissioned independent evaluation of their programmes. Local third sector infrastructure organisations have benefited from the programmes delivered by Capacitybuilders. Organisations that received Futurebuilders investments subsequently succeeded in winning public service delivery contracts.

WOMEN AND EQUALITY

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality with how many faith-based organisations the Government Equalities Office has contracts to provide public services. [244843]

Maria Eagle: The Government Equalities Office has no contracts with faith-based organisations.

Mental Illness

Jo Swinson: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what assessment she has made of the recommendations relevant to the Government Equalities Office's policy responsibilities made in the Foresight report on Mental Capacity and Well-Being; and if she will make a statement. [244020]

Maria Eagle: While I welcome the far ranging nature of the report and its recommendations, I have not carried out a formal assessment of their specific relevance to the work of the Government Equalities Office.

WALES

Charities

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales to which (a) charities and (b) voluntary organisations his Department has provided funding in the last five years; and how much funding was provided to each. [247369]

Mr. Paul Murphy: None.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246011]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office does not hold information centrally on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff.

The equal opportunities policies used during recruitment delivers the Wales Office a diverse work force without the need to set targets. Levels of diversity are published in our annual report each year. In 2007-08 approximately 14 per cent. of the Office's staff were of ethnic minority groups, and 51 per cent. of staff were female.

The Wales Office has a small number of staff with disabilities, but in order to maintain confidentiality, numbers are not given. This is in line with Cabinet Office guidance.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244357]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office generally procures its furniture through Ministry of Justice contracts. The amount the Department has directly spent on furniture from British firms for each financial year since 2005-06 is detailed in the following table. Information for the years prior to 2005-06 could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost. The Department did not directly buy any furniture from Remploy or overseas firms.

2006-07	2,239
2007-08	13,170
2008-09	[1]

[1] No expenditure to date

Departmental Internet

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which internet providers his Department uses. [245398]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office is provided with its IT services by the Ministry of Justice, including internet access. Users connect to the internet through the Government Secure Intranet service, which is provided by Cable and Wireless.

Departmental Older Workers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what percentage of new recruits to his Department were aged over (a) 55 and (b) 60 years in 2007-08. [245406]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office does not require applicants for its posts to provide their dates of birth.

This information is therefore not held in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Wales Office has a number of staff in post that are above the ages of (a) 55 and (b) 60 respectively.

Departmental Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to ensure that those temporary and permanent employees at the same grade in his Department who are paid at an hourly rate are paid at the same rate. [244383]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office does not employ contracted staff (either fixed term or permanent) at hourly rates. Fixed term and permanent staff are paid on the same pay scales to ensure fairness.

Temporary agency staff are paid at the hourly rate set by their employer (the agency) and not by the Wales Office. The Wales Office does not routinely use agency staff.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by his Department for public access to services. [246981]

Mr. Paul Murphy: None.

Departmental Temporary Employment

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which companies were used by his Department for providing temporary staff in each of the last five years; and what the value of contracts with each such company was in each of those years. [245401]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Wales Office does not have any contracts with employment agencies to provide temporary staff.

The Wales Office has occasionally needed to employ temporary staff, and in the last five years these have been provided by Kelly Services, Adecco and Acorn.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan: Overseas Aid

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of the £600 million of aid pledged to Afghanistan in June 2008 he expects to be spent in each year to 2012-13. [244374]

Mr. Michael Foster: At the Paris donor conference on 12 June the UK pledged £800 million, of which £613 million was new money, towards the international development effort in Afghanistan (2009-10 to 2012-13). This figure comprises contributions from the Department for International Development (DFID), the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), the Afghanistan Drugs Interdepartmental Unit (ADIDU), and the tri-departmental Stabilisation Aid Fund (SAF).

In 2008-09 DFID expects to disburse £123 million in Afghanistan. Due to the humanitarian, security and political situation our future programme must be flexible, therefore there is no fixed disbursement for the coming years. However, we fully expect to meet our £460 million share of the Paris pledge by 2012-13.

The FCO, ADIDU and SAF allocations for Afghanistan beyond this financial year have not yet been finalised for the same reason. The FCO and ADIDU are planning to spend around £25 million in 2008-09. In addition Afghanistan has been allocated £48 million under the SAF for the same year.

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what reports he has received on the (a) likelihood and (b) likely extent of famine in Afghanistan; what assessment he has made of Afghanistan's need for aid this winter; and if he will make a statement [244376]

Mr. Michael Foster: The Department for International Development (DFID) has received reports that the food-security situation is fragile however there is no indication of an imminent famine.

DFID works closely with other donors to assess Afghanistan's need for food aid. In 2008 the World Food Programme (WFP) launched two appeals to which DFID contributed a combined total of £11 million. The WFP has already delivered 96 per cent. of the 36,000 metric tonnes of food designated to vulnerable people in Afghanistan. The WFP confirmed that there is sufficient food in the pipeline until March 2009.

DFID is monitoring the situation with other partners and considering further support to the WFP beyond March 2009.

Bosnia: Overseas Aid

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid his Department has given to Bosnia and Herzegovina in each year since 1997; and how it has been used. [244538]

Mr. Michael Foster: Details on the Department for International Development's (DFID) bilateral expenditure and imputed share of multilateral official development assistance (ODA) in Bosnia-Herzegovina since 1997-98 are in the following table.

DFID expenditure on development in Bosnia-Herzegovina, 1997-98 to 2007-08

	Total DFID bilateral expenditure	Imputed DFID share of multilateral ODA
1997-98	1,501	30,697
1998-99	2,599	12,954
1999-2000	4,143	14,512
2000-01	3,383	10,286
2001-02	3,547	12,672
2002-03	6,647	13,862
2003-04	6,754	9,549
2004-05	5,224	10,568
2005-06	3,282	6,625
2006-07	3,975	8,199
2007-08	4,905	—

DFID's aid has been focused on socio-economic development, supporting activities under the UK Government through the global conflict prevention pool (GCPP) and de-mining activities.

Key programme objectives are to strengthen the capacity of the Bosnia-Herzegovina Government in their path towards EU integration. We specifically support:

the development of an aid co-ordination mechanism;

the development of Country Development Strategy processes;

strengthening the budgetary process;

public administration reform;

economic, fiscal and social policy reform, including social insurance policy; support to the national justice sector reform strategy;

strengthening Government statistical systems;

the business enabling environment, and good donor practices.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many contracts his Department has which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract is held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245336]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department for International Development does not have any contracts with IT suppliers that allow them to store the personal data of UK citizens overseas.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; when the appointment was made; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245366]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department for International Development has had a senior information risk owner since the role was introduced in 2004. There were no changes to the role as a result of the introduction of the Data Handling Procedures in June 2008. The individual currently holding the role is a director in the senior civil service.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of the IT systems in his Department is fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245376]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: To date 81 per cent. of the Department for International Development's IT Systems are fully accredited to the Government's security standards. A project is under way to review and accredit the remaining 19 per cent. of IT systems and this is scheduled to finish in March 2009.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244350]

Mr. Michael Foster: The Department for International Development (DFID) does not record details of the nationality of firms providing furniture, and such information cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost. DFID has not procured any furniture from Remploy.

All expenditure is incurred in accordance with the principles of Managing Public Money and the Treasury handbook on Regularity and Propriety.

Departmental ICT

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what information technology projects initiated by his Department have been cancelled prior to completion in the last five years; and what the cost of each such project was to the public purse. [240383]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department for International Development cancelled an internal information technology project run by DFID Pakistan in September 2008. The project had spent £7,000 at the point of cancellation.

Guyana: Rain Forests

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to assist in preservation of rainforest in Guyana. [244488]

Mr. Michael Foster: Following a visit to the UK by President Jagdeo earlier this year, DFID committed £100,000 towards work by Guyana to develop a low-carbon investment prospectus and implementation plan. This includes an assessment of the cost of conserving Guyana's rainforests. Guyana has also secured funding under the World Bank's Forest Carbon Partnership Fund, to which the UK has contributed £15 million, to prepare a Reduced Emissions from Deforestation and Degradation Readiness Plan. Guyana is included in the Caribbean Regional Stern Review on the Economics of Climate Change. In addition, we have undertaken to discuss with Guyana the results of the Eliasch Review into climate change and the financing of forests.

DFID officials will meet this month with Guyanese counterparts to discuss the creation of incentives to avoid deforestation.

International Assistance

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding his Department plans to contribute to the International Fund for Agricultural Development in the next three years. [244165]

Mr. Michael Foster: Planned contributions to the International Fund for Agricultural Development in the next three years are made up of overlapping contributions to the 6th, 7th and 8th Replenishments:

Replenishment	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12
6th (2004-06)	4,000,000	—	—
7th (2007-09)	9,703,750	8,317,500	—
8th (2010-12)	—	10,000,000	11,930,000
Total	13,703,750	18,317,500	11,930,000

North Korea: Overseas Aid

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid the Government have provided to North Korea in each of the last 10 years; how much is planned to be provided; and what the (a) purpose and (b) nature of this aid is. [244495]

Mr. Michael Foster: Details on the UK's bilateral expenditure and imputed share of multilateral Official Development Assistance (ODA) in North Korea over the last 10 years are in the following table.

UK gross public expenditure on development to North Korea, 1998-99 to 2007-08

£000

	UK bilateral assistance	Imputed UK share of multilateral ODA
1998-99	306	5,888
1999-2000	638	3,493
2000-01	887	3,835
2001-02	2,119	2,372
2002-03	—	6,715
2003-04	712	2,878
2004-05	712	2,573
2005-06	—	1,932
2006-07	—	998
2007-08	732

Of the UK's bilateral assistance, £83,000 in 2000-01, £42,000 in 2001-02 and £30,000 in 2007-08 was provided in support of English language training. In 2007-08, £53,000 was provided to support economic and development planning. All other UK bilateral expenditure was provided as humanitarian assistance.

There are currently no plans for DFID to start a bilateral programme in North Korea.

Overseas Aid: Wildlife Conservation

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what programmes exist in the British Indian Ocean Territories to promote biodiversity and conservation. [245418]

Mr. Michael Foster: The Overseas Territories Environment Programme, jointly funded by the Department for International Development and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, supports biodiversity conservation in UK Overseas Territories. To date seven projects have been funded in the British Indian Ocean Territory, of which two are being funded in the current financial year. These are:

(i) Royal Navy Birdwatching Society: monitoring of seabird populations at key sites to assess the impact of rodent eradication efforts;

(ii) Chagos Conservation Trust: publication of a public information note on the global environmental importance of the Chagos archipelago and ways in which visitors can help protect the unique environment. The information note is intended for distribution to visiting military and civilian personnel.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture: Animal Welfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is his Department's policy to seek to reduce the financial support for intensive livestock production methods. [244680]

Jane Kennedy: It has long been the case that the intensive livestock production sectors such as the pig, poultry and egg industries have been unsupported by direct EU subsidies. The legal basis for intervention in the pigmeat sector was removed in the recent CAP Healthcheck agreement in Brussels, a measure which the UK supported.

Bees

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 December 2008, Official Report, column 123W, on insects, if he will publish the assessment his Department has made of recent trends in the populations of wild bees. [246596]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Trends in the distributions of wild bee populations were published in the 'Provisional Atlas of the Aculeate Hymenoptera of Britain and Ireland' by the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology. The Joint Nature Conservation Committee are currently collating and analysing data on population trends for all UK Biodiversity Action Plan priority species including bees. This information will be available in the spring.

Cardiff-Weston Barrage

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the costs of flood protection and alterations to sewage disposal facilities required as a result of the construction of (a) Cardiff-Weston barrage and (b) a Shoots barrage. [244501]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Government-led Severn Tidal Power Feasibility Study is considering the opportunities to generate power from the tidal range of the Severn Estuary.

The first phase of the study has concentrated on identifying the issues associated with the 10 possible projects under consideration. As such, no estimates have been made to date of costs of each of the options in respect of flood protection or sewage treatment. If the study should continue into Phase 2, more detailed assessments of possible impacts and costs of each of the short listed options will take place.

Climate Change

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of its capacity to adapt to climate change; and what plans he has to publish a climate change adaptation strategy. [241183]

Huw Irranca-Davies: In July 2008, the cross-Government Adapting to Climate Change Programme published Adapting to climate change in England—a framework for action which set out the Government's strategy for adaptation and the work-plan for the cross-Government Programme for the next three years. This programme increases Government's capacity to adapt by ensuring a co-ordinated approach across all Departments and the public sector, and overall responsibility for it rests with DEFRA. Information about the programme and its work can be found at:

www.defra.gov/adaptation

This includes taking forward work flowing from the Climate Change Act—including a national Climate Change Risk Assessment and cost benefit analysis which will inform future priorities for the statutory adaptation programme that will then begin in 2012.

The Government's longer term strategy on adapting to a changing climate will be set out in this statutory National Adaptation Programme, which will be reviewed and updated on a five year rolling basis in response to updated risk assessments, and report to Parliament.

In addition, DEFRA is continuing with its work looking at how a changing climate impacts each of the policy areas it has responsibility for, as well as working towards embedding adaptation into its corporate and policy decision making processes across the Department.

Coastal Areas: Departmental Coordination

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department has taken to improve its arrangements for co-ordination with other Government Departments of policy affecting coastal towns in the last two years. [244371]

Huw Irranca-Davies: We continue to work closely with other Government Departments to improve the process for co-ordinating the development of policy in coastal areas.

This year an important development has been the Coastal Towns Working Group, a cross-departmental group, which was set up in February 2008, following the House of Commons Select Committee Inquiry on Coastal Towns.

DEFRA plays a key role in this group which aims to coordinate its efforts to develop policies and address the challenges faced by coastal towns and to promote cross-Government understanding of the needs of coastal towns by looking at social, environmental and economic issues together.

There are a wide range of policy areas, activities and initiatives within Government which have implications for coastal towns. To show how these activities, including the Marine and Coastal Access Bill, will contribute to a more coordinated approach to decision making at the coast, we will be publishing a strategy for promoting an integrated approach to the management of coastal areas in England, in January 2009.

Departmental Correspondence

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) letters and (b) e-mails received by his Department had not been responded to as at 15 December 2008. [244704]

Huw Irranca-Davies: From 1 January to 15 December 2008, DEFRA's Customer Contact Unit handled 37,979 pieces of correspondence. This included e-mails received via the DEFRA Helpline and letters from MPs, stakeholders and the public. We responded to 82 per cent. with the 15 working day target.

As at 15 December 2008, 1624 letters and 515 e-mails received via the DEFRA Helpline were unanswered. Of those unanswered, 700 were over the 15 working day target.

The number of unanswered e-mails, received elsewhere in DEFRA, cannot be provided within the disproportionate cost limit, as to do so would require gathering information from every official in the Department.

The Cabinet Office publishes an annual report to Parliament on the performance of departments in replying to Members'/Peers' correspondence. Information relating to 2008 will be published as soon as it has been collated. The report for 2007 was published on 20 March 2008, Official Report, columns 71-74WS. Reports for earlier years are available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Data Protection

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many civil servants in his Department have been (a) investigated, (b) suspended and (c) dismissed for (i) losing and (ii) deliberately disclosing (A) data stored on departmental equipment and (B) confidential information in each year since 1997. [242925]

Huw Irranca-Davies: There have been five fewer such disciplinary breaches in the Department since 1997. The details are withheld on the grounds of confidentiality.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [244609]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Government's delivery plan for 'Sustainable Procurement and Operations on the Government Estate', published in August 2008, provides a full account of the initiatives Departments are taking to reduce their energy waste. The Government have committed to updating the delivery plan on a six monthly basis, and the first of these updates was published on 18 December 2008.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246023]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA holds data on the sex, ethnicity, age and disability of its staff. Information on these aspects of diversity as at 30 September 2007 is available from the Office of National Statistics at:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_labour/Civil_service_tables_2007.xls.

Departmental data are at tables 12 (Sex), 22 (Ethnicity), 29 (Age) and 25 (Disability).

Additionally, information on sexual orientation and religion and belief is collected through the anonymous DEFRA staff survey.

DEFRA aims to be visibly and culturally diverse at all levels. We have set targets for the representation of women, disabled people and ethnic minorities in the senior civil service (SCS) in support of the civil service diversity strategy, 'Promoting Equality, Valuing Diversity', and these are set out in the table.

Percentage

	2008 DEFRA current position	DEFRA target for 2011
Women	26.2	38
Women in top management posts	22.0	33
Disabled	2.7	5.0
BME	2.2	5.0

DEFRA has also made a commitment to set targets during 2009 for grades immediately below the SCS, and also for more junior grades where there is under representation.

Departmental Furniture

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was spent by his Department on furniture made by (a) British firms, (b) Remploy and (c) overseas firms in each year since 2000. [244345]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Estates Divisions, Space Utilisation Team, hold furniture expenditure records dating back to FY 2003-04. Details are:

FY 2003-04
British firms	549,220.00
Remploy	0.00

Departmental Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by his Department were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) in each year from 1997 to 2008; and how many of these were upheld by the ASA in each year. [246649]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA was formed in 2001. Since then, 57 complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by DEFRA were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA). None of these complaints were upheld by the ASA.

Departmental Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what expert advisers have been commissioned by his Department and its agencies since 1997; on what topic each was commissioned; and whether the adviser so appointed made a declaration of political activity in each case. [246957]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The information requested could be provided only by incurring disproportionate cost.

Departmental Pay

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what bonuses were paid by his Department in 2007-08; to which members of staff; and for what purposes. [240793]

Huw Irranca-Davies: I would refer the right hon. Member to the reply given on 4 November 2008, Official Report, column 395W, to the hon. Member for Upper Bann (David Simpson).

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make it his policy to ensure that those temporary and permanent employees at the same grade in his Department who are paid at an hourly rate are paid at the same rate. [244393]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Department does not employ any permanent staff who are paid at an hourly rate.

Departmental Pensions

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what proportion of civil servants in his Department and its agencies are members of the (a) Classic, (b) Classic Plus, (c) Nuvos and (d) Premium civil service pension schemes. [240307]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The following tables provide the figures for each organisation. Data for Core DEFRA, RPA, CEFAS and VLA are from the pension administrator's database, data for CSL was taken from their internal HR database. All data is as of the October payroll update.

Environment Protection: Greater London

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he next plans to meet the Mayor of London to discuss the environmental strategy for London. [244880]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Neither myself nor the Secretary of State are scheduled to meet with the Mayor of London to discuss this matter. However, the Minister for Sustainable Development and Energy Innovation, Lord Hunt, shall be meeting with him on 12 January 2009 to discuss air quality within the context of the western extension to the London congestion charge zone.

Environment Protection: Transport

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to promote walking and cycling along routes of the canal system (a) throughout the UK and (b) in London. [244858]

Huw Irranca-Davies: British Waterways works with a wide range of partners to promote walking and cycling, such as local authorities and Sustrans. It actively promotes walking and cycling on its towpaths throughout England and Wales through its website Waterscape as well as through an on-going promotional campaign to encourage people to use their local canals.

My Department is currently carrying out a review of the Government's waterways policy document Waterways for Tomorrow. The revised strategy will highlight the public benefits that our canal network can provide in terms of health and recreation and will consider opportunities for further promoting walking and cycling. We are liaising with the Department of Health and the Department for Transport (DFT) through the inter-departmental group on inland waterways to promote the use of the canal network in healthy living campaigns and sustainable transport initiatives respectively.

DFT has been promoting walking and cycling to local authorities in England (excluding London) through the Local Transport Plan process since 2000. The Mayor of London is responsible for walking and cycling routes in London. The October 2007 report by the Inland Waterways Advisory Council (IWAC) on Waterways for Tomorrow stated as an important achievement "Funding from local authorities has helped to improve towpaths for walking and cycling". In addition, many of the DFT funded 18 cycling demonstration towns and three sustainable travel towns together with match funding from these local authorities are developing canal towpaths for walking and cycling.

Fish: River Severn

Martin Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what species of fish inhabit the Severn Estuary; and which are listed as endangered. [244320]

Huw Irranca-Davies: A list of fish species known to occur in the Severn estuary is provided as follows. This list includes marine species (based on sampling in Bridgewater Bay, inner Bristol channel, between 1980 and 2008), diadromous species known to migrate through the Severn estuary and freshwater species reported to occur in the upper estuary.

The species marked by an asterisk are either afforded legal protection or are designated as threatened or endangered by conservation forums.

Flood Control

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which recommendations of the Pitt Review (a) his Department and (b) the Environment Agency have implemented. [245972]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Government have made significant progress in implementing the recommendations of Sir Michael Pitt's review of the summer 2007 floods. The Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs made a statement to the House of Commons and published the Government's response to the review on 17 December 2008. It sets out what has already been done and a clear action plan for the remaining steps to deliver against the challenging agenda identified by Sir Michael. The Government's response can be viewed at:

www.defra.gov.uk/environ/fcd/floods07/Govtresptopitt.pdf.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on developing a single set of guidance for local authorities and the public on the use and usefulness of sandbags and other alternative means of flood water management; and when such guidance will be published. [246111]

Huw Irranca-Davies: As part of the response to Sir Michael Pitt's report on the summer 2007 floods, the Government announced that the Environment Agency's guidance on the use of sandbags will be updated by the Agency and made available to the Government, the public and local authorities by February 2009. The Environment Agency is developing additional guidance on self-help home protection measures for householders, businesses and building contractors who may fit them. This guidance will be developed by summer 2009.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Environment Agency with (a) insurance companies and (b) the water industry on sharing information to facilitate the management of flood risk. [246119]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Government agreed a new Statement of Principles with the Association of British Insurers (ABI) in summer 2008. The agreement requires the Environment Agency to provide information to insurance companies through the ABI. The Environment Agency assures me that it is making good progress to meet its obligations under the statement.

The Environment Agency has been working with water utilities and Water UK on a national protocol for sharing flood data.

Flood Control: Databases

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether flood risk address information will be made available (a) publicly and (b) to interested parties. [242592]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Environment Agency makes information from its National Flood Risk Assessment available to the public via their website. This information can be searched by postcode and provides an indication of flood risk for areas rather than particular properties. On payment of a small charge, the Environment Agency will also provide any more detailed information that it holds, but again this generally relates to areas rather than properties.

Information from the National Flood Risk Assessment is also supplied to insurers and other organisations.

Flood Control: EC Law

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made towards the implementation of the EU Floods Directive. [246783]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Floods Directive came into force on 26 November 2007 and member states have two years in which to transpose the Directive into domestic law. DEFRA is co-ordinating the transposition of the Directive into UK law and is ultimately responsible for its timely and compliant implementation. A UK Floods Directive liaison group monitor progress against the project timetable.

Given that the Directive largely mirrors our existing approach to flood risk mapping and planning in England, we are developing proposals that build on these arrangements, taking into account forms of flooding that were previously not mapped, such as surface water, groundwater and reservoirs. Our current proposals are to transpose the Directive through the Floods and Water Bill.

The transposition will be subject to a full public consultation, which is expected to take place during 2009.

Flood Control: Finance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the Statement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 495, on the pre-Budget report, how much of the £3 billion of capital spending brought forward will be spent on flood defences; when he expects the funding to be available; what type of projects it will be spent on; whether any of the funding had been previously announced; and if he will make a statement. [244162]

Huw Irranca-Davies: £20 million of the capital funding announced for flood and coastal erosion risk management in 2010-11 will be brought forward to 2009-10. The Environment Agency estimate that 27,405 households will benefit from new or improved flood risk protection a year earlier than planned.

Funding will be allocated by the Environment Agency. The exact location of households benefiting will be dependent upon schemes passing the necessary feasibility studies and planning applications, as well as final approval for projects, which will be determined in February 2009. The Environment Agency has issued a list of schemes expected to be brought forward as a result. Copies of the list have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the management of local flood risk by local authorities will be funded. [246112]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Local authorities are already funded to manage local flood risk through the revenue support grant. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced a further £15 million over three years (2008-09 to 2010-11 inclusive) to fund priority local authorities to tackle local flood risk in areas most prone to surface water flooding.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the funding which his Department is making available to implement the Pitt Review recommendations will be allocated; and by what date such allocation will take place. [246113]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Annex B in The Government's Response to Sir Michael Pitt's Review of the Summer 2007 Floods provides a complete breakdown of the allocation of funding to implement the recommendations. Annex C sets out the timetable for taking work forward. Both annexes can be viewed at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environ/fcd/floods07/Govtresptopitt.pdf.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding his Department will provide for (a) the Environment Agency, (b) the water industry and (c) local authorities to develop tools and techniques to model surface water flooding. [246114]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA is providing the Environment Agency with £8.5 million over three years (2008-09 to 2010-11 inclusive), on top of the funding already announced for the Environment Agency over the period, to take forward their elements of the Pitt Review action plan including the development of tools and techniques to model surface water flooding. DEFRA is not providing funding for either the water companies or for local authorities for this purpose as surface water modelling is part of the Environment Agency's new strategic overview role.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with local authorities on collating and mapping main flood risk management and drainage assets; and what funding his Department has allocated to such activities. [246118]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA has been working closely with local authorities to improve the management of surface water including funding 15 Integrated Urban Pilot Projects to test approaches to surface water management. The results of this work have been used to produce guidance for the development of surface water management plans.

Local authorities also comprised the majority of the respondents to the DEFRA consultation on Improving Surface Water Drainage (February 2008) which is now being used to inform policy development.

On 17 December, after an open expression of interest exercise, DEFRA announced that six local authorities had been chosen to develop 1st Edition Surface Water Management Plans using the new guidance.

Local authority input into the Pitt Review was high and as part of the response to the Review a survey of local flood risk management was conducted by the Local Government Association (LGA) and DEFRA. The aim of the survey was to establish the current and future capacity of local authorities to undertake the lead role on the management of local flood risk as proposed by the Pitt Review. There was a high response rate from local authorities to the survey. Two follow up workshops for local authorities are being organised by DEFRA and the Local Government Association to discuss the findings.

The Government's response to the Pitt Review, announced on 17 December 2007, includes £15 million from the Pitt fund and an estimated total of £12 million that local authorities are expected to spend in this area from existing budgets in 2009-10 and 2010-11 to deliver local authority leadership on flood risk management in the 50 highest priority areas. This includes surface water management plans, mapping of drainage assets and oversight and maintenance of sustainable drainage systems for new development.

Flood Control: Urban Areas

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) water safety and (b) other environmental regulations are in place to prevent public access to grassed areas above covered reservoirs; if his Department will encourage water companies to allow such access, with particular reference to urban areas with limited access to green space; and if he will make a statement. [246208]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Covered reservoirs can exist as part of the water supply network, and where these do exist, they have been subject to an appropriate level of fencing and security protection.

Under the Security and Emergency Measures Direction, guidance is issued to water companies by the Security Service on the issues they should be considering in order to protect their infrastructure and the standards that they should work to.

Public access to such sites is denied for many reasons—so that it does not compromise water quality, public safety or essential maintenance activities—and this may lead to a conflict between public access and operational requirements.

Flooding Lessons Learned Review

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent progress has been made on implementing the recommendations contained in the Pitt report on flooding; and if he will make a statement. [243086]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Government have made significant progress in implementing the recommendations of Sir Michael Pitt's Review of the summer 2007 floods. The Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs made a statement to the House of Commons and published the Government's response to the Review on 17 December 2008. It sets out what has already been done and a clear action plan for the remaining steps to deliver against the challenging agenda identified by Sir Michael. The Government's response can be viewed at:

www.defra.gov.uk/environ/fcd/floods07/Govtresptopitt.pdf

Floods: Risk Assessment

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress the Environment Agency has made on assessing the risk of flooding from (a) surface water, (b) ground water flood risk and (c) coastal flood risk. [246109]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Environment Agency has made the following progress on assessing the risk of flooding.

(a) The Environment Agency issued maps to the 47 local resilience forums in England and Wales in August 2008 indicating the areas likely to be most susceptible to surface water flooding. This followed an urgent recommendation from the Pitt Interim Report that the Government accepted.

(b) The Environment Agency has established groundwater monitoring arrangements in the chalk aquifers across England and is developing a database of all historic records of groundwater flooding to share with local resilience forums.

(c) The Environment Agency undertakes regular assessments of the risk of flooding from rivers and the sea through its national flood risk assessments. The Environment Agency's website provides the latest assessment of the probability of flooding in a particular area including coastal and tidal flooding. The second round of shoreline management plans (covering erosion and flood risk) are under way and are due to be completed in 2010. There are 20 plans in England with the first due to be approved shortly covering the Tees to Flamborough area. A number of detailed strategies have been developed, and are in development, including the Humber Strategy and the Thames Estuary 2100.

Geographical Information Systems

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the answer of 22 July 2008, Official Report, column 1015W, on geographical information systems, which Government bodies will participate in the provision of data to the national geo-portal. [245933]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Implementation of a national geo-portal is being considered among the options for INSPIRE. If a national geo-portal is implemented, it is envisaged that all Government bodies including the devolved Administrations and local authorities across the UK would be given the opportunity to participate in the provision of data.

Gifts

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many members of staff in his Department have received gifts valued at £100 or higher in the course of their duties in each of the last three years; what these gifts were; and from whom they were received. [242022]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) does not hold a central record about gifts received by all staff. The Department therefore is not in a position to provide the requested information without incurring disproportionate cost.

The rules and guidance on receipt of gifts by civil servants are set out in the "Civil Service Management Code", and within the DEFRA staff handbook which is accessible to all staff.

Inland Waterways

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with British Waterway's on progress towards its target to expand its waterways network in the Cotswolds by 2012. [246751]

Huw Irranca-Davies: I meet with British Waterways regularly to discuss the best strategy for the waterways network.

The Government support British Waterways' ambitions to expand the network where this will assist in achieving clear additional public benefits. This is provided such expansion does not compromise British Waterways' ability to maintain the existing network through creating additional on-going financial liabilities. Engagement in restoration projects is a matter for its Board to decide, given the need for careful assessment of costs and British Waterways' statutory position.

The Cotswold Canals restoration project is now being taken forward by the Cotswold Canals Partnership. British Waterways is no longer a lead partner in this project but continues to provide expertise.

Nature Conservation

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department has taken in conjunction with other countries on the monitoring and implementation of international conservation projects in the last six months. [244055]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Department's main programme supporting international conservation initiatives is the Darwin Initiative, a grants programme launched at the Rio Earth Summit in 1992. The Darwin Initiative funds collaborative projects to assist countries rich in biodiversity but poor in financial resources to implement their biodiversity-related commitments. It has committed over £65 million to 601 projects in 146 countries.

The Edinburgh Centre for Tropical Forests monitors and evaluates the progress of the Darwin Initiative on DEFRA's behalf to assess whether the Initiative is: achieving its objectives and meeting its key criteria; having a lasting impact and legacy on biodiversity in host countries and helping them to meet their obligations under the Convention on Biological Diversity; and whether it is representing good value for money.

The monitoring and evaluation exercise is carried out with the involvement of the UK-based and the host-country based organisations carrying out each project.

Nature Conservation: Wind Power

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research his Department is conducting on the effect on bat populations of onshore wind turbines; how much funding has been provided for such research; and if he will make a statement. [243690]

Huw Irranca-Davies: A project has been approved to establish whether and to what extent bat populations are at risk from on-shore wind turbines. A specification for desk-based research and to establish survey protocols as phase 1 of a contract will go out to tender in January. Phase 2 of the contract will undertake field survey activity from August for up to three years.

To ensure we do not compromise the tender process we cannot specify what funding has been allocated to this work until contracts have been let.

Nitrate Zones: Gloucestershire

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will review his policy on nitrate zones in and around Gloucestershire; if he will allow additional time for appeals; what steps his Department has taken to inform farmers of the creation of new nitrate zones; and if he will make a statement. [244414]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The EC nitrates directive requires member states to review their designations of nitrate vulnerable zones (NVZs) every four years and to revise them as necessary. Reviews of NVZs in England are conducted at the national scale and the last review was undertaken in 2006-07. Regulations giving effect to the recent review were laid in September 2008 and come into force on 1 January 2009.

The regulations also establish that owner-occupiers can appeal against the designation of their land within an NVZ, and set the deadline for submitting an appeal as 31 January 2009. The independent appeals panel charged with determining appeals has powers under the regulations to accept information submitted beyond this deadline.

My Department wrote to all farmers identified as likely to be in an NVZ in October. A number of press notices and information bulletins have been issued highlighting the introduction of the new regulations and advising farmers to check published maps of the new NVZs. These and other awareness-raising activities are ongoing.

Religious Buildings: Fees and Charges

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) with reference to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Robert Neill), of 12 November 2008, Official Report, column 1229W, on religious buildings: fees and charges, whether an assessment of the effect on the voluntary sector of changes to charges on places of worship was made; [245920]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the average water bill for church premises; [245921]

(3) what checks Ofwat undertakes; and what steps his Department is taking to ensure that water companies do not gain additional revenue from new methods of charging. [246038]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Neither DEFRA nor Ofwat, the independent economic regulator of the water industry, collects information on the increases in water bills for groups of customers of a particular funding or charitable status. Where a company makes a change to the way it charges for water or sewerage services, Ofwat challenges the company's proposals to make sure charges are not unduly preferential to one customer group over another. Groups of customers are defined by the costs they are likely to impose and are independent of the financial or charitable status of individual non-household customers. Ofwat's checks also ensure that the company gains no additional revenue from the new method of charging.

Part of Ofwat's duty is to approve companies' charges schemes. These schemes outline how water and sewerage companies will charge their customers. It is for the company to decide on its methods of charging. When a company introduces new tariffs, Ofwat check that these are consistent with price limits and company licence conditions.

Each year Ofwat checks water company charges principal statements to make sure the weighted average increase in all of the company's charges does not exceed the company's price limits, for customers using less than 50 mega-litres per annum.

Rights of Way

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much land has been designated under section 16 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000; how much of this has been designated for the use of (a) walkers, (b) cyclists, (c) horse riders and (d) other equestrians; and at what locations land has been so designated. [244577]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Section 16 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 (CROW) allows voluntary dedication by land owners and long leaseholders of public access rights over their land. To date 156,246 hectares of land has been dedicated in this way for public use on foot.

The same section allows a voluntary dedication to extend the CROW rights to include a right for the public to ride horses or cycles as well as a right of access on foot. To date there has been only one dedication of this kind, which created access rights for horse riders over 0.25 hectares of land in East Riding of Yorkshire. As yet there has been no such dedications of cycling rights.

Detailed information on the locations of the areas of land affected by dedications to date for access on foot cannot be provided, except at disproportionate expense, but the areas of land will normally be displayed as part of the open access land shown on Natural England's 'countryside access' website.

Rights of Way: North West

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much land under the Countryside and Right of Way Act 2000 has been allocated to (a) walkers, (b) cyclists and (c) horseriders in (i) Chorley, (ii) Lancashire and (iii) the North West. [245065]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The access land mapped under the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 (CROW) for public use on foot includes 1,752 hectares in Chorley, 37,941 hectares in Lancashire and 278,860 hectares in the North West of England. CROW created no new general rights of access for horse riders or cyclists, and there is no central record of any voluntary extension of the access rights over the land in question to include cyclists or horse riders.

Rural Development Programme: North West

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding the Rural Development Programme has committed to projects in the North West in the last 12 months. [243962]

Huw Irranca-Davies [holding answer 15 December 2008]: Responsibility for project funding under the Rural Development Programme for England 2007-13 has been devolved to regional development agencies. In the last 12 months, the North West Regional Development Agency has committed funding to programmes and projects to the value of £29,259,851. This figure is made up of £567,972 to fund legacy commitments from the previous England Rural Development Programme which closed in 2006, and £28,691,879 committed to new activities under the Rural Development Programme for England.

Seals: Conservation

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he plans to include measures to prohibit the shooting of seals in the Marine and Coastal Access Bill. [244159]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Seals are currently protected in England by the Conservation of Seals Act (1970). Under this Act, it is an offence to take or kill common and grey seals out of season. The Act also allows for the Secretary of State, if it appears necessary for the proper conservation of seals, to designate an area within which the killing, injuring or taking of seals is prohibited.

Seals also receive protection under European law through Council Directive 92/43/EEC, known as the 'Habitats Directive'. This directive requires EC member states to introduce a range of measures for the protection of habitats and species listed in its annexes. Seals feature as an Annex II qualifying species and therefore, within special areas of conservation (SACs) designated for the purpose of conserving seals, competent authorities are required to take appropriate steps to avoid significant disturbance to the species or deterioration of their habitat.

Presently, 12 SACs list grey seals as a species interest, and 11 SACs list common seals. Further information on these SACs can be found on the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC) website.

The Marine and Coastal Access Bill will provide us with a range of measures to protect nationally important marine features; one such measure is the introduction of marine conservation zones (MCZs). If seals were listed as a protected feature of an MCZ, they would be protected from deliberate damage, injuring, killing, taking and so on—including shooting—within that site, and competent authorities would be required to control activities to ensure any conservation objectives set for the site are not significantly hindered.

Seas and Oceans: Biodiversity

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) flora and (b) fauna population trends on UK marine reefs. [246811]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Reefs are a feature under the Habitats Directive (encompassing rocky reef and biogenic reef) and as such, its parameters are reported for Favourable Conservation Status (FCS). The Status is determined for Area, Range, Structure and Function, and Future prospects.

For the 2007 reporting of FCS, the Common Standards Monitoring work undertaken by the country agencies was used to provide data for the last two parameters. However, this was essentially a baseline assessment, rather than pure monitoring, as many areas have only been surveyed once.

The overall judgement for reefs was 'unknown' for all parameters as there was no basis upon which to judge possible trends. It is likely that when the next report is due (in five years' time) we will have more idea of trends.

Results of the UK's FCS reporting can be found on the European Environment Information and Observation Network (Eionet) website at:

www.eionet.europa.eu.

Sewers

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding his Department plans to provide to enable (a) local authorities to meet their responsibilities for adopting and maintaining new build and re-developing sustainable drainage systems and (b) water companies to meet their new responsibilities to adopt and maintain private sewers and lateral drains. [246115]

Huw Irranca-Davies: We are exploring funding options for the long-term maintenance of sustainable drainage systems (SUDS) adopted by local authorities. Any net new burdens on local authorities will be fully funded.

The cost to water and sewerage companies of maintaining private sewers and lateral drains following their transfer from 2011 will be met through charges to customers generally, as is the case with the rest of the public sewerage infrastructure for which they are responsible.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with (a) Ofwat and (b) the water industry on how to achieve risk-based standards for public sewerage systems. [246116]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA maintains regular contact with Ofwat on the development of Surface Water Management Plan guidance and associated local authority responsibilities. Surface Water Management Plans will inform the development of standards for the existing sewerage system reflected in water company investment programs.

DEFRA also chairs a stakeholder working group including Ofwat and Water UK (the representative body for the water industry) which is examining a design and construction standard for new sewers. Currently the water industry is harmonising their various company standards and expect to present them to the working group in spring 2009.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with (a) Ofwat and (b) the water industry on funding of flood protection for critical infrastructure at risk of flooding. [246117]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The statutory Social and Environmental Guidance to Ofwat published in draft in February 2008, and in final form in September 2008, made clear that in their business plans water companies are expected to consider the resilience of their assets and that Ofwat is expected to ensure companies are able to invest in essential works. Ofwat has also issued guidance for water companies on flood risk assessment and identification of priority investments in preparation for the 2009 price review. The proposals in company business plans are now being scrutinised by Ofwat as part of the price review for 2010 to 2015.

Stray Dogs

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost to the public purse of kennelling stray dogs has been in each year since the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005 was implemented; and what estimate he has made of those costs in the next three years. [242551]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA does not collect the data requested.

On 6 April 2008, section 68 of the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act relieved the police of the responsibility of dealing with stray dogs. Since the commencement of the Act, additional funding of £4 million a year, through the revenue support grant for the three years of the comprehensive spending review period, has been provided to local authorities in England and Wales to cover the additional costs of providing an out of hours service for stray dogs.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many local authorities provide kennelling facilities for the use of stray dogs only; [242552]

(2) how many local authorities offer a 24 hour, seven day per week service for catching and kennelling stray dogs; what provision local authorities make for the management of stray dogs where no such continuous service is provided; and what recent guidance his Department has issued on the provision of such services; [242590]

(3) how many dog wardens are employed by local authorities; [242717]

(4) how many stray dogs have been kennelled by local authorities in each of the last three years. [242718]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA does not collect the data requested.

Guidance on local authorities' duties regarding stray dogs was published in October 2007 and can be found on the DEFRA website.

Tidal Power: River Severn

Martin Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with angling and fishing organisations on the impact of a Severn barrage on fish stocks in the Severn estuary and associated waters. [244318]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Neither the Secretary of State nor I have had any such discussions with angling or fishing organisations, but the matter was raised with me at a meeting I had with the chairs of the Environment Agency's Regional Fisheries, Ecology and Recreation Advisory Committees on 4 December.

Martin Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what input his Department has had to the Government's Severn Tidal Power Feasibility study. [244319]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA has played a central role in contributing advice to the cross-Government Severn Tidal Power Feasibility Study, in particular regarding the potential environmental impacts of a tidal power scheme in the Severn. The Department is working closely with Natural England, the Government's statutory conservation adviser, which has provided supporting scientific evidence and advice on environmental issues.

The Secretary of State is a member of the Severn Tidal Power Ministerial group, and DEFRA officials represent the Department on the project board that oversees the Severn Tidal Power Feasibility Study. Some members of DEFRA and Natural England staff have also been seconded into the Severn Tidal Power team within the Department of Energy and Climate Change.

Water

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the volume of water lost to leaks through water pipes on an annual basis; and how much he estimates is lost through leaks from water pipes of each individual water company. [246781]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Water companies report annual leakage figures to Ofwat in June as part of their annual regulatory returns. Figures reported for 2007-08 show that total water company leakage was 3,291 Megalitres/day, down from 5,112 Megalitres/day in 1994-95. In 2007-08 all water companies met their leakage targets and total industry leakage fell by 3.7 per cent (127 Megalitres/day) on a like for like basis from 2006-07 levels.

Leakage performance for individual companies in 2007-08 is as follows[1]:

Water Charges

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the methodology approved for use by water companies to estimate assessed charges for water bills. [245901]

Huw Irranca-Davies: There is no such methodology. Companies are responsible for deciding individual charges. Ofwat, the economic regulator of the water and sewerage sector in England and Wales, approves companies' charges schemes each year and checks that water company charges are consistent with licence conditions.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what means are in place to ensure that Ofwat can regulate and check that water companies carry out the work required of them to allow price increases after the Ofwat Price Review; and what powers Ofwat has to enforce compliance. [246779]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Ofwat provides each water company with a detailed report setting out what the company must deliver for customers over the price review period. These reports act as detailed documents outlining outputs and deliverables which the company must achieve with the price limits set.

Ofwat undertakes annual monitoring of company performance and will take action where companies fail to deliver on the required improvements. Ofwat's powers to impose financial penalties on water and sewerage companies came into effect on 1 April 2005. The powers were introduced in the Water Act 2003.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make it his policy that water companies be allowed to spend any additional revenue accrued through water charges following the price review on protection for critical infrastructure from flooding. [246780]

Huw Irranca-Davies: It is the responsibility of water companies to include proposals in their business plan for protecting critical infrastructure. Ofwat, as the economic regulator, will review companies' proposals and set price limits, getting the best deal for the customer, while ensuring companies can deliver a safe and secure water supply.

Water Charges: EC Law

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the proposed increases in water charges will reflect the work required to be undertaken by water companies to comply with the EU water framework directive. [246784]

Huw Irranca-Davies: As part of the process of the Periodic Review of Water Prices 2009 (PR09) DEFRA has issued a Statement of Obligations which brings together and describes the key statutory obligations that apply to water and sewerage undertakers. This includes the Water Framework Directive (WFD).

Water companies have included some measures to meet the requirements of the WFD in their draft business plans. However, all necessary WFD measures to be delivered by 2015 will not be known until River Basin Management Plans have been consulted on and are finalised in December 2009.

Water companies have to submit their final business plans to Ofwat in April 2009 and as such it is possible that the WFD measures that companies are required to deliver will change. If so, the Environment Agency, DEFRA and Ofwat will work together through the Change Protocol to ensure that the changed requirements of the WFD can be delivered by 2015.

Water Companies

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to ensure that water companies consider the need for climate change adaptation in their business plans; and if he will make a statement. [244222]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Water companies submitted their draft business plans to Ofwat in August. They will submit final business plans to Ofwat in April 2009.

DEFRA has issued statutory Social and Environmental Guidance to Ofwat. This sets out the key social and environmental policies that the Government expect Ofwat to contribute to in carrying out their role as the independent economic regulator of the water industry. This includes climate change adaptation. A copy is available on the DEFRA website.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to ensure that water companies consider in their business plans the objectives of (a) reducing per capita consumption of water and (b) increasing water efficiency; and if he will make a statement. [244223]

Huw Irranca-Davies: In August 2008, DEFRA issued Social and Environmental Guidance to Ofwat, the economic regulator for the water companies in England and Wales. The guidance sets out key areas of social and environmental policy that the Government expect Ofwat to contribute to, including in relation to reducing water demand and increasing water efficiency. The guidance is one of the means by which the priorities of the Government's water strategy for England, Future Water, can be delivered. The guidance is available on the DEFRA website at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/water/industry/review/pdf/ofwat-guidance080922.pdf

Water Companies: Debts

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations he has received on the issue of bad debt on the part of water companies. [246782]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Minister of State, my right hon. Friend the Member for Liverpool, Wavertree (Jane Kennedy), met Water UK on 18 November 2008. A range of issues were discussed, including bad debt in the water industry.

The problem of bad debt is being examined as part of the Walker review of charging for household water and sewerage services. The interim report is expected in spring 2009.

Water Companies: Flood Control

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers he intends to give to local authorities to ensure that water companies do all necessary work for which they are responsible as part of flood prevention programmes. [246787]

Huw Irranca-Davies: Local authorities will be key players in future flood risk management, particularly for surface runoff and groundwater flooding, and for managing its interaction with other sources of flooding.

The Pitt review makes it clear that success will depend on greater co-ordination and co-operation between local partners, and the Government look to these partners to work together closely to establish the most effective arrangements depending on local circumstances.

The Government believe that these objectives will be best met if new partnership arrangements are established to bring together county, unitary and district authorities, the Environment Agency (EA), water companies, sewerage undertakers and other bodies including internal drainage boards, working together to secure effective and consistent management of local flood risk in their areas. It is proposed that these partnerships are underpinned by a new duty on all partners to co-operate and share information with local authorities and the EA. We would expect these organisations to work together to decide the best arrangements for delivery on an area by area basis, taking account of their current roles and capacities. Local authorities working together will have specific responsibilities for effective management of local flood risk from surface water runoff, groundwater and ordinary water courses.

Whales: Japan

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his Japanese counterpart on whaling. [245260]

Huw Irranca-Davies: While I have not yet held any discussions with representatives of the Government of Japan on this matter, the UK has consistently voiced its opposition to Japanese "scientific" whaling, most recently at the meeting of the 'Small Working Group', charged with taking forward discussions on the future of the International Whaling Commission, held in Cambridge from 8-10 December 2008.

Wood

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will instruct the Forestry Commission to conduct a comprehensive survey of wood availability and use in the UK in 2009 in conjunction with the wood processing industry. [246394]

Huw Irranca-Davies: The Forestry Commission is already working with the wood processing industry and private sector growers to generate robust estimates of wood availability and use. This ongoing work includes a new inventory of British woodlands, to be undertaken over the next five years, in order to define how much wood is potentially available and how fast it is growing. In addition, data will be collected on both current timber harvesting and deliveries to the wood processing sector.

It will be important to ensure that the final outputs provide a sound evidence base for both policy formulation and also to help to inform future private sector investment. To achieve this, it is essential to have good quality inventory work, which takes time to complete. Nevertheless, the Forestry Commission is planning to publish details of softwood availability and use, which is the area of most immediate interest to the wood processing industry, in 2011.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Allotments

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department is taking to increase the supply of allotments. [246361]

Mr. Iain Wright: Government statute and guidance provides the framework for the supply of allotment at the local level.

The provision of allotments is the responsibility of local authorities. Section 23 of the Small Holdings and Allotments Act 1908 places a duty on local authorities (except for inner London boroughs) to provide allotments where they perceive a demand for them in their area.

In addition, 'Planning Policy Guidance 17: Sport, Open Space and recreation', encourages local authorities to assess the needs of their communities for a range of open spaces, (including allotments) and to address deficiencies. It also suggests that authorities should allocate sites within their plans for the provision of new open spaces. PPG 17 advises local authorities to use the information gained from their assessments of needs and opportunities to set locally derived standards for the provision of open space, sports and recreation facilities in their areas.

Community Relations

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which grievances referred to on page 36 of the report The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England published in June 2008 resonate most at (a) a local level and (b) a regional or national level; and which local authorities are most affected. [245511]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

There is no common hierarchy of grievances at local, regional or national level. And hierarchy is difficult to discern when localised grievances such as socio-economic issues are bundled into a single narrative with national issues about Government policies and international issues such as foreign policy.

As "The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England" makes clear on page 70

"...real or perceived grievances may develop about aspects of Government policy (particularly foreign policy), discrimination or racism, lack of social mobility, perceived mistreatment in the criminal justice system and counter-terrorism measures. Perceptions of distorted media representations of communities or conflicts are also relevant. A shared sense of grievance locally, nationally and internationally may reinforce group identity."

Many people express grievances. But only a tiny minority choose to use them to justify violence, often prompted by radicalisers who exacerbate and selectively exploit grievances to recruit people to their cause. This is why the Prevent strategy aims to address grievances as one of its core elements. Where grievances have substance government should explain its position clearly, setting out what action might already be undertaking. Where concerns arise from misunderstandings or genuine differences of opinion then clarification and openness are equally important. But where there is distortion or fabrication of the Government's position then we need to say so, firmly.

Research into grievances is ongoing and we are encouraging local authorities, through engagement and research, to gain a better understanding of those grievances which resonate most in their communities.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what work her Department has undertaken to establish which local authorities in receipt of funding from the Preventing Violent Extremism Pathfinder Fund have robust processes for commissioning and performance managing prevent projects; and how she intends to ensure that those areas which do not have robust processes in place will put them in place. [245514]

Mr. Khan: Government offices work very closely with local authorities in their areas to support them in establishing robust and transparent procedures and in ensuring best practice is shared.

The Comprehensive Area Assessment (CAA), which will be introduced from April 2009, is an important component of the performance framework for the Prevent agenda. CLG and other Government Departments have been working with the local public services inspectorates (including the Audit Commission and Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary) so that the CAA helps to ensure the effective and efficient delivery of Prevent, including the most effective use of resources.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) how she plans to ensure that local Prevent partnerships develop the appropriate narrative referred to in paragraph 27 of the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [245519]

(2) what steps her Department plans to take to provide partnerships with more information identifying the factors that make some people vulnerable to becoming involved in violent extremism, as mentioned on page 23 of the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; and if she will make a statement; [245517]

(3) what steps her Department plans to take to ensure that the Security Service, the Association of Chief Police Officers and regional government offices will develop an agreed structure for information sharing at an appropriate level between police, councils and other partners, as referred to on page 22 of the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [245516]

(4) what plans she has to develop a suite of information sources to enable Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships to have a clear process for mapping their communities and identifying vulnerability to violent extremism, as referred to in paragraph 60 of the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [245515]

(5) how her Department plans to analyse and disseminate the learning of partnerships who have dealt with the direct impact of violent extremism in order to learn from their experience; [245513]

(6) how she plans to ensure that councils are providing the tailored support through targeted prevent approaches to people who are at risk of, or are moving towards extremism, referred to in paragraph 36 of the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [245512]

(7) when her Department plans to publish its response to Lord Patel's review of community approaches to preventing violent extremism; [245537]

(8) what plans she has to develop National Indicator 35 in response to the recommendation on page 52 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246232]

(9) what plans she has to provide research on the causes of violent extremism to local partnerships, in response to paragraph 170 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246231]

(10) whether she plans to promote the joint briefing of front line council staff and neighbourhood policing teams on the Prevent programme, in response to paragraph 160 of the Audit Commission's report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246230]

(11) whether she plans to ensure that briefing on the Prevent programme is extended to all frontline council staff, in response to paragraph 120 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246229]

(12) whether she plans to review her Department's policy on protective marking and vetting of documents, in response to paragraph 77 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; and if she will make a statement; [246226]

(13) what response she plans to make to the recommendation on page 28 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise on sharing experience of counter-terrorism operations; [246212]

(14) what response she plans to make to the recommendation on page 31 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise on the capacity of councils in respect of activity in connection with the Prevent programme; [246196]

(15) what response she plans to make to the recommendation in paragraph 75 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise on the flow of information between councils and police forces; [246195]

(16) what response she plans to make to the recommendation in paragraph 73 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise on collection of information at local level; and if she will make a statement; [246194]

(17) what response she plans to make to the recommendation on page 32 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise on the composition of local partnerships; [246193]

(18) with respect to the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise, how she plans to rectify the absence of relevant information to determine the extent of local vulnerability referred to in paragraph 27; [245518]

(19) whether she plans to assess information relating to international issues for their relevance to specific local communities as referred to in paragraph 125 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; and if she will make a statement. [245694]

Mr. Khan: A number of reviews took place over the summer which sought to draw out learning and emerging practice on the delivery of activity to prevent violent extremism, including the joint Audit Commission and HMIC Learning and Development Exercise (LDE). Though each review had a different focus, together they provide a useful package of learning material upon which local partners can draw and which will inform the Government's approach to Prevent.

There are a number of common themes which run through all these reviews. Some of these require action from national Government, some from local partners and many from both. We have ensured wide distribution of the LDE report to enable local partners to benefit directly from the important learning it contains in taking forward their local Prevent response. We published "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" on 10 December, which sets out the key strands of learning from the reviews and work already underway to address these key themes. We will continue to develop our response to the reviews throughout the year.

I will place a copy of "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" in the Library of the House.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what her Department's definition is of political extremism, as referred to on page 18 of the report, Guidance for local authorities on community cohesion, contingency planning and tension monitoring. [245552]

Mr. Khan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 4 June 2008, Official Report, column 992W, to the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Robert Neill).

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when the regional conferences with young people to debate extremism issues referred to on page 8 of the report Preventing Violent Extremism: A Strategy for Delivery will be held; where they will be held; and if she will make a statement. [245556]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Children, Schools and Families and the Home Office are joint sponsors of nine Youth Conferences on Extremism being delivered by the UK Youth Parliament and the Association for Chief Police Officers. There will be one in each of the nine Government office regions in England. To date, two have been held, one in the North East on 8 August 2008 and one in Yorkshire and Humber on 22 November. The remaining seven conferences will be held between January and March 2009, confirmed dates are:

London: Thursday 19 February 2009

East Midlands: Thursday 19 February 2009

North West: Thursday 26 February 2009

South West: Saturday 21 March 2009

The purpose behind these conferences is to provide safe places for young people from diverse communities to meet and discuss terrorism and extremism around four key themes:

Terrorism and what it means to young people

Violent Extremism and what it means to young people

Youth Leadership

How the police should work with young people

Community Relations: Finance

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she plans to publish an evaluation of the effectiveness of the Preventing Violent Extremism Pathfinder fund. [245534]

Mr. Khan: Evaluating a programme designed to prevent violent extremism can be challenging. However, there are several pieces work either already published or underway which focus on this issue.

A mapping of projects funded by the Preventing Violent Extremism Pathfinder Fund was published at the recent national Prevent conference, on 10 December. It estimates that the Pathfinder fund reached over 44,000 individuals. The report also collates locally focussed evaluation reports where they were available and provides a synthesis of their findings.

A number of reviews took place in 2008, including the Audit Commission and HMIC's Learning and Development Exercise, which looked at how local partners and partnerships were responding to the challenge of preventing violent extremism. The document "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" brings together the key themes from these reviews and is available on the CLG website.

Further work is under way to develop our approach to, and methodology for, evaluating work to prevent violent extremism locally.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on what basis funding in support of work to prevent violent extremism has been allocated to local authorities for (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11. [245535]

Mr. Khan: In order to build resilience to violent extremism where it is most needed, the eligibility for, and distribution of funding has been based on the size of local Muslim communities.

While every eligible local authority receives a minimum level of funding for prevent work, the overall funding level reflects the size of the Muslim population that the authority will be working with. The criteria for eligibility reduces from 2008-09 to 2010-11 to provide funding to an increasing number of authorities, with 94 funded by 2010-11. Details of funding amounts can be found on the CLG website.

Community Relations: Religion

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local authorities have mapped the denominational backgrounds of local communities as part of the programme to develop a deeper understanding of local communities referred to on page 12 of the report, The Prevent Strategy: A Guide for Local Partners in England. [245566]

Mr. Khan: The Department does not routinely collect information on any mapping done by local authorities on the denominational backgrounds of local communities. However, every local authority will report progress on criteria linked to National Indicator 35—Building

Communities Resilient to Violent Extremism, including the understanding of, and engagement with, Muslim communities.

Council Housing: Construction

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many bids from local authorities to build new housing for rent have been (a) received and (b) approved by her Department; and which local authorities have made such bids. [246785]

Mr. Iain Wright: We have announced that local authorities would be invited to bid for social housing grant through the Homes and Communities Agency. This followed our proposal to make changes to the revenue and capital rules that apply to new council housing in order to remove some financial disincentives to council new build in the current system. We intend to set out our plans for implementing these changes very shortly.

Council Housing: Inspections

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what (a) inspections and (b) audits the Tenants Service Authority plans to undertake in respect of local authorities; and what data it plans to collect from such authorities. [246052]

Mr. Iain Wright: The Tenant Services Authority does not, at present, regulate local authority providers of social housing. We have made clear our intention that local authorities will be brought under its remit within two years of its establishment. An enabling power in the Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 will allow us to make the necessary legislative provisions through regulations, subject to parliamentary approval.

Professor Ian Cole was appointed to chair an advisory panel tasked with producing recommendations on how to deliver a cross-domain approach to regulation. He submitted his report to Government in September 2008.

We are taking account of Professor Cole's recommendations as we work towards publishing draft regulations for public consultation in early 2009. The consultation will include proposals on how the regulatory framework should address inspection and provision of information. The Tenant Services Authority, through its national consultation with providers and tenants throughout 2009, will lead on developing the detail of how regulation will operate in practice.

Council Housing: North Yorkshire

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 10 December 2008, Official Report, column 141W, how much housing stock (a) North Yorkshire local authority districts and (b) the City of York hold. [245677]

Mr. Iain Wright: The following table shows local authority housing stock held by local authorities in the North Yorkshire area and the City of York authority on 1 April 2007.

	Stock within LA, owned by LA
North Yorkshire:	8,743
Craven[1]	2
Hambleton[1]	0
Harrogate	3,936
Richmondshire	1,632
Selby	3,173
City of York	8,058

Source:
Local authority stock from the Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA) as reported by local authorities.

The figures shown are as reported by local authorities.

Four of the North Yorkshire local districts have transferred their housing stock to Registered Social Landlords. Hambleton and Ryedale transferred their stock before 1997-98, Craven in March 2003, and Scarborough in December 2003.

After March 2003 Craven discovered that they still own two units, unfit for occupation, above the town hall. These two units, listed in the table, have not been transferred to Registered Social Landlords.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many contracts (a) her Department and (b) its agencies have which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract is held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245340]

Mr. Khan: Communities and Local Government and its agencies has two systems where personal data of UK citizens is stored overseas. These are the contract for the Public Enquiry Service Database and the Fire Service College Learners Database. The Public Enquiry Service Database is hosted in the USA and stores approximately 4,000 records. The Fire Service Learners Database is in Germany and holds approximately 6,000 personal records.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what information her Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment she has made of her Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246025]

Mr. Khan: Through a combination of compulsory and voluntary processes, the Department collects data in relation to all these categories of its staff. This information is presented in the Department's annual Workforce Diversity Data report; the 2007-08 report is in the final stages of drafting.

At March 2008, the Department exceeded the cross-Whitehall targets on women, BME and disabled staff in the SCS, as set out in the Civil Service 10 Point Diversity Plan. The following table shows our final position together with the new targets required by its successor, 'Promoting Equality, Valuing Diversity: A strategy for the Civil Service' (published July 2008).

SCS Group	Cross-Government targets 2008	Cross-Government targets 2011	Communities targets for March 2011	Percentage Results at 31 March 2008[1]
Women in SCS	37	39	50	41.3
Women in top management positions	30	34	40	33.3
BME staff[2]	4	5	8	4.8
Staff with disabilities[2]	3.2	5	7	4.7

[1] Results are based on the SCS staff providing information to Personnel Information Management System (PIMS). [2] Percentage differences between BME and disabled staff are caused by disparities in SCS data completion rates.

Departmental Telephone Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many telephone numbers for which callers are charged at the rate applicable to 0845 numbers are used by (a) her Department and (b) its executive agencies for public access to services. [246989]

Mr. Khan: Communities and Local Government and its agencies do not require the public to make telephone calls on numbers which charge more than the national rate. The only 0845 number used is the Neighbourhood Renewal helpline (0845 0828383). However, calls to this number are diverted to the main Communities and Local Government switchboard and are charged at a local rate to the caller.

Deprivation Indicators

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the geographical barriers score of each parliamentary constituency in the Indices of Deprivation 2007 was, ranked from highest to lowest. [245903]

Mr. Khan: Statistics from the Indices of Multiple Deprivation 2007 have not been produced for parliamentary constituencies.

The Indices of Deprivation 2007 (ID 2007) were constructed at lower super output area (LSOA) level. LSOAs are consistent in size and over time, allow identification of small pockets of deprivation. There are 32,482 LSOAs in England. Because parliamentary constituencies are relatively large and subject to boundary change, it is not feasible to produce the Indices at this geographical level.

Six summary measures of the Indices of Multiple Deprivation 2007 have been produced at both local authority district and unitary authority levels. The summary measures at district level focus on different aspects of multiple deprivation in the area. The six measures are 'Average Score, Average Rank, Extent, Local Concentration, Income Scale, and Employment Scale'.

IMD07 and the local authority summaries can be found at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/communities/neighbourhoodrenewal/deprivation/deprivation07/

Domestic Waste: Waste Disposal

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the Answer of 17 November 2008, Official Report, column 97W, on domestic waste: waste disposal, who the (a) managing, (b) certifying and (c) audit authority for each of the EU Interreg programmes listed is. [246942]

Government Procurement Card

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether her Department holds records of individual transactions made in respect of her Department using the Government Procurement Card. [245906]

Mr. Khan: The Department holds the originals of the monthly paper statements, and copies are held centrally, relating to all Government Procurement Card transactions made by its cardholders. These statements provide details relating to the suppliers being used, when the transaction occurred and how much was spent per transaction.

In addition, the cardholders or their associated finance teams will hold the specific receipts or invoices relating to those purchases which will detail what exactly was purchased in each transaction with the relevant supplier.

Green Belt: York

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the proposed change in the (a) scale and (b) extent of the green belt around York arising from proposal YH9 of the Yorkshire and Humber Regional Spatial Strategy. [246068]

Mr. Iain Wright: The principle of land being identified for the purposes of green belt around York has not altered as a result of the recent publication of the Yorkshire and Humber RSS (May 2008). In addition, RSS does not propose that the general extent of the green belt should be altered around York. York city council is however required by Policy YH9 of RSS to consider the setting of the historic city and long term development needs of the local authority area when identifying the inner green belt boundary.

It is the responsibility of local planning authorities to identify detailed green belt boundaries. York city council is currently in the process of preparing a local development framework for the district. This document will for the first time identify detailed green belt boundaries within the city that will determine the precise extent of land identified for the purposes of green belt policy.

Homelessness

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homelessness applications were made in each of the last three years (a) in total, (b) by those aged between 16 and 24 years old and (c) by those aged 24 years old and more in (i) Vale of York constituency, (ii) North Yorkshire and (iii) England. [245678]

Mr. Iain Wright: Information about English local housing authorities' actions under the homelessness legislation (part 7 of the Housing Act 1996) is collected quarterly at local authority level. Districts within North Yorkshire are Craven, Hambleton, Harrogate, Richmondshire, Ryedale, Scarborough and Selby. In addition, information is provided for the unitary authority of York. Information is not collected at constituency level, and the Vale of York constituency lies within Hambleton, Harrogate and York.

Data collected include all decisions made on applications by eligible applicants, and the number of applicants accepted by local housing authorities as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need, and therefore owed a main homelessness duty (to secure that suitable accommodation is available). These households are known as 'accepted' households.

A table showing data on applications by eligible households in all age groups for the last three years, as reported by local authorities, has been placed in the Library. The figures for England and North Yorkshire are shown in the following table.

Decisions taken by local authorities under the 1996 Housing Act on applications from eligible households, England and North Yorkshire

[1] Data not reported by local authority

Data on applications by age band are not held centrally.

Housing: Low Incomes

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much funding has been allocated for Social Homebuy in each of the next three years. [246718]

Mr. Iain Wright: Social HomeBuy is a demand-led product and as such there is no specific allocation within the Homes and Communities Agency's Affordable Housing Programme for 2008-11 for this product. Registered Social Landlords who choose to offer Social HomeBuy bid to the Homes and Communities Agency for grant to cover the discount offered to the tenant.

Housing: Sales

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many bids her Department has (a) received and (b) approved for the purchase of unsold private housing, broken down by (i) local authority area, (ii) type of property and (iii) type of purchaser. [246786]

Mr. Iain Wright: As of 22 December 2008 the Homes and Communities Agency had received bids to the value of over £260 million to purchase unsold developer stock. From these bids they have approved a total of around £159 million.

A table has been deposited in the Library showing the total grant provided by local authority broken down by social rent and low cost home ownership and by type of property. All of these properties are being purchased by registered social landlords.

Housing: Standards

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance her Department has given to local planning authorities on the application of dwelling space standards. [245905]

Mr. Iain Wright: The Government's Planning Policy Statement 3: 'Housing' (PPS3) is clear on the need to achieve high quality housing and encourages local planning authorities to draw on relevant guidance including 'Better Places to Live: By Design (2001)' which covers aspects such as the internal layout and use of dwelling space. However, the Government have not provided specific guidance to local planning authorities on the application of dwelling space standards.

Improvement and Development Agency

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many staff the Improvement and Development Agency employs; how many staff work on cohesion, integration and migration issues; and what the cost of employing staff working on cohesion, integration and migration issues is expected to be in (a) 2008-09 and (b) each of the subsequent two years. [245528]

Mr. Khan: The Department does not hold information on the number of staff at the Improvement and Development Agency employs as it is owned by the Local Government Association which is a voluntary body organisation acting on behalf of its members, not a government funded organisation.

Local Government: Sustainable Development

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the status of the revision of Planning Policy Statement 4 is; and if she will make a statement. [245904]

Mr. Iain Wright: The revision to Planning Policy Statement 4, 'Sustainable Economic Development', is currently in draft, and was consulted on in 2008. The Government are currently considering the responses to the consultation. A summary of consultation responses was published on 8 August, 2008. When issued in its final form the statement will have the status of national planning policy.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many former prisoners are employed by her Department; and what her Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246350]

Mr. Khan: All new recruits to Communities and Local Government are required to complete a Criminal Record Declaration Form which is then kept on their personal file. The Department does not keep a central record of former prisoners.

The Department's policy on employing former prisoners complies with the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act (1974).

Opencast Mining: Planning Permission

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what guidance her Department has provided to local authorities on the production of health impact assessments relating to opencast coal mining planning applications; [246421]

(2) how many planning applications for opencast coal mining in the UK have had health impact assessments produced as part of the process over the last 10 years. [246422]

Mr. Iain Wright: Environmental impact assessments for opencast coal mining proposals should identify all the likely significant impacts associated with the development and how they will be controlled or be subject to mitigation. These impacts will include those which may have a direct effect on people, including impacts on health.

Government planning policy on controlling and mitigating the environmental effects of minerals extraction is set out in Minerals Policy Statement 2 (MPS2) and its associated annexes on dust and noise. MPS2 clearly states that where effective mitigation of unacceptable impacts through planning conditions or obligations is not possible, planning permission for a development should be refused.

Information on the number of planning applications for opencast coal mining with Environmental Impact Assessments (including those covering impacts on health) is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many opencast coal mining planning applications have been decided (a) by local authorities and (b) following call-ins during the last 10 years. [246424]

Mr. Iain Wright: Information on the number of opencast coal mining applications decided by local authorities is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Only one opencast coal application has been decided in the last 10 years following call-in of the planning application by the Secretary of State. This was the Cutacre opencast coal site, between Over Hulton and Lower Hulton in Wigan Metropolitan borough council. This was decided in July 2001.

Ordnance Survey

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the market value of the Ordnance Survey. [242703]

Mr. Iain Wright: Ordnance Survey's net assets as set out in its 2007-08 annual report and accounts were approximately £82 million. Estimates of the market value of individual Government-owned businesses, including the Ordnance Survey, are commercially sensitive. Their publication could prejudice the delivery of best value for money to the taxpayer in the management of its assets.

Ordnance Survey: Databases

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the Answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Grant Shapps) of 19 November 2008, Official Report, column 514W, on Valuation Office: databases, if she will place in the Library a copy of the specification and plans used by Ordnance Survey to align the databases. [246943]

Mr. Iain Wright: There is no published specification or plan for the database alignment work being undertaken by Ordnance Survey, as this work involves a process of continuous improvement, based upon an evolving specification. This has been continuously developed as the project has progressed. The result is a pattern of work-flow based upon the outputs of an address matching software 'engine' and manual editing.

To ensure better cross-Government standardisation of address data, and to support the principles of the Digital National Framework (DNF), this cross reference table (X-ref) is available free of charge to any organisation, whether they are an Ordnance Survey customer or not.

I have today placed a copy of the current version of 'X-ref' in the Library of the House.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Grant Shapps) of 19 November 2008, Official Report, column 514W, on Valuation Office: databases, what the estimated cost to Ordnance Survey of the database alignment exercise is. [246944]

Mr. Iain Wright: The work of database alignment forms one part of Ordnance Survey's continuous process of product development and enhancement, which involves a number of integrated processes, and as such the costs of this specific aspect are not presently recorded separately. Doing this at the present time could be established only at disproportionate cost.

Ordnance Survey: Finance

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funding her Department has provided for Ordnance Survey to meet the costs of staff salaries in the last 12 months. [245960]

Mr. Iain Wright: As a trading fund, Ordnance Survey is a public body subject to the Civil Service Pay Guidance released annually by HM Treasury. Ordnance Survey is therefore part of the civil service pay remit process, in which HM Treasury approves a pay remit for Ordnance Survey in line with Government policy on public sector pay settlements.

The current Ordnance Survey pay remit approved by HM Treasury on 6 December 2007 covers a three year settlement for the years 2007-08, 2008-09 and 2009-10, and includes arrangements for transition to a new reward structure designed to address a number of longer term reward issues.

The remit reflects the individual labour market position of Ordnance Survey's work force, particularly the recruitment and retention position; consistency with the achievement by the Bank of England of its CPI inflation target of 2 per cent. affordability by Ordnance Survey; and value for money for stakeholders. It was reviewed by HM Treasury in October 2008, and reconfirmed.

Planning Obligations

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local authorities have not spent any Section 106 moneys on capital programmes within their districts in the latest period for which figures are available. [246864]

Mr. Iain Wright: Information on the value of Section 106 moneys not spent on capital programmes by each local authority is not collected centrally. However, the Department for Communities and Local Government has produced research reports into the value of planning obligations in England for 2003-04 and 2005-06 based on a sample of authorities across the country. These reports are available on the Department's website. New research covering 2007-08 has been commissioned and will be published in the summer.

The research report for 2005-06 estimated that of £4 billion in planning obligation agreements, approximately £3 billion would have been delivered in practice. The shortfall would have been due to the fact that not all of the permissions to which the agreements were attached would be implemented and some others would be renegotiated. The table below shows how the estimated £4 billion was categorised.

The total value of planning obligations in 2005-06 (£)

		Percentage of total
Open Space and the Environment	215,684,473	5
Transport and Travel	361,956,329	9
Community Works and Leisure	75,439,392	2
Education	154,053,871	4
Other	149,893,307	4
County Councils (est)	10,000,000	<1
Max Land Contributions	960,000,000	24
Affordable Housing	2,000,000,000	50
Estimated Total Value	£4 billion

As stated in the answer to your earlier question [240548] appropriate openness over the collection and use of si06 monies is an important element of local authority accountability and the Government recommends in planning Circular 05/05 that authorities keep accurate records which can be used to inform the public. In July, the Government announced in the Empowerment White Paper that it will explore whether more can be done to strengthen this local accountability.

Planning Permission

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what advice her Department provides to local authorities who receive repeat planning applications which have already been rejected by the planning inspectorate. [243880]

Mr. Iain Wright: Advice on repeat applications is set out in ODPM Circular 08/2005. This notes that local planning authorities have had the power for some time to decline to determine an application for planning permission which was the same or substantially the same as an application that, within the previous two years, the Secretary of State had called in and refused or had dismissed on appeal.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she plans to issue a formal Government response to the Killian Pretty review. [246367]

Mr. Iain Wright: The Government will publish a formal response to the recommendations of the Killian Pretty review shortly.

Property Development

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she is taking to improve the guidance her Department has issued on the changes to domestic permitted development rights; and if she will make a statement. [245605]

Mr. Iain Wright: Guidance on the new householder permitted development rights effective from 1 October 2008 is available via the 'interactive house' on the Planning Portal. In addition, on 16 December the Department's chief planner wrote to all local planning authorities to inform them that we have posted a schedule of frequently-asked questions on the Planning Portal website. This information can be found at:

http://www.planningportal.gov.uk/uploads/clg-pd-faq.pdf

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many local planning authorities have made it their policy to recommend to householders that they obtain a certificate of lawfulness before exercising their permitted development rights in respect of household extensions. [246343]

Mr. Iain Wright: The information requested is not held centrally.

Rented Housing: Construction

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many new local authority and housing association dwellings were started in England in each year since 1979-80. [245979]

Mr. Iain Wright: The following table shows the number of annual house building starts in England, for local authority and registered social landlords dwellings each year since 1979-80.

	Local authority starts	Registered social landlords starts
1979-80	9,470	3,250
1980-81	29,400	11,050

Rents

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what consideration she has given to the need for further reform of legislation on rent reviews; and if she will make a statement. [246044]

Mr. Iain Wright: While the terms of commercial leases, including rents, are set by agreement between landlords and tenants, Government are concerned that lease terms should not constrain flexibility in the commercial property market. In 2007, at our request, the property industry introduced a revised stronger code of practice which, among other matters, makes recommendations to landlords about the arrangements for commercial rent reviews. This "Code for Leasing Business Premises in England and Wales 2007", is voluntary. However, Government are monitoring the use and impact of the code, and will evaluate the outcome to see if it has made a difference to industry practice. Government remain committed to lease reform and has not ruled out legislation as an option.

Repossession Orders

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on what dates she held meetings with (a) HBOS, (b) Nationwide, (c) Abbey, (d) Lloyds TSB, (e) Northern Rock, (f) Barclays, (g) RBS and (h) HSBC on the Government's repossessions policy before its announcement on 3 December 2008. [245610]

Mr. Iain Wright: Government held productive discussions with all eight lenders mentioned in the days ahead of the 3 December announcement and agreed with them their support in principle to the homeowner mortgage support scheme. We have since been working with these, other lenders and the trade bodies to develop the detail of the scheme.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to the answer of 10 November 2008, Official Report, House of Lords, column WA97, on housing: repossession, on what dates each regional summit was held; which local authorities attended each summit; and if she will place in the Library a copy of each of the handouts and presentations from the summits. [246037]

Mr. Iain Wright: On 2 September, the Government announced £200 million for a mortgage rescue scheme to help vulnerable people facing repossession remain in their home, where possible. Government are working closely with key delivery partners to ensure the scheme is operational as soon as possible.

Communities and Local Government has held a series of regional summits at Government office level to explain the mortgage rescue scheme. All local authorities were invited to attend on a voluntary basis. Regional summits were held on the following dates:

East Midlands (Nottingham): 18 September

West Midlands (Birmingham): 23 September

North East (Newcastle): 9 October

South West (Exeter): 16 October

Yorkshire and Humberside (Leeds): 22 October

North West (Manchester): 27 October

South East (Crawley): 7 November

London: 13 November

East (Cambridge): 14 November

Presentations used at each regional summit were used to inform policy development. Government are currently consulting all local authorities on a guidance note providing a step-by-step guide on how to set up and operate the Mortgage Rescue Scheme. This will be issued in January 2009.

Right To Buy Scheme: Greater London

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much local authority housing stock in (a) Bexley and (b) London has been sold under the right-to-buy scheme in each year since 1997. [244752]

Mr. Iain Wright: The London borough of Bexley transferred its housing stock to registered social landlords (RSLs) in February 1998. There have consequently been no sales of local authority housing stock under the right to buy scheme in Bexley since that date.

The preserved right to buy is available to tenants of RSLs who were formerly secure tenants of local authorities and have moved to RSL landlords with their homes under the terms of stock transfers. Figures for preserved right to buy sales alone are not available at local authority level, but combined figures for RSL right to buy, preserved right to buy and right to acquire sales are available, and the following table shows these figures for the London borough of Bexley:

	RSL sales of social housing in the London borough of Bexley
2001-02	123
2002-03	129
2003-04	126
2004-05	51

Sleeping Rough

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what changes have been made to the methodology used to (a) calculate and (b) count rough sleeping in the last 36 months; and what changes her Department is considering. [246049]

Mr. Iain Wright: Rough sleeping counts provide an effective tool by which we can monitor and demonstrate progress in reducing rough sleeping levels. They give us an indicator of the relative extent of the problem between areas and over time. In 2007, we consulted on and strengthened the methodology by, for example, introducing verifiers.

While we will keep the local counts as a useful measure, we know that they provide a limited snapshot. They should be the start of the process not the end. In the new rough sleeping strategy "No One Left Out" published in November 2008, we set out plans to launch a new approach to help local authorities monitor progress and track people sleeping rough, ensuring that counts are not just an opportunity to identify levels of need but more importantly to do something about it. It is important that we are clear that the headline figure is the total of the counts undertaken during the year. We will no longer ask local authorities that do not count to provide an annual estimate in their annual housing statistics return.

Specialist Cohesion Team

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what progress has been made in the roll out of Specialist Cohesion Team pilots; how much the teams (a) have cost to date and (b) are expected to cost in (i) 2008-09, (ii) 2009-10 and (iii) 2010-11; how the pilots will be assessed; and if she will make a statement. [245544]

Mr. Khan: Specialist Cohesion Team (SCTs) pilots are under way in two local authorities: Breckland and Barnsley. Both pilots commenced in July 2008 and end January 2009. Both pilots are making good progress, according to their individual terms of reference.

CLG has allocated up to £200,000 in 2008-09 from programme funding to deliver and independently evaluate the SCT pilots. Costs for 2009-10 and 2010-11 are yet to be decided.

Separate reports will be produced for both areas in February 2009.

An independent evaluation of both pilots will commence in January 2009.

Temporary Accommodation: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many (a) children and (b) adults in the Peterborough City council area were in temporary accommodation on 30 September (i) 2005, (ii) 2006, (iii) 2007 and (iv) 2008. [245797]

Mr. Iain Wright: Information about English local authorities' actions under the homelessness legislation (Part 7 of the Housing Act 1996) is collected quarterly at local authority level, about households rather than individuals.

Data collected include the number of households accepted by local housing authorities as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need, and therefore owed a main homelessness duty (to secure that suitable accommodation is available). If a settled home is not immediately available, the authority must secure temporary accommodation until a settled home becomes available.

Information on the numbers of households housed in temporary accommodation is reported quarterly by local authorities as at the last day of each quarter. The figures include: those households which have been accepted as owed the main homelessness duty; those for which enquiries are pending; those being accommodated for a limited period because they have been found intentionally homeless and in priority need; those being accommodated pending possible referral to another authority, and those being accommodated pending the outcome of a local authority review or county court appeal.

The number of dependent children (or expected children) in these households is also collected, but data on the number of adults is not. The figures for total households, total number of families and total children in temporary accommodation, reported by Peterborough City council, as at 30 September in 2005 to 2008, are shown in the following table.

Households in temporary accommodation, and number of children within these households, in Peterborough local authority as at 30 September, 2005 to 2008

	Total households in TA arranged by authority	Total number of households with dependent children	Total children (and expected children) within these households
2005	83	56	93
2006	77	40	81
2007	67	30	37
2008	81	33	55

Tenants: Greater London

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of levels of satisfaction amongst (a) private rented sector tenants and (b) other tenants in London. [246599]

Mr. Iain Wright: Based on the Survey of English Housing, the estimated levels of tenant satisfaction in London during 2006-07 amongst (a) private tenants and (b) social tenants were as follows:

Percentage

	Proportion of tenants satisfied with their landlord	Proportion of tenants satisfied with their accommodation
(a) Private tenants in London	73	80
(b) Social tenants in London	66	77

Travelling People

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of unauthorised Traveller sites in England. [246370]

Mr. Iain Wright: In July 2008 local authorities recorded 981 unauthorised Gypsy and Traveller sites in England.

Robert Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government in respect of which areas reviews of Green Belt and the provision of Traveller sites are recommended in draft regional spatial strategies. [246371]

Mr. Iain Wright: There are currently four draft regional spatial strategies (RSS) undergoing revisions.

East Midlands:

The Government are currently considering representations made on the Proposed Changes and are working towards the final issue of the RSS in 2009.

Review of Green Belts recommended

The draft RSS recommends a review of the most sustainable locations for growth within the Nottingham Core Housing Market Area over the next 25 years, which may include considering locations within the Green Belt.

This review needs to be done as part of the evidence base underpinning the next RSS review.

Provision of traveller pitches recommended

The Draft East Midlands RSS sets out the number of traveller pitches required in the region and it is up to local authorities to identify specific locations in local plans.

West Midlands Phase 2 and Phase 3:

The West Midlands is taking a phased approach to the revision of its RSS.

Consultation on Phase 2 is completed and it will be submitted to an Examination in Public in Spring 2009.

Review of Green Belts recommended

The draft Phase 2 West Midlands regional spatial strategy identifies the need for review of Green Belt round Coventry and Redditch.

Provision of traveller pitches recommended

The provision of traveller pitches will be addressed in Phase 3 of the RSS review. The West Midlands Regional Assembly are currently developing option papers for Phase 3 and have yet to commence consultation.

South East:

The Government are currently considering representations made on the Proposed Changes and are working towards the final issue of the RSS in 2009.

Review of Green Belts recommended

The Government's Proposed Changes included proposals for selective Green Belt review at Oxford and Guildford, and possibly south of Woking, plus small scale reviews at Chertesy and Redhill/ Reigate.

Provision of traveller pitches recommended

The Draft South East RSS sets out the number of traveller pitches required across the region, however it is up to the local authorities to identify the specific location of traveller sites in local plans.

South West:

The Government are currently considering representations made on the Proposed Changes and are working towards the final issue of the RSS in 2009.

Review of Green Belts recommended

The Proposed Changes included proposals to revise the Bristol and Bath, Gloucester and Cheltenham and South East Dorset Green Belts.

Provision of traveller pitches recommended

The Draft South West RSS sets out the number of traveller pitches for each local authority area, however it is up to the local authorities to identify the specific location of traveller sites in local plans.

Four RSSs have already been issued by the Secretary of State and the West Midlands (Phase 1) RSS:

15 January 2008—West Midlands (Phase 1) Black Country sub-regional plan

12 May 2008—East of England

21 May 2008—Yorkshire and Humber

15 July 2008—North East

30 September 2008—North West

Travelling People: Caravan Sites

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether her Department has issued guidance to local authorities on using semi-rural and rural land to provide Traveller sites. [245993]

Mr. Iain Wright: Guidance to local authorities on the use of semi-rural or rural land for Gypsy and Traveller Sites is contained in ODPM Circular 01/2006 'Planning for Gypsy and Traveller Caravan Sites'.

CHILDREN, SCHOOLS AND FAMILIES

Building Schools for the Future programme: Sixth Form Colleges

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families whether sixth form colleges will be included under the Building Schools for the Future programme after 2010; and if he will make a statement. [242008]

Jim Knight: In "Raising Expectations: enabling the system to deliver" (published March 2008), we stated our intention to bring sixth form colleges within the scope of the Building Schools for the Future programme, so that they can be part of securing the area-wide entitlement. This remains our position, and we are considering the details along with the key partner organisations involved.

Case Reviews

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what procedures his Department has in place for reviewing serious case reviews; and what guidance he has given his officials on the circumstances in which such reviews should be drawn to the attention of Ministers. [240486]

Beverley Hughes: Local authorities are responsible for notifying Ofsted of serious incidents involving children. This includes cases which then become the subject of a serious case review (SCR). When a review is complete the report is then evaluated by Ofsted. DCSF Children and Learners teams in the regional government offices have a support and challenge role in relation to SCRs, in particular with respect to the implementation by Local Safeguarding Children Boards and local agencies of recommendations in individual reports. They also provide briefing to officials in the DCSF, to enable them to keep Ministers informed of overall progress. But Ministers are not involved in the SCR process and do not see draft SCR reports or take any decisions until that process is complete and the executive summary is made public. Ministers have vested in them a range of statutory powers in relation to local authorities, including intervention powers, and it is important that they allow the SCR process to take its course.

Children in Care

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what rules apply to the out-of-county placement of vulnerable (a) adults and (b) children; what procedures are employed to monitor such placements; and how the costs of such placements are shared. [244268]

Beverley Hughes: This reply relates to England only.

(a) The Department of Health is responsible for the framework relating to the accommodation and support of vulnerable adults who are assessed as requiring community care services. We will forward my hon. Friend's enquiry to that Department so that he can receive a written reply to part (a) of his question.

(b) There are extensive regulations and guidance setting out local authority responsibilities towards all children that they look after. The placing local authority will always remain responsible for maintaining the child's care plan setting out how the authority will arrange the services necessary to meet to their assessment the child's needs. However, where children are placed out of their responsible local authority, the local authorities involved will need to take into account the regulations below that provide information about funding responsibilities for health and education services.

The arrangements for provision of and payment for health care for looked after children placed out-of-authority children are set out in statutory guidance "Establishing the Responsible Commissioner: Guidance for PCT commissioners on the application of the legal framework on PCT's secondary care responsibilities" which was issued in 2006.

"The Education (Areas to which Pupils and Students Belong) Regulations 1996" specify arrangements for funding when a pupil living in one local authority area is ordinarily resident in a different local area. These regulations apply to any pupil, including looked after children living in "out of authority" placements.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many women in prison have children in the care of (a) social services and (b) another guardian. [244505]

Mr. Hanson: I have been asked to reply.

The National Offender Management Service does not routinely keep information on the number of prisoners with children in the care of either social services or another guardian. However, the Corston Report (March 2007) referred to 12 per cent. of women prisoners' children being in care or with foster parents or adopted.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (1) how many children have been placed out of area by each social services department in England since 2005-06; [244850]

(2) what the average distance was between the relevant social service area and the placement of children subject to out of area arrangements with regard to each social services department in England in the latest period for which figures are available. [244849]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of children in care in each local authority who have been placed out of area by each social services department in England for the years ending 31 March 2006 to 2008 and the average distance between their home address and placement, at 31 March 2008, has been placed in both the Libraries.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many children in the care system are placed in residential children's homes. [245277]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of children in the care system that are placed in residential children's homes can be found in table A3, taken from the Statistical First Release (SFR 23/2008) entitled 'Children looked after in England (including adoption and care leavers) year ending 31 March 2008'. This shows the number of children looked after at the 31 March for 2004 to 2008 by placement.

The SFR is located at:

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000810/index.shtml.

and table A3 can be found within the excel link labelled National Tables.

Children in Care: Custodial Treatment

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many prisoners in England were previously children in care at any time during their lives and received a custodial sentence when they were juveniles. [244506]

Mr. Hanson: I have been asked to reply.

Information on the total number of prisoners in all prison establishments in England and Wales who were in local authority care at some point when under the age of 16 is not centrally available.

However, a social exclusion unit report "Reducing re-offending by ex-prisoners" published in 2002 reported that 27 per cent. of the prison population had been taken into care as a child against an average across the general population of 2 per cent.

We are not able to give the information requested regarding who of those in care had also received custodial sentences while juveniles.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Children in Care: Missing Persons

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many children in care in each local authority area have gone missing in each of the last five years. [245242]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of children in care in each local authority who have gone missing is available for the past four years.

Information for years ending 31 March 2006 to 2008 can be found in table LAB5, taken from the Statistical First Release (SFR 23/2008) entitled 'Children looked after in England (including adoption and care leavers) year ending 31 March 2008.'

The SFR is located at:

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000810/FinalDecemberTables.xls

Information for year ending 31 March 2005 can be found in table LAB5, taken from the Statistical First Release (SFR 27/2007) entitled 'Children looked after in England (including adoption and care leavers) year ending 31 March 2007'.

The SFR is located at:

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000741/fourthadditionaltables.xls

Children in Care: Pupil Exclusions

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many looked after children in each local education authority (LEA) have been permanently excluded by the head teacher of their school since 2005; how many of those in each LEA while officially permanently excluded remain on their original schools' rolls; and how many of them in each LEA are being educated at other establishments while permanently excluded from their original school. [245604]

Beverley Hughes: The OC2 data collection collects information on a range of outcomes for looked after children from local authorities. This information has been published in the Statistical First Release "Outcome Indicators for Children Looked After, Twelve months to 30 September 2007—England" (SFR 08/2008), which is available on the Department's website via the following link:

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000785/index.shtml

This publication contains figures for the period 2005-07.

Information on exclusions from school at local authority level can be found in table 1 (in the second excel link) which shows the number of permanent exclusions during the previous school year. The OC2 data collection is an aggregate data collection from local authorities and it is therefore not possible to provide this information broken down by how many children, while officially permanently excluded remain on the original school rolls or are being educated at other establishments.

Children: Abuse

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many children were subject to abuse whilst subject to a child protection plan in each of the last five years. [244554]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 December 2008]: Information on the number of children who were subject to abuse while subject to a child protection plan is not collected nationally.

Table 1 shows the number of children who were the subject of a child protection plan at 31 March 2008, according to the category of abuse which led to the plan being put in place, for the years 2004 to 2008.

Table 1: Children who were the subject of a Child Protection Plan (CPP), by category of abuse[1,2], years ending 31 March 2004 to 2008

[3] 'Multiple' refers to instances where there is more than one main category of abuse. These children are not counted under the other abuse headings, so a child can appear only once in this table. 'Not recommended' refers to classificatory categories not recommended by 'Working Together' (1999).

The latest figures on the numbers and percentage of children subject to Child Protection Plans or placed on the Child Protection Register were published in a Statistical First Release (SFR) 24/2008 "Referrals, Assessments and Children and Young People who are the subject of a Child Protection Plan, England—Year ending 31 March 2008" on 16 September 2008. Children: Care Homes

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many children's homes there were in each local authority area of England on the latest date for which figures are available; and how many places in such homes were available in each local authority area. [244851]

Beverley Hughes: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM chief inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of her reply has been placed in the Library.

Letter from Christine Gilbert, dated 23 December 2008:

Your recent parliamentary question has been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for a response.

The table attached displays the number of children's homes and the maximum number of registered places available within the geographical boundaries of each of the local authorities in England. I should emphasise that these are the number of homes geographically located in each area i.e. the figures include private and voluntary run homes. These figures were taken from data available at 30 September 2008 and only include children's homes which were active at that point in time. No registered places data were available for five out of the 1976 children's homes (0.25%) and these are noted in the table below.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Rt Hon Beverley Hughes MP, Minister of State for Children, Young People and Families, and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Children: Day Care

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (1) how many early years providers had an inadequate care judgment on more than one occasion in each year since 2005; [241077]

(2) how many nurseries Ofsted has prosecuted in each year since 2005; [241078]

(3) how many registrations of nurseries Ofsted (a) cancelled and (b) suspended in each year since 2005; [241079]

(4) how many early years providers had one or more inspection outcomes that resulted in enforcement action against them in each year since 2005. [241080]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 8 December 2008]: These are matters for Ofsted. The chief inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to the hon. Member and copies of her replies will be placed in the Library.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how much funding will be provided to (a) Romsey constituency, (b) the City of Southampton and (c) Test Valley Borough under the free childcare for training and learning for work scheme in 2008-09; and if he will make a statement. [243933]

Beverley Hughes: Free child care for training and learning for work, will be delivered by the Learning and Skills Council, rather than by local authorities. There will, accordingly be no funding allocations at local authority or sub-local authority level. Funding will be made available on the basis of demand across the country as a whole.

Children: Disadvantaged

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what information his Department holds on the number of children who are entitled to free school meals in each (a) ward and (b) lower super output area. [245008]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The Department holds data on the number of pupils who are eligible for free school meals who attended maintained schools in England. Tables showing the number of pupils who are eligible for free school meals in each ward and lower super output area in England have been placed in both the Libraries.

Children: Protection

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families which of Lord Laming's recommendations made in the report of the Victoria Climbié inquiry are yet to be implemented; and how many were implemented within the recommended timescales. [241893]

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many and which of Lord Laming's 108 recommendations made in the Victoria Climbié inquiry are yet to be implemented; and how many of them were implemented within the advised timescales. [241558]

Beverley Hughes: This Government launched a radical programme of reform in response to Lord Laming's Inquiry into the death of Victoria Climbié. Through the Children Act 2004 we have put in place a much stronger framework for children's services and particularly for safeguarding children. The Government's detailed response to the recommendations of the Victoria Climbié Inquiry Report was set out in "Keeping Children Safe" which was published in 2003, alongside the Green Paper "Every Child Matters".

The actions the Government committed to undertaking in response to Lord Laming's recommendations have been carried out or are in progress; the one exception is the revision of guidance on the Children Act 1989. Volume 1, on Court Orders, has been revised and published, and many of the key messages which "Keeping Children Safe" said were to be incorporated in the revised Children Act 1989 guidance have been incorporated into other guidance documents and standards. We plan to revise further volumes of the 1989 guidance next year, taking into account commitments announced in Care Matters: Time for Change, legislative changes through the Children and Young Persons Act 2008, and proposed revisions to the National Minimum Standards for children's social care.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what steps he has taken to increase the level of co-operative working between officials in his Department and health visitors on policies relating to safeguarding children. [244688]

Beverley Hughes: While responsibility for the recruitment, training and deployment of community nurses, including health visitors, falls to primary care trusts and is therefore under the oversight of the Department of Health (DH), my Department works closely with DH, health visitors and their representative body in particular in the development and implementation of health and safeguarding policies.

Children's Trusts are the local partnerships which bring together the organisations responsible for services for children and families, including NHS bodies which employ health visitors, in a shared commitment to improve children's lives. The Government are working to strengthen Children's Trusts through revised statutory guidance issued on 18 November and further legislation.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many children were killed or injured in each local authority area in Yorkshire and the Humber between April 2007 and August 2008; how many of these were on the Child Protection Register; and if he will make a statement. [244782]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of children killed or injured in each local authority area is not collected centrally. The Office for National Statistics collects information on the number of child deaths by local authority. Table 1 shows the count of deaths in children aged 0 to 17 for each local authority area in Yorkshire and the Humber.

The latest figures on the numbers and percentage of children subject to Child Protection Plans or placed on the Child Protection Register were published in a Statistical First Release (SFR) 24/2008 'Referrals, Assessments and Children and Young People who are the subject of a Child Protection Plan, England—Year ending 31 March 2008' on 16 September 2008. A copy of this release is available on my Department's website:

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what steps his Department is taking to prevent the occurrence of child abuse in the North East. [245004]

Beverley Hughes: This Government launched a radical programme of national reform in response to Lord Laming's inquiry into the death of Victoria Climbié. Through the Children Act 2004 we have put in place a much stronger framework for children's services and particularly for safeguarding children. The Government's detailed response to the recommendations of the Victoria Climbié inquiry report was set out in 'Keeping Children Safe' which was published in 2003, alongside the Green Paper 'Every Child Matters'. In November 2008 Lord Laming was asked to prepare an independent report of progress being made across the country in implementing the safeguarding reforms introduced in response to his original recommendations. His findings will be submitted early next year.

The Government have also announced that all Local Safeguarding Children Boards (LSCBs) responsible for serious case reviews (SCRs) which have been judged inadequate are being asked to convene an independently chaired panel to reconsider the review. This process will be applied to any future SCRs which are assessed to be inadequate. In addition, Ofsted will carry out unannounced annual inspections of children's services across the country.

The Government office for the north-east monitors the performance of local authorities in the region and their partners on all outcomes of 'Every Child Matters', including on Staying Safe. Over the coming months there will be a particular focus on LSCBs' performance in relation to managing SCRs and improving the quality of the reviews and reports.

Climate Change

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what assessment his Department has made of its capacity to adapt to climate change; and what plans he has to publish a climate change adaptation strategy. [241178]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: In July 2008, the cross-Government Adapting to Climate Change Programme published Adapting to climate change in England—a framework for action which set out the Government's strategy for adaptation and the work-plan for the cross-Government Programme for the next three years. This programme increases Government's capacity to adapt by ensuring a co-ordinated approach across all Departments and the public sector, and overall responsibility for it rests with DEFRA. Information about the Programme and its work can be found at:

www.defra.gov/adaptation

This includes taking forward work flowing from the Climate Change Act—including a national Climate Change Risk Assessment and cost benefit analysis which will inform future priorities for the statutory adaptation programme that will then begin in 2012.

The Government's longer term strategy on adapting to a changing climate will be set out in this statutory National Adaptation Programme, which will be reviewed and updated on a five year rolling basis in response to updated risk assessments, and report to Parliament.

In addition, DCSF is continuing with its work looking at how a changing climate impacts each of the policy areas it has responsibility for, as well as working towards embedding adaptation into its corporate and policy decision making processes across the Department.

DCSF are aiming for BREEAM excellence and higher for the new builds planned for Sheffield and Darlington sites in 2010 and 2012 respectively, incorporating sustainability in design and construction. [illegible] of BREEAM assessments, as well as being a [illegible] requirement for Government new builds, considers the broad environmental concerns of climate change, resource use and impact on wildlife, balancing these against the need for a high quality, safe and healthy environment.

Coastal Areas

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (1) with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, columns 1837-8W, on coastal areas, what matters his Department has placed on the agenda of the cross-departmental working group on seaside towns; and if he will make a statement; [244406]

(2) what involvement his Department has had with the Coastal Town Network; at what level his Department is represented; and what issues his Department has raised at the Network. [244852]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The Department for Children, Schools and Families is part of the cross-Government working group on coastal towns and has agreed to send appropriate representatives to its meetings where relevant matters arise. While the Department has not yet placed any issues on its agenda, we are committed to supporting its work to address the challenges faced by coastal towns, including in particular the need to improve educational achievement.

Community Relations

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what steps he plans to take to ensure that staff in schools where safer school partnership officers are in place know about the characteristics that may help identify individuals vulnerable to violent extremism, as referred to in paragraph 148 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise. [245695]

Mr. Khan: I have been asked to reply.

A number of reviews took place over the summer which sought to draw out learning and emerging practice on the delivery of activity to prevent violent extremism, including the joint Audit Commission and HMIC Learning and Development Exercise (LDE). Though each review had a different focus, together they provide a useful package of learning material upon which local partners can draw and which will inform the Government's approach to Prevent.

There are a number of common themes which run through all these reviews. Some of these require action from national Government, some from local partners and many from both. We have ensured wide distribution of the LDE report to enable local partners to benefit directly from the important learning it contains in taking forward their local Prevent response. We published "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" on 10 December, which sets out the key strands of learning from the reviews and work already underway to address these key themes. We will continue to develop our response to the reviews throughout the year.

I will place a copy of "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" in the Library of the House.

Copyright

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families whether his recent announcement on the extension of copyright term in principle extends to both performers and producers. [246695]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

As the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport said at the UK Music Creator's Conference on 11 December, he and the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills, have been considering the arguments for an extension for performers from the current 50 years, perhaps to something like 70 years to match more closely a performer's expected lifetime. The debate on changes to the length of copyright term in this area is ongoing in Europe. We must ensure that the outcome of this debate delivers maximum benefits to performers and musicians. That is the test of any model as we go forward.

Curriculum

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what steps he plans to take following the recommendations from Sir Jim Rose relating to the school curriculum; and if he will make a statement. [245912]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: Sir Jim Rose is leading an independent review of the primary curriculum. His interim report, published on 8 December 2008, made provisional recommendations. The Government look forward to receiving Sir Jim Rose's final report and recommendations in the spring.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many contracts his Department has which allow contractors to store personal data of UK citizens overseas; for which contracts this applies; in which countries the data for each contract is held; and how many people have their data stored overseas in the case of each such contract. [245332]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The Department does not collect information of this kind and an answer could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families when his Department appointed a senior information risk owner in accordance with the report, Data Handling Procedures in Government and the accompanying document Cross-departmental Actions: Mandatory Minimum Action; and what grade the person holds within the Department. [245356]

Jim Knight: The director general of Corporate Services Directorate has formally acted as SIRO since November 2007, but acted as de facto SIRO since taking up the post. The director general of Corporate Services post holder is a DCSF management board member.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what percentage of the IT systems in his Department is fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245374]

Jim Knight: Currently DCSF have eight systems or environments full accredited with a further two where accreditation is in development at the moment.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [246605]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The Government's Delivery Plan for "Sustainable Procurement and Operations on the Government Estate", published in August 2008, provides a full account of the initiatives departments are taking to reduce their energy waste. The Government have committed to updating the Delivery Plan on a six monthly basis, and the first of these updates was published on 18 December 2008.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what information his Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment he has made of his Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its work force. [246026]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The Department holds information on all categories listed. Information on ethnicity, disability, religion and sexual orientation is based on voluntary, self-declaration.

The Department's diversity targets to 2013 and current position are set out in the following table.

Percentage

Under-represented groups	July to September 2008	Target for 2013
Women in Senior Civil Service (SCS)	47.37	50
Women in top management positions	48.15	50
BME in SCS	1.75	8
Disabled in SCS	2.63	6
Women in feeder grades[1]	51.66	50
BME in feeder grades[1]	6.65	10
Disabled staff feeder grades[1]	6.65	8

[1] Feeder grades are employees in grade 6 and 7. Percentages are based on those who have declared (a number of employees have chosen not to).

Departmental Marketing

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many complaints about advertisements sponsored or funded by his Department were made to the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) in each year from 1997 to 2008; and how many of these were upheld by the ASA in each year. [246643]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The Department for Children, Schools and Families has existed since June 2007 and is unable, therefore, to provide figures going back to 1997.

The ASA inform the Department about complaints received only when they judge that an investigation is required. They do not routinely notify the Department about the number received.

At our request, the ASA have informed us that since June 2007 to 21 December 2008, they have received two complaints relating to two separate 'cases' (being an ad or campaign) of DCSF advertising. However, neither of these complaints resulted in an ASA investigation being launched.

Departmental Redundancy

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many of his Department's staff who left under (a) an involuntary and (b) a voluntary staff exit scheme in each year since it was established received a severance package of (i) up to £25,000, (ii) £25,001 to £50,000, (iii) £50,001 to £75,000, (iv) £75,001 to £100,000 and (v) over £100,000; and if he will make a statement. [242250]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 26 November 2008, Official Report, columns 1860-61W.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what criteria his Department employs to assess the effect of the education maintenance allowance; and what the performance was against such criteria in 2007-08. [244544]

Jim Knight: The education maintenance allowance (EMA) was introduced to incentivise more 16 to 19-year-olds from low income households to participate in post-16 learning. It was subject to comprehensive evaluation during pilots from 1999 through to national roll out from 2004. We have evidence on the impact these pilots had on both participation in full-time education and attainment by age 18.

We do not know whether the impact of EMA has changed since national roll out because there is no comparison group in the United Kingdom where EMA is not available against which we could measure the 'EMA effect'. However, since EMA was rolled out there have been year on year increases in participation in full time education, and this is one of the most important initiatives aimed at increasing participation.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families if he will make an assessment of the effect of the operation of the education maintenance allowance on the social cohesion of school children; and if he will make a statement. [244731]

Jim Knight: Education maintenance allowance (EMA) is designed to help young people from low-income households to stay-on in education. Evaluation of the pilots showed that the impact is highest in those families with incomes below £20,000 and that there is a significant fall in take-up from families in the income ranges of just over £30,000. In designing the national programme, we used this evidence to make best use of the funds available for EMA. Experience in the pilots is that young people who are not eligible for EMA understand that, by setting an upper income threshold, we are focusing resources where they are most needed and will have the most impact.

We continue to heed the views of young people about the scheme. Previously, a learner could receive a weekly payment for attending class even if they had been disruptive, uncooperative and lacking in effort. From September 2008 we have amended the criteria for payment of bonuses and weekly payments to include behaviour, punctuality, completing coursework on time and achievement of agreed learning goals. These changes emphasise the "something for something" approach of the scheme.

Young people who were consulted were strongly in favour of this change. They think it is only fair that people are rewarded for effort and not for disruptive behaviour. Similarly feedback from learning providers shows that including an element of behaviour and effort will encourage learners to work hard and make progress.

Foster Care

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (1) what estimate he has made of the number of foster parents offering places for children in care directly with local authorities and through agencies; [245244]

(2) what his estimate is of the difference between the number of children seeking foster care placements and the number of such placements which are available. [245245]

Beverley Hughes: Local authorities are responsible for securing sufficient and diverse placements that are appropriate for the needs of children they look after within their authority area.

Information on the number of foster parents offering places for children in care directly with local authorities and through agencies is not collected centrally.

Information on the number of children seeking foster care placements is also not collected centrally and so a difference cannot be calculated between these children seeking placements and the number of such placements available.

However, information on the number of children looked after in foster placements can be found in table A3, taken from the Statistical First Release (SFR 23/2008) entitled 'Children looked after in England (including adoption and care leavers) year ending 31 March 2008'. This shows the number of children looked after at the 31 March for 2004 to 2008 by placement.

The SFR is located at:

http://www.dcsf.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000810/index.shtml

and table A3 can be found within the excel link labelled National Tables.

A table showing the number of children looked after in foster placements by local authority can be found in table LAA2 in the excel link (1st set of additional tables).

GCSE

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what proportion of pupils achieved five A* to C grade GCSEs including English, mathematics, science and a foreign language in (a) 1997 and (b) 2008. [244299]

Jim Knight: The information requested is given in the following table.

Percentage of pupils who achieved five or more grades A-C including English, mathematics, science and a foreign language*

	Percentage
2008[1]	23.5
1997[2]	14.7

[2] 1997 data is based on 15-year-old pupils at the start of the academic year.
Note:
The 2008 data is provisional and subject to change.

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what proportion of pupils obtained five grade A* to C GCSEs excluding equivalents in (a) 1997 and (b) 2008. [244291]

Jim Knight: The information requested is given in the following table:

Percentage of pupils who achieved five or more grades A-C GCSEs excluding equivalents*

	Percentage
2008[1]	34.4
1997[2]	43.0

Note:
The 2008 data is provisional and subject to change.

General Certificate of Secondary Education: Standards

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what proportion of GCSE candidates resident in Enfield, Southgate constituency achieved A* to C grades in each examination taken in each of the last five years. [246151]

Jim Knight: The information requested by examination could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, figures showing the percentage of resident pupils in Enfield, Southgate achieving five or more A* to C grades are produced in the following table:

Percentage of resident pupils[1] achieving five or more A to C grades at GCSE and equivalent*

	Enfield, Southgate parliamentary constituency	Enfield local authority district
2007/08[2]	75.2	59.9
2006/07	71.2	57.2
2005/06	67.5	54.8
2004/05	63.6	52.3
2003/04	72.4	53.0

[1] Figures for 2005/06 onwards are based on pupils at the end of key stage 4. Data for previous years are based on pupils aged 15-years-old at the start of the academic year.

Gifted Children: Free School Meals

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many pupils from (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools participating in the Young, Gifted and Talented Programme are eligible to receive free school meals. [246085]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The CfBT Education Trust, which runs the Young Gifted and Talented Learner Academy, does not currently collect data about the eligibility of its members for free school meals.

National Assessment Agency

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families which Minister approved the decision to establish the National Assessment Agency as a division of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority; and when that decision was taken. [245827]

Jim Knight: The former Secretary of State for Education and Skills, my right hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke) announced to Parliament on 17 November 2003, Official Report, column 25WS, that the QCA was proposing to establish the National Assessment Agency.

National Assessment Agency: Pay

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how much has been paid on average in bonuses to officials at the (a) National Assessment Agency and (b) Qualification and Curriculum Authority in 2008; and if he will make a statement. [245571]

Jim Knight: For the financial year ending in March 2008, the average NAA bonus was £2,623 and the average QCA bonus (excluding NAA) was £2,206.

Bonus payments are made after the end of the financial year to which they relate.

National Curriculum Tests

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what the value is of the contract awarded to Edexcel to administer key stage 2 tests in 2009. [245826]

Jim Knight: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) announced Edexcel as its preferred bidder for the one-year contract to supply national curriculum test operation services for the 2009 series, on 31 December 2008. The contract, worth £25 million over the contract period, covers the supply of national curriculum test operation services for key stage 2 statutory tests and other non-statutory tests for the 2009 test cycle.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families with reference to his oral statement on the Sutherland Inquiry, whether Ken Boston and David Gee will receive full pay during the period of their suspensions. [245830]

Jim Knight: Dr. Ken Boston and David Gee have been suspended on full pay pending the outcome of an internal QCA review.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families when the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority discovered that ETS had lost the contract to administer the Graduate Management Admissions Test in the US, referred to in paragraph 2.18 of the Sutherland Inquiry report, HC 62. [245831]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold this information. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA) is responsible for the development and administration of National Curriculum tests. I have therefore asked the QCA to write to the hon. Member directly in response to this question.

Nursery Schools: Leeds

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families when he expects the free nursery education entitlement change from 12.5 hours to 15 hours a week to be implemented in Leeds, West constituency; and if he will make a statement. [246173]

Beverley Hughes: Leeds City council is a "pathfinder" local authority for the extension of the free early learning entitlement from 12 ½ to 15 hours per week. At present, around 4,000 free early learning places of 15 hours have been secured across Leeds and we expect 15 hours to be available to almost all children in Leeds by autumn 2009. We cannot separately identify figures for the Leeds, West constituency.

Offenders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many former prisoners are employed by his Department; and what his Department's policy is on employing former prisoners. [246351]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The Department undertakes employment history, Disclosure Scotland and Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) checks as appropriate. If these checks identify any issues around people with criminal records then suitability for employment is considered with the Department's interest paramount and the top priority is to safeguard the children and adults whom we serve.

In addition, all individuals recruited to a regulated post, or to a post where they have access to personal or sensitive data about children or vulnerable adults, are subject to an enhanced CRB check.

Although the information is used as part of the recruitment process, we do not then transfer any details on criminal records to the central personnel record and as such the information requested could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Parents: Advisory Services

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many calls there have been to the Parent Know-How helpline in each month since it was established; what the cost of the helpline has been; and if he will make a statement. [245601]

Beverley Hughes: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 11 November 2008, Official Report, column 45W. No further information is available at this stage about the number of calls answered since September 2008.

Personal Social and Health Education

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what steps his Department has taken to strengthen and improve teaching in personal, social and health education. [244900]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The importance of good quality personal, social, health and economic (PSHE) education has never been greater. PSHE education has a major contribution to make to young people's personal development and well-being. Therefore, on 23 October we announced our intention to make PSHE education statutory and launched an independent review to investigate how to achieve this in an effective and practicable way. Sir Alasdair Macdonald, head teacher at Morpeth School in Tower Hamlets, has been asked to lead the review and will report to Ministers with recommendations in April 2009.

Alongside making PSHE statutory, our key delivery challenge is to develop the skills and confidence of the workforce that delivers PSHE education in schools. To address this, £2 million of funding is available each year to train teachers and professionals who deliver PSHE education in schools. We will encourage schools to use INSET to improve staff awareness on the duty to promote well-being and the importance of high quality PSHE education in particular. We are also working with the Training and Development Agency for Schools to develop a specialist route through initial teacher training.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what proportion of fixed period exclusions were given to pupils (a) with special educational needs and (b) entitled to free school meals in (i) secondary schools and (ii) primary schools in each year since 1997. [241852]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: Information on fixed period exclusions was collected for the first time for the school year 2003-04. The requested information on fixed period exclusions for pupils with special educational needs for years 2003-04 to 2006-07 is shown in the table.

Information on fixed period exclusions by free school meals is only available for the years 2005-06 and 2006-07 and is shown in the table. The information for the year 2005-06 is not available for primary schools.

Schools: Catering

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what progress has been made towards re-installing kitchens in schools from which they had been removed. [244261]

Beverley Hughes: The Department does not collect this information.

However, over the next three years, we are providing a record £21.9 billion of capital support for investment in school buildings. Much of this funding is devolved to local authorities and schools for their local priorities, which can include installing or improving school kitchens and dining areas. In addition to this funding, from April 2008 until March 2011, we are making available £150 million of targeted capital grant specifically to help improve kitchens and dining areas.

Schools: Reorganisation

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families if he will review the appropriateness of arrangements for the amalgamation of local authority education and children's social services; and if he will make a statement. [244337]

Beverley Hughes: There is wide agreement that the outcomes we want for every child can only be achieved and sustained when agencies work together. The role of the Director of Children's Services brings together local authority services for children and young people to ensure joint working, and to champion the interests of children and young people in the local area. There is no intention to review these arrangements.

Schools: Standards

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (1) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Making Good Progress pilot scheme; [245573]

(2) what assessment he has made of the performance levels in single level tests undertaken under the Making Good Progress pilot scheme; and if he will make a statement. [245572]

Jim Knight: Making Good Progress is a two year pilot, due to run until July 2009. It is being independently evaluated by PricewaterhouseCoopers. The interim report on the first year of the pilot has been published and a copy has been sent to the Chairman of the Select Committee for Children, Schools and Families. The report includes the summary of the December 2007 and June 2008 single level test results.

A final evaluation report which will make an assessment about the effectiveness of the pilot and its elements over the full two years is due to be published in the autumn of 2009.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families which schools have joined the National Challenge as a consequence of their 2008 GCSE results. [246082]

Jim Knight: Final validated GCSE results for 2008 are not yet available. However, since the National Challenge was launched we have been working with local authorities to identify bespoke packages of support for schools with fewer than 30 per cent. of pupils gaining 5 A*-C including English and mathematics, and for those deemed at risk of falling below this threshold.

Individual local authorities will shortly publish their plans for all schools which are being supported by National Challenge so that local parents can see details of the proposed support.

Secondary Education: Coastal Areas

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what the most recent Ofsted inspection grades were for each secondary school that serves the principal seaside towns of England; and what the national average was of such grades. [244859]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of her reply will be placed in both Libraries.

Sixth Form Colleges: Finance

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what tasks he has asked each Government Office to undertake relating to the proposed changes to the funding and management of sixth form colleges; and if he will make a statement. [244171]

Jim Knight: Government offices (GOs) will have no direct role in funding and management of sixth form colleges in the new system. Local authorities will be accountable for the performance management of sixth form colleges in the new system where there will be a legally distinct Sixth Form College sector.

Responsibility for the planning, commissioning and funding for education and training for 16 to 19-year-olds will transfer to local authorities; supported by a new Young People's Learning Agency. GOs will contribute to discussion of regional priorities and support local authorities in undertaking their new responsibilities. They are, and will continue to be, a conduit for information to flow from sub-regional groupings (SRGs) to the Department. During the transition to the new system GOs are playing an important role in supporting local authorities and working with other regional bodies to prepare. In particular they have been supporting the development of SRGs in preparation for the transfer of 16 to 19 funding from the Learning and Skills Council to local authorities. The Department will be allocating funding via Government offices to SRGs to help build their capacity through this process.

Social Services: Children

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what the names and positions are of the chairs of each Local Safeguarding Board; and which of those chairs hold the positions concurrently with a position of director of children's services or any other local authority appointment relating to child protection. [241997]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 10 December 2008]: The list of the Chairs of Local Safeguarding Children Boards, which includes information about Chairs who hold the positions concurrently with a position of Director of Children's Services or any other local authority appointment relating to child protection, is available on the Every Child Matters website. The website address to access the list is:

http://www.everychildmatters.gov.uk/IG000078/.

Social Services: Temporary Employment

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many and what percentage of those working in social services departments in each local authority area in England were agency staff in each of the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [244689]

Beverley Hughes: The number and percentage of agency staff working in social services departments by local authority is not held centrally. The Local Government Association estimated that the average percentage of agency staff working in posts for children and young people within local authority social services departments in England in 2006 was 13 per cent. This was estimated to equate to around 5,488 agency staff covering a range of roles including field social workers, residential care workers and admin staff. Further information is available from the Local Government Analysis and Research website:

http://www.lgar.local.gov.uk/lgv/core/page.do?pageId=12636

Social Workers: Disclosure of Information

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families by what date he expects the confidential whistleblowers' hotline for social workers announced by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education, Children's Services and Skills to be operational; and if he will make a statement. [244690]

Beverley Hughes: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM chief inspector, Christine Gilbert, has written to the hon. Member and a copy of her reply has been placed in the Library.

Letter from Christine Gilbert, dated 19 December 2008:

Your recent parliamentary question has been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for a response.

Ofsted is currently investigating options for establishing the whistleblowers' hotline. We would expect it to be operational from April 2009.

At present, it is possible for anyone with concerns to raise these anonymously by contacting Ofsted's National Business Unit, the details of which can be found on the Ofsted website www.ofsted.gov.uk.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jim Knight MP, Minister of State for School and Learners, and will be placed in the Library of both Houses.

Specialised Diplomas

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families how many schools have received money for introducing new diploma courses; and if he will make a statement. [245597]

Jim Knight: We do not hold information at school level on funding that schools receive for diploma delivery. In 2008-09, funding was available to schools delivering diplomas from the following sources:

The diploma grant to support the additional costs of delivery for 14 to 16-year-olds (a total of £17.4 million distributed through 100 local authorities to consortia delivering diplomas for 8,568 learners);

Funding for 16 to 18-year-olds in school sixth forms distributed by LSC (a total of 3,504 16 to 18-year-olds are being funded in schools and colleges at the relevant funding rate for the line and level of learning they are studying); and

A total of £56.12 million to develop the work force in schools and colleges.

In addition to these, we have made available funding to support consortia approved through the Gateway process to prepare for delivery. We have provided £30,000 per consortium per line of learning for those starting to deliver diploma courses in September 2008. For the seven consortia due to deliver all 10 diploma lines from September 2009, we have this year supported them with an extra £1 million each to build the necessary capacity.

We have also given the 20 most rural local authorities an extra £1 million each to support innovation in implementation of 14-19 reforms in rural areas. For the 40 most rural local authorities, there is funding of a total of £3 million to support the post of transport and access co-ordinator. There is also £608 million in targeted capital funding available across the 76 local authorities not involved in waves 1-6 of Building Schools for the Future (£8 million for each local authority) to spend on either 14-19 or special educational needs.

Schools, colleges, local authorities and others can access existing funding streams to help 14-19 reforms, which include Building Schools for the Future, the Further Education Modernisation Fund and the 16-19 Capital Fund.

Sports: Curriculum

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what place there will be for co-operative sport in the new primary curriculum. [246538]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: The detail of the revised primary curriculum will be set out in the final report of the Independent Review of the Primary Curriculum in spring 2009. The Independent Review is working with the Association for Physical Education, the Youth Sports Trust and other relevant organisations to develop physical education content, including co-operative sport, in the new primary curriculum.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what part physical education lessons will play in the new primary curriculum. [246539]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: Physical education will continue to play an important part in the primary curriculum. The detail of the knowledge, skills and understanding all primary aged pupils should be taught in physical education and other subject areas will be set out in the final report of the Independent Review of the Primary Curriculum next spring.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families what assessment has been made of the impact of the provision of the new primary curriculum relating to physical education on childhood obesity rates. [246540]

Sarah McCarthy-Fry: No assessment has been made. The Independent Review of the Primary Curriculum has only published an interim report. The interim report makes explicit the link between physical development and health. Work is currently taking place on the detailed content of the programmes of learning to be published with the final report next spring.

Trust Schools

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families (1) how many schools in (a) Herefordshire, (b) Shropshire, (c) Worcestershire and (d) the West Midlands have applied for trust status; [246758]

(2) who the main external partners supporting Herefordshire Trust Schools will be; and if he will make a statement. [246759]

Jim Knight: Schools do not have to apply to the Department for Children, Schools and Families to become a trust or foundation school. Proposals are decided by the governing body (or the Schools Adjudicator where proposals to acquire a trust have been referred by the local authority). There is no role for Ministers in the decision-making process.

To date, seven schools in (a) Herefordshire, no schools in (b) Shropshire, seven schools in (c) Worcestershire, and 67 schools in (d) West Midlands (including Herefordshire and Worcestershire) have either applied or established a trust under the provisions of the Education and Inspections Act 2006. All 67 schools are on the Trust and Foundation Schools Support programme where they have access to advice and guidance on the processes associated with acquiring a Trust.

Schools in Herefordshire are consulting about the acquisition of a trust, including who their partners will be. Trust partners are available from individual governing bodies through the publication of statutory proposals.

JUSTICE

Community Sentences: Offensive Weapons

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many individuals have been sentenced to intensive unpaid work in the 10 knife action programme areas for knife-related crimes. [246747]

Mr. Hanson: Finalised sentencing data for the 10 Tackling Knives Action Programme (TKAP) areas in 2008 will not be available until "Sentencing Statistics 2008" is published in November 2009.

From 5 January probation areas have been instructed to make intensive unpaid work of any sentence length, to the maximum of 300 hours, available for offenders convicted of knife crime offences. Under this revised definition of intensive unpaid work, offenders will be required to complete unpaid work at a minimum of 18 hours per week and may also be required to comply with other community order requirements designed to address offending behaviour.

Courts: Essex

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice if he will develop a strategy for dealing with civil cases in the county courts in Essex; and if he will make a statement. [244676]

Bridget Prentice: There are five county courts in Essex, located at Basildon, Harlow, Chelmsford, Colchester and Southend. Basildon and Harlow are relatively small and only sit District Judges. Chelmsford is the Care Centre for the whole of Essex and Colchester and Southend are both Trial Centres. We are currently reviewing the listing arrangements, mainly for the Circuit Judges, with a view to ensuring that the courthouses and judiciary are being utilised in the most effective and efficient way to deliver the best service we can to the court users of Essex.

During 2009, the plan is for civil work at Southend to change from being listed for a single Circuit Judge every day and towards listing for two Circuit Judges sitting together for up to two weeks each month still at Southend. This will facilitate a back to back listing system for multi track cases increasing throughput, disposal rates and, ultimately, reducing waiting times.

Chelmsford county court moved into a new building in December 2007 which provides modern improved facilities and additional courtrooms and hearing rooms. Again, during 2009, the plan is to create a similar back to back listing system for both Chelmsford and Colchester multi-track work at Chelmsford with Ipswich civil cases being listed from Ipswich. Some civil work and private family law work will remain at Colchester. All Essex county court public law family work will continue to be listed at Chelmsford where the Family Proceedings Court work for Chelmsford is also heard now. This will enable Circuit Judges to sit back to back on public law and civil work.

In summary, therefore, the objectives in this review of Essex civil listing are:

- To reduce waiting times and improve our customer service to all Essex court users.
- Make best use of court accommodation and judicial resources.
- List more effectively and with greater certainty.

Courts: Fines

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many fines imposed by courts in (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05, (c) 2005-06, (d) 2006-07 and (e) 2007-08 remain unpaid. [244239]

Bridget Prentice: Although my Department identifies the total value of fines owed and the total value of fines collected within each police force area, current management information systems do not allow for these to be separated into those imposed and paid within a single year. It is therefore not possible to say how many fines imposed in a year remain unpaid.

However the following table contains amounts that have been owed and collected in the last five years.

	New net amount owed (£)	Amount paid (£)	Payment rate (percentage)
2003-04	288,923,893	212,785,348	74
2004-05	276,717,475	221,505,558	80
2005-06	281,231,031	233,332,326	83
2006-07	266,533,663	244,555,540	92
2007-08	270,341,364	256,117,663	95

This table indicates that there has been year on year increases in the payment rate for financial penalties.

Crime: Compensation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) how many and what percentage of claims the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (a) received and (b) processed where a civil claim was also outstanding in (i) 2007 and (ii) 2008; [245039]

(2) how many and what percentage of Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority claims where a civil claim was also outstanding were completed before the civil claim was completed in (a) 2007 and (b) 2008. [245040]

Maria Eagle: These statistics are not kept. To obtain such information would require a manual search of each application received and processed for the last two years—to do so would incur a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority practice of continuing to process applications when other claims are being pursued will be discontinued. [245041]

Maria Eagle: The criminal injuries compensation scheme 2008, introduced on 3 November 2008, states that

"A claims officer may require an applicant to provide details of any steps taken or planned to obtain damages or compensation in respect of the same injury and may decline to process an application further until those details have been provided or until the applicant's attempts to obtain such damages or compensation have been exhausted."

There are no plans to change this position.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice when the tariffs applied by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority were last increased. [245043]

Maria Eagle: The criminal injuries compensation scheme 2008, introduced on 3 November 2008, includes an amended Tariff of Injuries, which re-categorises some of the injuries contained in the previous tariff and increases the tariff level of award for some categories of injury.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) what consideration was given to increasing the tariffs applied by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority in the recent review of the scheme; [245044]

(2) what consideration was given to increasing the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority's 1996 cap of £500,000 in line with inflation or otherwise in the recent review of the scheme. [245045]

Maria Eagle: Following consultation, launched in December 2005 by the green paper "Rebuilding Lives: supporting victims of crime", working groups were set up to discuss the appropriate levels for the tariff.

The tariff scheme was introduced to stop the costs of the scheme rising at a rate that was no longer sustainable for a scheme funded by the taxpayer. A balance therefore has to be struck between competing demands for finite public resources, and what the taxpayer can afford against what is a reasonable amount of compensation for victims of violent crime.

The criminal injuries compensation scheme of Great Britain is probably the most generous scheme in the world for compensating innocent victims of violent crime. With regards to the maximum cap of £500,000, nearly all state compensation schemes in the European Union have a maximum cap, and it is usually far lower than £500,000.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice in how many Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority cases the cap has been applied in each year since its introduction. [245046]

Maria Eagle: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority does not keep statistics on the number of cases where the cap has been applied.

The number of cases in which the maximum award was paid are as follows:

1997-98	0
1998-99	1
1999-2000	0
2000-01	2
2001-02	1
2002-03	4
2003-04	5
2004-05	10
2005-06	14
2006-07	28
2007-08	41
2008-09	[1]48

[1] As at 17 December 2008

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what factors the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority considered when setting the appropriate level of compensation for the loss of one kidney at £11,000. [245058]

Maria Eagle: The tariff is not set by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority but by Ministers with the approval of Parliament.

Following consultation, launched by the Government in December 2005 by the green paper 'Rebuilding Lives: supporting victims of crime', working groups were set up to discuss the appropriate levels for the tariff.

Representatives on the working groups included judges from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Appeals Panel, lawyers from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority, Home Office and Ministry of Justice and policy advisors from the sponsor Department and Scottish Executive.

Advice was sought from panel members with medical knowledge and consultant status. They advised that the human body can function as normal with one kidney. Therefore £11,000 was considered to be a more appropriate level of award for this injury.

This decision was approved by Parliament.

Departmental Data Protection

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what percentage of the IT systems in (a) his Department and (b) its agencies are fully accredited to the Government's security standards. [245390]

Mr. Wills: All the IT environments in the Department and its agencies have been fully accredited to Government security standards; a number of these are currently undergoing their periodic re-accreditation. All new applications must be accredited before they are accepted into service.

Enforcement Restriction Orders

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many enforcement restriction orders have been granted by the county courts in each of the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [245428]

Bridget Prentice: The county courts have not granted any enforcement restriction orders (EROs) because the provisions have not yet been introduced. Our current intention is to implement the ERO in 2010.

The ERO scheme was enacted in Chapter 2 of Part 5 of the Tribunals Courts and Enforcement Act 2007. It was developed following extensive consultation with the advice and credit sectors. It is intended specifically to support only those debtors who encounter unforeseen short-term difficulties from which they are likely to recover in a relatively short period. Other options, such as the reformed Administration Order (AO), which is contained in Chapter 1 of Part 5 of the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007, exist for those with more long-term problems.

Earlier this year Her Majesty's Court Service consulted on certain aspects of the Administration and Enforcement Restriction Order schemes, including the types of debts that should be able to be protected. The response to the consultation paper: Administration and Enforcement Restriction Orders: setting the parameters, will be published shortly.

HMP Whitemoor: Discrimination

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, columns 873-4W, on prisons: complaints, how many complaints by prison officers have been made against fellow officers at HMP Whitemoor on the grounds of (a) sexual discrimination, (b) sexual harassment, (c) homophobic behaviour and (d) racial discrimination in each of the last 10 years; what proportion of these complaints were upheld; what proportion of those making such complaints received compensation payments; and how much each received. [246172]

Mr. Malik: Information held locally by the establishment is only readily available for the period since 2001-02. The table lists those cases involving complaints made by prison officers about fellow officers.

Year	Number of cases	Type of complaint	Complaint upheld/ dismissed
2001-02	2	Racial discrimination	Upheld
2002-03	1	Sexual harassment	Upheld
2003-04	1	Sexual discrimination	Dismissed
	1	Sexual discrimination	Partially upheld
2004-05	1	Racial discrimination	Upheld
2005-06	None	—	—
2006-07	3	Racial discrimination	Upheld
	1	Racial discrimination[1]	Upheld
	2	Racial discrimination	Dismissed
2007-08	1	Homophobic behaviour	Upheld
	1	Sexual harassment	Partially upheld
2008-09[2]	None

[1] This case also involved complaints made against staff from other areas of the Prison Service.
[2] To end 12/2008

Payments were made in two of these cases which were both the subjects of confidentiality agreements. To identify amounts paid, or which cases were involved would breach that agreement, and may enable individuals to be identified.

Human Trafficking: Refuges

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how much funding the Home Office has provided for the Poppy Project in each of the last five years. [243310]

Maria Eagle: The Poppy project is jointly funded by the Ministry of Justice and the Home Office. The following table provides a breakdown of grant funding in the last five years.

Financial year	HO	MOJ	Funding
1 April 2003 to 31 March 2006	[1]2,000,000		£2,000,000
2006-07	[1]900,000		1,200,000

Intellectual Property

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice when the UK will implement Article 4 of the Intellectual Property Rights Enforcement Directive (2004/48/EC); and what assessment he has made of the recommendations of the Civil Justice Council that it should be implemented. [245150]

Bridget Prentice: Article 4 of the Intellectual Property Rights Enforcement Directive (2004/48/EC) sets out who has an entitlement to make an application for the provisions available under the Directive. Subsections (a) and (b), which recognise the entitlement of holders of intellectual property rights and those authorised to use those rights, have already been implemented. Subsections (c) and (d) require member states to introduce representative actions if they are recognised by the applicable law. UK domestic law does not permit representative actions and so these articles do not apply in cases where the applicable law is that of the UK.

The Civil Justice Council published their final recommendations to improve access to justice for consumers and small businesses in collective claims on 12 December, although it does not make a specific recommendation on article 4. This report is being considered across Government and we will publish a formal response as soon as possible.

National Offender Management Service: Manpower

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether the National Offender Management Service staff's training record is based on a prison service template. [246929]

Mr. Malik: There is no prison service template for recording staff training. It is for individual prison establishments and headquarters groups to maintain training records in the most effective way for them.

National Offender Management Service: Religion

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice if he will issue guidance to the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) to prevent religious groups and individuals working or volunteering in NOMS from promoting their religions. [244674]

Mr. Malik: Religious groups and individuals working or volunteering in NOMS are required to comply with NOMS Diversity policies. Chaplains and Chaplaincy volunteers, in providing religious teaching and support, are not permitted to proselytize in their work with offenders.

Staff employed by NOMS must not discriminate unlawfully against individuals or groups of individuals because of their religion. They must not harass others through behaviour, language and other unnecessary and uninvited actions. Nor must staff have private interests that interfere or could interfere with the proper discharge of their duties.

Prisoners: Women

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) which (a) publicly funded and (b) privately run women's prisons provide specialist help for inmates who have self-harmed; and in each case whether such help in each prison is made available on a permanent or temporary basis; [245671]

(2) how many inmates there are in each (a) publicly funded and (b) privately run women's prison; and how many inmates in each had self-harmed in the last 12 months. [245672]

Mr. Hanson: NOMS is committed to reducing the number of self harm incidents in prison custody. Whilst most self harm is not directly life threatening it can be extremely distressing for those who have to deal with it.

A prisoner focussed care planning system, (ACCT), for those identified at risk has helped prisons manage self harm. The Assessment, Care in Custody and Teamwork, (ACCT), aims to improve the quality of care by introducing flexible care-planning that is individually based, supported by improved staff training in assessing and understanding at risk prisoners.

The following programmes have been specifically developed to meet the needs of women:

CARE Programme, (Choices, Actions, Relationships and Emotions) has been developed specifically for women convicted of violent and/or substance-related offences. The programme addresses a number of personal and circumstantial difficulties known to be linked to self harm, substance misuse, mental ill-health, violence and reoffending. The programme was piloted in two public sector prisons and an accreditation submission will be made to Correctional Services Accreditation Panel, (CSAP), in summer 2009.

The Carousel programme was designed to meet the needs of women displaying repetitive self harming behaviour, many of whom are also disruptive or violent. It consists of a rolling group support programme combined with individual counselling, physical exercise and relaxation, educational activity, art therapy and music lessons. The development of alternative coping skills is a key element running through the programme. The programme, funded by the primary care trust, is run at Eastwood Park, a public sector prison.

Dialectical behaviour therapy (DBT) is a programme developed specifically for women with borderline personality disorder and who have shown a high risk of self harm or are high risk offenders. An adapted version of DBT is being run at Holloway as part of the Holloway Skills Training (HoST) programme, and at Low Newton as part of the Dangerous Severe Personality Disorder (DSPD) Primrose programme. Both prisons are public sector establishments.

A new pilot has been launched at HMP Bronzefield, to help to tackle self-harm among its population. The Self-Harm Reduction programme, (SHaRP), aims to aid the women in developing coping strategies, problem-solving techniques, communication and goal-setting skills to help to control their self-harming behaviour. The programme takes place over 14 group sessions during a period of three weeks; and there are also opportunities for one-to-one sessions twice weekly by appointment. Once the initial three-week programme is completed, there is a six week gap before the women are assessed again by SHaRP staff. The SHaRP programme started in April 2008 for an initial 12 month period, with a view to extend. However it will be fully evaluated at the end of this initial period. In addition the three day SAFE programme, (whose goal is to reduce self harm), has also been running at Bronzefield since 2004 and is currently being evaluated by a forensic psychologist from NOMS.

The following table details the current prisons which hold females, by funding sector; their populations [a] and their recorded numbers of self-harming individuals, for the period in question (December 2007 to November 2008).

Prison	Sector	Function	Population[1]	Individual self-harmers
Askham Grange	Public	Female Open	104	0

Terrorism: Compensation

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many final Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority awards have been paid to those injured in the 7 July 2005 bombings. [245047]

Maria Eagle: As at 19 December 2008, 533 final payments had been made to victims injured in the bombings.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority applications by those injured in the 7 July 2005 bombings (a) remain unfinalised, (b) have resulted in interim payments and (c) have not resulted in payments; and how many of those applicants received a payment in excess of £500,000. [245048]

Maria Eagle: As at 19 December 2008:

(a) Of the 645 applications received, 47 applications remain unfinalised, although final offers have been made in 14 of those cases.

(b) Of the 33 applications yet to receive a final offer, 20 have received an interim payment.

(c) 13 applicants have not yet received any interim payment either because questions remain about eligibility or contact has been lost with the applicant.

No awards in excess of £500,000 have been paid as this is the maximum award payable under the scheme.

Community Relations

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) what steps he plans to take to ensure that information held by the security services, police counter-terrorism specialists and the Counter Terrorism Network is shared more effectively with local councils and Basic Command Unit commanders in response to the recommendation at paragraph 20 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246203]

(2) what steps he plans to take to ensure that police services provide targeted assistance to people who are at risk of falling under the influence of extremism, as referred to in paragraph 36 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246233]

(3) what plans (a) his Department and (b) his Department's Research Information and Communications Unit have to respond to the recommendation on page 13 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise on using the experience of small partnerships; [246234]

(4) what steps he plans to take to ensure that partnerships (a) regularly reassess their readiness to cope with a counter-terrorism operation in their area and (b) ensure that learning from experiences elsewhere is incorporated in their consequence management arrangement, as recommended on page 28 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246202]

(5) what response he plans to make to the Audit Commission's recommendation that the Security Service, the Association of Chief Police Officers and regional government offices develop an agreed structure for information sharing at an appropriate level between the police, councils and other partners, referred to on page 22 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246201]

(6) what response he plans to make to the Audit Commission's recommendation that reliable information flows between councils and police forces serving similar communities across the UK be developed, as contained in paragraph 75 of its November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246199]

(7) what steps he plans to take to ensure that all neighbourhood policing teams are provided with sufficient (a) briefing and (b) awareness-raising training on extremism and terrorism, as mentioned in paragraph 118 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246198]

(8) whether he plans to increase engagement between neighbourhood policing teams, council officers delivering frontline services and local communities, as suggested in paragraph 117 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246197]

(9) what steps he plans to take to establish the effective local links between partnerships and prisons and probation services referred to in paragraph 112 of the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; [246176]

(10) what steps he plans to take to improve the engagement between the Counter Terrorism Network and borough command units referred to in paragraph 111 of the Audit Commission report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise. [246175]

Mr. Khan: I have been asked to reply.

A number of reviews took place over the summer which sought to draw out learning and emerging practice on the delivery of activity to prevent violent extremism, including the joint Audit Commission and HMIC Learning and Development Exercise (LDE). Though each review had a different focus, together they provide a useful package of learning material upon which local partners can draw and which will inform the Government's approach to Prevent.

There are a number of common themes which run through all these reviews. Some of these require action from national Government, some from local partners and many from both. We have ensured wide distribution of the LDE report to enable local partners to benefit directly from the important learning it contains in taking forward their local Prevent response. We published "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" on 10 December, which sets out the key strands of learning from the reviews and work already underway to address these key themes. We will continue to develop our response to the reviews throughout the year.

I will place a copy of "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" in the Library of the House.

HEALTH

Anaemia

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidelines his Department provides to GPs on the treatment of pernicious anaemia; [244915]

(2) what quantitative data his Department has compiled on the incidence of pernicious anaemia by (a) geographical location, (b) age and (c) presence of existing auto-immune disease; [244916]

(3) what steps his Department is taking to increase (a) prevention and (b) diagnosis of pernicious anaemia in infants and juveniles; [244919]

(4) what assessment he has made of awareness among medical professionals of the prevalence of pernicious anaemia; [244920]

(5) if he will give consideration to the replacement of treatments of hydroxocobalamin with cyanacobalamin; and what research his Department has commissioned into such treatment; [245729]

(6) if he will make routine pernicious anaemia testing available to vulnerable groups. [245834]

Ann Keen: The Department has not issued any recent guidance to general practitioners (GPs) on treatment of pernicious anaemia.

The Department does not itself compile any quantitative data on incidence of pernicious anaemia, as this condition is generally treated by GPs at primary care level. The link between low vitamin B12 status and subsequent development of adverse health outcomes and the incidence and prevalence of such outcomes is unclear. Some data are available from the General Practice Research Database (GPRD) which contains longitudinal medical records from approx 420 primary care practices throughout the United Kingdom (4 per cent. of total number in UK). The following table shows the number of patients (aged 65 years and over) in the GPRD with at least one record of pernicious anaemia (2005).

Number of patients (aged 65 years and over) in the GPRD (2005) with at least one record of pernicious anaemia and at least one prescription for vitamin B12

Country	Number of patients	*As percentage of total number of patients aged 65 years and over registered in the GPRD for 2005
England	406	0.11
Wales	23	0.10
Scotland	44	0.27
Northern Ireland	15	0.12
Total	488	0.12

General Practice Research Database

There are no steps currently being taken by the Department to increase prevention and diagnosis of pernicious anaemia in infants and juveniles. This is an extremely rare condition in children.

Assessments of medical professionals and their awareness of pernicious anaemia are not matters for the Department. It would be for the relevant specialist professional bodies such as the Royal College of Pathologists to provide guidance and professional development on matters relating to haematology.

Hydroxocobalamin is recommended in preference to cyanacobalamin by the Joint Formulary Committee of the British National Formulary, because it is retained in the body longer than cyanocobalamin and maintenance is thus required less frequently, at intervals of up to three months. The Department has not commissioned research into these treatments.

The UK National Screening Committee has not recommended in favour of routine screening for pernicious anaemia. However, the Committee does recommend that all pregnant women should be offered a test for anaemia (National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence Routine Antenatal Care Guideline).

Aseptic Dispensing

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has provided to hospital trusts on aseptic dispensing. [245613]

Phil Hope: Guidance was last issued by the Department in August 1997 in "Aseptic Dispensing in National Health Service Hospitals (EL(97)52)." A copy of this guidance has been placed in the Library. In addition, the National Health Service Pharmaceutical Quality Assurance Committee updated its publication "Quality Assurance of Aseptic Preparation Services" in October 2005.

Baby Care Units: Nurses

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the adequacy of the number of neonatal nursing staff in (a) Gloucestershire and (b) England; whether he plans to provide funding to increase those numbers; and if he will make a statement [244221]

Ann Keen: It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) in partnership with local authorities, strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, and to commission services accordingly. On 25 January 2008, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced that PCT baselines for 2008-09—2010-11 included £330 million of extra funding to support improvements in maternity services.

In response to the National Audit Report 2007 Caring for Vulnerable Babies the Department set up a Neonatal Taskforce which is working to develop targeted action plans to assist local workforce decision making incorporating skill mix, staffing levels, retention, recruitment and commissioning of education and training.

Gloucestershire Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust is using agency nurses to ensure adequate services continue to be provided. The Trust has put in place a 'grow your own' policy sponsoring nurses to go onto appropriate neonatal nurse courses and to ensure that their reliance on agency nurses is reduced in future years.

British National Formulary

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 21 October 2008, Official Report, column 302W, on the British National Formulary, whether the distribution to hospital doctors has taken place. [245799]

Dawn Primarolo: Yes. The Department of Health's distribution of the September 2008 edition of the British National Formulary (British National Formulary 56) has been completed. Guidance for National Health Service organisations that need to order additional copies of the British National Formularies for their prescribers, is available on the Department of Health's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_081420

A copy of the guidance has also been placed in the Library.

Cancer

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's presentation to the Cancer Policy Forum by Teresa Moss of June 2008. [245622]

Ann Keen: Teresa Moss heads the National Cancer Action Team, which is a national health service body. I have drawn the hon. Member's question to her attention, and she will write to him direct.

Cancer: Medical Treatments

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints by patients relating to the refusal by a primary care trust to fund (a) a cancer and (b) a non-cancer treatment have been made (i) in the NHS, (ii) to the Healthcare Commission and (iii) to the Health Service Ombudsman in each year since 1997-98. [245621]

Ann Keen: The information requested is not collected at this level of detail by the Department of Health, the Healthcare Commission or the Health Service Ombudsman.

Clinical Physiologists: Career Structure

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the current Modernising Scientific Careers proposals on the career pathways of clinical physiologists. [246215]

Ann Keen [holding answer 12 January 2009]: Proposals to transform the future training and career pathways of the health care science workforce as set out in "The Future of the Healthcare Science Workforce Modernising Scientific Careers: The Next Steps", a copy of which has been placed in the Library are currently out for public consultation which is due to end on 6 March 2009. A response will be published in due course.

Clostridium

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of disinfectant wipes using quarternary ammonium-based formulas against Clostridium difficile. [246318]

Ann Keen: The Department has not made any specific assessments regarding the effectiveness of disinfectant wipes using quaternary ammonium-based formulas against Clostridium difficile. However these compounds are not recognised sporicides.

There are potentially a number of products for sale to the national health service that do not contain chlorine and claim to be sporicidal. The NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency has therefore commissioned the research into commercial formulations that claim to be sporicidal and it is expected to be completed by the end of autumn 2009.

Dementia: Respite Care

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many respite care beds there are for people with dementia in each primary care trust area in England; [244528]

(2) how many people with dementia were waiting for respite care in each (a) primary care trust and (b) local authority area on 1 April 2008; and how many of these had been waiting (i) up to three months, (ii) between three and six months, (iii) between six and nine months and (iv) between nine and 12 months. [244529]

Phil Hope: Services for people requiring respite care are not condition-specific, and so the information requested is not available.

On 8 December 2008, we announced primary care trust (PCT) allocations for 2009-10 and 2010-11 which included £150 million so that all PCTs can increase the support they offer to all carers.

Dental Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent steps he has taken to increase access to NHS dentistry; and if he will make a statement. [246168]

Ann Keen: The importance of developing dental services is reiterated in "The NHS in England: The operating framework for 2008-09" published on 9 December 2008, which places a priority on primary care trusts to develop dental services in order to provide access to anyone who seeks help in accessing services.

This document has already been placed in the Library and is available at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_091445

This is being supported by extra resources—an 11 per cent. uplift in our dental funding allocations for the current year 2008-09, and a further 8.5 per cent. uplift for 2009-10 announced in the Operating Framework, which will take the total central allocation to £2,257 million (net of patient charge income).

However, there are still areas of the country in which people are unable to access an national health service dentist and we know that we need to do more to ensure that NHS dentistry is available for all who wish to access it. This is why we have appointed an independent review team chaired by Professor Jimmy Steele to help us understand what steps we can take to ensure that every person who wants to access an NHS dentist can do so.

Dental Services: Public Consultation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of NHS dental patients (a) on the Isle of Wight and (b) in each primary care trust area in Hampshire were on their local dentists' panel in each year since 1998. [246100]

Ann Keen: Information is not available in the format requested. However, the number of patients registered with a national health service dentist, in England, as at 31 March, 1997 to 2006 is available in Annex A of the "NHS Dental Activity and Workforce Report, England: 31 March 2006". Annex B contains information on the proportion of the population registered with an NHS dentist. Information is provided by primary care trust (PCT) and by strategic health authority (SHA) where appropriate.

This information is based on the old contractual arrangements which were in place up to and including 31 March 2006. This report, published on 23 August 2006, has already been placed in the Library and is also available on the NHS Information Centre website at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/pubs/dwfactivity

Under the new dental contractual arrangements, introduced on 1 April 2006, patients do not have to be registered with an NHS dentist to receive NHS care. The closest equivalent measure to 'registration' is the number of patients receiving NHS dental services ('patients seen') over a 24-month period. However, this is not directly comparable to the registration data for earlier years.

The number of patients seen in the previous 24 months in England, as at quarterly intervals, from 31 March 2006 to 30 June 2008 is available in Table D3 of Annex 3 of the "NHS Dental Statistics, Q1 2008-09" report. Table D4 contains information on the numbers of patients seen as a percentage of the population. Information is provided by PCT and SHA.

This report, published on 27 November 2008, has been placed in the Library and is also available on the NHS Information Centre website at:

www.ic.nhs.uk/pubs/dentalstats0809q1

The importance of developing dental services to this Government are reiterated in the 2009-10 Operating Framework published on 9 December 2008, which places a priority on PCTs to develop dental services in order to provide access to anyone who seeks help in accessing services. This is being supported by extra resources—an 11 per cent. uplift in our dental funding allocations for the current year 2008-09, and a further 8.5 per cent. uplift for 2009-10 announced in the Operating Framework, which will take the total central allocation to £2,257 million (net of patient charge income).

Euthanasia

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received since July 2008 from (a) doctors, (b) nurses and (c) other health care professionals in (i) support of and (ii) opposition to (A) assisted suicide and (B) voluntary euthanasia; and if he will make a statement. [242687]

Phil Hope: The Department has received 41 letters and e-mails about assisted suicide and voluntary euthanasia expressing a range of views and opinions. Correspondents do not necessarily include details of their profession.

Health Services: Freedom of Information

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) name and (b) address of each regional public health observatory is; and whether these bodies are classified as public authorities for the purposes of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [245969]

Dawn Primarolo: Public health observatories (PHOs) are hosted by a variety of organisations including strategic health authorities (SHAs), primary care trusts (PCTs) and universities. As such, PHOs are obliged to comply with the freedom of information (FOI) arrangements within those organisations.

The names and addresses of each of the nine public health observatory in England are given as follows:

Health Services: Human Trafficking

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the eligibility requirements are for victims of human trafficking to be granted access to safe accommodation funded by the Government. [241543]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

To qualify for safe accommodation under the Government-funded Poppy project individuals must be over 18 years old, trafficked into the United Kingdom and sexual exploited in England and Wales. Priority for accommodation is given to individuals that have experienced exploitation in the immediate three months prior to referral. This year we also piloted support provisions for victims of trafficking for forced labour and domestic servitude.

We ratified the Council of Europe convention on action against trafficking in human beings on 17 December 2008. This will require us to have minimum levels of support for all identified victims of human trafficking by spring 2009. We are currently tendering for a national support model for victims of human trafficking for sexual exploitation and domestic servitude, as they share similar high-level support needs. We are also working with the United Kingdom Human Trafficking Centre to develop support services for victims trafficked into forced labour.

Health Visitors

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health visitors (a) were recruited, (b) retired from work and (c) finished work for a reason other than retirement in the last year for which information is available. [244322]

Ann Keen: Accurate figures for the number of health visitors who were recruited, retired from work and finished work for a reason other than retirement are not collected centrally.

Heart Disease

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department holds on the stage at which chronic obstructive pulmonary disorder is diagnosed in the UK; and what information it holds on the stage of diagnosis in other EU countries for benchmarking purposes. [245770]

Ann Keen: According to the Quality and Outcome Framework there are around 800,000 people who have been diagnosed with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) in the United Kingdom. An independent study, based on the data from the Health Survey for England 2001, identified that spirometrically defined COPD is present in 13 per cent. of the population over 35 years in the U.K., but 80 per cent. of cases are undiagnosed. Even in moderate to severe disease less than half had a prior diagnosis[1].

Data are not available on the disease severity, or on stage of diagnosis in other European countries.

Independent Reconfiguration Panel

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions he has sought the advice of the Independent Reconfiguration Panel in relation to local (a) maternity and (b) accident and emergency services. [246055]

Ann Keen: Of the 14 full reviews that the Independent Reconfiguration Panel has conducted at the request of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, eight have included consideration of maternity services and included consideration of accident and emergency services.

Influenza

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 14 July 2008, Official Report, columns 203-4W, on influenza, whether plans for separate antiviral distribution channels to reach (a) hard-to-reach groups and (b) others for whom the Flu Line will not be suited have now been developed; how he defines (i) hard-to-reach groups and (ii) others for whom the Flu Line will not be suited; and if he will make a statement. [245504]

Dawn Primarolo: Options are being developed in order to assist people through the process of using the Flu Line and also to support those people who are not able to able to use the standard process.

Examples of groups of people we have considered are:

those who may not have access to technology to use the Flu Line; people in enclosed institutions (for example prisons, care homes);

those who may have complications which mean that they are not able to use the Flu Line; and those who are unable to provide a means of identification to use as a unique identifier for the flu line system.

Influenza: Vaccination

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the cost-benefit analysis of the vaccination of pregnant women against seasonal influenza referred to in the minutes of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation's meeting of 14 February 2007; [245636]

(2) when the Health Protection Agency will complete its work examining the impact of influenza on pregnant women referred to in the minutes of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation's meeting of 14 February 2007; whether he intends to place a copy of the work in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [245637]

Dawn Primarolo: At the 14 February 2007 meeting the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) was informed of a preliminary cost benefit analysis of the vaccination of pregnant women being undertaken by the Department. This analysis was not presented at the meeting because further data were required before a decision could be made. The preliminary analysis carried out by Departmental analysts has been placed in the Library.

Following this preliminary analysis, the Health Protection Agency (HPA) was commissioned by the Department to collect further information on the impact of influenza on pregnant women. This work is ongoing and the JCVI's influenza subgroup is being kept up to date on its progress.

Lithium

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of potential links between the use of the mood-stabiliser lithium and increased mitochondrial damage; and if he will make a statement. [246306]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department has not made or commissioned such an assessment.

Lung Spirometry

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will include lung spirometry testing in the health MOT screening programme. [245971]

Ann Keen: The purpose of the vascular check programme, is to identify the risk of coronary heart disease, stroke, diabetes and kidney disease, and for this risk to managed by appropriate follow up. The parameters and tests used in a vascular check include blood pressure, cholesterol and body mass index (BMI) and are based on economic modelling undertaken by the Department to help ensure the most clinically effective and cost-effective format for the checks. However, we will keep the components of the vascular health check under review as new evidence emerges in future.

Maternity Matters Implementation Group

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the role of the Maternity Matters Implementation Group in his Department is; [245744]

(2) how his Department plans to meet the commitment to enable all women to have choice over where and how they have their baby by 2009. [245745]

Ann Keen: In April 2007 the Department published "Maternity Matters: Choice, access and continuity of care in a safe service", which focuses on improving the quality of care and ensuring women have a range of choices which will make it easier for them to access maternity services. A Maternity Matters Implementation Group was established to support early joint work on implementation between the Department and the national health service. Since then, each strategic health authority has developed its vision for services for maternity and the new born as part of the NHS Next Stage Review, and work on implementation is now being taken forward on a wider front.

Maternity services are once again included in the top clinical priorities highlighted in the NHS Operating Framework for 2009-10, backed by increased investment and a planned increase in the number of midwives.

Mental Health Services

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department plans to issue to primary care trusts on responsible commissioning of independent mental health advocates services; and when guidance will be issued. [245946]

Phil Hope: Comprehensive guidance for primary care trusts on commissioning independent mental health advocate (IMHA) services was published on 18 December 2008. The guide outlines the statutory IMHA role, and discusses good practice for IMHA services and recommended commissioning processes. A copy of the guidance has been placed in the Library. The guidance is also available on the National Institute for Mental Health in England's website at:

http://mhact.csip.org.uk/.

Mental Health Services: Young People

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made on the 17 capital funded projects designed to help eliminate the inappropriate use of adult psychiatric wards for children and young people. [245751]

Ann Keen: The Government provided £31 million capital funding in 2007-08 to 17 projects. These projects were designed to provide 59 new beds, 45 beds relocated to purpose built facilities, and 52 beds in refurbished facilities.

A review of the progress made by the projects is currently under way.

The latest available figures for July to September 2008 show only four bed days for under-16s on adult psychiatric wards.

National Institute for Health Research Faculty

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the funding sources of the National Institute for Health Research Faculty; and if he will make a statement. [245769]

Dawn Primarolo: Members of the faculty of the National Institute for Health Research (NIHR) are national health service or university employed researchers whose salaries are funded, in part or in whole, by the NIHR or the Department's policy research programme. The funding may come from a range of NIHR sources including NIHR projects, programmes, units, centres and research networks.

As well as attracting support form from the NIHR, members of the faculty may also be funded from other sources, including the research councils, charities, industry, and other Government Departments.

The principal source of funding for the faculty's capacity and capability programmes is the NIHR budget.

NHS Early Years LifeCheck

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the pilot of the NHS Early Years LifeCheck; and if he will make a statement. [245754]

Ann Keen: The NHS Early Years LifeCheck online service was piloted in selected Sure Start children's centres during spring 2008. After considering recommendations from the professional evaluation of the pilots, a revised version was launched in the 83 Community for Health spearhead and other deprived local authority areas in October 2008.

NHS: Drugs

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the answer of 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 926W, on NHS: drugs, if he will place in the Library copies of all submissions made to Professor Mike Richards' review reported on in "Improving access to medicines for NHS patients". [245649]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 24 November 2008, Official Report, column 926W.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the number of adverse reactions from medicinal drugs in each of the last three years. [246156]

Dawn Primarolo: Reports of suspected adverse drug reactions (ADRs) are collected by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) and Commission for Human Medicines through the spontaneous reporting scheme; the Yellow Card scheme. The Yellow Card scheme allows health professionals and patients to report suspected ADRs on a voluntary basis. In addition, there is a legal requirement for companies to report suspected ADRs to their drugs. The scheme collects suspected ADR reports from across the whole United Kingdom and includes all medicines, including prescription only medicines, pharmacy medicines and general sales. Reports are also received for herbal medicines and other unlicensed medicines.

The following table shows the number of suspected ADRs received by the MHRA between 2005 and 2007.

Year received by MHRA	Total number of spontaneous UK suspected ADR reports received (including company ADR reports)
2005	21,924
2006	22,016
2007	21,765

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department issues to prescribers on special medicines. [246355]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department has not issued guidance on this subject.

NHS: Manpower

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were employed in the NHS in April 2008. [245765]

Ann Keen: The national work force census shows that there were 1,331,109 people employed in the national health service as at 30 September 2007. The following table shows the breakdown of staff groups. The information is available on the NHS Information Centre for Health and Social Care website at:

www.ic.nhs.uk

[2] GP data as at 1 C.
[3] Nursing and midwifery figures exclude students on training courses leading to a first qualification as a nurse or midwife.
[4] Headcount practice nurse figures are estimated for 1998 and 1999 based on the 1997 FTE to headcount ratio.
[5] To make the census data comparable with the Review Body for Nursing Staff and Other Health Professionals definitions, qualified Allied Health Professionals (AHPs) now include Speech and Language Therapists (previously these were included in Other Qualified ST and T staff).
For comparability, historical data has been reassigned to match the revised definition. The number of AHPs will not match those published in previous years.
In 2006, ambulance staff were collected under new, more detailed, occupation codes. As a result, qualified totals and support to ambulance staff totals are not directly comparable with previous years.
Enhanced validation processes have led to the removal of duplicate records from the non-medical census (from 2006 onwards).
Note:
Although percentages were small (less than 1 per cent.), comparisons with years prior to this need to be treated with caution. This only effects headcount.

NHS: Standards

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what standards of accreditation are required by NHS trusts of laboratories testing products for use in NHS hospitals; what powers his Department has to enforce those standards; and if he will make a statement. [246326]

Dawn Primarolo: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) licences facilities that manufacture, assemble and/or import medicinal products for human use. The holder of a manufacturer's licence may use a contract laboratory approved by MHRA for the testing of their medicinal products.

A quality control laboratory, which is performing analysis of medicinal products for a licensed manufacturer and which is named by the holder on their licence, is required to comply with European Union guidelines for Good Manufacturing Practice (GMP) and is inspected by MHRA against these requirements on a routine basis.

The requirement for a manufacturer's licence and compliance with GMP is enforced by MHRA, acting on behalf of the licensing authority, through the Medicines Act 1968 and its supporting regulations.

A licence is not required for preparation of medicinal products where this is carried out solely for retail sale or supply, by or under the supervision of a pharmacist in a registered pharmacy or hospital. However, registered pharmacists and pharmacy technicians are bound by the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain's "Code of Ethics for pharmacists and pharmacy technicians" and the supporting professional standards.

Patients: Safety

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were harmed as a result of an error or missed diagnosis in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) Tees Valley district and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency in the last 12 months. [245807]

Ann Keen: For the period from July 2007 to June 2008, the National Patient Safety Agency received 2,300 reports where patients were harmed due to patient safety incidents classified as diagnostic delay, failure or error. Ninety-nine of these incidents were reported from the North East Strategic Health Authority. Reporting and learning data are collected on the basis of service providers. It is therefore not possible to provide a breakdown of data to constituency level.

People Matters Executive Group

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions the People Matters Executive Group has met. [245766]

Ann Keen: The People Matters Executive Group has met 13 times since it was created in November 2007.

Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how sufficient stocks of medicines to meet patient demand will be ensured when the new pharmaceutical price regulation scheme is implemented; [246793]

(2) whether his Department has agreed with medicines manufacturers stock compensation arrangements for pharmaceutical wholesalers when the new pharmaceutical price regulation scheme is implemented; [246794]

(3) whether his Department has conducted an assessment of the effects of the new pharmaceutical price regulation scheme on the availability of medicines. [246795]

Dawn Primarolo: Implementation of the price cut has been delayed until February 2009 to allow further time for arrangements to be made and to avoid coinciding with the Christmas period. Stock compensation is a matter for pharmaceutical companies and wholesalers to agree. The Department is in regular contact with pharmaceutical companies and wholesalers and does not expect that the implementation of the 2009 pharmaceutical price regulation scheme will lead to shortages of medicines.

However, medicine supply problems can and do occur for a number of reasons and often it is not possible to predict them. The Department of Health and the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry have published joint best practice guidelines in order to help manage shortages as and when they arise. These guidelines give guidance to companies on what to do in the event of a shortage and recommend that companies communicate with the Department as soon as possible about impending shortages that are likely to have an impact on patient care.

Quality and Outcomes Framework

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the difference between the lowest and highest rate of exception reporting for quality outcomes framework indicator CHD 08 was in each year since the introduction of the framework. [245881]

Ann Keen: The lowest and highest rates of exception reporting for the Quality and Outcomes Framework indicator Coronary Heart Disease 08, for each year of the framework[1] is as follows:

2007-08: 0 per cent. and 100 per cent.

2006-07: 0 per cent. and 100 per cent.

2005-06: 0 per cent. and 75 per cent.

Regional Innovation Hubs

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding is given from the public purse to regional innovation hubs in the last year for which figures are available. [245968]

Dawn Primarolo: The innovation hubs have historically received funding from four different sources.

Funding for this financial year (2008-09) is as follows:

The Department—circa £4.7 million

The NHS Institute for Innovation and Improvement (NHSI) channels Department-derived funds to the innovation hubs, under the terms of an annual service level agreement between the hubs and the National Innovation Centre (as the agent of the NHSI). The amount allocated to each individual hub is on a capitation basis.

Department for Trade and Industry (now Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills) Public Sector Research Establishment (PSRE)—£2.7 million

On behalf of their trust membership, each hub has the opportunity to competitively bid for funding for specific "pump-priming" activities in the region. Examples of "pump-priming" are to build local networks or conduct informative workshops to assist regional innovators, basically to initiate some activity, which would otherwise not occur. PSRE funding is also contingent on the hubs demonstrating that they have a source of matched funding.

Local regional development agencies (RDAs)—£1.9 million

The RDAs have tapped into the specialist NHS knowledge base of the hubs to effectively use them in what may be described as "the Business Link function for Healthcare" and assist the RDAs in achieving their own targets and objectives.

Other income—circa £2 million

The hubs also received income from other sources, which are generated by their own local activities. Examples of such sources include membership fees, specific consultancy assignments and income revenue from licensing agreements.

Smoking

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken to provide (a) extra support for and (b) incentives to those attempting to give up smoking since the entry into force of the smoking ban. [245862]

Dawn Primarolo: A wide of range of support is available from the national health service for smokers who wish to give up smoking. Options are available on the NHS 'Go Smokefree' website at:

www.nhs.uk/gosmokefree or from the NHS Smoking Helpline on 0800 169 0169.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible for the provision of NHS local stop smoking services. Within communities, PCTs make free support available in a range of innovative ways to support smokers who wish to quit.

Smokers who use NHS support to quit are up to four times more likely to do so successfully than those trying to go it alone "cold turkey".

The Department also has a marketing strategy aimed at encouraging smokers to quit, particularly with the support of the NHS.

Sunbeds

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research he has commissioned on the regulation of the sunbed industry in other countries for benchmarking purposes in the last two years; [246160]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on (a) the use of sunbeds in the health and fitness facilities operated by local authorities and (b) the risks associated with such use; [246161]

(3) what representations he has received on (a) the health risks associated with sunbeds and (b) the regulation of the sunbed industry in the last 12 months; [246162]

(4) what recent meetings his Department has had with representatives of the sunbed industry on options for sunbed regulation; [246163]

(5) what options are being considered for regulation of (a) the sunbed industry and (b) sunbed usage by persons under 18 years of age; [246209]

(6) what progress has been made since the Cancer Reform Strategy was published in December 2007 on (a) reviewing options for regulation of the sunbed industry, (b) gathering information on the number and distribution of sunbeds and (c) gathering information on the scale of sunbed use by minors. [246210]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department regularly receives Parliamentary questions and correspondence from hon. Members and other interested parties regarding the health risks of sunbeds including, in some cases, requests for the regulation of the sunbed industry. Such requests are considered in the context of the ongoing review of options for possible regulation of the sunbed industry, including access to sunbeds by young people. The review has been broad-ranging in its scope and, as part of it, officials from the Department and other Government departments, including Communities and Local Government, have discussed issues concerning the use of sunbeds in different types of facilities and settings.

Since the publication of the Cancer Reform Strategy, the Department has also worked with the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and other stakeholders (including some representatives of the sunbed industry) on the HSE's review of its guidance for users and operators of sunbeds. HSE expect to publish the guidance and a summary of the consultation responses early in 2009.

In conducting its review of options, the Department has drawn on a range of evidence from this country and abroad. For example, in 2007, the Welsh Assembly Government, supported by the Scottish Executive, National Health Service NI and the English Department of Health have requested that the Comnittee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment update their advice regarding the safety of ultra violet sunbeds in the United Kingdom. A report is expected in 2009.

The Department has also taken steps to gather further information on the number and distribution of sunbeds, and on the extent of sunbed use by young people, as mentioned in the Cancer Reform Strategy.

All of these will inform considerations on options for the possible regulation of the sunbed industry.

Tobacco: Public Consultation

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the responses to his Department's consultation on the future of tobacco control were from (a) retailers or shop owners and (b) organisations funded wholly or in part by his Department. [245508]

Dawn Primarolo: The Department received 10,586 responses from small retailers (including pre-prepared postcards or emails made available to respondents by third parties), 11 responses from larger retailers and 21 responses from retail industry representative organisations, including trade associations.

The Department received seven responses from organisations that receive funding directly from the Department for programmes of work related to smoking. Identification of respondents that receive funding from the Department for other purposes could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

The Department received 85,565 responses from members of the public (including pre-prepared postcards or emails made available to respondents by third parties).

Tobacco: Regulation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the address of each regional tobacco control manager is; and whether they are classified as public authorities for the purposes of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [245970]

Dawn Primarolo: The addresses of Regional Tobacco Policy Managers (RTPMs) are as follows and are published on the Department's website at:

Tuberculosis: Hertfordshire

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many instances of tuberculosis have been recorded in (a) Hemel Hempstead and (b) Hertfordshire in each quarter of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [246562]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the format requested. However, the following table gives the number of Tuberculosis cases in the area of Dacorum borough council as the closest measure for Hemel Hempstead, and for Hertfordshire, for the calendar years 2000-06.

Cases of Tuberculosis

Area	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006
Hertfordshire	55	60	60	53	69	111	96
Dacorum	<5	0	6	<5	5	7	7

Notes:
1. Hertforshire comprises: Broxbourne, Dacorum, East Hertfordshire, Hertsmere, North Hertfordshire, St Albans, Stevenage, Three Rivers, Watford, and Welwyn Hatfield Local Authorities
2. Data by local authority are not yet available for 2007
3. Data are not provided by quarters because of the risk of deductive disclosure due to low numbers.
4. In years when there have been less than five cases, the exact number of cases is not given because of the risk of deductive disclosure.

User-led Organisations

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many user-led organisations have become user-led action and learning sites; [245733]

(2) how much has been allocated to the User-led Organisations Development Fund for 2008-09; and if he will make a statement. [245734]

Phil Hope: £750,000 of the User-led Organisations Development Fund was made available in 2007-08 to support 12 user-led action and learning sites from March 2008. Over 100 user-led organisations applied.

A further £900,000 for the User-led Organisations Development Fund has been made available in 2008-09 to support the development of up to 14 additional action and learning sites from January 2009. Over 70 organisations applied. We will announce shortly how that funding is to be allocated.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Advisory Board on Naturalisation and Integration

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff the Advisory Board on Naturalisation and Integration employs; what its running costs are expected to be in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11; and if she will make a statement. [245690]

Mr. Woolas: The Advisory Board on Naturalisation and Integration does not employ any staff. Until it ceased to operate on 20 November 2008, two UK Border Agency staff provided Secretariat support to the Board.

It is not possible to separately identify its running costs for 2008-09 in the UK Border Agency accounts. As it has now ceased to operate, its running costs in 2009-10 and 2010-11 will be nil.

Alcohol Disorder Zones

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many local authorities have contacted her Department with enquiries concerning the establishment of alcohol disorder zones. [246844]

Mr. Alan Campbell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on the 18 December 2008, Official Report, column 1067W.

Alcoholic Drinks: Antisocial Behaviour

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been convicted of the offence of consuming alcohol in a designated place in each of the last five years. [246860]

Mr. Alan Campbell [holding answer 12 January 2009]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 16 December 2008, Official Report, columns 713-14W.

Alcoholic Drinks: Misuse

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will place in the Library a copy of the provisional findings of the evaluation of alcohol arrest referral pilots. [245943]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Home Office will not be releasing interim findings as the intention is to publish a final research report after the evaluation has been completed. The evaluation runs until July 2009.

Alcoholic Drinks: Thames Valley

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) cautions and (b) arrests for alcohol-related offences there were in the Thames Valley police force area in each of the last 20 quarters for which records are available, broken down by basic command unit. [244434]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The number of offenders issued with a caution for alcohol related offences in the Thames Valley police force area, from 2003 to 2007 (latest available), by quarter, are given in the table.

In addition under the penalty notice for disorder scheme implemented across all 43 forces in England and Wales in 2004, fixed penalties of £50 or £80 can be issued by the police for a specified range of alcohol-related offences. The numbers issued in Thames Valley from 2004 to 2007 by quarter are also given in the table.

Information on court proceedings are centrally collected only for each police force area, therefore data by basic command unit cannot be supplied.

The information requested on arrests is not collected centrally.

The arrests collection held by the Home Office covers arrests for recorded crime (notifiable offences) only, broken down at a main offence group level, covering categories such as violence against the person and robbery.

The alcohol related offences presented in the table are not notifiable offences and do not form part of the arrests collection.

Number of offenders cautioned[1] for alcohol related offences[2] and issued with penalty notices for disorder (PNDs)[3] in the Thames Valley police force area, broken down by quarter, 2003 to 2007[4, 5]

[1] From 1 June 2000 the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 came into force nationally and removed the use of cautions for persons under 18 and replaced them with reprimands and final warnings. These figures have been included in the totals.
[2] Includes offences of;
(a) Drunkenness simple.
(b) Drunkenness with aggravation.
(c) Offences by licensed person.
(d) Other offences against intoxicating liquor laws.
(e) Driving after consuming alcohol or taking drugs.
[3] Includes all alcohol related penalty notices for disorder;
Drunk and disorderly
Selling alcohol to person under 18
Selling alcohol to a person who is drunk
Supplying alcohol to a person under 18
Purchasing alcohol for person under 18 in licensed premises
Purchasing alcohol for person under 18 for consumption in a bar in licensed premises
Delivering alcohol to person under 18 or allowing such delivery
Being drunk in a highway, other public place or licensed premises
Consuming alcohol in designated public place
Consuming alcohol by person under 18 in licensed premises
Allowing consumption of alcohol by person under 18 in licensed premises
Purchase of alcohol by a person under 18,
[4] The cautions statistics relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been cautioned for two or more offences at the same time the principal offence is the more serious offence.
[5] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Alcoholic Drinks: Young People

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been convicted of an offence under section 147A(1)(a) of the Licensing Act 2003 in each year since the offence was created. [246862]

Mr. Alan Campbell [holding answer 12 January 2009]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 15 December 2008, Official Report, column 505W.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the use of (a) anti-social behaviour orders, (b) acceptable behaviour contracts and (c) individual support orders since the publication of the National Audit Office's report on anti-social behaviour, HC (2006-07) 99, in December 2006. [246851]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Home Office has commissioned research to examine regional variations in the use of antisocial behaviour interventions. This is the first step to developing further work into the comparative effectiveness of different approaches to tackling antisocial behaviour. The first stage of the research into regional variations was completed in summer 2008. We anticipate that the second stage will be completed by late 2009.

Antisocial Behaviour

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the budget for her Department's Antisocial Behaviour Action Line is; how many people work on running the action line; and how many calls it received in the last 12 months. [245954]

Mr. Alan Campbell: For the financial year 2008-09, the budget for the Home Office's Antisocial Behaviour Actionline is £400,000. There are five people directly employed to run the service and during the period November 2007 to November 2008, the Actionline received 3,987 calls, 1,467 emails and the website received 335,450 visitors.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits the Effective Practice database on the crime reduction website received in each of the last 12 months. [245955]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Effective Practice Database was designed in response to community safety practitioner demand for a single place to collate evaluated crime reduction initiatives at a national level. The purpose of the database is to house case studies of local initiatives which have been evaluated to show a successful impact on crime or related issues of community safety in an easily searchable format. The link to the database is:

www.crimereduction.homeoffice.gov.uk/effectivepracticedatabase/.

The database went live on the Crime Reduction website on 23 January 2008 and the stats package used to compile these data (Sitestat) did not go live until 11 February 2008. There is, therefore, a two week gap in the data between Effective Practice Database go live date and Sitestat data availability and as such a breakdown of monthly figures is only available from February to November 2008.

The data show the number of visits made to the database, i.e. the number of individuals who accessed the Effective Practice Database home page each month; it is not a count of page views.

Assets Recovery Agency

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate she has made of the value of the assets involved in those cases adopted by the Assets Recovery Agency in (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05, (c) 2005-06, (d) 2006-07 and (e) 2007-08; [243783]

(2) how many cases were referred to the Assets Recovery Agency by other law enforcement agencies for criminal confiscation in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05, (iii) 2005-06, (iv) 2006-07 and (v) 2007-08; and how many such cases were referred for civil recovery and taxation investigation in (A) Northern Ireland and (B) the UK in each such year; [243784]

(3) how many cases the Assets Recovery Agency adopted for criminal confiscation action in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05, (iii) 2005-06, (iv) 2006-07 and (v) 2007-08. [243785]

(4) how many cases the Assets Recovery Agency concluded in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05, (iii) 2005-06, (iv) 2006-07 and (v) 2007-08; [243786]

(5) what the estimated value of the assets involved in cases concluded by the Assets Recovery Agency was in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05, (iii) 2005-06, (iv) 2006-07 and (v) 2007-08; [243787]

(6) what estimate she has made of the value of the assets involved in cases adopted by the Assets Recovery Agency for civil or tax investigation in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05, (iii) 2005-06, (iv) 2006-07 and (v) 2007-08; [243788]

(7) how many cases were adopted by the Assets Recovery Agency for civil or tax investigation in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05, (iii) 2005-06, (iv) 2006-07 and (v) 2007-08. [243789]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Information on (a) cases referred to and adopted by the Assets Recovery Agency and the value of assets involved; and on (b) cases concluded and the value of assets involved was included in the Annual Reports of the Agency, which were laid before Parliament, and in the relevant Annual Resource Accounts.

Some Northern Ireland-specific data can be found in the Northern Ireland Organised Crime Task Force's (OCTF) Annual Report and Threat Assessment for the requisite year, which are available from the OCTF website: www.octf.gov.uk or from the Northern Ireland Office website: www.nio.gov.uk

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were under investigation by the Assets Recovery Agency at 31 March 2008 with a view to criminal confiscation where no action had been taken to restrain assets; what the estimated value of the assets under investigation in those cases was; how many of those investigations were subsequently terminated by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency without court action; what the reasons for termination was in each case; what the estimated value of the assets in the cases terminated was; and what steps have been taken to ensure that the relevant assets do not remain in the hands of criminals in those cases terminated without court action in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK. [243842]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Data relating to the transfer of cases from the Assets Recovery Agency to the Serous Organised Crime Agency were not collated to this level of detail, as there would be no operational value and some cost in doing so. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost (through manual collation from case files).

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) financial investigators and (b) lawyers were employed in the Assets Recovery Agency in (i) the UK and (ii) Northern Ireland on 31 March 2008. [243924]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Assets Recovery Agency employed 53 financial investigators on 31 March 2008, of which 16 were in Northern Ireland. On the same date it employed 27 lawyers of which seven were in Northern Ireland.

Assets Recovery Agency: Northern Ireland

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by the Assets Recovery Agency in pursuing its work in Northern Ireland in 2007-08. [243925]

Mr. Alan Campbell: This information is not available.

Asylum

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the additional costs to local authorities of decisions made under the Case Resolution programme for asylum legacy cases which have resulted in the granting of leave to remain. [243112]

Mr. Woolas: I am in a position to report that following Ms Lin Homer's appearance before the Home Affairs Select Committee on 20 November 2008, she wrote to the committee on 8 December 2008 with an update on the legacy programme. This contains the latest position on agreed payments to local authorities.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the number of asylum-seekers (a) in total and (b) who will enter and remain in the UK in each year to 2018. [244496]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is as follows:

(a) People leave their countries of origin and claim asylum elsewhere in response to world events. Where those events will be and the countries to which people flee, are inherently unpredictable. Estimates of the total number of asylum seekers are thus not available.

(b) The proportion of those who do claim in the UK who are subsequently granted leave to remain here also depends on the current world situation at the time of claim. All asylum claims are considered without prejudice on their individual merits in accordance with the UK's obligations under the 1951 UN Convention and the 1967 Protocol. The estimates of the number of asylum seekers who enter and remain in the UK in each year to 2018 is subject to the same level of unpredictability and are thus also unavailable.

Asylum: Deportation

Mr. Goodwill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what security checks are carried out on (a) external companies contracted and (b) personnel employed to escort refugees being deported. [244686]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 18 December 2008]: The contract for the escorting of individuals being removed or deported from the UK is operated by Group 4 Securicor (G4S), this company would have been subject to commercial and credit checks when tendering for the contract.

The contractors employ Detainee Custody Officers (DCOs) to carry out the duties of escorting those people being removed from the UK, all individuals seeking employment as a DCOs are required to undergo counter-terrorist checks and criminal record checks to enhanced level, and before they can commence employment they have to be accredited by the UK Border Agency Detention Services Accreditation Team.

Applicants must pass all the security checks before they can be accredited.

British Nationality: Greater London

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many residents of (a) Bexleyheath and Crayford constituency, (b) the London Borough of Bexley and (c) London gained full citizenship in each year since 1997. [245461]

Mr. Woolas: Specific data on the number of residents of Bexleyheath and Crayford constituency who have acquired British citizenship since 1997 are not available.

The relevant available data refers to the number of people attending British citizenship ceremonies. Those attending such ceremonies may not necessarily be resident within the area of the authority conducting the ceremony. Such data are only captured for citizenship ceremonies attended since 2005 as the requirement to attend such a ceremony was not introduced in law until 2004. It is not possible to separately identify parliamentary constituencies within data because information regarding location is based on the reporting authority.

Ceremonies are organised by county or local authorities for successful applicants over 18 years of age. The data therefore exclude some grants to applicants under 18.

Data relating to the number of British citizenship ceremonies attended in Greater London and the London borough of Bexley between 2005 and 2007 are shown in the table.

National Statistics on persons granted British citizenship are published annually in Home Office Statistical Bulletins. The latest publication may be obtained from the Library of the House and from the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs08/hosb0508.pdf

Data regarding British citizenship decisions and ceremonies attended in 2008 are scheduled for publication in May 2009.

Cannabis

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions she has had with ministerial colleagues and officials in the Ministry of Justice on implementing the proposed three strikes enforcement regime for cannabis possession pursuant to its re-classification as a Class B drug; and if she will make a statement. [246845]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Home Office Ministers and officials have had discussions with their counterparts in the Ministry of Justice throughout the development of the policing response, proposed by the Association of Chief Police Officers, to the possession of cannabis as a Class B drug. Discussions have included the extension of the Penalty Notice for Disorder Scheme to cannabis possession as part of the enforcement regime in respect of which the Ministry of Justice has lead responsibility.

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will issue new guidance to police on the issuing of warnings, cautions and charging for possession of cannabis following its re-classification as a Class B drug. [246846]

Mr. Alan Campbell: To accompany the reclassification of cannabis to a Class B drug under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 the Association of Chief Police Officers will issue revised guidance for a consistent national approach to the policing of the possession of cannabis in England and Wales.

Community Relations

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether she has plans to review her Department's policy on protective marking and vetting of documents in response to paragraph 77 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; and if she will make a statement; [246227]

(2) what steps her Department plans to take on the dissemination of information and academic research on the causes of violent extremism following the Audit Commission's report on Preventing Violent Extremism of November 2008; and what steps she plans to take to provide such information to local partnerships; [245501]

(3) what plans her Department has to develop National Indicator 35 into a measure of the achievement of outcomes as recommended by the Audit Commission in its November 2008 report, "Preventing Violent Extremism"; [245502]

(4) what steps her Department plans to take to provide more information identifying factors that make some people vulnerable to becoming involved in violent extremism, as noted on page 23 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise; and if she will make a statement; [246200]

(5) whether she has plans to develop a suite of information sources to be used at local level in relation to counter-terrorism, in response to paragraph 60 of the Audit Commission's November 2008 report Preventing Violent Extremism: Learning and Development Exercise. [246228]

Mr. Khan: I have been asked to reply.

A number of reviews took place over the summer which sought to draw out learning and emerging practice on the delivery of activity to prevent violent extremism, including the joint Audit Commission and HMIC Learning and Development Exercise (LDE). Though each review had a different focus, together they provide a useful package of learning material upon which local partners can draw and which will inform the Government's approach to Prevent.

There are a number of common themes which run through all these reviews. Some of these require action from national Government, some from local partners and many from both. We have ensured wide distribution of the LDE report to enable local partners to benefit directly from the important learning it contains in taking forward their local Prevent response. We published "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" on 10 December, which sets out the key strands of learning from the reviews and work already underway to address these key themes. We will continue to develop our response to the reviews throughout the year.

I will place a copy of "Delivering Prevent—Responding to Learning" in the Library of the House.

Computers: Crime

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 16 October 2008, Official Report, column 1430W, on computers: crime, when she plans to launch the consultation on plans to extend the application of serious crime prevention orders to offences under the Computer Misuse Act 1990. [246848]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The intention was to launch the consultation in November 2008 but advice is currently being sought as to the necessity of this consultation, as there is a view that the Act already allows offences under the Computer Misuse Act to be covered. I will write to the hon. Member in January to update you on the outcome of these findings.

Crime: Business

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate her Department has made of the cost of crime to business. [245794]

Mr. Alan Campbell: There are currently no year-on-year on estimates of the costs of crime to business.

The Home Office first published estimates of the economic and social costs of crime in 2000. The research estimated the cost of:

crime against individuals and households commercial and public sector victimisation fraud and forgery
traffic and motoring/other non-notifiable offences and can be found at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs/hors217.pdf

There is a further Home Office publication in 2002-03 focusing on Crime against Retail and Manufacturing Premises and can be found at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/rdsolr3705.pdf

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans her Department has for future staffing levels in the Business Crime Team; [245795]

(2) how many people within her Department work exclusively on tackling business crime. [245796]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Many different parts of the Home Office work to tackle crimes that affect business, such as fraud, e-crime, retail theft, criminal damage and alcohol-related crime. Some of these issues affect both businesses and general members of the public and so officials in these teams cannot be said to be working exclusively on business crime, although they will be contributing directly to its reduction. A business crime team did work exclusively on some very specific aspects of business crime, mainly shop theft. This work is now to be included in a new volume crime team in the Department. The scope of this new team will be broader than that of the business crime team, and include crimes such as burglary and vehicle crime which also affect businesses. This will enable a fuller and more efficient response to volume crimes committed against business to be developed. The volume crime team will also support a more responsive approach, being able to focus more flexibly on critical volume crime issues, including those affecting business, as and when necessary.

Crime: Closed Circuit Television

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the implementation of the National Closed Circuit Television Strategy; and if she will make a statement. [245953]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Following publication of the National CCTV Strategy in October 2007, good progress has been made in moving towards implementing the 44 recommendations.

The National Policing Improvement Agency took over responsibility for the Strategy in the Spring of 2008. A National CCTV Strategy Programme Board has been established and has delivered three of these recommendations. These include:

1. Seeking to influence national and international CCTV standards

2. Clarifying the requirements in relation to operator licensing by the Security Industry Association (SIA)

3. Developing protocols allowing the use of Airwave radio in town centre CCTV control rooms and the sharing of intelligence between the police and town centre CCTV monitoring staff.

There is an intention to progress a further 24 recommendations during the next 12 months with the remaining 17 being progressed through 2010 and 2011. This will continue to develop and improve the effectiveness of the CCTV currently in use in England and Wales. On 19 November 2008 at the House of Lords Constitutional Committee hearing we confirmed the Government's commitment to implementing recommendation 1, that there should be a national body to oversee CCTV. The Programme Board is now preparing proposals including a timetable, for the establishment of this body.

The continued development of CCTV as both a deterrent for criminal activity and protection for the public will add to the confidence and safety of our communities. A recent report by the Campbell Crime and Justice Group which includes United Kingdom (UK) membership and whose review was part funded by the Home Office, included the observation that CCTV is more effective in reducing crime in the UK than in other countries. The Government support the use of closed circuit television in tackling and reducing crime. CCTV is most effective when used along side other measures.

Crimes of Violence: North West

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recorded incidents of violent crime there were in (a) Stockport Metropolitan Borough, (b) Greater Manchester and (c) the North West in each of the last five years. [246074]

Mr. Alan Campbell: A number of changes have been made to recorded crime in response to suggestions in the two reviews of crime statistics. One such change is that the term 'violent crime' is no longer used in connection with the recorded crime statistics and we now provide figures for violence against the person.

The available information relates to offences recorded by the police and is given in the following table.

Offences of violence against the person recorded by the police, 2003-04 to 2007-08

Number of offences

Area	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07	2007-08
Stockport	4,313	4,427	4,409	4,571	3,727
Greater Manchester	53,972	53,208	52,948	57,051	50,287
North West Region	128,041	143,773	144,309	135,292	119,188

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with how many faith-based organisations her Department has contracts to provide public services. [244839]

Mr. Woolas: In making contracts for the provision of public services, my Department only selects organisations that meet the proper criteria and have the most relevant expertise and experience to offer. The extent to which such organisations are faith-based is not evident in every case. An accurate total or comprehensive list could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Equality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information her Department holds on the (a) sex, (b) ethnicity, (c) age, (d) disability, (e) sexual orientation and (f) religion or belief of its staff; and what assessment she has made of her Department's performance against its targets relating to diversity in its workforce. [246019]

Mr. Woolas: The department publishes annually its employment monitoring report for its workforce covering all the areas in the parliamentary question. Copies of the report can be found at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/aboutus/equalityanddiversity1/staffequalitytargets/?view=Standard

Departmental Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will make it her policy to ensure that those temporary and permanent employees at the same grade in her Department who are paid at an hourly rate are paid at the same rate. [244390]

Mr. Woolas: All staff employed directly by my Department, whether permanent or temporary, are on similar terms and conditions including those which determine their pay.

Deportation

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) immigrants and (b) asylum seekers who have been returned to their country of origin in each of the last five years (i) have had severe health problems, (ii) have had mental illnesses and (iii) were pregnant. [243671]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested could be obtained only by the detailed examination of individual records at disproportionate cost.

Deportation: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals who had no legal basis to remain in the UK and who were normally resident in the Peterborough City Council area have been deported since May 2005; and if she will make a statement. [246150]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 12 January 2009]: The information requested could be obtained only by the detailed examination of individual records at disproportionate cost.

Detention Centres

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of detainees held at Oakington immigration removal centre are eligible for legal aid-funded advice. [245314]

Mr. Malik: I have been asked to reply.

Detainees at Oakington are eligible for legal aid on the same basis as other individuals. Provided their case is within the scope of the legal aid scheme, and they pass the statutory test of means and merits, legal aid will be available. It is not possible to say what percentage of the detainees at Oakington will meet these criteria.

The Legal Services Commission contracts with a single not-for-profit agency to provide on-site legal services at Oakington. Between April and November 2008 (inclusive)—1,448 asylum and 508 non-asylum matters were started for eligible detainees.

In addition on-site legal advice surgeries provide up to 30 minutes advice without reference to means or merits to any individual who does not have a legal adviser

Domestic Violence

Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment she has made of the level of domestic violence in (a) England, (b) Merseyside and (c) Halton. [244207]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The most recent assessment of the level of domestic violence is from the British Crime Survey (BCS) 2007-08 published in the annual 'Crime in England and Wales' statistical bulletin, copies of which are in the House of Commons Library.

The latest figure from the 2007-08 BCS for the number of domestic violence incidents per 10,000 adults in England is 78.

Figures from the BCS for the number of incidents of domestic violence per 10,000 adults in Merseyside or Halton are not reported due to the variability of these figures at police force area level or below.

Domestic Violence: North East

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent steps the Government have taken to prevent domestic violence, with particular reference to the North East. [245870]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Government are committed to tackling and preventing domestic violence. We have a cross-Government National Domestic Violence Delivery plan which provides a strategic framework to address domestic violence to ensure that perpetrators are brought to justice whilst providing the best possible help for victims and their children. The plan ensures agencies work together to identify, track and risk assess domestic violence cases and better share information so that more offenders are brought to justice, victims are protected and better supported; and further violence is prevented.

Initiatives in the North East of England include the expansion of the Specialist Domestic Violence Court programme (SDVC); the roll-out of multi-agency risk assessment conferences (Northumberland and Durham have one MARAC to cover the county area); and supporting the establishment of Independent Domestic Violence Advisers (currently working in all SDVC areas and also Newcastle, South Tyneside and Northumberland). The Government have also supported regional awareness raising events such as the launch of the "Choice" helpline and the "Honour Network" helpline for survivors of "honour" based violence and forced marriage.

Driving Offences: Insurance

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cars were seized for being uninsured in the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available. [245886]

Mr. Alan Campbell [holding answer 12 January 2009]: The police seizure power is in respect of a vehicle being driven by someone who is not insured to drive it, rather than the insurance status of the vehicle itself. 153,822 vehicles were seized under this power in 2007. So far in 2008 returns by police forces indicate that 138,373 vehicles have been seized. This number is likely to rise considerably because not all returns have yet been made and there will be further seizures in the rest of December.

Drug Seizures

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much (a) heroin and (b) crack cocaine has been seized in each of the last 10 years. [245947]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The latest available data on drug seizures are for 2006-07 and can be found in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin series "Seizures of Drugs in England and Wales 2006/07". The quantity of heroin and crack cocaine seized in each of the last 10 years, in England and Wales, is provided in the following table.

Number and quantity[1] of seizures of class A drugs by drug type and year, England and Wales

	Number of seizures and quantity seized Class A (weighted kg)[2]
Drug type	Crack	Heroin
1997	36	539
1998	27	457
1999	41	1,440
2000	26	3,329
2001	55	3,996
2002	54	2,615
2003	251	2,657
2004	133	2,109
2005	149	1,864
2006-07[3,4]	98	1,003

[1] Drugs can be seized in a variety of forms or preparation types. In this table, quantities of drugs have been converted to weights (kg). In order to convert seizures to comparable units, conversion factors are applied to estimate the overall quantity for that drug. New conversion factors were introduced in 2005, in consultation with the Forensic Science Service.

[2] Seizures of unspecified quantities are not included.

[3] Reporting of drugs seizures have been moved to a financial year basis from 2006-07 to be comparable with other crime publications.

[4] Prior to 2006-07 data included seizures made by the National Crime Squad (NCS). This organisation was merged on 1 April 2006 into the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA). SOCA figures are not included due to concerns over double counting. Whereas many joint operations between the NCS and police forces were attributed to the NCS, the majority of SOCA seizures are credited to a local police force when one has been involved.

Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the police forces and HM Revenue and Customs. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Drugs: Prices

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate she has made of the street price of (a) heroin and (b) cocaine. [245948]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Street prices for drugs vary considerably and are dependent on a number of factors, including purity and quality. The following prices are based on data collected from police forces and the Serious Organised Crime Agency:

(a) Heroin - from £25 to £100 per gram, with the most common prices being £40 and £50 per gram.

(b) Cocaine - from £20 to £80 per gram, with the most common price being £40 per gram.

Drugs: Smuggling

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vessels have been intercepted in British waters by the cutter fleet operated by the UK Border Agency in each of the last five years; and what quantity of drugs have been seized in such operations. [245956]

Mr. Woolas: From April 2008 the UK Border Agency took on responsibility for maritime operations, which had previously been undertaken by HM Revenue and Customs and were formerly the responsibility of HM Customs and Excise.

The mobile and flexible cutter fleet, work regularly in support of operations by other law enforcement agencies, in order to target illicit imports of drugs, weapons and other prohibited and restricted goods. Information as to how those vessels have been deployed cannot be disclosed, as this would provide information of value to those seeking to circumvent controls, thereby prejudicing the prevention of crime.

Entry Clearances

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when her Department expects to issue Mr. Emiljano Beqo (FCO number 22920) with a visa via the British Embassy in Athens. [245958]

Mr. Woolas: Visa officials at the British embassy in Athens are in contact with Mr. Beqo and expect to issue him with a visa when he returns from Albania in early January.

Firearms: Crime

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment she has made of the extent to which (a) legally held firearms and (b) illegally held firearms were used to commit crimes in each of the last five years. [244850]

Mr. Alan Campbell: It is not possible to determine how many of the firearms used in recorded crimes are licensed firearms and how many are illegally held. It is not always possible to categorise the type of weapon used in an offence.

Foreign Workers

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 30 October 2008, Official Report, columns 321-22W, on foreign workers: health services, how many economic migrants were working in each occupational category at the latest date for which figures are available. [246061]

Mr. Woolas: The following tables provide information on the number of work permits approved and Worker Registration Scheme certificates issued by occupation category.

Work permit approvals for the period 1 January 2000 to 30 September 2008

Occupation	Total
Acupuncturist	230
Assistant Dentist	655
Assistant Optometrist	5
Biomedical Scientist	785
Chiropodist/Podiatrist	45
Chiropractor	245
Dental Anaesthetist	45
Dental Nurse	380
Dental Surgeon	1,705
Dietician	350
Doctor	19,435
Foundation Programme Doctor	705
Hospital Consultant	690
Medical Practitioner	2,975
Midwife	780
Nurse	178,305
Occupational Therapist	1,680
Optician	735
Other Health/Medical Occupation	60,845
Pharmacist	5,655
Physiotherapist	2,935
Psychiatrist	1,295
Psychologist	375
Radiographer	3,075
Senior Carer	12,465
Senior House Officer	1,045
Social Worker	5,955
Specialist Registrar	1,000
Speech Therapist	440
Total	304,910

Caveat:

Work permit approvals includes all work permit application types—including work permit Extensions, Change of Employment and Technical Changes to existing work permits and therefore does not equate to the number of individuals to whom permits were issued. The figures do not equate to the number of individual nationals because they include those applications approved to extend or amend an existing permit or where the individual has moved to another job with a different employer. Additionally, not all of those who are granted a permit take up the job, some may be refused entry clearance or further leave to remain.

Worker Registration Scheme certificates granted for the period 1 May 2004 to 30 September 2008

Occupation	Total
Alternative/complementary medicine specialist	30
Anaesthetist	170
Care assistants and home carers	22,765
Chiropodist	—

Social Worker	390
Surgeon	75
Technician, medical	360
Ward Sister	15
Warden (care home)	65
Total	28,840

— = Indicates one or two.

Caveats:

1. The figures are for initial applications only; they do not include multiple applications, where an individual is doing more than one job simultaneously nor re-registrations, where an individual has changed employers.
2. Data presented up to the same period as the current published Accession Monitoring report.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to nearest five.
2. Because of rounding figures may not add up to totals shown.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change. The occupational categories used are not compatible with the Standard Occupational Classification.

Former Ministers: Security

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which former Ministers continue to receive security protection; and how much it has cost to provide this protection, broken down by individual former Ministers, in each year since they left office. [243261]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 15 December 2008]: It is our long established policy not to comment on protective security arrangements (and their associated costs) for any individual. This is because to do so could compromise the integrity of those arrangements and affect the security of the individuals concerned.

Genetics: Databases

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if she will bring forward proposals to impose time limits on the retention of people's DNA profiles on the national DNA database related to the seriousness of the offence where convicted; [240930]

(2) if she will bring forward proposals to remove from the national DNA database profiles of people who have not been convicted of an offence. [240931]

Mr. Alan Campbell: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary mentioned the European Court ruling in her speech on 16 December to the Intellect Trade Association dealing with surveillance issues.

We are carefully considering the detail of the judgment in the S and Marper case and its implications. DNA is a prime example where benefits to the criminal justice system and the rights of the individual need to be carefully balanced.

That is why our approach to the European Court's Judgment will be subject to wide consultation this year in a White Paper on Forensics.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will commission research into the proportion of the (a) black and (b) non-black population with DNA samples retained on the national DNA database, and the reasons for any difference in frequency. [242012]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA) has completed Stage 1 Equality Impact Assessments (EIA) of the National DNA Database (NDNAD) and the Association of Chief Police Officers DNA Good Practice Guide to identify any potential adverse effects or any bias contained within DNA sampling guidance or NDNAD processes. Copies of the two Stage 1 assessments have been placed in the Library.

The work undertaken to date on the Stage 1 EIAs suggests that any bias in proportionality of certain groups reflected on the NDNAD is likely to result from over-representation in the criminal justice system as a whole and is not the result of inherent bias in NDNAD processes.

The Stage 1 EIAs recommend that an analysis be undertaken of DNA subject profiles submitted to the NDNAD by police forces and police force area populations to identify whether any force areas are taking samples and submitting profiles to the NDNAD disproportionately. A working group has been set up to consider and take forward this recommendation. The NPIA is also working on a Stage 2 EIA review process, looking at potential equality issues in greater depth. The Stage 2 assessments will be available in early 2009.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment she has made of the performance of (a) the National DNA Database and (b) the Independent Safeguarding Authority database. [243095]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The National DNA Database (NDNAD) is a police intelligence tool which contributes to the efficiency of crime detection. It contributes to detections, eliminates the innocent from inquiries and focuses the direction of inquiries.

The use of NDNAD saves police time and builds public confidence that offenders may be detected and brought to justice.

The NDNAD provides the police matches with DNA taken from a person with DNA found at the scene of a crime. Police are now being provided with almost 3,100 matches a month. It is estimated that over the period April 1998 to March 2008, there have been over 272,000 detections in which a DNA match was available. DNA evidence will have contributed to solving many of these crimes, but it is not possible to say whether the DNA match was the key factor in solving the crime.

Further information on the effectiveness of the NDNAD is available in the latest National DNA Database Annual Report, that for 2006-07, which is available at:

http://www.npia.police.uk/en/11403.htm

We have also worked closely with the National Institute of Justice in the United States of America to produce a study on DNA, which can be found at:

http://www.ncjrs.gov/pdffiles1/nij/grants/222318.pdf

The Independent Safeguarding Authority (ISA) maintains a database of information on cases referred by employers under the Protection of Vulnerable Adults, Protection of Children Act, and "List 99" barring arrangements, in order to provide advice to Ministers on barring decisions. Any data are held for these purposes. Additional information in respect of these referrals may be sought from the police. When the Authority is fully operational it will also obtain criminal records and other police information from the Criminal Records Bureau. It will also maintain the barred lists in respect of children and vulnerable adults required by the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006. No assessment of effectiveness has yet been made, but performance indicators are being developed for the ISA as a whole.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances an individual's DNA profile may be deleted from the national DNA database. [243766]

Mr. Alan Campbell [holding answer 15 December 2008]: Under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (PACE), the police have the power indefinitely to retain profiles on the National DNA Database (NDNAD) derived from samples taken from persons arrested for a recordable offence and detained in a police station, regardless of whether they are charged or convicted.

While the decision on whether to agree to a request from an individual to have their DNA profile removed from the NDNAD lies with the chief officer of the police force which took the sample, profiles will normally be retained unless there are exceptional circumstances.

Policy on the retention of DNA and fingerprint records is being reviewed in light of the Judgment of the European Court of Human Rights in the case of S and Marper. The Government will consider their response to the Judgment in conjunction with the Council of Europe's Committee of Ministers and a Government White Paper on Forensics will be published next year on proposals to implement the judgment.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans she has to cease retaining DNA information from people not convicted of a crime. [244039]

Mr. Alan Campbell [holding answer 16 December 2008]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary set out her initial thoughts on the European Court ruling in her speech on 16 December 2008 to the Intellect Trade Association dealing with surveillance issues.

We are carefully considering the detail of the judgment in the S and Marper case and its implications. DNA is a prime example where benefits to the criminal justice system and the rights of the individual need to be carefully balanced. That is why our approach to the European Court's judgment will be subject to wide consultation this year in a White Paper on Forensics.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when she expects to announce her response to the European Court of Human Rights' judgment in the case of S and Marper. [244520]

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment she has made of the implications of the recent judgement of the European Court of Human Rights on the legality of retaining the DNA records of people who have not been convicted of any crime. [245017]

Mr. Alan Campbell: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary set out her initial thoughts on the European Court ruling in her speech on 16 December to the Intellect Trade Association dealing with surveillance issues.

We are carefully considering the detail of the Judgment in the S and Marper case and its implications. DNA is a prime example where benefits to the criminal justice system and the rights of the individual need to be carefully balanced. That is why our approach to the European Court's Judgment will be subject to wide consultation this year in a White Paper on Forensics.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children in Sussex have profiles recorded on the National DNA Database. [245236]

Mr. Alan Campbell: At 16 December 2008, the number of profiles on the National DNA Database (NDNAD) relating to persons currently aged under 16 and added by Sussex Police was 3,115. The number relating to persons currently aged under 18 (including those under 16) added by that force was 8,358.

The NDNAD does not contain any information on the place of residence of a person sampled, so the figures include residents of areas other than Sussex sampled by Sussex Police, and exclude residents of Sussex sampled by other police forces.

The number of profiles held on the NDNAD is not the same as the number of individuals. As it is possible for a profile to be loaded onto the NDNAD on more than one occasion, some profiles held on the NDNAD are replicates. This can occur, for example, if the person provided different names, or different versions of their name, on separate arrests, or because profiles are upgraded. At present, the average replication rate on the whole NDNAD is 13.3 per cent. However, this figure may vary between police forces.

Human Rights: Training

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will make it her policy to allocate officials trained in the context of human rights work to the consideration of applications for visas from human rights defenders seeking entry to the UK on official business; and if she will make a statement. [244297]

Mr. Woolas: Decisions on entry clearance applications made at UK Missions are determined by entry clearance officers who have undertaken a course of training which covers the Human Rights Act and its bearing on entry clearance decisions. All decisions are made in accordance with the Immigration Rules (HC395).

Human Trafficking: Children

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate she has made of the number of children illegally trafficked into the UK. [246847]

Mr. Alan Campbell: A recent Government estimate was published in the Impact Assessment for the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Action Against trafficking in Human Beings, laid before Parliament on 7 October 2008. This estimates that 360 children are trafficked each year into and within the UK.

Human Trafficking: Prostitution

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research she has commissioned on the links between prostitution and trafficking. [244675]

Mr. Alan Campbell: To inform the Government's Tackling the Demand for Prostitution: A Review, the Home Office commissioned research from the child and woman abuse studies unit at London Metropolitan university which compared prostitution regimes across nine countries. This considered the impact of trafficking on the development of these regimes and the effect of each regime on levels of trafficking. We also commissioned a Rapid Evidence Assessment to look at existing research on the demand for prostitution. This considered the extent to which trafficking contributed to the demand for prostitution and the effect of different approaches to tackling demand on levels of trafficking. These reports will be published this year.

Human Trafficking: Victims

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the immigration status is of the 167 victims of human trafficking recovered during Operation Pentameter 2. [244770]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The reluctance of many victims to accept third sector support and co-operate with the authorities made accurate assessment of immigration status difficult. But we know 60 were EU nationals and five others had indefinite leave to remain in the UK. 36 adult victims are recorded as having returned home voluntarily, including some EU nationals. A further 16 adults were removed using immigration powers. Of the remainder, a number ceased to cooperate at a very early stage while others lodged applications to remain in the UK.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what protection is made available to trafficked persons following the conviction of those responsible for their trafficking. [244952]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Government's victim protection measures are not dependent on a conviction. We currently fund the Poppy project to provide specialist support to adult victims of these crimes. Victims are provided with unconditional intensive support for four weeks, with longer-term services provided in return for co-operation with a criminal investigation. The TARA project is funded to provide similar support services in Scotland. We also offer victims support with resettlement in their home country or within the United Kingdom where eligible. A victim whose safety is seriously at risk as a result of giving evidence may be placed in a police witness protection programme. Victims can also apply for asylum and humanitarian protection where appropriate.

We have ratified the Council of Europe Convention on Action Against the Trafficking in Human Beings which will come into force in April 2009. This will see the introduction of a 45 day reflection period where victims can consider their future options and one-year temporary resident permits, both of which can be extended in certain circumstances. Each case will have to be considered on its individual merits. The new measures are intended to compliment the asylum and humanitarian procedures and for many victims that may remain the most appropriate avenue of protection.

Hunting: Prosecutions

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) charges, (b) prosecutions, (c) convictions, (d) cautions and (e) fines there have been for breaches of the Hunting Act 2004 in each police force area since its enactment. [244431]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Data provided by the Ministry of Justice showing the number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts, found guilty and fined at all courts, for offences under the 2004 Hunting Act, in England and Wales, broken down by police force area from 2005 to 2007, are in table 1. Charging data are not collected centrally by the Ministry of Justice.

Data showing the number of offenders cautioned for offences under the 2004 Hunting Act in England and Wales, broken down by police force area from 2005 to 2007 are in table 2.

The Hunting Act came into force on 18 February 2005.

[2] The statistics relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been found guilty of two or more offences the principal offence is the offence for which the heaviest penalty is imposed. Where the same disposal is imposed for two or more offences, the offence selected is the offence for which the statutory maximum penalty is the most severe.

However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Identity Cards: Criminal Records

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether she plans to extend the requirement for airside workers to undergo basic criminal record checks in order to have an identity card to the rest of the population; and if she will make a statement. [241082]

Meg Hillier: There are no current plans to extend the requirement to obtain an identity card that is proposed for airside workers, to all people who need a criminal record check.

The Identity Cards Act secondary legislation consultation paper, published on 21 November 2008, set out the planned roll out of identity cards under the National Identity scheme as follows:

25 November 2008—the first foreign nationals (excluding European Economic Area nationals), started to be issued with identity cards by the Home Office, UK Border Agency. This initially covers foreign nationals who apply for an extension of their stay in the United Kingdom as students or as the husbands, wives or partners of permanent residents.

Autumn 2009—the first identity cards will start to be issued to airside workers and a limited number of volunteers from the general public. These will be the first identity cards issued to British citizens and European Economic Area nationals and will be issued by the Home Office, Identity and Passport Service;

2010—Identity Cards will continue to be available on a voluntary basis, but in particular to young people in a specified area to assist them in proving their identity;

2012—Identity cards will start to be issued in high volumes to British citizens, with adults applying for passports being offered the choice of an identity card or passport or both.

Immigrants: Social Security Benefits

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what entitlements to (a) NHS treatment, (b) social security benefits, (c) housing and (d) other services will be withdrawn from immigrants and other non-UK citizens by proposed legislation and measures under her Department's responsibility as set out in the Gracious Speech. [244116]

Mr. Woolas: We intend to introduce the Bill in the current session. Details will be confirmed in the Bill.

Immigration

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in (a) Bexley, (b) London and (c) England applied for leave to remain in the UK outside of immigration rules in each of the last five years; and how many did not have valid leave to remain at the time of their application. [243057]

Mr. Woolas: The following table shows the number of applications made each year, over the last five years for leave to remain in the United Kingdom outside of the Immigration Rules.

It is not possible to provide extract data on the number of applicants who did not have valid leave at the time of their application.

Applications raised during each year

	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	Total
England	21,595	23,540	22,420	28,210	25,485	22,300	143,550
London	8,940	9,350	8,205	9,685	9,415	7,835	53,430
Bexley	90	115	100	95	145	110	655

Notes:
Figures are rounded to nearest five and are in respect of main applicants.
Because of rounding figures may not add up to totals shown.
The figures quoted are not provided under national statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for the time taken to deal with the application for indefinite leave to remain of the constituent of the hon. Member for Torbay (Home Office reference: B2192246). [245101]

Mr. Woolas: I wrote to the hon. Member on 22 December 2008.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason her Department (a) has yet to make a decision on the immigration case of Mr W. H. of Aylesbury (reference: J1019588) following the representations from his solicitors on 20 October 2006 and (b) was unable, in its letter to the hon. Member for Aylesbury of 4 December 2008, to indicate any timescale for a decision. [245441]

Mr. Woolas: The UK Border Agency has yet to make a decision in this case and was unable to give any timescale for a decision in its letter to you of 4 December because the case does not fall into one of the priorities for conclusion.

The UK Border Agency will prioritise those individuals who may pose a risk to the public and then focus on those who can more easily be removed, those receiving support and those where it is likely that a decision will be made to allow the individual to remain in the UK. All cases will be dealt with on their individual merits and in accordance with these priorities.

Every effort is being made to deal with all cases as efficiently as possible and your constituent will be contacted via his representative as soon as a decision has been made on his case.

Immigration: Peterborough

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were awaiting determination in respect of applications for indefinite leave to remain in postal areas (a) PE1, (b) PE2, (c) PE3 and (d) PE4 in each quarter since May 2005; and if she will make a statement. [246149]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 12 January 2009]: This information is not centrally recorded and could be obtained at only disproportionate cost.

Members: Correspondence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 26 November 2008, Official Report, column 2214W, on anti-semitism, when she plans to write to the hon. Member for Southend West; and if she will make a statement. [242694]

Mr. Alan Campbell: I wrote to the hon. Member for Southend West on 10 December 2008.

Migration Advisory Committee

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are employed in organising the Migration Advisory Committee; and what estimate she has made of the Committee's running costs in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11. [245691]

Mr. Woolas: The Migration Advisory Committee (MAC) itself consists of five members and two ex-officio members. The MAC is supported by a secretariat of 10 staff, nine of which are full-time and one part-time.

The MAC was awarded funding of £1.5 million for 2008-09, of which £670,000 was allocated for pay and allowances for committee and secretariat, and the majority of the remainder for research. The MAC's budget is set by the UK Border Agency. The UK Border Agency is currently reviewing plans and forecasts for 2009-10 and 2010-11 and we are unable to provide this information until these plans have been finalised and agreed by the UK Border Agency Board.

National Identity Register

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) methodologies and (b) technology she plans to specify to secure the accuracy of amendments to the National Identity Register; and what accuracy rate is to be specified. [242246]

Meg Hillier: While there may be a need to make some corrections to the National Identity Register if information is found to have been recorded incorrectly, the majority of amendments will be at the request of the individual concerned and based on information that they have provided in relation to changes in their identity details, such as changes of name or address.

It is intended that secure remote authentication and biometric verification systems will be in place to verify an individual's identity when an amendment is requested by an individual to his or her record on the National Identity Register. The Identity and Passport Service is in the process of procuring the systems that will enable the establishment of this service and the details and accuracy of these systems will depend on the final design proposed by the successful bidder.

National Retail Crime Steering Group

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the National Retail Crime Steering Group has met. [246854]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The National Retail Crime Steering Group was set up last year, following meetings between the then Director-General of the British Retail Consortium and my hon. Friend the Minister for Security, Counter-Terrorism, Crime and Policing (Mr. Coaker), to discuss the crime issues affecting the retail sector. The Group met for the first time on 24 July 2007, and has since met on 27 Feb 2008, and 12 November 2008. The Group meets twice a year.

Nurses: Zimbabwe

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits have been issued to (a) doctors and (b) nurses from Zimbabwe since 1 January 2008. [244300]

Mr. Woolas: The following table provides information on work permits issued to Zimbabwean nationals. The figures relate to work permit applications granted both at initial consideration stage and those successful on review, for the period 1 January 2008 to 30 November 2008.

Caveats:

The term 'work permit application' includes all work permit application types—including work permit extensions, change of employment and technical changes to existing work permits—and therefore does not equate to the number of individuals to whom permits were issued.

The term doctors/nurses refers to the occupation description containing the word 'nurse' or 'doctor'; and excludes persons admitted under the Highly Skilled Migrant programme or the points-based system.

These figures include applications made both in and out of country.

Nationality	Doctor	Nurses	Total
Zimbabwe	10	1,100	1,110
Total	10	1,100	1,110

Note:
Figures are rounded to nearest 5. Because of rounding figures may not add up to totals shown.

The figures quoted are not provided under National Statistics protocols and have been derived from local management information and are therefore provisional and subject to change.

Offensive Weapons

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people aged (a) 16 and under, (b) between 17 and 18, (c) between 18 and 21 and (d) 21 years were arrested for carrying firearms in (i) Stockport Metropolitan Borough, (ii) Greater Manchester and (iii) the North West in each of the last five years; [246072]

(2) how many people aged (a) 16 and under, (b) between 17 and 18, (c) between 18 and 21 and (d) 21 years were arrested for carrying knives in (i) Stockport Metropolitan Borough, (ii) Greater Manchester and (iii) the North West in each of the last five years. [246073]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The main arrests collection held by the Home Office covers arrests for recorded crime (notifiable offences) only, broken down at a main offence group level, covering categories such as violence against the person and robbery. From these centrally reported data we are not able to identify specific offences from within the main offence groups.

Under section 1 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (PACE) and section and 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 police have the power of stop and search for offensive weapons and firearms. Information on the number of arrests as a result of the use of these powers for possession of firearms and offensive weapons (which includes knives) is provided in the following table.

The figures reported to the Home Office on section 1 of PACE cannot separately identify searches for knives from the category of 'offensive weapons' reported to the Home Office. Additionally, the figures presented on arrests as a result of searches under section 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 include arrests for possession of firearms, knives and other offensive weapons, but cannot separately identify the article found. Figures for arrests as a result of stops and searches do not identify the age of offenders.

The data reported to the Home Office are at police force area level only therefore information on arrests in Stockport metropolitan borough is not available.

Arrests as a result of searches of persons or vehicles under selected sections of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and other legislation, selected areas by reason for arrest

Offensive Weapons: Teesside

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps she is taking to address gun and knife crime in Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [245849]

Mr. Alan Campbell: We are fully committed to tackling gun and knife crime through responsive policing, tough powers and funding for prevention projects. We published a Practical Guide on tackling gangs for local partners and a guide to parents to help prevent their child getting involved in gangs.

In summer 2008, we launched a £3 million three-year national anti-knife crime campaign aimed at mothers and young people, and have extended the expectation to prosecute nationally. A significantly higher percentage of those who get caught carrying a knife are being sent to prison, and a significantly higher percentage are getting more intensive community payback.

The Government's new £100 million Youth Crime Action plan launched on 15 June includes new measures which supports work to tackle knives, reflecting a triple-track approach of tough enforcement, intensive support and better prevention.

Official Residences

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer to the hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst of 10 November 2008, Official Report, column 823W, on Ministers: official residences, if she will place in the Library a copy of the home information pack for the property at South Eaton Place; how much the pack cost; and whether a home condition report was purchased as part of the pack. [245930]

Mr. Woolas: A copy of the pack was placed in the Library on 11 December 2008. Preparation of the pack incurred £298.00 plus VAT in legal fees and £309.00 in statutory disbursements. The fee for the energy performance certificate is still to be invoiced but it is an estimated £100 plus VAT. There was no requirement for a home condition report.

Police Cautions

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases of (a) violence against the person, (b) sexual offences, (c) robbery, (d) burglary, (e) theft, (f) fraud and forgery, (g) criminal damage and (h) drugs offences police cautions were given in each of the last five years; and what proportion of such cases were first offences. [244428]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Information provided by the Ministry of Justice showing the number of offenders cautioned for selected offence groups in England and Wales, from 2003 to 2007, are in the following table.

It is not possible to identify, from the information on cautions reported to the Ministry of Justice, how many of these cautions were for first offences.

Number of offenders[1] cautioned[2] for Violence Against the Person, Sexual Offences, Burglary, Robbery, Theft and Handling Stolen Goods, Fraud and Forgery, Criminal Damage and Drug Offences, England and Wales, 2003 to 2007[3,4]

Offence type	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007
Violence against the person	28,760	36,610	51,020	57,273	52,335
Sexual offences	1,359	1,553	1,761	1,922	1,966
Burglary	5,568	5,604	6,451	7,687	6,972
Robbery	422	451	622	712	614
Theft and handling stolen goods	54,466	61,943	67,619	72,369	72,790
Fraud and forgery	5,484	6,033	6,936	8,024	8,587
Criminal damage	3,726	5,495	7,246	9,018	8,813
Drug offences	45,706	32,620	34,390	37,426	43,050
Total	145,491	150,309	176,045	194,431	195,127

[2] From 1 June 2000 the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 came into force nationally and removed the use of cautions for persons under 18 and replaced them with reprimands and final warnings. These figures have been included in the totals.
[3] The cautions statistics relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been cautioned for two or more offences at the same time the principal offence is the more serious offence.
[4] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the police. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Police: Essex

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to ensure that information kept by Essex Police is (a) accurate and up-to-date and (b) kept securely; what recent discussions she has had with the Chief Constable of Essex Police on this; and if she will make a statement. [244874]

Mr. Coaker: These issues are a matter for the Essex police authority.

Police: ICT

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding her Department (a) spent on and (b) committed to the police portal; why the police portal was withdrawn; what plans she has to introduce a secure online reporting system for use by police forces; and if she will make a statement. [246855]

Mr. Coaker: The police portal provided a national communications channel for the police service. It was procured in January 2001 and the total annual cost of running this service was just under £2 million per annum.

There is no budget for the portal service in 2008-09 or 2009-10 and no staff are currently employed to maintain this website. This is because the police portal service ceased on 31 March 2007 when the contract with the service provider expired.

Although good use was made of the police portal services in some areas, the running costs increased in 2007-08 as a result of technical difficulties in the delivery of the replacement portal service. The Association of Chief Police Officers took the view that there was insufficient demand for this service to justify these increased costs.

There are no plans to reinstate the police portal at the current time, but a number of police forces have introduced online reporting facilities on their existing websites.

Police: Legal Advice

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is given to police on the application of (a) section 62 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 and (b) Articles 10 and 11 of the Human Rights Act 1998. [245032]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Home Office and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister issued joint guidance on effective use of enforcement powers to deal with unauthorised encampments in February 2006, including the application of section 62 of the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003.

The Human Rights Act is embedded throughout all aspects of training and guidance given to police officers.

Prisoners: Foreigners

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners held under immigration detention powers were held in (a) prison and (b) the immigration detention estate as at 1 December 2008. [245783]

Mr. Woolas: On 1 December 2008 there were 526 ex-foreign national prisoners held in prison and 1,175 held in the UK Border Agency's detention estate.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners held under immigration powers in the immigration detention estate on 1 December 2008 had been given (a) a custodial sentence of more than four years, (b) a conviction for importation of class A drugs, (c) a conviction for a serious violent offence and (d) a conviction for a sexual offence that required them to be placed on the Sex Offender Register. [245784]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not centrally collated and can be obtained only by conducting checks on each foreign national prisoner held in detention under immigration powers using the Police National Computer in order to identify the full range of offences each individual may have been convicted of.

The chief executive of the UK Border Agency has written to the Home Affairs Select Committee on a regular basis in order to provide all of the most robust and accurate information available. In her most recent letter of 8 December she advised the Committee that the agency had removed over 1,400 drug offenders, 30 killers, 12 attempted killers and more than 230 sex offenders. A copy of this letter is available in the Library of the House.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many foreign national prisoners with (a) custodial sentences of more than four years, (b) a conviction for importation of class A drugs, (c) a conviction for a serious violent offence and (d) a conviction for a sexual offence that required them to be placed on the Sex Offender Register have been granted immigration bail in each of the last five years; [245785]

(2) how many foreign national prisoners have been released into the community directly from Asylum and Immigration Tribunal hearings in each of the last five years; [245786]

(3) how many foreign national prisoners held under immigration detention powers have been granted bail in each of the last 10 years. [245792]

Mr. Woolas: Information relating to the numbers of foreign national prisoners subject to deportation action who have completed their custodial sentence and been released on bail is not centrally collated at present. In order to provide the information requested it would be necessary to examine individual case files at disproportionate cost.

When a foreign criminal who is subject to deportation action is granted bail by the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal and it is believed that the individual presents a risk of harm to the public, the UK Border Agency will always request that the tribunal impose the most robust restrictions possible in order to minimise the likelihood that the individual will reoffend.

The agency will continue to pursue deportation action against such individuals and is on track to not only meet but exceed its target of deportation or removing 5,000 foreign criminals in 2008.

Prostitution

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether she intends to make changes to the legal status of brothels. [244764]

Mr. Alan Campbell: We do not intend to make changes to the legal status of brothels.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration her Department has given to research on the likely effects of criminalising prostitution in preparing the Crime and Policing Bill. [244771]

Mr. Alan Campbell: We do not intend to criminalise prostitution and have not considered the likely effects of doing so. The Government's 'Tackling the Demand for Prostitution: A Review' considered the most effective way of reducing the demand for prostitution and as a result of its findings we intend to include the offence of paying for sexual services of a prostitute controlled for gain in the forthcoming Policing and Crime Bill.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the average age of those first entering into prostitution. [244931]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Government's consultation paper on prostitution, Paying the Price, provides a summary of research on the age of first involvement in prostitution. This paper is available at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/paying_the_price.pdf?view=Binary.

Refugee Integration and Employment Service

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much she expects the Refugee Integration and Employment Service will cost to run in 2008-09 and in each of the following two years; how many staff are engaged in running the service; how many will be so engaged in (a) 2009-10 and (b) 2010-11; and if she will make a statement. [245684]

Mr. Woolas: The cost of the Refugee Integration and Employment Service (RIES) is volume-driven and take-up is voluntary therefore we are unable to provide an exact indication of what it may cost in this and subsequent financial years. However, we do not believe that the cost will exceed £10 million per annum. As of the end of November 2008 approximately £300,000 had been paid to providers by UKBA during 2008-09.

RIES is delivered through regional contracts by external organisations who are paid on a price per head basis to deliver the service therefore we do not have records of the number of staff providing the service. This is a matter for the service providers themselves.

Repatriation

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 18 November 2008, Official Report, columns 318-19W, on deportation, how her Department establishes that a person has left the UK without informing the immigration authorities; and how many people so recorded subsequently have been found to have been in the United Kingdom illegally in each of the last five years. [243491]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 16 December 2008]: The Department establishes that a person has left the UK without informing the immigration authorities via:

Manual embarkation operations at UK ports

Data matching visa applications made at British Missions overseas

Data matching incoming/departing passenger and flight data recorded under the e-Borders programme (Semaphore)

The information requested on how many people have subsequently been found to have been in the UK illegally in each of the last five years could only be obtained by the detailed examination of individual records at disproportionate cost.

Risk Analysis UK

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use her Department has made of (a) private investigators and (b) Risk Analysis UK Ltd since May 2005. [244795]

Mr. Woolas: From best available records the Home Department inclusive of its Agencies has had no contracts with private investigators or with Risk Analysis UK Ltd since May 2005.

Security Guards: Licensing

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Security Investment Authority will conduct its cost-benefit assessment on the potential requirement for licence holders to provide evidence that they have kept their competency up-to-date when applying for a renewal of their licence. [245944]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Security Industry Authority (SIA) is working on an assessment of the costs and benefits of the introduction of a requirement for licence holders, including door supervisors, to provide evidence that they have kept their competency up to date, when applying for licence renewal. If it is decided that this proposal merits further development, a public consultation would be undertaken before any amendments are made to the SIA's competency framework for the issue of licences.

Serious and Organised Crime Agency: Standards

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what performance targets have been set by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency in respect of its asset recovery function following recommendation (b) of the National Audit Office report on the Assets Recovery Agency. [245950]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The performance targets set for 2008-09 in relation to asset recovery functions transferred from the Assets Recovery Agency to the Serious Organised Crime Agency are to recover £16 million of assets in civil recovery cases and enforce £4 million of confiscation orders from ARA legacy criminal cases.

Serious Organised Crime Agency

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases the Serious and Organised Crime Agency agreed to adopt from other law enforcement agencies for investigation in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in the first six months of this financial year. [243620]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The majority of the Serious Organised Crime Agency's operational activity falls within the scope of the United Kingdom Serious Organised Crime Control Strategy, and is planned and executed in collaboration with one or more partner agency, including other law enforcement agencies from the UK and overseas. In addition to this work within the Control Strategy, SOCA provides a range of support activities for partners, principally UK law enforcement agencies, some routinely and others on request. While all of SOCA's operational work is centrally tasked, there is no single referral and adoption system.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases the Serious and Organised Crime Agency completed in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in the first six months of 2008-09; what the value of the assets recovered in those cases was; how many of those cases related to work inherited from the Assets Recovery Agency; and what the value of assets recovered in such inherited cases was. [243623]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Serious Organised Crime Agency closed 75 operations and projects in the first six months of this financial year. SOCA operational activity is often multi-faceted with concurrent activity across the UK and internationally, these figures are therefore not available on a regional basis.

Data relating to cases transferred from the Assets Recovery Agency to SOCA are not collated in the form requested.

Figures relating to SOCA's UK-wide performance for the financial year 2008-09, including performance on asset recovery, will be included in SOCA's Annual Report for 2008-09, when published.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how long on average it took for the Serious and Organised Crime Agency to decide whether to adopt cases referred to it in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) nationwide in the first six months of 2008-09; [243624]

(2) what estimate she has made of the value of assets in those cases which the Serious and Organised Crime Agency has declined to adopt in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK in the first six months of 2008-09; [243625]

(3) how many of the cases referred to the Serious and Organised Crime Agency the agency declined to adopt in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) nationwide in the first six months of this financial year; and what the reasons were for declining in each case. [243626]

Mr. Alan Campbell: While the Serious Organised Crime Agency does not operate a formal referral and adoption system with all its law enforcement counterparts

SOCA will normally make decisions on initiating new activity within two weeks of a proposal. There are other arrangements in place where time critical decisions are required. To make any comment on the reasons for not progressing proposals may prejudice the outcome of any subsequent investigation. SOCA does not collate information on estimated values of assets in declined cases.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many criminal investigations the Serious and Organised Crime Agency inherited from its predecessor organisations; [243792]

(2) in how many of the cases inherited by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency upon its establishment prosecutions had already been initiated; [243793]

(3) in how many cases inherited by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) in which prosecutions had been initiated before SOCA adopted the case those prosecutions proceedings have now been completed. [243796]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Under the Transfer Scheme, SOCA inherited 162 ongoing operations and projects from its predecessor agencies on 1 April 2006 encompassing a range of UK and international civil and criminal investigative responses. An additional 74 operations involving criminal prosecutions were already at court on 1 April 2006 and at least 65 of these have now been completed.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the cases which the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) inherited from other law enforcement agencies in which prosecution proceedings had been initiated prior to SOCA's adoption of the case relate to investigations for the purpose of criminal confiscation; [243794]

(2) what estimate she has made of the value of assets restrained in those cases which the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) inherited from other law enforcement agencies and in which prosecutions proceedings had been initiated before SOCA adopted the case; [243795]

(3) in how many cases inherited from other law enforcement agencies by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) in which prosecution proceedings had been initiated before SOCA adopted the case criminal confiscation orders have been granted; [243797]

(4) how much money has been recovered to date by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) from cases it inherited from other law enforcement agencies in which prosecutions had been initiated before SOCA adopted the case; and what the value of criminal confiscation orders issued in relation to such cases is; [243798]

(5) in how many of the cases inherited by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) in which prosecutions had been initiated previously assets had been restrained before adoption by SOCA. [244006]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) does not collate this level of detail regarding cases or operations inherited from precursor agencies, as there would be no operational value and some cost in doing so. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost (through manual collation from case files).

Details relating to SOCA performance in the first two years of its operation, including results contributing to asset recovery targets, are reported on in the SOCA annual reports for 2006-07 and 2007-08. Figures relating to SOCA's performance for the financial year 2008-09 are subject to internal validation and will be included in SOCA's annual report for 2008-09, when published.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) financial investigators and (b) lawyers were employed by the Serious and Organised Crime Agency solely on assets recovery work in (i) the UK and (ii) Northern Ireland on 30 September 2008. [243922]

Mr. Alan Campbell: On 30 September, 2008, the Serious Organised Crime Agency employed 230 financial investigators working in the UK on tackling criminal finances and profits, including through asset recovery, and 22 lawyers in the UK who were dedicated to civil asset recovery work. SOCA is a UK-wide agency and as such staff from across the organisation work on particular pieces of activity.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) financial investigators and (b) lawyers devoted to criminal confiscation work were employed in the Serious and Organised Crime Agency on 31 March 2008. [243923]

Mr. Alan Campbell: On 31 March 2008, the Serious Organised Crime Agency employed 181 financial investigators on tackling criminal finances and profits, including through asset recovery. Their work covered both criminal confiscation work and money-laundering investigations.

On 31 March 2008, seven SOCA lawyers were involved in criminal investigations, although none was dedicated to this. SOCA lawyers were not involved in criminal confiscation work at this time.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what targets relating to (a) the UK and (b) Northern Ireland have been set for the Serious and Organised Crime Agency in 2008-09 in terms of (i) the number of criminal confiscation cases initiated, (ii) the number of those cases in which criminal assets will be restrained, (iii) the projected value of those assets, (iv) the number of cases in which action to recover assets by civil recovery or taxation is planned to be initiated and (v) the projected value of assets to be restrained through such actions; and what progress has been made against those targets to date. [243932]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The Home Office has set the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) targets for 2008-09 of:

£6 million cash forfeited;

£46 million confiscation, including £4 million of orders enforced from criminal casework inherited from ARA;

SOCA is a UK-wide agency and no Northern Ireland-specific targets have been set for SOCA by the Home Office.

The Organised Crime Task Force has set a Northern Ireland target for 2008-09 of total criminal assets recovered (net of costs) in the range of £6.2 million to £10.0 million. SOCA will contribute to the achievement of this target through its work in the region.

Figures for SOCA's UK-wide performance on asset recovery for the financial year 2008-09 are still subject to internal validation and will be included in its annual report for 2008-09, when published.

Serious Organised Crime Agency: Assets Recovery Agency

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were transferred by the Assets Recovery Agency to the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) on 31 March 2008 in which proceedings for civil recovery or taxation had been initiated in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the UK; what the estimated value of the assets restrained in those cases was; how many of those cases related to (i) oils and (ii) tobacco fraud; and what the value of assets was in (A) oil and (B) tobacco fraud cases so transferred. [243841]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Data relating to the transfer of cases over from the Assets Recovery Agency (ARA) to the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) were not collated to this level of detail, as there would be no operational value and some cost in doing so. 147 civil recovery operations and 38 tax operations were opened as a result of the transfer of cases from ARA to SOCA. Further relevant information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost (through manual collation from case files).

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were transferred by the Assets Recovery Agency to the Serious and Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) on 31 March 2008 in which an action or investigation for criminal confiscation of assets had been initiated (a) in Northern Ireland and (b) in the UK; what the estimated value of the assets restrained in those cases was; in how many such investigations SOCA has obtained a confiscation order; and what the value of assets affected by such order is. [243843]

Mr. Alan Campbell: Data relating to the transfer of cases from the Assets Recovery Agency (ARA) to SOCA were not collated to this level of detail, as there would be no operational value and some cost in doing so. 29 criminal confiscation operations were opened as a result of the transfer of cases from ARA. Some operations may include multiple ARA cases relating to the same subject. Further relevant information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost (through manual collation from case files).

Figures for SOCA's UK-wide performance on asset recovery for the financial year 2008-09 are subject to internal validation and will be included in its annual report for 2008-09, when published.

Serious Organised Crime Agency: Northern Ireland

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the budget of the Serious and Organised Crime Agency for its work on assets recovery in Northern Ireland is in 2008-09. [243921]

Mr. Alan Campbell: SOCA is a UK-wide organisation and does not set budgets on a regional basis. No separate budget, therefore, exists for asset recovery in Northern Ireland.

Stop and Search

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many stop-and-searches were carried out under (a) section 1 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and (b) section 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 on the Hoo Peninsula in Kent between 30 July and 14 August 2008; [244294]

(2) how many stop-and-searches were carried out under (a) section 1 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and (b) section 60 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 in Deansgate Golf Course Car Park in Kent between 30 July and 14 August 2008. [244295]

Mr. Alan Campbell: The information requested on arrests is not collected centrally.

Data on arrests reported to the Home Office are not broken down below police force area level.

Surveillance: Local Authorities

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with reference to the answer of 22 July 2008, Official Report, column 1374W, on surveillance: local authorities, how many of the determinations made in relation to the 554 complaints resulted in the complaint being upheld (a) wholly and (b) in part. [245935]

Mr. Coaker: Information on the number of complaints made and upheld is given in the published annual reports of the Interception of Communications Commissioner and the Intelligences Services Commissioner. These published reports show that since 2005 the Investigatory Powers Tribunal has made a determination in favour of two complainants who lodged a joint complaint.

UK Border Agency: Manpower

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff at the UK Border Agency are engaged in delivering the Agency's third strategic objective; where such staff are based; and what forecast she has made of the costs that will be incurred by the Agency in working towards this objective in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11. [245579]

Mr. Woolas: UKBA objective 3 "We will implement fast and fair decisions" is substantially delivered by the Immigration Group within UKBA. It is not possible to provide the costs of delivering this objective in isolation as the group also contributes significantly to the other strategic objectives of the agency. The total number of staff employed within the group at the end of November 2008 was 10,200 and these are based throughout the UK.

Forecasts for 2009-10 and 2010-11 are not yet available. UKBA is currently reviewing plans and forecast for 2009-10 and 2010-11 and we are unable to provide this information until these plans have been finalised by the UKBA Board.

The operating cost budget for the financial year 2008-09 is as follows:

Expenditure	Budget 2008-09 (£ million)
Pay	320
Staff related costs	10
Other operating costs	50
Total	380

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK Border Agency staff are responsible for managing the Gateway resettlement programme; what estimate she has made of the cost of the Gateway project in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11; and if she will make a statement. [245685]

Mr. Woolas: 17.5 FTE UK Border Agency staff are responsible for managing the Gateway Protection Programme.

As of November 2008, UKBA has spent approximately £3.7 million on the project during 2008-09. The budget for 2008-09 stands at £9.48 million. This programme is currently match-funded under the European Refugee Fund 2008.

UKBA is currently reviewing plans and forecasts for 2009-10 and 2010-11 and we are unable to provide this information until these plans have been finalised and agreed by the UKBA Board.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK Border Agency staff are responsible for (a) managing citizenship applications and (b) developing citizenship policy; and what estimate she has made of the cost of employing these staff in (i) 2008-09, (ii) 2009-10 and (iii) 2010-11. [245686]

Mr. Woolas: The Nationality Group deals with citizenship applications and is based in Liverpool, north-west region.

(a) The number of staff responsible for managing citizenship applications are currently the full-time equivalent of 333.68 (as at 30 November).

(b) The number of staff responsible for developing citizenship policy is six, and they are not included in the number above.

(c) The estimated costs of employing these staff in 2008.09 are £6.74 million. For 2009-10 and 2010-11 UKBA is currently reviewing plans and forecasts for these years and is therefore unable to provide this information until these plans have been finalised and agreed by the UKBA Board.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK Border Agency staff are employed in the Case Resolution Directorate; and what estimate she has made of the Directorate's running costs in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11. [245687]

Mr. Woolas: The Case Resolution Directorate currently employs 940 staff at a cost in 2008-09 of £28.2 million. Estimates of running costs for the years 2009-10 and 2010-11 are not available because the UK Border Agency is currently finalising its business plan for next year.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK Border Agency staff are employed in processing asylum applications; and what estimate she has made of the costs of employing these staff in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11. [245688]

Mr. Woolas: There are currently 354 full-time equivalent case owners who are responsible for the end to end processing of new asylum applications in regional teams. An additional 173 full-time equivalent presenting officers are involved in asylum appeals. These figures do not include staff in screening units, or other staff connected with elements of asylum processing such as support team staff, managers, senior caseworkers, immigration officers and those working in the non-suspensive appeal process. They also exclude staff working in the Case Resolution Directorate, for which a separate answer has been prepared.

We do not collate cost information relating to asylum process staff on the level required. UKBA is currently reviewing plans and forecasts for 2009-10 and 2010-11 for consideration by the UK Border Agency Board.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK Border Agency staff are involved in running the Family Naturalisation Process; and what estimate she has made of the running costs of the programme in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11. [245689]

Mr. Woolas: The British Nationality Act makes provision for the acquisition of British citizenship through naturalisation or registration. All applications for British citizenship are considered by the UKBA Nationality Group and there is no separate process for naturalising families.

Workers Registration Scheme: North East

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have registered under the workers registration scheme in each local authority area in the North East. [246365]

Mr. Woolas: The Worker Registration Scheme (WRS) publish the information requested on the local government website:

www.lga.gov.uk

www.lga.gov.uk/lga/core/page.do?pageId=1095225.

Local Government Association Analysis and Research (LGAAR) has negotiated and secured access to local authority level WRS data from the UK Border Agency. Access to the local authority data is restricted to local authorities and other Government users who register on this site with a '.gov.uk' email address.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Air Travel

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many journeys (a) he and his predecessors and (b) his officials made by aeroplane in the course of their duties in each of the last five years. [246670]

Ann McKechin: The number of aeroplane journeys undertaken by Scotland Office Ministers and officials, in the course of their duties, is shown in the following table.

	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07	2007-08
Ministers	19	9	14	22.5
Officials	314.5	291	294	249.5
Total	333.5	300	308	272

A return journey is classed as one journey; if, for example, the outward leg of a journey is undertaken by air and the return by train, this is shown as half a journey. Figures are not available for years prior to 2004-05.

Travel by Ministers and civil servants is undertaken in accordance with the "Ministerial Code" and the "Civil Service Management Code" respectively.

Departmental Energy

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department is taking to reduce the amount of energy it wastes. [244601]

Ann McKechin: The Government's Delivery Plan for "Sustainable Procurement and Operations on the Government Estate", published in August 2008, provides a full account of the initiatives Departments are taking to reduce their energy waste. The Government have committed to updating the Delivery Plan on a six-monthly basis, and the first of these updates was published on 18 December 2008.

Departmental Internet

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spent maintaining its website in each of the last five years. [245495]

Ann McKechin: Figures are only available for the period during which the current Scotland Office website has been in existence. The figure for 2004-05 includes the initial cost of designing and building the site.

Financial year	Cost (£)
2004-05	24,718
2005-06	4,964
2006-07	840
2007-08	2,990

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Paid Posts

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners pursuant to the answer of 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 201W, on paid posts, for what reason the posts of Secretary to the Church Commissioners and Chief Financial Officer are reserved for practising Christians. [247500]

Sir Stuart Bell: Both post holders have particular responsibilities for maintaining the Christian ethos of their organisations as well as representing the Church to others in society. Current discrimination legislation allows religious organisations to restrict appointment to Christians or Anglicans in those circumstances.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners pursuant to the answer of 11 December 2008, Official Report, column 201W, on paid posts, whether the post of (a) Secretary to the Church Commissioners and (b) Chief Financial Officer could be filled by a practising Roman Catholic. [247501]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Chief Financial Officer has a responsibility to help maintain the Christian ethos of the National Church Institutions and this post could be filled by a Roman Catholic or a person from any other Christian denomination.

The Secretary to the Church Commissioners has a particular responsibility for representing the Church of England and maintaining its ethos within the Commissioners and, as such, appointments have been restricted to Anglicans in the past.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Biofuels

Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what percentage of the fuel used at Drax power station was (a) tar sands, (b) shale and (c) other oils in the last period for which figures are available. [247043]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department does not collect fuel usage data at this level of detail. Furthermore, the Department has given an undertaking that any fuel usage data that is collected from individual generators is used only for the purpose of producing aggregate statistics—company level data may be commercially sensitive and thus cannot be released.

Mining: Horses

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many ponies are working in mining enterprises. [247512]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Certain coal mining museums may keep ponies to illustrate their former role, but they are not employed in any underground capacity, nor are any ponies known to be working in other coal mining enterprises.

Renewable Energy: Expenditure

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how much his Department and its predecessors have spent on the development of (a) renewable fuels and (b) clean engines in the last three years. [245868]

Mr. Simon: I have been asked to reply.

The Department's expenditure in these areas falls to the Research Councils and the Technology Strategy Board.

Research Councils' total expenditure on bioenergy (including biofuels and biomass) and clean engines was £8.45 million and £1.65 million respectively for the years 2005-08.

Technology Strategy Board's total expenditure on collaborative R and D projects in the areas of bioenergy and clean engines was £2.98 million and £1.64 million respectively for the years 2005-08.

Warm Front Scheme

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many claims for assistance made through the Warm Front scheme are outstanding. [246876]

Joan Ruddock: The current number of applications outstanding is 106,179. Each of these applications are at very different stages and will be eligible for a range of measures. Some customers are awaiting survey, others are awaiting work to be installed and others have an outstanding contribution to make to the cost of the work.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much public expenditure was incurred in respect of (a) Greatrex Associates, (b) Paul Sullivan Snooker and Pool, (c) Coffee Republic, (d) Bristol and District Retirement Council, (e) Cherubs Floral Design Ltd. and (f) Total Horsemanship Ltd in 2007-08; and for what purpose in each case. [240843]

Huw Irranca-Davies [holding answer 8 December 2008]: From information held centrally, the core-Department's financial system records the following expenditure incurred with the businesses listed:

Flood Control

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local authorities have published schedules of works for maintenance of (a) rural rivers and (b) coastal areas at risk of flooding; and when each such schedule was published. [246110]

Huw Irranca-Davies: DEFRA does not currently collate information published by local authorities regarding the maintenance of river and coastal defences.

The Pitt review recommended that schedules should be published for each local authority area. The Government support this recommendation and the Environment Agency will publish information on planned maintenance, after consulting regional flood defence committees and other local stakeholders, from 2009-10.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Data Protection

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many members of staff in his Department have been (a) investigated, (b) suspended and (c) dismissed for losing (i) memory sticks, (ii) laptop computers, (iii) desktop computers and (iv) mobile telephones belonging to his Department in each year since 1997. [248246]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, no members of staff have been (a) investigated, (b) suspended and (c) dismissed for losing (i) memory sticks, (ii) laptop computers, (iii) desktop computers and (iv) mobile telephones in each year since 1997.

Sports: Public Participation

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of people (a) under and (b) over 16 years who participated in at least one active sport in the last four weeks in each year for which figures are available. [247575]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The 'Taking Part' survey is a continuous household survey providing national data on participation in culture, leisure and sport by adults aged 16 and over.

In those households containing at least one child aged 11 to 15, an interview is also conducted with a randomly selected child.

The following tables show the percentage and number of children and adults who participated in active sport in the past four weeks.

Table 1: Participation in active sport by children aged 11-15

	Percentage	Population (Thousand)
2006	95	3,030
2007	95	2,980

Note:
Fieldwork for the child element began in January 2006 and runs on a January to December cycle.
